This past year, 2017, was a banner year for making history come alive! The American Independence Museum reached new audiences, deepened our relationships and impacted in a positive way the communities where we live and serve. We continued to be guided and inspired by our mission of “promoting awareness, increasing understanding and celebrating the achievements of America’s Independence and encouraging civic engagement today”!

Led by our new Executive Director, Emma Bray, we launched a comprehensive social media marketing campaign to gain new followers, friends and supporters. We were able to weave history into our everyday lives with our Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram accounts, new interactive website and newly “wired,” internet-capable Folsom Tavern.

Since education will always be a priority for our Museum, we took our American Independence show “on the road” through the generous support of two businesses, and brought a portable, historical trunk, complete with lesson plans and show and tell items, into our schools. Consequently, we reached a record number of school children in 2017. In addition, we initiated a new preschool Revolutionary Story Time program to reach our youngest historians, which was very successful and fun for all, especially our storytellers.

Our visitors came from near and far this year and this past summer, we welcomed our own New Hampshire Governor Chris Sununu home when he visited the Ladd Gilman House, which served as the Governor’s mansion at one time in the state’s history. The Governor honored us with a Commendation of Service which hangs proudly in our Museum.

We continued to make our entire campus, inside and out, more pleasing, safe, secure and accessible to all. The completion of the Governor’s Lane granite steps project offered the opportunity to move to the exciting Phase II of the Master Landscape Plan, and a new roof ensured our precious collections and treasures are protected as we refresh and reorient our exhibitions and tours for 2018.

The Museum’s remarkable success in 2017 would not have occurred without the generous, selfless and sustained support of our volunteers, members, donors, staff and visitors. For this, for you, we are exceedingly grateful. Thank you.

In 2018, we look forward to the adventures ahead for the American Independence Museum as we share our extraordinary revolutionary journey with you!

Susan Y. Desjardins
President, Board of Governors

YEAR IN REVIEW

EDUCATION

Our Education department had another full year of school, summer and off-site programs. School field trips brought more than 1,400 schoolchildren and chaperones to our campus. Our off-site work grew through our first after-school program and new Traveling Trunk program. The Trunk visited four schools in its inaugural year. We were grateful to be able to provide this hands-on learning experience to students free of charge, thanks to the support of major corporate partner Service Credit Union, with additional support from Geico.

LANDSCAPE

In May, we completed the restoration of Governors Lane with the installation of granite steps from Spring Street to the Ladd-Gilman House. Donors have “stepped up” to purchase 14 out of 40 steps to raise over $20,000 for our Master Landscape Plan. With Phase I now complete, we will continue to make security, accessibility and beautification improvements to create a welcoming and community-minded campus.

EVENTS

We welcomed Victoria Su as the new Events and Membership Manager, a position that ushered in great growth in our public events. The American Independence Festival in July brought thousands of visitors to downtown Exeter for a celebration of our nation's independence. Our popular Beer for History series continued for the second year thanks to the generous support of Hoefle, Phoenix, Gormley & Roberts, P.A. of Portsmouth. We also launched our first preschool program, Revolutionary Story Time. Our season ended in early December with holiday merriment as guests filled Folsom Tavern during Exeter's “Ring in the Season” events.

COLLECTIONS & BUILDING

New climate-stable, UV-protected cases enabled us to display rare and delicate artifacts, including letters from George Washington. We also continued our exhibition re-envisioning work with plans to implement a first round of updates in May 2018. The preservation of our two 18th century buildings remains a top priority. We implemented monthly building preservation and pest management checks to ensure our buildings and collections are properly maintained for generations to come. We also addressed the structural integrity of the Ladd-Gilman House with a new roof at the end of 2017.

VISIBILITY

This year, we worked with community organizations, business partners and media outlets to increase the reach and visibility of our museum. We marched in town parades, participated in local festivals and spoke to organizations in New Hampshire, Maine and Yorktown, Virginia about our important work. August brought a visit from Governor Sununu and the Executive Council, who gifted the museum and Society of the Cincinnati with Certificates of Commendation from the state of New Hampshire. As we look to grow awareness of our museum within our local community and throughout the region, we look outside our walls to build strong partnerships with mission-aligned organizations and individuals year-round.
