Students Are Helping To Bring In The Crops

Neptune Has Provided Six, Manasquan more than sixty; May Work Total of 15 Days.

A total of 250 boys and girls were placed on the farms of Monmouth county by the Farm Labor office in the period from June 15 to September 1, according to the report of Clinton L. Mundy, of Neptune, who is manager of this office. Since the Student Service commission took over this work on September 1, more than 100 boys and girls have enrolled and are now working the harvest.

The farmers have told Mr. Mundy's office that if it had not been for the help of the school boys and girls thousands of dollars worth of crops would have been lost.

Students are permitted to take off a total of 15 days each up to November 15 to assist in this work. Transportation is furnished by the farmers and a scale of forty cents an hour is paid the workers.

Six boys from Neptune high school have enlisted for the work. Manasquan has a total of 60 to 70 students working and Freehold provided about forty.

Students desiring to help bring in the crops should register with the principals of their school. There is still need for more helpers, according to Mr. Mundy.

JAPS CAN'T TAP THIS RUBBER PLANT

This is not the world's largest bazooka. It is a small part of the process equipment designed and installed by the Blaw-Knox Company of Pittsburgh as a part of the newly born synthetic rubber industry. When asked for a simple explanation of the process, an engineer playfully remarked, "You push the middle valve down, the goo goes round and round and rubber comes out here." He didn't say which middle valve. There are 10,000 valves on the 50 miles of pipes in each 30,000 ton unit for making GR-S rubber. Blaw-Knox prepared the standard designs for all the GR-S plants and installed the equipment for nine units. GR-S formerly was known as Buna-S.

All Bets Called Off By Reporter Disclosures

Bookie Joints and Asbury Park Police Thrown into a Minor Panic by Investigator's Charges.

There were no bets being placed on the horses from the familiar hangouts in Asbury Park over the past weekend as the result of revelations appearing in the New York Journal American last Friday. Charges were made that members of Asbury Park's police force are acting as gaming touts for the Vetran ring, citing book, chapter and verse.

With the ostensible purpose of seeking causes of absenteeism and low morale among workers in military areas, the reporter-investigator, with the wholehearted cooperation of the police, had no difficulty in finding all the places where he could lose his shirt.

The published revelations proved a kind of bombshell. All the favorite betting spots closed like clams, or moved farther underground. The situation can hardly be described as a major panic in the Park's proud little underworld, because it has weathered all past storms with ease. However, this is war time and there is a gnawing suspicion in the mind of Vetran that the F. B. I. might be persuaded to step over the local police. After all, he is an American citizen only by the skin of his teeth as a perusal of the court records will show.

In the meantime, Rev. James S. Pemberton, the energetic pastor of Ballard church, has been throwing dents into the hide of the mob. As chairman of the committee on Temperance and Public Morals of the Methodist church and candidate for the Assembly on the National Prohibition ticket, he wrote the Journal-American as follows:

Elmer Hough, his brother-in-law, was killed by the New York Flier, which struck his car Labor Day morning while he was returning from Williamsport, Pa. He was known to many here, as he assisted Mr. Herman in the operation of the Whitfield for several years. He was an old bachelor and lived on his own farm. He is survived by his sister, Mrs. Roland A. Walkey, of Rebersburg, and Lancaster, Pa., and Roy Hough, who is living in Florida, brothers.

Urges W. S. C. S. To Plan Youth Program

Mrs. Ira Pimm Guest Speaker at Meeting of Society Wednesday; Nominating Committee Elected.

Mrs. Ira S. Pimm, of Long Branch, the secretary of the Northeastern jurisdiction of Young People's Work, was the guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Woman's Society of Christian Service in St. Paul's church Wednesday afternoon. Her subject was "Youth Fellowship," and was based on the Biblical story of "The Woman at the Well." In Christ's message to this woman, the supreme responsibility was placed on womanhood. The speaker described conditions throughout the world, including this country, where Christian training is being neglected in the homes and as a result, many of our young people are misled. In closing, Mrs. Pimm appealed to her hearers to recognize their responsibility in developing a worthwhile program for the young people in the church and the community.

Four new members were welcomed by the president, who are (Continued on Page 5)

Bishop Moore and Editor Roy Smith To Be Jubilee Year Camp Preachers

Quarterly Meeting of Ocean Grove Association In Philadelphia Ratifies Improvement Budget and Part of Program.

Announcement that Bishop Arthur J. Moore, of Atlanta, Ga., and Editor Roy L. Smith, of the Christian Advocate, would be the preachers at Camp Meeting in 1944 was made at the quarterly meeting of Ocean Grove Association held last Friday.

The quarterly meeting which is usually held here was held at the Union League in Philadelphia on account of travel restrictions. It is possible, said Manager Joseph A. Thoma, who went to Philadelphia to attend the session, that Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Reformed church of New York City, will also assist at Camp Meeting time.

Dr. Peale was one of the preachers of this year's Camp Meeting.

