

THE TIBETAN BOOK of
THE DEAD

W. Y. EVANS-WENTZ

with a New Foreword and Afterword by Donald S. Lopez, Jr.

THE TIBETAN BOOK OF THE DEAD

(reading left to right)
THE TRANSLATOR AND THE EDITOR IN GANGTOK, SIKKIM
Described on page xxvii

FOLIOS 35A AND 67a OF THE BARDO THODOL MS.
Described on page xxvii

THE TIBETAN BOOK OF THE DEAD

OR

The After—Death Experiences on the Bardo Plane, according to LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup's English Rendering

Compiled and edited by
W. Y. Evans-Wentz

with a new Foreword and Afterword by Donald S. Lopez, Jr.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
2000

Oxford New York

Athens Auckland Bangkok Bogotá Buenos Aires Calcutta
Cape Town Chennai Dar es Salaam Delhi Florence Hong Kong
Istanbul Karachi Kuala Lumpur Madrid Melbourne Mexico City
Mumbai

Nairobi Paris São Paulo Singapore Taipei Tokyo Toronto Warsaw and associated companies in Berlin Ibadan

Copyright © 1960, 2000 by W. Y. Evans—Wentz

First published by Oxford University Press, London, 1927

Second Edition, 1949

Third Edition, 1957

First issued as an Oxford University Press paperback, 1960

New Foreword and Afterword copyright © 2000 by Donald S. Lopez, Jr.

Published by Oxford University Press, Inc.,
198 Madison Avenue, New York, New York 10016

Oxford is a registered trademark of Oxford University Press

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means,
electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise, without the prior permission of Oxford University Press.

Library of Congress Cataloging—in—Publication Data

Karma—glin—pa, 14th cent.

[Bar do thos grol. English]

The Tibetan book of the dead; or, The after—death experiences on the Bardo plane, according to LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup's English rendering / compiled and edited by W.Y. Evans—Wentz; with a new foreword and afterword by Donald S. Lopez, Jr.

p. cm.

Includes Index.

ISBN 0—19—513311—0 —ISBN 0—19—513312—9 (pbk.)

1. Intermediate state—Buddhism—Early works to 1800. 2. Death—Religious aspects—Buddhism—Early works to 1800. 3. Funeral rites and ceremonies, Buddhist—China—Tibet—Early works to 1800. I. Title.

BQ4490.K3713 2000
294.3'423—dc21

00—022529

13 5 7 9 8 6 4 2

Printed in the United States of America on acid free paper

IN MEMORY OF
MY DECEASED FATHER AND MOTHER
I DEDICATE
THIS BOOK TO MY TEACHERS
BOTH SECULAR AND RELIGIOUS IN EUROPE AND AMERICA AND THROUGHOUT THE ORIENT

‘Thou shalt understand that it is a science most profitable, and passing all other sciences, for to learn to die. For a man to know that he shall die, that is common to all men ; as much as there is no man that may ever live or he hath hope or trust thereof; but thou shalt find full few that have this cunning to learn to die. . . . I shall give thee the mystery of this doctrine; the which shall profit thee greatly to the beginning of ghostly health, and to a stable fundament of all virtues.’— Orologium Sapientiae.

‘Against his will he dieth that hath not learned to die. Learn to die and thou shalt learn to live, for there shall none learn to live that hath not learned to die.’— Toure of all Toures: and Teacheth a Man for to Die.

The Book of the Craft of Dying (Comper’s Edition).

‘Whatever is here, that is there ; what is there, the same is here. He who seeth here as different, meeteth death after death.

‘By mind alone this is to be realized, and [then] there is no difference here. From death to death he goeth, who seeth as if there is difference here.’— Katha Upanishad, iv. 10—n (Swami Sharvananda’s Translation).

FOREWORD

Donald S. Lopez, Jr.

A certain trepidation attends the decision to accept an invitation to write a foreword to new editions, published in 2000, of the four books of W. Y. Evans—Wentz: The Tibetan Book of the Dead, Tibet's Great Yogi Milarepa, Tibetan Yoga and Secret Doctrines, and The Tibetan Book of the Great Liberation. The four books in their old editions are already burdened with numerous prefaces, commentaries, and introductions, causing one to wonder what another preface could possibly add. It seems inevitable that the four books of Evans—Wentz will continue to outlive yet another generation of commentators, such that anything that a scholar might add today will only serve as material for a scholar some fifty years from now, who will demonstrate the biases and misunderstandings of a preface written fifty years ago, a preface that merely offers evidence of the fin de siècle Zeitgeist of those who once called themselves postmoderns.

The four books of Evans—Wentz are surely ground—breaking works, the first to bring translations of Tibetan Buddhist texts to the English—speaking public. Evans—Wentz was equally avant garde in his method, collaborating closely with Tibetan scholars, a practice that would not become common for another four decades, after the Tibetan diaspora began in 1959. Yet, for the scholar of the present day, looking back now more than seventy years to the publication of the first volume of the series, The Tibetan Book of the Dead, in 1927, the Tibetan tetralogy of W. Y. Evans—Wentz, although a product of our century, seems to have originated in another age. All four books assume the undifferen—tiated dichotomy of the materialist West and the mystic East, an East that holds the secret to the West's redemption. Few of the concerns of scholars—such as language or culture or history—are to be found in the books. Instead, the volumes are presented as repositories of a timeless wisdom preserved by the East, a wisdom that will someday save the West, ultimately overcoming the duality of the hemispheres to culminate in the Unity of Mankind. This apparently beatific vision has since been shown to be the product of a romantic Orientalism that viewed the traditions of Asia as a natural resource to be extracted and refined for the consumption of the West; the books thus mark a moment in the history of colonialism.

Yet the four books of Evans—Wentz, especially the first, represent an important moment in that history. The products of a chance encounter between a Sikkimese school teacher and an American eccentric traveling in British India in 1919, the books have proved to be among the most durable products of the century's romance of Tibet, radiating their influence far beyond what might be expected from such an unlikely beginning.

