QUALITY ASSURANCE EXHIBITOR CERTIFICATION REQUIREMENT

Exhibitors who did not show last year are required to participate in an online certification program, Quality Assurance for Livestock Exhibitors, in order to show at the Parish, District and LSU Spring Livestock Shows. The online program can be accessed at <http://qaec.lsuagcenter.com/>. All exhibitors are required to complete the general portion of the program. If you are showing rabbits, the general portion of the program is the only requirement. For all other species, you would need to complete the program for each species and the general portion of the program. Please keep in mind this program will print out certificates of completion after the general program is completed and will print a certificate of completion after each species. If you are showing multiple species, then you will need to turn in a certificate of completion for each species and the general portion of the program with the exception of rabbits, only need a certificate for general portion of the program. Exhibitors who showed in the parish or district show last year are still certified unless you are showing a different species this year. If you are showing a different species from last year, we need a certification for that species but your certificate for the general portion of the program is still valid. The QAEC certificate of completion for sheep, goat, beef, and swine are due with entry forms December 11, 2014.