Bishop Moore and Dr. Smith have both appeared here before during the ten-day special services, the former in 1937 and the latter in 1938, when he was pastor of the First Methodist church of Los Angeles and before he had entered upon his duties as editor of Methodism's leading church paper. That year Dr. Smith teamed with the well known English evangelist, Dr. F. W. Norwood, of London.

Street improvements which had already been started by the local manager were ratified at the quarterly meeting. A budget of $15,000 was voted for improvements, in preparation for the Diamond Jubilee next year. In addition to the repair and resurfacing of streets, the exterior of the Auditorium will be painted buff, with a dark trim. The building, brown as the tabernacle, will get a new roof. Several new boardwalk pilings will be sunk and the pavilions repaired.

EDITOR ROY L. SMITH, of the Christian Advocate and well-known Evangelist, selected for the traditional ten-days services in 1944.

Kohlmann To Play At Organ Dedication

Will Give Recital on Central Presbyterian's Instrument, rebuilt by Beach, on October 31

Clarence Kohlmann, Ocean Grove Auditorium organist, will preside at the console at the dedication of the newly-rebuilt organ of the Central Presbyterian church, Newark, N. J., on Sunday, October 31. The dedication services will be held at 4:00 p. m., following which Mr. Kohlmann will give a concert.

Rev. John Strome, pastor of the church, will preside. Dr. Lester H. Clee, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church and moderator of the Presbytery of Newark, will deliver the dedicatory address.

The organ is a Hook-Hastings and was completely rebuilt by Earl J. Beach, who services the famous Auditorium organ here.

Belmar Girl to Marry Alvin Everett Oct. 30

Announcement was made this week of the engagement of Miss Grace Anne Jung to Pfc. R. Alvin Everett, son of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Everett, 111 Heck avenue, by the mother of the bride-to-be, Mrs. Jeanette W. Jung, of Belmar.

Miss Jung, who attended the Belmar and Manasquan schools, is employed by the Signal Corps Laboratory at Camp Evans. Pvt. Everett, a graduate of Neptune high school in 1939, is stationed at Gulfport Field, Gulfport, Miss., with the army air force technical training command. Prior to entering the army, Everett was employed at Camp Evans.

The couple will be married at Gulfport on October 30.

Philatheans Begin Season

Members of the Louise Fox Philathea class, of St. Paul's church, were entertained by Mrs. E. W. Davis, 94 Main avenue, at the first fall session last Friday evening. The meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. Charles Weaver. Mrs. Raymond Manley led the devotions. Plans were discussed for a covered dish social. Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. William Heintz. Others present were Mrs. R. B. Trimmer, Mrs. R. E. Priest, Mrs. Joseph Sandford, Mrs. Joseph Porter, and Mrs. Elmer Smith. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Smith, 48 Abbott avenue, on November 4.

Public Question Wins Favor

The citizens of New Jersey will be given the opportunity on November 2 of this year to take the first step toward a revised state charter—to show by their "Yes" votes that they want the Legislature to bring forth a draft of a revised constitution for adoption or rejection next year at the 1944 election.

Two of the most general fears regarding the adoption of a new constitution were allayed in the wording of the public question to be voted upon. The new constitution must contain Article one of the existing constitution commonly known as the "Bill of Rights" and it must also provide for a Senate composed of one Senator from each county and the General Assembly must be composed of not more than sixty members. With these fundamentals taken care of, a "Yes" vote on Election Day will give the Legislature a long start on the road to improving the state charter.

The Republican candidate for governor, Walter E. Edge, favors revision. His Democratic opponent's chief supporter, Boss Hague, bitterly opposes the adoption of a new Constitution and will no doubt throw the full force of the Hudson county machine against it.

Major state-wide citizens organizations such as the New Jersey Tax-Payers association have endorsed former Governor Edge's stand in favor of revision, and have declared that the old Constitution is made to meet the requirements of modern and approved governmental procedure.

It is vitally important to the future of New Jersey that every citizen get out and vote on November 2.

Wood Workers Revive Old Skill

Veterans of the old carriage-making days are proving extremely valuable mechanics in helping to produce the famous Mosquito bombers.

Composed almost entirely of wood, the Mosquito, with its tremendous speed has been chalking up an outstanding record in unescorted sorties over Axis-held territory. Recently Mosquitos have been harassing the enemy with hit-and-run bombing attacks on Berlin.

The fuselage of the Mosquito is much like an American three-decker sandwich, says "Automotive Production," with wood and milk products as the ingredients. The inner-layer of three-ply birch is first laid over a solid concrete mould in which there are indentations holding the cross members in place. The first layer is "battered" with a plastic casein glue, made principally from milk. A second layer of balsa wood forms the "meat" of the sandwich. This is again "battered" on the outside before the third layer of plywood is applied to complete the job. Fuselages are constructed in two complete halves and then joined together.