Walter Wentz was born in Trenton, New Jersey, in 1878, the son of a German immigrant and an American Quaker. The late nineteenth century was a period of great fascination with spiritualism, the belief that spirits of the dead could be contacted through seances, materialization, automatic writing, and other techniques. Walter took an early interest in the books on spiritualism in his father's library, reading as a teen both his Unveiled and The Secret Doctrine by Madame Blavatsky of the Theosophical Society. These works were to have a profound effect on Walter Wentz. Indeed, it is impossible to appreciate his tetralogy without recognizing his lifelong commitment to Theosophy.

The Theosophical Society had been founded in New York in 1875 by Madame Helena Petrovna Blavatsky, a Russian emigré, and Colonel Henry Steel Olcott, a journalist and veteran of the Union Army during the Civil War. The goals of their Society were “to diffuse among men a knowledge of the laws inherent in the universe; to promulgate the knowledge of the essential unity of all that is, and to determine that this unity is fundamental in nature; to form an active brotherhood among men; to study ancient and modern religion, science, and philosophy; and to investigate the powers innate in man.” The Theosophical Society represented one of several responses to Darwin's theory of evolution during the late nineteenth century. Rather than seeking a refuge from science in religion, Blavatsky and Olcott attempted to found a scientific religion, one that accepted the new discoveries in geology and archaeology while proclaiming an ancient and esoteric system of spiritual evolution more sophisticated than Darwin's theory.

Madame Blavatsky claimed to have spent seven years in Tibet as an initiate of a secret order of enlightened masters called the Great White Brotherhood. These masters, whom she called Ma—hatmas ("great souls"), lived in Tibet but were not themselves Tibetan. In fact, the very presence of the Mahatmas in Tibet was unknown to ordinary Tibetans. These masters had once lived throughout the world, but had congregated in Tibet to escape the onslaught of civilization. The Mahatmas had instructed her in Theosophy, which she also referred to as "Esoteric Buddhism," of which the Buddhism being practiced in Asia, including Tibet, was a corruption.

Throughout her career, she (and later, other members of the society) claimed to be in esoteric communication with the Mahatmas, sometimes through dreams and visions, but most commonly through letters that either materialized in a cabinet in Madame Blavatsky's room or that she transcribed through automatic writing. The Mahatmas' literary output was prodigious, conveying instructions on the most mundane matters of the Society's functions, as well as providing the content of the canonical texts of the Society, such as A. P. Sinnett's Esoteric Buddhism (1885) and Madame Blavatsky's The Secret Doctrine (1888).

The Theosophical Society enjoyed great popularity in America, Europe, and India (despite repeated scandals and a report by the Society of Psychical Research that denounced Madame Blavatsky as a fraud), playing an important but ambiguous role in the Hindu renaissance in India and the Buddhist renaissance in Sri Lanka (where Henry Olcott was particularly active). Its popularity continued after the death of the founders and into the twentieth century, when Blavatsky's heir, the former British suffragette Annie Besant, selected a young Hindu boy in 1909 as the messiah, the World Teacher, Krishnamurti. He renounced his divine status and broke with the Society in 1930. The death of Besant and other leaders followed soon after and the Society never regained the widespread popularity it once enjoyed, although it remains active, with its international headquarters in Pasadena, California. The Theosophical Society has had a profound effect on the reception of Asian religions, especially Hinduism and Buddhism, in Europe and America during the twentieth century, inspiring, among other works, the Evans—Wentz tetralogy.

Walter Wentz moved to California at the turn of the century, where he joined the American Section of the Theosophical Society in 1901 at its headquarters in Point Loma, headed by Katherine Tingley, who established there the Raja—Yoga School and College, Theosophical University, and the School for the Revival of the Lost Mysteries of Antiquity. At Tingley's urging, Wentz enrolled at Stanford University, where he studied with William James and William Butler Yeats. After graduating, Wentz went to Jesus College at Oxford in 1907, where he studied Celtic folklore. It was there that he added a family name from his mother's side to his surname and became Walter Evans—Wentz. After completing his thesis, later published as The Fairy Faith in Celtic Countries (1911), he began a world tour financed by the income he received from rental properties in Florida. He was in Greece when the First World War broke out, and spent most of the war in Egypt.

From Egypt, he traveled to Sri Lanka and then on to India, gaining permission to travel from the British military authorities on the recommendation of a former classmate from Oxford, T. E. Lawrence. Evans—Wentz visited the Theosophical Society headquarters at Adyar and met with Annie Besant. In north India, he studied with various Hindu gurus, especially Swami Satyananda. In 1919 he arrived in the British hill station of Darjeeling on the southern slopes of the Himalayas, where he acquired a worn manuscript of a Tibetan text from a monk (some sources indicate that he acquired it in the bazaar). It was a portion of The Profound Doctrine of Self—Liberation of the Mind [through Encountering] the Peaceful and Wrathful Deities, (Zab chos zhi khro dgongspa rang grol) said to have been discovered in the fourteenth century by Karma gling pa (1352—1405). The text is also known as the Peaceful and Wrathful Deities According to Karmalingpa or Kar gling zhi khro and as the Bar do thos grol chen mo, The Great Liberation in the Intermediate State through Hearing. Provided with a letter of introduction from the local superintendent of police, Sardar Bahadur Laden La (with whom he would later collaborate on the final volume in his series), Evans—

Wentz, who could not read Tibetan, took the text to the English teacher at the Maharaja's Boy's School in Gangtok, named Kazi Dawa Samdup (1868—1922). Dawa Samdup was already acquainted with western enthusiasts of Buddhism, having served as translator for Alexandra David—Neel. She described him in Magic and Mystery in Tibet: “Dawasandup was an occultist and even, in a certain way, a mystic. He sought for secret intercourse with the Dākis and the dreadful gods hoping to gain supernormal powers. Everything that concerned the mysterious world of beings generally invisible strongly attracted him, but the necessity of earning his living made it impossible for him to devote much time to his favourite study.... Drink, a failing frequent among his countrymen, had been the curse of his life.... But, peace to his memory. I do not wish to belittle him. Having acquired real erudition by persevering efforts, he was sympathetic and interesting.”¹

