LSTA Virtual Reality Access & Exposure Grant

This spring the Utah State Library (USL) provided the VR Access and Exposure Grant through Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS) and Library Services and Technology Act (LSTA) funds. It focuses on getting virtual and augmented reality technologies into rural communities.

This means you can now hold the solar system in the palm of your hand using the AR Merge Cube. Or use the Oculus Go to visit a coral reef. You can inspect the workings of a cell or experience how plants undergo photosynthesis.

Director Message

By Colleen Eggett, Director and State Librarian

With summer so fresh on our minds, it's a time for renewal, relaxation, and fun! Our customers may just be feeling the same way. How can we infuse those elements into our libraries?

Renewal. The American Library Association has released some top trends in their State of America's Libraries 2019 report. It's all about strengthening communities. As we shore up our roles in our communities, it will renew our sense of purpose and value. It's all about the people.

Relaxation. Try putting in a Relaxation Room, a café, or a family friendly study room. What about a cozy fireplace with a soft chair beside it? We often don't feel we have the room to relax. Could we rearrange or reprioritize to provide some space?

Fun. How about energizing our public in new and fun ways? Some things around Utah include Escape Rooms, Virtual Reality, Augmented Reality, and Makerspace areas. For our outdoor spaces think of putting in garden areas, bike ramps, or building the new library right next to a park.

Let's all find some rewarding ways to enjoy our summer and make some memories!

Meet the Staff:

Heidi Fendrick joined the Resources Team a few months ago. We are very excited to have her working with us at the USL. Heidi is responsible for acquisitions to the printed collection, available in our online catalog as well as assuming responsibility for the Book Buzz program.

Utah Government Digital Library

The USL is the central depository of all official state digital and print publications. This means that if a state agency creates reports, videos, posters, fact sheets, manuals, etc.- the USL is required to house those publications for accessibility for Utah citizens.

The USL is responsible for the permanent access, distribution and exchange of printed state agency publications as part of the larger State Publications Depository System. The collection of State Publications is built from regular submissions from contributory agencies under the Utah Code Annotated 9-7-201 to 9-7-209.

The Utah Government Digital Library (UGDL) was created to provide the public permanent access to Utah government publications that exist in digital formats. Digitization is also performed in-house to increase access to this unique collection.

The UGDL branches out a bit beyond the USL State Publication Collection and also collects some publications created by counties and cities for improved and wider-spread access. The digital collection contains things from city water reports to newsletters to local tax information.

So, if there is a question a patron asks about a particular state government agency or function, come check out the UGDL!

ULA Takeaway

If you attended the Utah Library Association (ULA) Conference this year, you likely heard Fatima Doman's keynote. Fatima is an author, speaker and executive coach and spoke to conference attendees about identifying their "authentic strengths" and how to use them to their personal and professional benefit. She spoke briefly about how leaders who are aware of the different strengths of their staff can help them develop in ways that will increase and improve team dynamics and productivity.

Fatima shared tools from Positive Psychology that help individuals and groups to bring out the best in themselves and in those they influence.

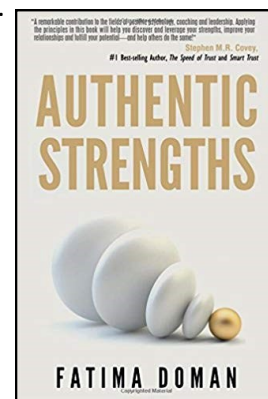

In response, the USL has added a set of her book "Authentic Strengths" to our Book Buzz set.

If your library is interested in checking out the set for the use of your staff, please contact us at bookbuzz@utah.gov

Summary:

Drawing on the best from the science of positive psychology and from her two decades of experience coaching and training executives around the world, Fatima Doman has created a three step coaching process that can transform a dedicated learner into a star performer. ## Staff Reading Picks

The Radium Girls: The Dark Story of America's Shining Women

By Kate Moore

Staff Pick by Char Newbold

"This book just haunts me. These women fought a battle they knew they'd never see the end of because they knew they were dying from industrial poisoning. This is more than a fight for industrial safety or feminist rights, this is a tragic tale that just leaves you feeling haunted and somewhat afraid of modern industrial practices. Thanks to these women, there are now safety standards, but its still terrifying.

You just feel for these women, and how they continued to fight the battle even though they knew they were dying. They lost limbs, organs, health and their very lives, but they struggled to fight and bring justice to future generations of workers even as they knew they would never see it themselves."

Synopsis:

The Radium Girls

Discovered in 1898 by Marie and Pierre Curie, Radium is quickly heralded as the latest wonder element, used in everything from health supplies to beauty supplies. The popular new element shines bright in the darkest of circumstances, the First World War. Hundreds of girls are hired to paint with the glowing dust to create glowing radium-dials for watches, clocks and other instruments used during the First World War. The "Shining Girls" were considered the luckiest girls alive for their health and positions, until suddenly they weren't.

With the factories disclaiming involvement in all of the gruesome side effects and the women dying, the Shining Girls find themselves embroiled in one of the biggest scandals of America's early 20th century, fighting a groundbreaking battle for workers' rights that echo today.