The wood craftsmen originally worked for one of the early carriage makers who, about thirty years ago turned to the manufacture of automobiles. Since skilled hands were needed in wooden bodies, they continued to work at their trade until the introduction of the all-steel body. Most of the woodworkers then were transferred to welding and metal finishing jobs.

When the order for Mosquito bombers was received by the automotive company, at least half of the available personnel was made up of men from the old carriage and wood composite body plant. Much of the success in fulfilling this contract is due to their specialized experience and know-how, the company reports.

Though frowned upon by many aircraft experts when it was first conceived because of its wood composition, the Mosquito bomber has proved itself in battle. Instead of a detriment, the use of wood has turned out to be an asset. Not only is its extreme lightness an advantage, but a bullet will not splinter the fuselage nor will it mushroom and leave a gaping hole on the way out. Highly compressed wood limits the possibilities of burning.

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor is opposed to the establishment of the "closed shop" in the Newspaper Guild, which is composed of news writers. On the face of it that might appear as if the A. F. L. president was taking a noble stand on the Freedom of the Press. Reading further, one finds that he is merely sore because the Newspaper Guild is a C. I. O. organization instead of an A. F. L. Just one more disillusionment for the public.

The euphemistic term, "maintenance of membership," means just one thing, "closed shop." This latter term is taboo among labor czars because of its nasty implications. Stink weed by any other name is still stink weed. This should be remembered as Election Day approaches when Boss Hague with the aid of certain strong-arm elements that are not recognized by honest labor plan to take over the governorship.

OBITUARY

LOUIS C. SCHEELLE

Louis C. Scheelle, a retired furrier and a summer resident of Ocean Grove for more than thirty years, died at his home in Mt. Airy, Philadelphia, Pa., last Friday. He was 92 years old. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. William E. Thomson and Mrs. Walter S. Propert, of Ocean Grove; and four grandchildren, Mrs. John S. Yeo, nee Clayre Thomson, Mrs. Frank E. Wildey, nee June Thomson, Miss Betty Lyn Propert and Walter S. Propert, Jr., an ensign in the U. S. Navy. Funeral services were held Monday, with Rev. John C. Fisher officiating. At one time Mr. Scheelle owned the property located at 17 Webb avenue. After selling, he made his home with his son-in-law, William E. Thomson. He had been a member of the Masonic order for many years and his concern, Shoyer and company, located at 11th and Arch street, Philadelphia, were famous for their fine furs.

CARLTON KEELER

Funeral services for Carlton Keeler, 99½ Asbury avenue, who died last Friday at the Naval hospital, Philadelphia, Pa., were held Monday at the Naval Home in Philadelphia. Burial was made at Fairview cemetery, Middletown, N. J. Besides his second wife, Mrs. Helen O. Keeler, he leaves a son, Clifford B. Keeler, of Asbury Park. He was a member of the Benjamin Hartshorne Camp, Spanish American War Veterans.

Manpower is still the chief muddle here with the to-draft-or-not-to-draft-father dilemma having been pretty well decided in favor of drafting. This does not end the story, however, since the problem still remains of properly dividing men between the battle-front and the production lines.

HOW IS YOUR MEMORY?

Thirty Years Ago

Mrs. George E. Horton, daughter of the late William D. Gaston, who had resided in Ocean Grove for some years, was the musical director of the children's chorus at the World's Convention of the W. C. T. U. in Brooklyn.

Plumber A. T. Van Cleve had just installed a hot-water plant in Bancroft Rest Home, 74 Cookman avenue. This improvement completed the equipment of that place with all modern conveniences.

In the township police court, Justice Dodd had held John Marlin a peripatetic mechanic, in $100 bail, for the attempted theft of a box of plug tobacco from the Goodenough store on South Main street.

A most cordial invitation had been given the pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, Rev. J. D. Bills, to occupy his pulpit for another year following the session of the New Jersey annual conference to be held in the spring.

The entire Republican ticket—state, county, and township—was enthusiastically endorsed by the Ocean Grove Republican club in session at its headquarters in the Clarendon hotel. New names added to the club's roster were D. S. Reeves, William Moran, R. H. Eddleman, Henry Welsford and Bleeker Stirling.

A shut-out over Lakewood's eleven was scored by the Neptune school team of Ocean Grove at the former place. The locals experienced little difficulty in running up their score to 31 points. The first touchdown was made by Newberry.

One thing that seems probable, although debate is only a few days old, is that a compromise bill will be accepted that would virtually end occupational deferments for younger men regardless of dependency.

A Thought for the Week End

By Verne Leslie Smith,
Pastor of St. Paul's Church

NEW BEGINNINGS

Master Divine,
We thank Thee for all new beginnings,
For this present day with its new opportunities of service.
For Thee, and communion with Thee.
We thank Thee for landmarks passed
And new vistas opened ahead;
For new hope and inspiration;
New awakening, and new desires to serve our Church and Country.
We thank Thee that, to those who love Thee, the best is ever yet to be.
We thank Thee for the sacred elixir of Thy Spirit
Which wardeth forever from those who love Thee
All weariness of soul,
All discouragement in failure,
All old age of the soul.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Rains Slow Allied Advance in Italy; Strategic Use of Aircraft Paves Way To Successes in Southwest Pacific; U. S. Food Output Drops 7 Per Cent

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

These Japanese-Americans are shown moving to fighting front in Italy. Recruited in Hawaii, they are loyal to the flag of their adopted country.