Kazi Dawa Samdup agreed to provide a translation, and over the course of the next two months he met with Evans—Wentz each morning before his school day began. The translations that Kazi Dawa Samdup made for Evans—Wentz would eventually appear in three books: The Tibetan Book of the Dead (1927), Tibetan Yoga and Secret Doctrines (1935), and The Tibetan Book of the Great Liberation (1954). Their time together was brief, however, with Evans—Wentz soon moving back to the ashram of Swami Satyananda to practice yoga. He returned to Gangtok to visit Kazi Dawa Samdup in 1920, shortly before the latter's appointment to the post of Lecturer in Tibetan at the University of Calcutta. This was to be their last meeting; Kazi Dawa Samdup died in 1922. In 1924, Evans—Wentz visited Kazi Dawa Samdup's family in Kalimpong, from whom he received a manuscript translation of the Rje btsun bka' 'bum (The Hundred Thousand Words of the Master), which Evans—Wentz subsequently edited and published as Tibet's Great Yogi Milarepa (1928). Of his relationship with Kazi Dawa Samdup, Evans—Wentz's biographer writes: “The few letters that have survived that they exchanged show a surprisingly distant and formal tone. Even in Dawa Samdup's diaries there is no word to suggest otherwise. There is nothing at all foreshadowing the later declarations that the LāMa was the guru of Walter Evans—Wentz, nothing about the ‘teachings’ the American was supposed to have received.”²

There is little testimony as to precisely how their collaboration took place. Kazi Dawa Samdup’s English was presumably adequate to the task of producing rough translations. Evans—Wentz describes himself as having served as the lāma’s “living English dictionary.” One can thus assume that much of the terminology derived from Evans—Wentz. And Evans—Wentz provided the lengthy introductions and copious annotations, which together provide the four books with his unmistakable stamp. He did not claim that they were scholarly works; he noted presciently that a critical study of the texts from the perspectives of philology, history, and philosophy was a task for scholars of the future. Instead, he described his works as “anthropological,” taking anthropology to mean, “the Knowing, or Knowledge, of Man.”

Evans—Wentz made several trips to India in the 1920s and 30s, studying yoga with several prominent neo—Vedantin teachers of the day, including Sri Yukteswar and Ramana Maharshi. He returned to Darjeeling in 1935 and employed two Sikkimese monks to translate another work from the same cycle of texts as the Bar do thos grol, entitled Self—Liberation through Naked Vision Recognizing Awareness (Rig pa ngo sprod gcer mthong rang grot). During the same visit, he received a summary of a famous biography of Pad—masambhava, prepared by Sardar Bahadur Laden La, who had introduced him to Kazi Dawa Samdup some sixteen years before. These works would form the last work in the series, The Tibetan Book of the Great Liberation, eventually published in 1954.

Evans—Wentz returned to the United States in 1941, and spent the final twenty—three years of his life at the Keystone Hotel in San Diego. He spent his final months at the Self—Real—ization Fellowship of Swami Yogananda (a disciple of Sri Yukteswar and author of the popular Autobiography of a Yogi) in Encinitas, California. Walter Evans—Wentz died in 1965.

Evans—Wentz was apparently never a devotee of Tibetan Buddhism, considering himself instead a practitioner of Hindu yoga. His last contact with a Tibetan teacher seems to have been his collaboration with the two monks at the monastery of Ghoom, near Darjeeling, in 1935. Because his collaboration with Kazi Dawa Samdup was so brief, it is difficult to accept his claim that he was “the recognized disciple” of a Tibetan lāma. Indeed, Kazi Dawa Samdup seems only to have been regarded as a “lāma” by Evans—Wentz himself. Evans—Wentz remained a Theosophist and wrote for various Theosophical publications throughout the rest of his life. He never learned to read Tibetan; perhaps he did not feel it necessary, almost as if he already knew what the texts must say. And if they did not seem to say that, there was always recourse to their esoteric meaning, something he discusses at length in his introduction to The Tibetan Book of the Dead. Still, each of his four books holds an important place in the history of Tibetan Buddhism in the West and they must be regarded as pioneering works, not only in the texts chosen but in the mode of their creation; after the Tibetan diaspora that began in 1959, it became common for Western scholars to consult with Tibetan scholars in their translations of Buddhist texts, just as Evans—Wentz had done decades before.

From the perspective of the modern scholar of Tibetan Buddhism, the four books are fraught with problems: errors in translation, inaccurate dates, misattributions of authorship, misstate —ments of fact, unjustified flights of interpretation. (Referring to himself in the introduction, Evans—Wentz writes on page 79 of The Tibetan Book of the Dead, “The editor himself cannot expect, in a book of this nature, that his own interpretations of controversial problems will meet with universal acceptance; nor can he hope to have escaped all error.”) With many decades of hindsight, each of the books seems somehow premature, translations attempted at a time when the requisite scholarly resources were not yet available. Still, Evans—Wentz makes little attempt to place them in their Tibetan literary and religious context. Indeed, there is very little that is “Tibetan” about the books, despite their titles. One wonders whether the adjective carried above all a Theosophical meaning for Evans—Wentz.

There is a certain audacity about the books; Evans—Wentz thought that he understood what he read, reading, as he did, through his bifocals of Theosophy and Hindu Yoga. But if Evans—Wentz had not been so audacious, we would not have had the books and their wide influence; even today, few scholars would feel competent to take on the task of translating and annotating all of the works found in Tibetan Yoga and Secret Doctrines, for example, and even if such a book were to be produced, the scholarly apparatus itself would render it esoteric to all but the initiates of Tibetology.

Evans—Wentz had a different, and much larger, audience of initiates in mind for his esoteric wisdom. The four books of Walter Evans—Wentz are, then, the products of another age, an age when there was little talk of cultural relativism, of radical incommensurability, of historicism, of identity politics, of orientalism, of colonialism, of local histories, or of the late formation of the “world religions.” Instead, in these texts, Evans—Wentz finds endless evidence of an ancient and universal wisdom, whose truth is not mediated by language or history or culture, but which is self—evident to all peoples of all races who will seek it. This may strike some as a rather quaint notion in 2000. Yet the books are about to enter their second century in print.

