Some Further Sources

Architectural bibliographies are numerous. One of the first, and still an essential reference work, is Henry-Russell Hitchcock, American Architectural Books (1946, reprint ed., 1962). More recent efforts tend to have a narrower focus, e.g.: Frank J. Ross, Jr., Bibliography of Early American Architecture (1968); and Howard Wight Marshall, American Folk Architecture: A Selected Bibliography (1981). Vance Bibliographies has published a number of volumes concerning the period in question. Relatively complete listings of recent books, articles, and catalogues are contained in the newsletters of the Society of Architectural Historians and Vernacular Architecture Forum.

The latest and best biographical compendium is Adolf K. Placzek, ed., Macmillan Encyclopedia of Architects, 4 vols. (1982). Additional listings are contained in Henry F. and Elsie Rathburn Withey, Biographical Dictionary of American Architects, Deceased (1956); however, the factual data is often inaccurate. Biographical sketches of architects are also frequently included at the end of regional and local studies.

Guidebooks may afford a wealth of data on the locale in question, even though their format necessitates brevity. Style guides tend toward simplistic formulization and should be avoided, especially when dealing with periods after the Civil War.

The files of HABS/HAER, the National Register of Historic Places, and state and local surveys afford a wealth of information, much of which remains unpublished. However, several states and communities have produced HABS catalogues, and a complete register of HABS data has been compiled for California, New York, and Texas.

WHERE TO FIND WHAT YOU NEED

Gelman Library is a reasonable source for many current publications. Some material that gelman does not have can be found at other consortium libraries. if you do not find the material you need from the consortium catalogue, there are a number of alternatives.

The easiest way to get additional material is through Gelman's Inter-Library Loan office, which is located at the southeast corner of the main floor of Gelman. This is a very efficiently run operation, but you need to allocate several weeks for retrieval. Look for the material you need early and if you don't find it, go to inter-library loan asap.

The University of Maryland has by far the best academic library system in the metropolitan area. If you have access to a car, go there. After hours, you can park for free, but you cannot check material out.

Closer at hand is the Library of Congress. Take the Metro's Blue or orange lines to Capitol South. Go to the east side of the main (Jefferson) building. Get a reader's card at ground level. Then proceed up to the main floor. Material catalogued since 1972 is on the computer (and accessible online at www.loc.gov). Material of earlier vintage can be found in the card catalogues in the stack area off the rotunda. Bring some work with you. it takes about an hour to retrieve materials from the same building. If what you want is in the Adams Building across the street, it is easier to go there, to the 5th floor, via the tunnel that connects the lowest levels of both buildings.