ITALY: Slowed by Rains

With rain swelling the normally shallow and narrow Volturno river into a raging torrent, and the downpours bogging down movement of heavy equipment, fighting in Italy was slowed.

As the first rays of sunshine began to peep through, however, Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth army was organized for assault of German positions across the Volturno as artillery fire laid down a cover of shells.

Gen. Bernard Montgomery

To the east, Gen. Bernard Montgomery's Eighth army faced difficult going. Besides clinging stubbornly to mountain positions, the Germans rushed an armored division to this sector to help delay the British by fighting in the open plains, which lie between the rugged heights.

In declaring war on Germany, the government of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy was given status as co-belligerent by the Allies, that is, partnership in the actual fighting, but not in political councils. To assist the Italians in the fight, the Allies were reported ready to supply materials and extend lend-lease aid.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC: Make Use of Air

The part aircraft is playing in the jungle and mountain warfare in the Southwest Pacific has been brought to light with accounts of the Allies' steady march northward in New Guinea.

With the thick growth and rocky terrain making overland travel slow and difficult, air transports have been flying over these obstacles to land troops close to Jap bases. After disembarking the troops, the transports then take off to return again with supplies with which to carry on the battle.

Because of this strategic use of the air, the Allies have cleared better than half of the eastern coast of New Guinea, and now are slowly driving further northward toward the important Jap airplane base of Wewak, from which the enemy have been sending fighters and bombers against Allied positions.

RUSSIA: Cross Dnieper

Germany's whole Dnieper river line was threatened with Russian troops fighting in force on two sectors of the western bank of the broad waterway.

It was this line that Hitler ordered held at all costs, and German generals counter-attacked the Russians in force, with the intention of smashing the Reds before they could develop their drives and leave them too weak to carry on a major offensive.

In the north, the Reds pressed against the German fortress of Vitebsk, key to the Nazis' defensive system in the Baltic states. The Reds reportedly massed great strength in the region, since a big breakthrough would not only open the gates to the Baltic states, but also cut off Nazi land communication with Leningrad, and put the Russians at the German rear.

MISCELLANY:

IMPLEMENTS: Output of farm machinery will be doubled in 1944 under government permission, according to Lee Marshall, director of materials in the War Food administration. Rationing will be abolished on two-thirds of the 91 farm machinery items now on the list, and distribution controls on the entire list will be "cut in half." Tractors will continue to be rationed.

CHINESE: Could Come to U. S.

Repeal of the exclusion laws forbidding immigration of Chinese into this country, and the granting of citizenship to Chinese who might immigrate or who already reside in the U. S., was advocated by President Roosevelt as the house prepared to act on a measure providing the Chinese with these privileges.

The President said that quotas would allow 105 Chinese to immigrate to the U. S. annually, and, he added, "there can be no reasonable apprehension that any such number of immigrants will cause unemployment or competition in the search for jobs." At the present, foreign born Chinese cannot obtain citizenship in the U. S., and there are 37,242 of them here.

Congress should repeal the exclusion laws, President Roosevelt said, "... as another meaningful display of friendship for a gallant ally."

GAS: Western Rations Cut

Because military requirements total 43 per cent of their gasoline consumption, the value of A, B and C gas ration coupons in ten far western states were cut from four to three gallons.

This compares with two gallons for B and C coupons in other areas. Hint of further cut in the far western ration was dropped with the prediction that military requirements would approximate 52 per cent of the section's consumption in 1944.

Pipes Move Oil

Over 9,277 miles of pipe lines are now moving crude oil to refineries, with over 300,000 barrels being delivered daily to the Atlantic seaboard.

Made necessary by military use of the tankers which once supplied the East with most of its oil, total mileage of pipe lines, will reach 10,888 when the 250 million dollar construction program is completed.

Besides laying of new pipe, the direction of oil flow over 3,000 miles of pipe line was reversed, and more than 2,700 miles of old pipe was dug up and moved to new locations.

By the summer of 1944, it is expected that over 700,000 barrels of oil will move daily through the lines to the East. In the celebrated "big inch" pipe line, the oil flows at a speed of 4 1/2 miles per hour.

Pays Off With Pork

When the recent bond drive got under way, Governor Dwight Griswold of Nebraska (with hand upraised in picture) bet other governors that his state would beat theirs in exceeding its quota.

Griswold lost his bet, however, and here is shown attending a 4-H auction in Omaha, bidding for hogs with which to pay off his wagers.

In payment of one bet, Griswold sent a fancy porker to Governor John C. Vivian of Colorado. But much to Governor Vivian's dismay, he discovered that he would have to surrender 700 ration points, equal to 20 weeks' supply, to have the hog butchered.