The most famous of the four books is, of course, the first. Its full title is The Tibetan Book of the Dead or The After—Death Experiences on the Bardo Plane, according to LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdups English Rendering, compiled and edited by W. Y. Evans—Wentz. The first edition of The Tibetan Book of the Dead contained a preface to the first edition by Evans—Wentz, as well as a foreword entitled “Science of Death” by Sir John Woodrofe (1865—1936), an official of the British Raj who during his time as Judge of the High Court of Calcutta had become a scholar and devotee of Hindu Tantra, publishing a host of works, such as The Serpent Power and Principles of Tantra, under the pseudonym Arthur Avalon. In addition, there was Evans—Wentz’s own extensive introduction and copious annotations to Kazi Dawa Samdup’s translation. The second edition (1949) included an additional preface by Evans—Wentz. The third edition (1957) brought the book close to the form in which it is best known today, adding a “Psychological Commentary” by C. G. Jung, translated by R. E. C. Hull from the original German version that appeared in Das Tibetische Totenbuch published in Zurich in 1935. The third edition also contained an introductory foreword by LāMa Anagarika Govinda (1895—1985), a German enthusiast of Tibetan Buddhism and Eastern mysticism, born Ernst Hoffmann.³ Evans—

Wentz added a preface to the first paperback edition (1960). The first sentence of Evans—Wentz’s preface to the first edition reads, “In this book I am seeking—so far as possible—to suppress my own views and to act simply as the mouthpiece of a Tibetan sage, of whom I am a recognized disciple.” Yet the version of the book that we have today is filled with other voices (including, now, my own) that together overwhelm the translation, the increasing popularity of the work compelling this unusual assortment of authorities to provide their own explanations of the text; the various prefaces, introductions, forewords, commentaries, notes, and addenda compose more than half of the entire book.

The Tibetan text that forms the point of departure for the front matter is entitled the Bar do thos grol, Liberation in the Intermediate State through Hearing. Although there are many texts with this title, the one that Evans—Wentz encountered is particularly famous. It is part of a larger cycle of texts of the “heart essence” (mying t hig) tradition of the Nyingma sect of Tibetan Buddhism. This cycle of texts is a “treasure” (gter ma), said to have been hidden in Tibet by the Indian tantric master Padmasambhava during the eighth century, to be recovered by Karma gling pa (1352—1405). The cycle is called Zab chos zhi khro dgongspa rang grol, The Profound Doctrine of Self—Liberation of the Mind [through Encountering] the Peaceful and Wrathful Deities or, more commonly, the Kar gling zhi khro, The Peaceful and Wrathful Deities of Karma gling pa. The translation that appears in The Tibetan Book of the Dead is of seven of its seventeen chapters.

Buddhism, like several other Indian traditions, does not see death as the cessation of consciousness. Instead, death marks the dissolution of the physical elements of the person. The mental elements, generally referred to as consciousness, persist, to once again take physical form through the process of rebirth. The question arose in Indian Buddhism as to whether consciousness moves immediately to a new lifetime after death, or whether there is some intervening period. Certain schools postulated the existence of an intermediate state between the moment of death and moment of conception in the next lifetime; according to some formulations the intermediate state could last as little as an instant or as long as forty—nine days. But the doctrine of the intermediate state received its fullest elaboration in Tibet, especially in the “heart essence” tradition of the Nyingma sect, where it was expanded to encompass all moments of experience, including waking life and dreams; its classic exposition is found in Karma gling pa’s text, a work renowned in both the Nyingma and Kagyu sects.

The text describes the process of death and rebirth in terms of three intermediate states or “bardos” (bar do, a Tibetan term that literally means “between two”). The first, and briefest, is the bardo of the moment of death (’chi kha’ V bar do) when, at the end of a process of sensory dissolution that presages physical death, a profound state of consciousness, called the clear light, dawns. If one is able to recognize the clear light as reality, one immediately achieves liberation from samsāra, the cycle of rebirth. If the clear light is not recognized at that time, the consciousness of the deceased person moves into the second bardo (which appears to be a Tibetan innovation), called the bardo of reality (chos nyid bar do). The disintegration of the personality brought on by death again reveals reality, but in this case, not as the clear light, but in the multicolored forms of a māṇḍala of forty—two peaceful deities and a māṇḍala of fifty—eight wrathful deities. These deities appear in sequence to the consciousness of the deceased in the days immediately following death. If reality is not recognized in this second bardo, then the third bardo, the bardo of mundane existence (srid paH bar do), dawns, during which one must again take rebirth in one of the six realms of gods, demigods, humans, animals, hungry ghosts, or in hell; consciousness is blown to the appropriate place of rebirth by the winds of past karma.

In Tibet, the Bar do t hos grol, as its name suggests, was used as a mortuary text, to be read to a dead or dying person so that he or she would hear how to find liberation in the intermediate state, or, if that did not occur, to find a favorable place of rebirth, ideally in a pure land. It also provided the foundation for a range of meditative and ritual practices that are based on one of the central principles of the text: that death is not merely something to fear, but instead provides a rare opportunity in which the reality that is one’s true nature, often obscured during life by the mental and physical processes that constitute the person, becomes nakedly manifest upon their dissolution. If that reality can simply be recognized, liberation is at hand.

Consequently, the sects of Tibetan Buddhism developed sophisticated practices in which the stages of death and the intermediate state were anticipated and simulated.⁴

For Evans—Wentz, the text had a very different significance. He saw in it evidence of an ancient “art of dying” that had once existed among the Egyptians, the initiates of the “Mysteries of Antiquity,” and Christians of the Middle Ages, but which had been all but lost over the centuries. He writes in the last paragraph of the book, “All such parallels as these tend to strengthen our opinion that the greater part of the symbolism nowadays regarded as being peculiarly Christian or Jewish seems to be due to adaptations from Egyptian and Eastern religions.” Indeed, he coined the title The Tibetan Book of the Dead because of parallels he perceived to an Egyptian work, The Book of Going Forth by Day, better known in English as The Book of the Dead.

