Vegetable Gardening Again

In the heat of the summer it may be hard to get enthused about vegetable gardening. The higher cost of food has turned some to vegetable gardening. July is the time to prepare for our second chance to grow cool season crop vegetables.

Beans, cabbage, carrots, broccoli, cauliflower, potatoes, and beets are planted in July for later harvest. In late August, lettuce, radishes, spinach and turnips can be planted. With these choices along with harvest good food can still be produced in the garden before the growing season comes to an end.

Some of these crops are directly planted. Beans, carrots, potatoes and beets are planted in the garden slightly deeper than spring planting. The soil is slightly cooler and more moisture for germination will be available deeper in the soil.

Potato seed is harder to locate at this time. I have some left from the spring

Keep the soil moist for starters and when the young plants need it. A nitrogen fertilizer will also be helpful to speed up growth.

It may be hard to be motivated to garden when it is hot out. But when September and October come, you'll be glad you did.

You can find out more information on gardening by going to Riley County's K-State Research and Extension website at www. riley.ksu.edu or you may contact Gregg Eyestone at the Riley County office of K-State Research and Extension by calling (785) 537-6350 or stopping by 110 Courthouse Plaza in Manhattan or e-mail: geyeston@ksu.edu.

Kansas Wheat Conference planned for Aug. 5-6

Today's volatile wheat market demands that farmers become intense managers, producers and marketers. Your opportunity to "Get Intense About Wheat" is at the annual Kansas Wheat Conference, August 5-6 at the Grand Prairie Hotel and Convention Center in Hutchinson.

This third annual conference features a host of speakers and presentations designed to help wheat producers revisit their previous assumptions about wheat.

The Tuesday evening banquet and program will be highlighted by keynote speaker Dr. Jay Lehr, an energetic economist and futurist who will focus on the direction of the wheat industry in feeding the world. Dr. Lehr combines five decades of expertise and experience in agricultural economics, agronomy, environmental science and business administration with contagious enthusiasm for the future of the American farm and board and/or committee

The Conference begins at 2 p.m. Tuesday, with the focus on "Prices, Energy Mandates, Farm Programs and Crop Yield Comparisons," featuring speaker Dr. Abner W. Womack, a Fred V. Heinkel Professor of Agricultural Economics, senior economist and co-founder of the Food and Agricultural Policy Research Institute (FAPRI) at the University of Missouri.

Wednesday morning's General Session topic is the future of wheat. Dusti Fritz, Kansas Wheat chief executive officer, will talk about the newest wheat research tools and tricks, with a Popular Mechanicsstyle perspective."

Several meetings are held in conjunction with the Kansas Wheat Conference, including the annual meetings of the Kansas Wheat Commission and Kansas Association of Growers, Wheat plus meetings for the Kansas Wheat, Kansas Crop Improvement Association, AgSECO, AgVantage, IP, Variety Release Board and the Agri-Pro Research Update.

Registration cost for the Kansas Wheat Conference is $80 per person with an additional $45 fee for golf enthusiasts.

Registration forms are available online www.KansasWheat.org, or call 866-759-4328 for more information. Rooms have been blocked at the Grand Prairie for $80 per night; call the hotel at 866-577-7527 to reserve a room and ask for the "Kansas Wheat Conference" rate.