HOGS: Hit Ceiling

Even though the government estimated 1943 spring pig production at 74,050,000, marketings at 27 federally inspected packing plants during the first week of price ceilings totaled 578,057, or only 0.78 per cent of the number of hogs on farms.

During the same period, practically all types of hogs brought the $14.75 top. The same condition prevailed as the second week of marketing under the ceiling began, with only younger pigs, some thin sows and some heavy stags and boars dropping below the $14.75 mark.

The 1943 spring pig production compared with 61,013,000 in 1942 and 49,234,000 in 1941.

PAPER: Future Cut's Possible

Newspapers and other users of wood pulp paper will be reduced to 48 per cent of their present supplies next year unless the pulpwood industry can obtain additional labor, a group of American, Canadian and British paper leaders declared.

The committee advanced two proposals, the first restricting printing and wrapping papers to 52 per cent of their 1943 quotas, and the other trimming all paper usage.

URGES GUAYULE EXPANSION NOW

William O'Neil

Declaring that the production of real rubber is even more vital to day as a supplement to the synthetic rubber program than it was at the beginning of the war, William O'Neil, president of the General Tire & Rubber Company, is urging immediate expansion of the guayule rubber project.

O'Neil has asked the rubber administrator and members of congress to act in setting up a guayule program which will provide a larger source of natural rubber.

He pointed out that with the great synthetic production, natural rubber is needed in the manufacture of heavy duty truck tires for use both by the military and essential civilian transportation companies.

Experiments with guayule culture since the Forest Service took over the project provided in legislation sponsored by O'Neil have shown that the period from seed to harvest need not be more than two years and probably can be one. Under the two year plan each acre produces from 600 to 850 pounds of rubber. Under the one year plan, guayule seed is drilled in like wheat early in the year, and is ready for harvest in the fall of the same year, producing from 400 to 800 pounds per acre. In each instance irrigation is necessary, but the one year method eliminates the necessity for nurseries and for transplanting, thus lowering the cost of rubber from this source.

O'Neil has suggested that much of the program be transferred to Mexico where there is an abundance of labor and of irrigable land.

Remote-reading magnetic compass indicators and transmitters are being produced for warplanes which make possible compass readings from the wing or other points on the plane relatively free from magnetic influences.

According to J. Cheever Cowdin of the National Association of Manufacturers, the Treasury's proposed tax plan falls heaviest on the fixed income of "white collar" workers and will add tremendous obstacles to full employment after the war.

CARIBBEAN CONSPIRACY

by BRENDA CONRAD

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—Anne Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes to Puerto Rico on an assignment for her father's paper. On the boat she meets Miguel Valera, a charming young Puerto Rican, and her husband, a tourist of whom Anne is immediately suspicious. She does not know that Taussig is actually a Nazi agent sent to Puerto Rico with carefully prepared plans for the destruction of the island's vital water supply.

CHAPTER II—When they dock Anne is met by Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, who is now a U. S. Army intelligence officer stationed at Puerto Rico. Anne leaves, when she arrives at her hotel, that Richard Taussig has the room across the hall. Pete does not discuss his suspicions with Anne, but he, too, is watching Taussig.

CHAPTER III—Anne discovers that her bags have been searched and at once suspects Taussig. As she is dusting the locks for finger prints there is a knock at the door. But instead of Taussig, Anne finds Sue Porter, whose husband is an engineer. Sue confides to Anne that she hopes Taussig will be able to help Russell as he, too, is an engineer.

CHAPTER IV—Anne decides to search Taussig's room for proof that he is not the innocent tourist he appears to be. There is a light on as she opens the door. Then a man claps his hand over her mouth and forces her out into the hall. The man, she is sure, is Miguel Valera.

CHAPTER V—Miguel Valera warns Pete to send Anne home. Valera is another person Pete has been watching, because Valera's orders to report to a military camp in the United States were abruptly cancelled and because reports he has received through army intelligence indicate that Valera may need watching.

which should be of great interest to many of our people who would want to know all the facts and happenings during all these years.

Making this statement without any question, I can truthfully say, there is no community where you can find the young people more interested in Christian work and more loyal than ours. Workers in our Young People's meetings, where they serve daily under fine leadership, with a corps of somewhat older women as directors in this wonderful work. We have many of our local boys in the Service, and at this writing, seventy-six of the boys from the Ushers' Association at the Auditorium serving in the Armed Forces. Boys who loved church work, boys who were most loyal to the Grove, boys whom we can be mighty proud of. Many of these grand fellows with their small pay have forwarded money toward the reduction of our debt and wishing great success of our Diamond Jubilee. What do you think of this as a real spirit?

Sort of a lesson to our few kickers. It is truly remarkable what Ocean Grove means to our young people. In many of the letters which I receive they say, "Unk. Bill. Do your best to keep the old place going until we can return. We are so anxious to be present next year. No matter where we go, or what we are doing, we always think of coming back." This in itself should stir our hearts and make us realize our responsibility. No finer group of young people ever lived than ours. Could we wish for anything finer?

