GRANTS AND CONTRACTS

The Effects of a Technology-based Community Intervention on Diabetes Burden & CVD Risk Factors

NIH – National Institute on Aging (NIA), R21

Principal Investigators: Paschal AM, Mitchell JB, Parmelee P

Status: Pending-Submitted June 16, 2017

The aim of this study is to conduct a randomized controlled trial of a physical activity and nutrition education intervention designed to reduce diabetes mellitus and cardiovascular disease (CVD) in older adults residing in rural communities.

Role: Co-PI

Motivation Toward and Utilization of Fitness Trackers and their Dietary Applications among Rural African American Women

ILSI North America

Principal Investigators: Knol L, Paschal AM, Carter-Templeton H

Status: Pending-Submitted March 15, 2017

The purpose of this study is to use a well-known behavioral theory, the Transtheoretical Model (TTM), to understand motivation toward the use of fitness trackers with smartphone applications and their utilization in rural African American women.

Role: Co-PI

Identifying the Trajectory of Hearing Loss in Adults in Medically Underserved Communities

NIH- National Institute on Deafness and Other Communication Disorders (NIDCD), R15

Principal Investigator: Hay-McCutcheon M

Status: Pending-Submitted June 2017

The goal of this project is to identify the development and/or progression of hearing loss in adults with Type 2 Diabetes Mellitus who live in Alabama and cannot easily access medical and hearing healthcare.

Role: Consultant/Advisor

Partnering to Assist Communities to Thrive - Marion (PACT for Marion)

-- AKA "Living in Victory Every Day" Program (The LIVE Program)

Division of Community Affairs, Center for Community-Based Partnerships (CCBP), 2015-2016, $5,000

Principal Investigators: Paschal AM and Mitchell JB (The University of Alabama)

Status: Completed

Using a community-based participatory approach (CBPR), a nutrition education and physical activity program was developed to reduce the risk of cardiovascular disease among aging African American adults residing in a rural, medically underserved community.

Role: Co-PI

Investigating Food Insecurity among Older African American Adults in Rural Alabama

Research Grants Committee (RGC), the University of Alabama, 2014–2016, $5,610

Principal Investigator: Paschal AM, The University of Alabama

Status: Completed

The purpose of this CBPR study was to investigate food insecurity in a sample of African American older adults and to identify strategies for improvement.

Role: PI

Exploring Oral Health and Insurance Issues among Uninsured Children

NIH - National Institute of Child Health & Human Development (NIH-NICHHD), 2011-2014, $275,000

Status: Completed

Principal Investigators: Johnston J (University of Kansas School of Medicine-Wichita) and Paschal AM (The University of Alabama), 1R21HD064594-01A1

The purpose of this CBPR study was to increase understanding of how uninsured children their families access and use dental care services and public health insurance, and identify strategies for improvement.

Role: co-PI

Parental Health Literacy and Epilepsy Care Management in Children

Epilepsy Foundation (Landover, MD), 2012-2014, $50,000

Status: Completed

Principal Investigator: Paschal AM, The University of Alabama

The purpose of this community-based participatory research (CBPR) study was to investigate the relationship between parent health literacy and medication adherence in children with epilepsy and to provide parent recommendations for improvement.

Role: PI

Culturally-tailored Smoking Cessation for American Indians

NIH Minority Supplement Award to Conduct Health Literacy Sub-study to Parent Grant