In order to establish the ultimate concordance of what he regarded as the esoteric teachings of traditions separated by geography and history, Evans—Wentz, here and throughout the tetralogy, departed on interpretative flights that required him to take liberties with the Tibetan texts before him. These flights were guided generally by his lifelong allegiance to what he termed “Yoga” and to Theosophy. His understanding of yoga was derived from his tutelage under several of the prominent Hindu neo—Vedantin teachers of the period between the world wars. From them come his continued references to the need to break through the illusion of Māyā to the oneness of Reality; it is a rhetoric largely absent in the Tibetan texts that had been translated for him. Yet he insists, for example, that “The essence of the Bardo Thödol teachings is, likewise, that so long as the mind is human, so long as it is individualized, so long as it regards itself as separate and apart from all other minds, it is but the plaything of Māyā, of Ignorance, which causes it to look upon the hallucinatory panorama of existences within the Sangsāra as real, and thence leads it to lose itself in the Quagmire of Phenomena” (page 225).

His original devotion, however, was to Theosophy, and it remained with him throughout his life. It was this commitment that led to perhaps his most egregious and willful misreading in The Tibetan Book of the Dead, his exposition of the “esoteric” doctrine of rebirth.

In standard Buddhist doctrine, one finds descriptions of a cycle of birth and death, called samsāra (wandering), consisting of six realms of rebirth: gods, demigods, humans, animals, ghosts, and hell beings (although sometimes the realm of demigods is omitted). The entire cycle of rebirth, in which the repeated creations and destructions of the universe occur, has no ultimate beginning. The realms of animals, ghosts, and hell beings are regarded as places of great suffering, whereas the godly realms are abodes of great bliss. Human rebirth falls in between, bringing as it does both pleasure and pain. The engine of samsāra is driven by karma, the cause and effect of actions. Like other Indian religions, Buddhist doctrine holds that every intentional act, whether it be physical, verbal, or mental, leaves a residue in its agent. That residue, like a seed, will eventually produce an effect at some point in the future, an effect in the form of pleasure or pain for the person who performed the act. Thus Buddhists conceive of a moral universe in which virtuous deeds create experiences of pleasure and nonvirtuous deeds create experiences of pain. These deeds not only determine the quality of a given life but also determine the place of rebirth after death. Depending on the gravity of a negative deed (killing being more consequential than senseless speech and killing a human more consequential than killing an insect, for example), one may be reborn as an animal, a ghost, or in one of the hot or cold hells, where the life span is particularly lengthy. Rebirth as a god or human is the result of a virtuous deed, and is considered very rare; the vast majority of beings in the universe are said to inhabit the three unfortunate realms of animals, ghosts, and the hells. Rarer still is rebirth as a human who has access to the teachings of the Buddha. All beings are said to have been reborn in each of the realms many times, moving, as is sometimes said, like a fly in a bottle.

A very different theory of rebirth was put forward by Madame Blavatsky in The Secret Doctrine. There, claiming to be commenting upon the ancient Book of Dzyan, written in the secret language of Senzar, she describes a system of seven rounds. The earth has passed through three rounds during which it has evolved from a spiritual form to its current material form. The earth is currently in the fourth round. Over the final three rounds it will slowly return to its spiritual form. The universe is populated by individual souls, or monads, themselves ultimately identical with the universal oversoul (as asserted also in Vedanta). These monads are reincarnated according to the law of karma. During the present fourth round, these monads inhabit the earth in the form of seven races. The first was a race of spiritual essences, called “the Self—born,” who had no physical form, inhabiting the Imperishable Sacred Land until it sank into the ocean. The second race, called the Hyperboreans, lived at the North Pole. They also lacked physical form. The third root race, the Lemurians, were the first humans, but lacked the senses of taste and smell. Their homeland, the vast continent of Lemuria, was destroyed by fire; Australia and Easter Island are its remnants. The fourth root race were the inhabitants of the continent of Atlantis, an advanced race that used electricity and flew in airplanes. Their civilization ended in the great flood.⁵ The last sub—race of Atlanteans was absorbed into the early sub—races of the fifth root race, the Aryans. These early sub—races included the Greeks, Egyptians, and Phoenicians. These Aryans later defeated other remnants of the Atlanteans, “yellow and red, brown and black” and drove them into Africa and Asia.⁶

Since the mid—point of the Atlantean race, a finite number of monads has reincarnated again and again, and will continue to do so throughout the entire cycle of evolution.⁷ Only rebirth as a human is possible; animals may reincarnate as higher species, but never vice versa.⁸ Those who evolve from the animal stage first take human form as what the Stanzas of Dzyan call “the narrow—brained,” such as South—Sea Islanders, Africans, and Australians.⁹

The doctrine of rebirth or “spiritual evolution” was a central element of Madame Blavatsky’s secret doctrine. Thus, to find this doctrine confirmed in a Tibetan text (recalling the importance of Tibet for Theosophy as the abode of the Mahatmas) was of great significance for Evans—Wentz. In a statement that demonstrates his commitment to the eclectic vision of Theosophy, Evans—Wentz predicts that the doctrine of rebirth will soon be proven by science:

Then, too, not only will Pythagoras and Plato and Plotinus, and the Gnostic Christians, and Krishna and the Buddha be vindicated in their advocacy of the doctrine, but, equally, the Hierophants of the Ancient Mysteries of Egypt and Greece and Rome, and the Druids of the Celtic World. And Western man will awaken from that slumber of Ignorance which has been hypnotically induced by a mistaken Orthodoxy. He will greet with wide—opened eyes his long unheeded brethren, the Wise Men of the East (x).