When the great signs: "Holiness to the Lord," and "So be ye Holy," were placed in the new Auditorium and lighted for the first time, Dr. Stokes called special attention to them expressing earnest hope that we might never change, or depart from these principles. They are still lighted during every religious service. We are trying our best to follow his wishes and want to say, that we hope never to change.

Signed: Bill Thomson.

Caught in the middle of all this is industry which simultaneously was accused by Selective Service Director Hershey of hoarding labor and hit by the Army's demands for greatly increased production schedules in the next six months. All this coupled with War Manpower Commission warnings that war industries must hold their present workers or lose their contracts to employers who can.

CHAPTER VI

It was half past five when Richard Taussig got out of the Army car in front of the Escambró Beach Club. He went through the cool lobby and turned left past the bar and out onto the boardwalk above the smooth saucer curve of the beach. It was pleasantly crowded and gay with laughing people sitting in white chairs under the long fringe of palm trees, with tall frosted glasses in front of them. A few people were swimming in the protected surf, and children were building forts and castles in the clean white sand.

Mr. Taussig walked along under the palms until he came to a curve where the boardwalk followed the beach. A girl in a white satin bathing suit and a red cap was coming up the sand toward a man sitting alone, reading, at the end of the terrace. Two young men lying on the beach watching her with interest turned their heads the other way as she joined her father.

"Perhaps Gongaro is smart to keep an eagle eye on her," Mr. Taussig thought, advancing, toward them. They tacitly assumed she'd marry young Valera, apparently. If he had Graciela around, he wouldn't be wasting his time on the Heywood girl himself, he thought, if he were Miguel, but apparently the cold northern lights were attractive if you were born under the Southern Cross. And there was no accounting for tastes, anywhere in the world. Mr. Taussig had been around long enough to know that. He smiled at Graciela and shook hands with Diego Gongaro.

"Have you seen your picture?" Don Diego held out the paper, smiling broadly.

Mr. Taussig looked at it and nodded. "United States papers please copy," he said. He tore the photograph out and put it in his pocket.

"How is Miguel getting along with the American girl?" he inquired casually, lighting the cigar Diego Gongaro held out to him across the table.

"She's extraordinarily beautiful, of course," Mr. Taussig said placidly. "And very rich. Or her father is, and she's the only child. She'd be an excellent match."

Graciela moved suddenly, catlike. "If you don't care what kind of a girl you marry," she said. There was an unmistakable malice in her voice. Mr. Taussig smiled secretly. He could see her sharpening one of woman's oldest weapons.

"She's one of America's best families, and a very nice girl, I understand," he said.

"If nice girls go in other people's rooms in hotels . . . when they aren't there, then I'm sure she must be very nice," Graciela said calmly. Mr. Taussig almost started, in spite of the rigid control that was one of his chief characteristics. He blew a long ribbon of fragrant smoke between his soft lips.

"Whose room? And how do you know?" he asked easily. "Yours," Graciela said. "I know because I went up to my cousin Luisa's room to borrow some powder, and I saw her come out of her room and go to yours."

"Mr. Porter is waiting, Miss Heywood."

"Thank you," Anne put down the phone. Through the open transom she heard Mr. Taussig's bell ring almost at once. That meant that Russell Porter was picking them up together. She went quickly over to the dressing table and looked at herself in the mirror. Her face was too pale. She shouldn't have worn a white dress—a red one would have been better. But it was too late now. She knew Mr. Taussig was waiting until he heard her door open. Her hands were cold, her knees were shaking a little.

They drew up in the drive in front of a brightly lighted house perched up on stilts in a tropical jungle of flowers and trees. Concrete steps led up to a wide veranda that ran around three sides of it. Anne thought she'd never seen anything more charming. It was gay with brightly flowered chintz and bamboo furniture as cool and airy as it was comfortable.

"Oh, Sue, this is lovely!" Anne cried. Sue Porter came eagerly forward. She kissed Anne on the cheek and held out her hand to Mr. Taussig.

"It's so nice to have you here," she said. She turned back to Anne and gave her arm a tight little squeeze. "Remember to be awfully nice, won't you?" she whispered. She looked about twelve, Anne thought. She had a scarlet hibiscus tucked in her fuzzy, taffy-colored hair, and her blue eyes were like china saucers. Her white cotton evening dress had a whole garden of scarlet chintz hibiscus applied around its billowy hem.

"This is Terry, Anne."

She introduced a slightly pudgy young man in a crumpled white dinner coat, his black tie slightly askew. He scrambled to his feet. Then his eyes popped with pleasure. "By Jove, Sue—you didn't tell me she was a knock-out," he exclaimed.

"Don't mind him, Miss Heywood. He's always like that." The girl reclining in the bamboo chaise longue moved her feet over. "I could get up," she said, "but why don't you sit down instead?"

