A one-day festival of over a thousand free concerts in parks and streets citywide

makemusicny.org

Make Music New York is made possible by the New York State Council on the Arts with the support of Governor Andrew Cuomo and the New York State Legislature. This program is also supported, in part by public funds from the New York City Department of Cultural Affairs in partnership with the City Council. Funded in part by a grant from the NYC & Company Foundation.

Make Music New York returns for its tenth year, with over a thousand free concerts on the first day of summer!

On Tuesday, June 21, from 10 in the morning until 9 at night, musicians of all ages and walks of life will perform in over 400 public spaces throughout the five boroughs, including plazas, sidewalks, gardens, closed-off streets, and even a pier in the Hudson River.

From established international artists to middle school choruses, music is played by anyone who wants to take part — and enjoyed by everyone who wants to listen. Just like the city itself, the range of offerings is wide-ranging and expressively free. From Beethoven symphonies to indie rock extravaganzas, from Punk Island to accordion quartets, from hip hop cyphers to brass band marathons, there is something for every listener.

But don't just listen — join the celebration and make music yourself! Bring your instrument to a Mass Appeal event, play a Boomwhacker at the Staten Island Yankees game, or just sit back and enjoy some chamber music in Midtown after work.

Use this program makemusicny.org as your guide, check for late-breaking updates... or just take follow your ears!

One of Make Music New York's signatures, the Mass Appeal is back for an eighth year, giving New Yorkers without groups of their own a chance to take part in the music-making, by gathering hundreds of musicians to play pieces written for single types of instruments. There are more than twenty events this year, open to everyone from the complete newbie to the polished professional.

Highlights of this year's Mass Appeals are three new pieces: Shimmer, Here and The Gauntlet. Shimmer is a new work for cymbals, composed by Brian Chase of the Yeah Yeah Yeahs and sponsored by the Avedis Zildjian Company. It takes place at Madison Square Park, starting at 3:30 pm. The Gauntlet, taking place on the High Line, is another new event. Composer Sxip Shirey calls for two rows of 30 singers to engage in a musical dialogue as the public experiences the piece by walking at their own pace through the "tent" of vocalists. And Here, a Mass Appeal event for music boxes by composer Angélica Negrón, takes place at Transmitter Park in Greenpoint, Brooklyn at 6:30 PM. Thanks to sponsor Kikkerland, the first 50 participants will be able to take home a music box (and, you are also welcome to bring your own!)

An unusual event puts fans of the Staten Island Yankees in the position of playing back-up percussion to Survivor frontman Dave Bickler. In Eye of the Tiger, fans will learn to play Boomwhackers (pitched percussion tubes) to the chorus of this famous song.

Returning Mass Appeals will include accordions, bagpipes, double reeds, French horns, guitars, harmonicas, mandolins, percussion, pianos, recorders, stones, synthesizers, ukuleles, and voices.

Throughout this program you will see this symbol for each Mass Appeal event:

Mass Appeal is made possible with major support from the Music Performance Trust Fund and The NAMM Foundation

Street Studios

Starting at 11am on June 21, eight small mobile recording studios will appear on sidewalks throughout NYC. These "Street Studios," coordinated by Make Music New York and Found Sound Nation, will engage passersby and MMNY festival musicians in the spontaneous, collaborative production of original music.

Each street studio will be run by a team of two DJ-engineers. These producers will spend a few hours recording, quick-mixing, looping, and playing back the live sounds, while interacting with the public who stop by to sing, play an instrument, or record sounds that become part of the musical track. The producers will then have two days to mix down one five-minute track to present at the "Street Studio Smackdown" party at National Sawdust in Brooklyn on Thursday, June 23rd (80 North 6th Street, 8 pm to 12 am). Everyone who records material on June 21st is invited to attend.

Find the  in this program to find a Street Studio in your neighborhood, and stop by on June 21!

Uptown Funk is a special project for Make Music New York's 10th year that will feature funk, jazz, and soul concerts at venues throughout Harlem. MMNY is partnering with Harlem Arts Festival and several neighborhood establishments to bring out local talent in a celebration of Harlem's American musical heritage and to create a lively, walkable route full of diverse interpretations of "funk." As much as Uptown Funk will function as an opportunity to showcase the musicians of Northern Manhattan, the full day of programming will also spotlight community clubs, restaurants, and outdoor spaces that appeal to a wide range of New Yorkers. Some, like Silvana and The Shrine, have become institutions in Harlem over the last decade, and others like MIST and Corner Social are a bit newer but have made important additions to the landscape all the same. This year promises to be the first of many Uptown Funk celebrations of the music and culture of Harlem.

Anyone and everyone is welcome to take part. Sites can be documented throughout the day, this is the large-group meetup to celebrate the day and make multi-angle recordings.

As part of Make Music New York, "Rhythm on Rikers" returns again for its third year, teaching percussion and cultivating community through music with inmates on Rikers Island. For the first time the program has been focused on working with adolescent men, ages 16-17. For 10 weeks the percussionists of TIGUE (Amy Garapic, Carson Moody, and Matt Evans) have been meeting regularly with a group of ten students to work on improvisation, time keeping, and ensemble communication. Using both found objects like buckets, and instruments previously donated by REMO, the ensemble will hold a concert on June 21st for the inmates and their families.
