About Union Depot

Union Depot is one of America's great rail stations from the early 20th century. It was originally completed in 1926, and in 2012 this iconic St. Paul landmark was restored to its original 1920s splendor.

Revitalized and once again welcoming travelers and visitors of all kinds, Union Depot is what it's always been—a meeting place, a starting point, a hub of activity, a home to celebrations much anticipated and long remembered. It's a true gathering place—past, present and future.

Today, this unique destination serves as a dynamic events venue, a growing presence in the city of St. Paul and an expanding multi-modal transportation hub for the entire region. The facility is owned by the Ramsey County Regional Railroad Authority (RCRRA) and is the centerpiece of the Lowertown revival.

TYPES OF EVENTS

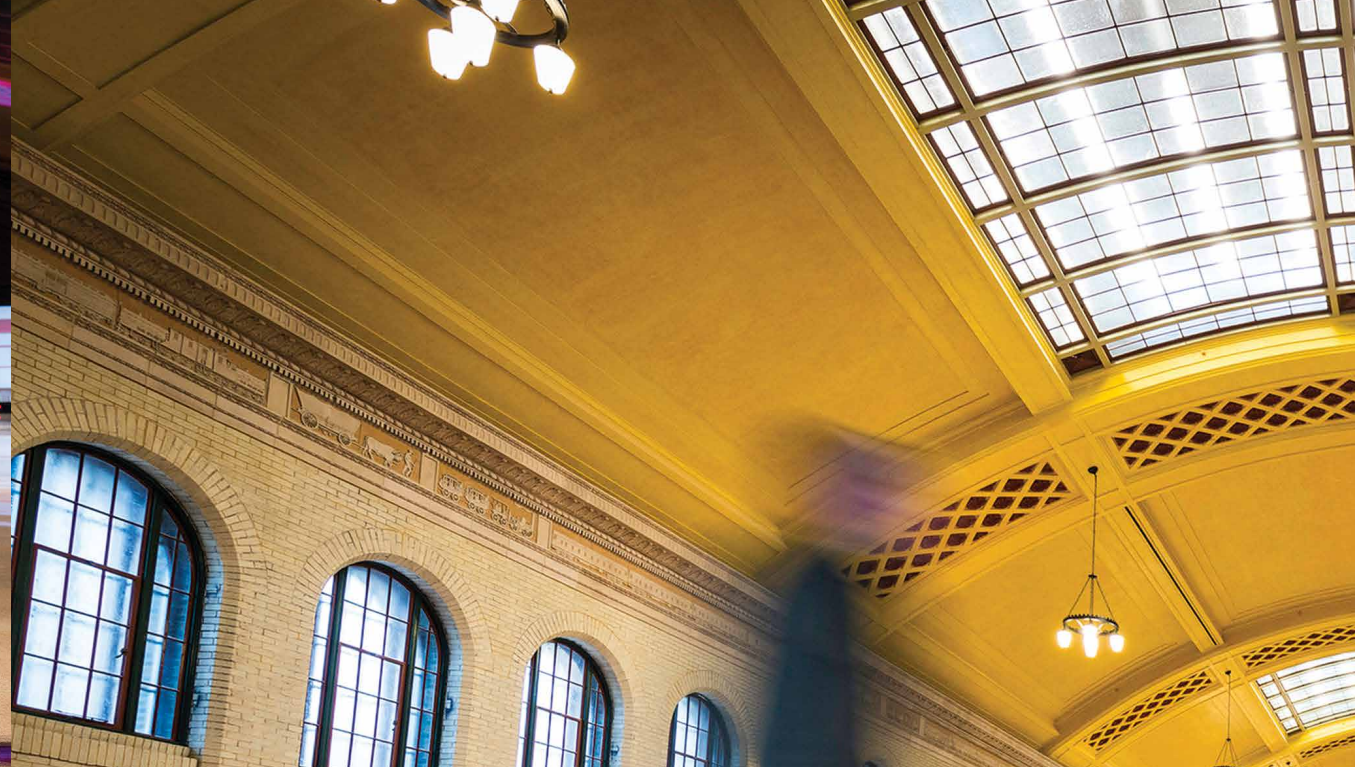

Seven Spaces, Unlimited Possibilities

Any event becomes a big event at Union Depot. From boisterous, city-wide public celebrations to quiet, productive staff retreats, the venue options at Union Depot provide a wide range of settings for all kinds of events.

A catalyst for the city and region since it was completed in 1926, Union Depot is located in the dynamic Lowertown neighborhood of St. Paul. The area continues to be recognized both locally and nationally as one of the top neighborhoods in St. Paul and beyond. Union Depot is just steps away from other key attractions, including the St. Paul Farmers Market and the renowned CHS Field.