Unfortunately, Evans—Wentz's enthusiasm causes him to take unjustified liberties with the text. Determined to find the Theosophist's version of rebirth in the Tibetan book, he claimed that what was represented in the Bar do thos grol was merely the "exoteric teaching." The classical Buddhist doctrine of rebirth, in which sentient beings wander up and down through the six realms of rebirth, blown helplessly by the winds of karma, is, for him, only the popular view intended for the masses. He concedes that the exoteric view "accepted universally by Buddhists, both of the Northern and Southern Schools—as by Hindus" is that consciousness can be embodied in a subhuman form in a lifetime after, even immediately after, embodiment as a human. But this view is based on "the untested authority of gurus and priests who consider the literally interpreted written records to be infallible and who are not adept in yoga" (42). That "the brute principle of consciousness in its entirety and the human principle of consciousness in its entirety are capable of exchanging places with each other" is, for Evans—Wentz, an "obviously irrational belief." Yet this, he concedes, is the view that the Bar do thos grol conveys, when read literally.

There is also an esoteric view, intended for the initiated few, according to which the human form is the result of a process of spiritual evolution. Accordingly, just as it is impossible for an animal or plant to devolve into one of its previous forms, so it is impossible for "a human life—flux to flow into the physical form of a dog, or fowl, or insect, or worm" (43). Thus, "man, the highest of the animal—beings, cannot become the lowest of the animal beings, no matter how heinous his sins." (43—44) This view is, not surprisingly, precisely that put forward by Madame Blavatsky in The Secret Doctrine. That Evans—Wentz would also hold this position is in itself unsurprising, given his lifelong commitment to Theosophy. It is noteworthy, however, that Evans—Wentz claims that it is a view that Kazi Dawa Samdup also endorsed, “The late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup was of the opinion that, despite the adverse criticisms directed against H. P. Blavatsky’s works, there is adequate internal evidence in them of their author’s intimate acquaintance with the higher lāmastic teachings, into which she claimed to have been initiated” (page 7, note 1).

In his introduction, Evans—Wentz states, referring to himself, “The editor’s task is to correlate and systematize and sometimes to expand the notes thus dictated, by incorporating such congenial matter, from widely separated sources, as in his judgement tends to make the exegesis more intelligible to the Occidental, for whom this part of the book is chiefly intended” (page 1, footnote 1). Apart from this role, Evans—Wentz states that views put forward in the introduction and notes derive from “the LāMa” (Kazi Dawa Samdup) who received them in turn from his lāma. This claim locates the authority for the contents of the Introduction not in Evans—Wentz but in the translator, the Tibetan lāma. It is the lāma’s oral teachings that provide the basis of Evans—Wentz’s words. Indeed, it raises the level of authority one step higher by invoking the power of lineage, stating that the exegesis derives from the lāma’s own guru, which was transmitted first to Kazi Dawa Samdup, and then from him to Evans—Wentz, in the tradition of guru to disciple.

In fact, much of such congenial matter, especially with regard to the theories of karma and rebirth, and with regard to “symbolism,” is matter that deviates significantly from the content of the Bar do thos grol. Yet it is represented as having the sanction of the lāma and the lāma’s lāma. For Evans—Wentz is claiming for himself the status of the initiate; he is setting forth the teachings “as (he) has been taught them by qualified initiated exponents of them, who alone have the unquestioned right to explain them.” He thus vouchsafes that right for himself as the student of these masters, although whether his reference is to Tibetan lāmas or Mahatmas here is unclear. At the same time, he professes as well the authority of the scholar, the anthropologist who is concerned with “things as they are,” unconcerned with the articles of any particular faith. Thus, he claims for himself both the authority of Eastern religion (through his Tibetan lāma) and Western science (through his Oxford degree). His task is the accumulation of scientific data, data that will one day lead all sects of all religions to see the Essence of Religion. One assumes he means Theosophy.

Evans—Wentz came to the Himalayas in search of the Essence of Religion, and he found it in what he called The Tibetan Book of the Dead. The essence is that which is present at the beginning, it is that from which all manifestations derive. Those manifestations multiply and exfoliate over time, assuming forms so variegated that their common source becomes obscured. According to The Secret Doctrine, all beings were once immaterial monads, until their fall into form. The goal of the long path of rebirth is to return to that original form. The essence, then, is pure, and it is only over the course of time that the corruption of differentiation and excrescence occurs. To return to the essence requires a means of purification; to return to the Essence of Religion a means of eliminating all that is superfluous and inessential must be found. For Evans—Wentz that means is interpretation, employing symbolism to discover an esoteric meaning, the Theosophical meaning, beneath what the Tibetan text appears to say. But in the process much is lost, suggesting that any attempt to reduce many views to a single essence ultimately must entail the triumph of one view over many.

What is particularly troubling in Evans—Wentz's case is that, in an apparent effort to add authority to his beliefs, he seemed compelled to represent his own eccentric interpretation of the Tibetan text as originating not from him, but from his Tibetan teacher. Evans—Wentz must be lauded for his acknowledgment of the crucial role of Kazi Dawa Samdup in the creation of The Tibetan Book of the Dead. Unlike so many scholars of the colonial period, Evans—Wentz does not hesitate to credit his collaborator, going so far as to include his name in the extended title of the book. Yet he also exploits that collaboration in an effort to represent his own idiosyncratic view as somehow authentic, attributing to the Tibetan, after his death, a position that he almost certainly did not hold. In Dawa Samdup's silence, Evans—Wentz speaks in the Tibetan's voice, in a language he never learned.

Whatever Evans—Wentz’s motivations may have been in creating The Tibetan Book of the Dead, he produced a work of vast cultural influence (see afterword). For contained within Evans—Wentz’s book is Kazi Dawa Samdup’s translation of the Bardo thos grol, a translation that has continued, over the years and across the continents, to provide both insight and inspiration.

PREFACE

TO THE PAPERBACK EDITION

That the living do come from the dead, as Socrates intuitively perceived as he was about to drink the hemlock and experience death, this treatise maintains, not in virtue of tradition or belief, but on the sound basis of the unequivocal testimony of yogins who claim to have died and re—entered the human womb consciously.

If this treatise, bequeathed to the West by Sages of the Snowy Ranges, be as it thus purports to be, it undoubtedly offers trustworthy guidance at the time of death and in the after—death state into which every one of human kind must inevitably pass, but of which very few of them have enlightened understanding. It is, therefore, of inestimable value.