She looked up at Anne with a small dead-pan sort of face that didn't look stupid but certainly didn't look very bright. She had on a sea-green chifon dress a little lighter than her eyes, and almost no makeup, and her hair pushed casually back, hung in a long bob around her neck.

"Sue's busy with the guest of honor," she said. Her voice had the same slow monotonous quality as her face. "My name's Barbara French. That's my husband over there erupting the soda all over everybody. He always does. His name's Ben. Yours is Anne, isn't it?"

Anne nodded and sat down on the cushion at the end of the long chair. "It's supposed to be a chiche to ask people how they like it here, but I'm interested," the girl said.

"I like it," Anne said. She said "Thanks" to Ben, bringing her a Scotch and soda.

"This is Anne Heywood, Ben. We're going to like her."

"I hope she's going to like us," Ben said, grinning and sticking out his hand. "It's well—there's something wrong with Russell's soda."

"It's probably got carbon dioxide in it," Barbara said. She looked up at him with her unsmiling eyes. "Sometimes it has."

"Not often," Ben said. "One bubble to a bottle. I'll be back. Say, where did Sue pick up that egg?"

"In the bottom of last year's nest," Barbara answered calmly. "Ben's with Electrical Products," she added, as he went back to the bar. "He's nice."

"Have you been here long?" Anne asked.

"Three years."

"Do you like it?"

"Love it. I hate to think of going home—not until the children have learned Spanish so well they'll never forget it."

Anne looked at her with interest. There was something very attrac-

"If you don't care what kind of a girl you marry."

div about her effortless unsmiling calm. It was an extraordinary contrast to Sue's sparkling vivacity lighting out from the porch.

"Sue says she hates it."

"Sue hasn't learned that great big fish used to be little tiny fish tucked safely under the edge of a rock where the big fish wouldn't eat them up," Barbara answered. "Is it me her barracuda doesn't like . . . or is it you?"

"What do you mean?"

Anne turned to follow her gaze across the porch.

"The guest of honor. But it must be you. He's looking the other way. It was what they call 'veiled scrutiny' in books, I think."

Anne turned away. She had almost decided that Miguel hadn't told him. She wasn't so sure now. Not if Barbara was right . . . and Barbara was probably pretty generally right.

"I think our hostess is ready," Barbara said. She pulled herself up out of the deep cushioned chair. Sue had come out on the porch. "Come along, children," she said. "Anne, you didn't meet everybody, did you—how awful!"

"She's coming to the Club tomorrow and she'll meet everybody then," Ben said cheerfully. "They'll all look different anyway."

Anne sat at Russell's right at the foot of the table. Terry was next to her. Barbara was on the other side next to Mr. Taussig at Sue's right.

"Of course it will ruin the Island," Sue was saying.

"She's talking about the law to prevent corporations from owning more than five hundred acres of land," Terry said, tackling his lobster thermidor. Anne listened. She couldn't distinguish the voices behind the scraps of conversation that pelted around her ears like rain on a tin roof.

"But something has to be done, doesn't it?" (That was Barbara.)

"But they don't have to bankrupt the Island."

"Foreign investors built up the sugar industry."

"But they take all the money out of the country." (That was Barbara again.)

"But they took the risk."

"The natives won't work."

"You couldn't work on a diet of rice and beans—if any—either. You couldn't eat a day's cane on a diet of beefsteak and spinach." (That was Barbara too.)

"They don't raise any of their own food. It's all imported."

"I don't see why we don't just pull out and give them back their Island. Just show 'em."

"They'd love it." (It was Barbara speaking.)

"The population has increased one hundred per cent since we took it over . . . cut down infant mortality . . . cleaned up the yellow fever . . . malaria . . ."

"Without doing anything drastic to solve the problem of feeding the people we've saved . . ."

"A Puerto Rican told me if the population kept on at this rate they'd have to build a second story to the Island . . ."

Sue looked helplessly at Anne. It had become a conversational free-for-all in which the guest of honor was unable to get a word in edgewise. He sat smiling blandly. Only once or twice Anne, turning her head, caught the glint of the tall candles in their crystal hurricane globes on his thick lenses. He was watching her—there was no doubt of that, because he looked away again without ever really meeting her eyes. Each time she had a chill little feeling in the pit of her stomach.

"They thought we were awful, going without stockings. Now they all do it themselves."

"I remember my father nearly died when he discovered I didn't have stockings on," Barbara said. "He hadn't noticed it the first couple of months. My aunts in Boston still think it's awful."

Sue smiled enchantingly. "Don't pay any attention to Barbara, Mr. Taussig. She's just being contrary."

She put her napkin down on the table. This was the moment she'd been waiting for. The men could sit and talk, and Russell would have his chance.

"Shall we let the men have their coffee here?"

She started to get up, but Mr. Taussig was out of his chair.

"Frankly, I prefer coffee with the ladies," he said blandly.

Sue had not gone to Miss Oakley's for nothing.

"How wonderful!" She smiled brightly and led the way through the dining room back to the porch.

