While classifying GDP into agriculture and non-agriculture sectors as per industrial classification, the share of agriculture sector to GDP is in declining trend while that of non-agriculture is on the rise. Contribution of agriculture sector to real GDP which was 36.6 percent in FY 2000/01, has dropped to 33.1 percent in current fiscal year while that of non-agriculture sector has gone up from 63.4 percent to 66.9 percent.

Liquidity in the market, important function of stock exchange can be measured by the ratio of traded amount to GDP of the country and traded amount to market capitalization. The ratio of traded amount to market capitalization for the FY 2014/15 is 6.60 per cent which was 7.30 per cent in the preceding year. Similarly, the ratio of traded amount to GDP is 3.07 per cent which was 4 per cent a year ago and 1.30 per cent previous year. It shows that the liquidity in the market has decreased this fiscal year in comparison to the fiscal year 2013/14.

From the data above, it can be seen that secondary market of Nepal is highly concentrated on bank and financial institutions. The data shows that 46.31 percent of total market capitalization consists of largest ten companies and the concentration ratio of top ten companies on turnover volume is 34.64 percent. Top ten companies on market capitalization consist of six and top ten companies on turnover consists of eight companies from banking sector. It again shows that the market is mainly dominated by banking and financial institutions. This may cause problem to construct efficient portfolio in the market and could be the main barrier for the institutional investors. For this companies from real sectors should be encouraged to list and bond market should be facilitated to get traded in capital market. New instruments like Index Fund, Exchange Traded Fund and Pension Fund are to be introduced in the stock market for sustainable growth of capital market and investors should be provided with added facilities like margin trading, online trading, depository services etc. Further efforts to bring additional foreign capital from NRNs or foreign institutional investors will also help the smooth development of the market.