The exploration of Man the Unknown in a manner truly scientific and yogic such as this book suggests is incomparably more important than the exploration of outer space. To stand in the physical body on the Moon, or on Venus, or on any of the celestial spheres, will add to human knowledge, but only to knowledge of things transitory. Man's ultimate goal is, as the Sages herein teach, transcendence over the transitory.

Today, as during the European Renaissance when Oriental influences inspired a number of remarkable treatises on the Art of Dying (to which reference is hereinafter made), there is an ever—increasing desire to know more of man's origin and destiny. As the recently deceased Great Teacher Bhagavan Sri Ramana Maharshi, of Tiruvannamalai, South India, admonished me when I sojourned in his ashram, each of us should ask ourself, 'Who, or what, am I? Why am I here incarnate? Whither am I destined? Why is there birth and why is there death?'

These are for mankind the supreme questions; and in any attempt to answer them this book offers aid, which the editor is glad to be able to report has been universally acknowledged, not only by representatives of various faiths, inclusive of both Catholic and Protestant Christians, but by scientists as well. Dr. C. G. Jung, the eminent dean of psychologists, has himself recognized the unique value of the book and in his lengthy Psychological Commentary to it, herein contained, says, 'For years, ever since it was first published | in 1927J, the Bardo Thödol has been my constant companion, and to it I owe not only many stimulating ideas and discoveries, but also many fundamental insights.'

The sponsoring by the Oxford University Press of this the fourth and American edition and the sixth printing of The Tibetan Book of the Dead, here published as an Oxford University Press paperback, is itself indicative of the book's ever—widening appeal. And may the book in this new edition continue to fulfil the hopes of its translator and editor, by assisting to bring about not only better understanding between the peoples of the East and West, but also in correcting, especially throughout the West, the lack of Right Knowledge concerning humanity's paramount problem, the problem of birth and death.

The editor accepts the opportunity afforded by this American edition to thank those who more recently have given expression, in journals and in lectures, as well as by letters, of their appreciation of the book, as already he has thanked those who previously did so. It is owing to these appreciative journalists, lecturers, and readers, in all parts of the world, that the book's marked success has been made possible.

And in conveying good wishes to all those who have read or shall hereafter read this book, particularly students, the editor has the high privilege of here directing their attention to the significant words contained in the farewell teachings of Milarepa, one of his most beloved Tibetan Gurus:

'Combine, in a single whole, the goal of aspiration, the meditation, and the practice, and so attain Understanding by Experimentation.

'Regard, as one, this life, the next life, and the life between, in the Bardo, and accustom thyself to them thus, as one.'

By practically applying these teachings, so the Gurus assure us, the supramundane goal revealed by this book will be, as it was for Milarepa, realizable.

*San Diego, California,
Midsummer Day, 1959.*

PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION

It is with a consciousness of the deepest gratitude that I write this Preface. No greater honour could be shown by the Western World to this Tibetan treatise on the Science of Death and Rebirth than that shown by the most illustrious of the West's psychologists, Dr. Carl G. Jung, in his Psychological Commentary to it, first published in the Swiss edition of The Tibetan Book of the Dead, Das Tibetanische Totenbuch, by Rascher Verlag, Zurich, 1938, and herein presented in English translation for the first time. And no exposition of the arcane significance of the book's teachings could have been written more knowledgeably than that set forth in the Introductory Foreword hereto, in its original English form, by the learned LāMa Anagarika Govinda.

The Editor and all who read this book are indebted to Dr. Jung and to LāMa Govinda for having made this enlarged and greatly enriched edition possible, and to Mr. R. F. C. Hull, also, for his able translation from the German of Dr. Jung's Psychological Commentary. Grateful acknowledgement, too, is here made to the Bollingen Foundation for the granting of permission to publish the English translation of the Psychological Commentary.

To each member of the One Human Family, now incarnate here, on the planet Earth, this book bears the greatest of all great messages. It reveals to the peoples of the Occident a science of death and rebirth such as only the peoples of the Orient have heretofore known.

Inasmuch as all mankind must relinquish their fleshly bodies and experience death, it is supremely profitable that they should know how rightly to meet death when it comes. LāMa Govinda makes comprehensible, as the Ancient Mysteries did, and as the Upanishads declare, that the unenlightened meet death after death unceasingly.

According to the Avatāra Krishna, in the Bhagavad—Gītā, only the Awakened Ones remember their many deaths and births. The Buddha sets forth the yogic method whereby all who doubt these teachings, concerning a plurality of births and deaths, can prove them to be true, as He did, by self—realization.

The argument of the unenlightened man, that, merely because he himself has no conscious memory of his many births and deaths, the teachings are untrue, is scientifically untenable. The field of the normal man's sense perceptions is, as can be demonstrated, narrowly circumscribed and extremely limited. There are objects and colours he cannot see, sounds he cannot hear, odours he cannot smell, tastes he cannot taste, and feelings he cannot feel. And beyond his work—a—day consciousness, which he assumes to be his only consciousness, there are other consciousnesses, of which yogins and saints have cognizance, and of which psychologists are beginning to glean some, but as yet very little, understanding. As LāMa Govinda concisely explains, there exists, in completeness, in a potentially realizable consciousness, the memory of a forgotten past, in which each of us now incarnate shares.

In his Psychological Commentary, Dr. Jung points out that although Freud's 'is the first attempt made by the West to investigate, as if from below, from the animal sphere of instinct, the psychic territory that corresponds in Tantric Lāmaism, to the *Sidpa Bardo, or state of reincarnating, 'a very justifiable fear of metaphysics prevented Freud from penetrating into the sphere of the " occult " '. In this, Freud was typically non—Oriental, and fettered by his own self—imposed limitations. But such self—imposed limitations of Western Science, which are very much like those that Western Theology imposed upon itself by refusing to take into proper account the esoteric in Christian tradition, cannot always hold back psychological research. Dr. Jung himself has, indeed, gone far beyond these limitations of Freud, his predecessor. 'It is therefore not possible', Dr. Jung states, 'for Freudian theory to reach anything except an essentially negative valuation of the unconscious '—wherein are stored, apparently imperishably, as Dr. Jung holds, the records, in completeness, of mankind's past. At a conclusion parallel to this of Western Science, LāMa Govinda arrived by means of Eastern Science.