Anne glanced at her watch. It was almost time to go. The party had settled into three groups, with Barbara and Terry and a silent young man who became voluble only at the mention of a race-horse in one of them in the center of the porch. Behind them Ben was with Sue and Russell talking to Mr. Taussig. The others were playing some kind of game inside the living room.

Anne was listening to Terry and Barbara arguing the distance to a place she'd never heard of. She was listening more intently to the conversation behind her. Mr. Taussig was saying it couldn't be done. Anne had missed what it was. Russell Porter was insisting that it could.

"We're doing it," he was saying. "Right here, now. It's a wonder Colonel De Voe didn't show it to you this afternoon."

"There was so much to see," Mr. Taussig said. "Our time was limited. My point is that it's one of those engineering dreams that's a practical impossibility. If you can do it you're a wizard, my boy."

"That's just what he is, Mr. Taussig!" Sue cried. "Darling, why don't you show him those drawings you have, with all the specifications in them. Then he'd believe you."

It seemed to Anne that there was an abrupt little silence. She couldn't be sure, because Terry was trying to beat down Barbara's monotonous resistance to something by banging on the table. "I tell you it's crazy!" he was shouting. Then she heard Russell Porter saying, "I'd like to, Mr. Taussig, but they're not supposed to be shown around. You know how it is."

"Certainly," Mr. Taussig said. "And very wisely, in my opinion."

"But Russell . . ."

"Run along, little girl, and look after your children. I hear one of them squalling."

The interruption was affectionate, but firm. Anne watched Sue's face as she went a little blindly but still smiling toward the living room. She was almost in tears.

After all, she thought, Russell wasn't being led by the nose. She felt a little better. He was probably one of those husbands who let the little woman have her head up to a point.

Barbara got up too. She held her hand out to Anne.

"You're coming to the Club tomorrow, aren't you? Five o'clock?" Her expressionless green eyes were fixed past Anne on the three men in the corner.

"Russell's all right," she said. Anne started.

A faint smile, if such a brief shadowy thing could be called a smile, moved in Barbara's face.

"Ben, we have a home of our own," she called. "Good-by, Russell. It's been nice. Where's Sue?"

"Can we take Anne home?" Sue came gaily out of the house. "But darling—it's early!"

"No, it's late."

Mr. Taussig came forward with Ben and his host.

"This has been delightful, Mrs. Porter," he said. He took her hand and smiled. "I like that man of yours," he added, lowering his voice.

Barbara looked at Anne with nothing in her eyes, and turned away. "Good night, everybody," she called to the little group inside the house. (TO BE CONTINUED)

The Poet's Corner

Rest in the Lord
Rest in the Lord! The world is full of sorrow;
Fear and disaster ride upon the wind;
Blackness of night sinks to a dark tomorrow;
Dread dogs our way, destruction stalks behind.

Rest in the Lord! Be patient though He tarry;
He hastens not, nor is He ever late;

In His strong arms your burdens—He will carry,
Bind up your wounds, your ills alleviate.

Resting on Him, while borne upon His shoulder,
Your soul revives and weariness is gone;

Forward you go, more confident and bolder
To seek the goal to which your steps are drawn.

Yea, though your heart be sick with apprehension,
Tortured by fears, or blind with searing grief;

Too crushed to bear with human intervention;
Then rest in God! He surely brings relief.

When you have striven with your best endeavor
To do the right, your duty to fulfill,

Blame you receive, but understanding never;
Then rest in Him; and trusting Him, be still.

At last, with work half done, the night comes stealing;
You feel yourself a servant profitless,

Not worth the penny! His great love revealing,
He gives you rest; your little He will bless.

Thank you...

...for giving up needless travel!

THOUSANDS of Americans conscious of the vital part that transportation plays in victory, are giving up non-essential trips. That is genuine sacrifice, self-restriction symbolic of American determination to win this war.

Half the available Pullman cars and a third of all coaches are now in troop service. Those which are left are carrying an enormous volume of essential war and business travelers. Besides that, many thousands of service men on furlough and people going about the daily business of making a living are taxing available equipment to the limit. That kind of travel MUST come first.

With good grace there is almost universal acceptance of the fact that when no Pullman space is available the alternative is a coach; and when coaches are filled, the alternative to standing is to remain at home. For frankly, there is not room at all times for all who would like to travel.

Compulsory travel restrictions would restrain the few who consider personal convenience first, but by and large, plain horse sense and loyalty are making self-restriction work reasonably well.

Americans in the vast majority who ask themselves conscientiously, "Is this trip necessary?" will not undertake any unnecessary journey at the expense of crowding out an essential traveler or a service man on leave for a few precious days at home.

To those who have refrained from "pleasure" travel in the interest of their fellow-Americans and the war effort, the Pennsylvania Railroad acknowledges its appreciation. We know that in many cases it has not been easy, because it is human nature for Americans to "go places." But it is this spirit of cooperation that will help win this war.