Dr. Jung reports that 'psychoanalysts even claim to have probed back to memories of intra—uterine origin ‘; and that had Freudian psychoanalysis succeeded in pursuing these so—called intra—uterine experiences still further back, ‘it would surely have come out beyond the Sidpa Bardo and penetrated from behind into the lower reaches of the Chonyid Bardo.⁹ But, as he points out, ‘with the equipment of our existing biological ideas such a venture would not have been crowned with success; it would have needed a wholly different kind of philosophical preparation from that based on current scientific assumptions. But, had the journey back been consistently pursued, it would undoubtedly have led to the postulate of a pre—uterine existence, a true Bardo life, if only it had been possible to find at least some trace of an experiencing subject.’

Western psychologists have, therefore, advanced appreciably beyond Freud in the study of the psychic life of man, and will advance much further when they no longer allow the Freudian fear of metaphysics to bar their entrance into the realm of the occult. This finds ample support in Dr. Jung’s further pronouncement :

‘ I think, then, we can state it as a fact that with the aid of psychoanalysis the rationalizing mind of the West has pushed forward into what one might call the neuroticism of the Sidpa [or Rebirth] state, and has there been brought to an inevitable standstill by the uncritical assumption that everything psychological is subjective and personal. Even so, this advance has been a great gain, inasmuch as it has enabled us to take one more step behind our conscious lives.’

Thus it is of far—reaching historical importance that the profound doctrine of pre—existence and rebirth, which many of the most enlightened men in all known epochs have taught as being realizable, is now under investigation by our own scientists of the West. And some of these scientists seem to be approaching that place, on the path of scientific progress, where, as with respect also to other findings by the Sages of Asia long before the rise of Western Science, East and West appear to be destined to meet in mutual understanding.

Apparently, however, before this much—desired understanding can be attained, there must be, as Dr. Jung observes, ‘a wholly different kind of philosophical preparation ‘from that based upon the West’s ‘existing biological ideas’. May it not be that ‘heretical’ Western psychologists who are prepared to blaze a new path of research will eventually find the lacking complement to their at present inadequate methods in the psychological techniques of oriental yoga, such as those referred to in LāMa Govinda's Foreword? At least the writer believes that they will. According to his view, that much sought—after higher understanding of the human psyche will be won not by these admittedly inadequate Freudian methods, now in vogue, of 'psychoanalyzing' a subject, but by meditation and an integrating self—analysis, such as the master yogins employ and the Buddha prescribes. He believes, too, that thereby Western Science and Eastern Science will, at last, attain at—one—ment.

Then, when that long—awaited at—one—ment shall have been consummated, there will no longer be doubt, nor fallacious argumentation, nor unwise and unscientific Church—Council anathematizations directed against that paramount doctrine of pre—existence and re—birth, upon which the Bardo Thödol is based. Then, too, not only will Pythagoras and Plato and Plotinus, and the Gnostic Christians, and Krishna and the Buddha be vindicated in their advocacy of the doctrine, but, equally, the Hierophants of the Ancient Mysteries of Egypt and Greece and Rome, and the Druids of the Celtic World. And Western man will awaken from that slumber of Ignorance which has been hypnotically induced by a mistaken Orthodoxy. He will greet with wide—opened eyes his long unheeded brethren, the Wise Men of the East.

As set forth in my first important work, The Fairy—Faith in Celtic Countries, forty—four years ago, the postulate of rebirth implies a scientific extension and correction of Darwin's conception of evolutionary law,—that alone through traversing the Cycle of Death and Birth, as taught by our revered ancestors, the Druids of Europe, twenty—five and more centuries ago, man attains in the spiritual and psychic sphere that destined perfection which all life's processes and all living things exhibit at the end of their evolutionary course, and from which at present man is so far removed.

May this third edition of the first volume of the Oxford Tibetan Series bear to all who read it the good wishes of its compilers, not only of those of them who dwell in far—away Tibet and Hindustan, but, also, of those of them who dwell in the Western World. And may we heed the solemn admonition set forth in this book—not to fritter away in the worthless doings of this world the supreme opportunity afforded by human birth, lest by our spiritual improvidence we depart from this life spiritually empty—handed.

*San Diego, California,
Easter, 1955*

W. Y. E—W.

SRI KRISHNA'S REMEMBERING

‘Many lives, Arjuna, you and I have lived,
I remember them all, but thou dost not.’

Bhagavad—Guā, iv, 5.

BONDAGE TO REBIRTH

As a man's desire is, so is his destiny. For as his desire is, so is his will; and as his will is, so is his deed; and as his deed is, so is his reward, whether good or bad.

'A man acteth according to the desires to which he clingeth. After death he goeth to the next world bearing in his mind the subtle impressions of his deeds; and, after reaping there the harvest of his deeds, he returneth again to this world of action. Thus he who hath desire continueth subject to rebirth.'

Brihadaranyaka Upanishad.

FREEDOM FROM REBIRTH

'He who lacketh discrimination, whose mind is unsteady and whose heart is impure, never reacheth the goal, but is born again and again. But he who hath discrimination, whose mind is steady and whose heart is pure, reacheth the goal, and having reached it is born no more.'

Katha Upanishad.

(Swami Prabhavananda's and Frederick Manchester's Translations).

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

THE MESSAGE OF THIS BOOK

As this, the second, edition of The Tibetan Book of the Dead was about to be published, its editor was invited to explain, by means of an additional Preface, what the essential message is that the book holds for peoples so enamoured of this world's utilitarianism and physical existence and so fettered to bodily sensuousness as are the peoples of the Occident.

The message is, that the Art of Dying is quite as important as the Art of Living (or of Coming into Birth), of which it is the complement and summation; that the future of being is dependent, perhaps entirely, upon a rightly controlled death, as the second part of this volume, setting forth the Art of Reincarnating, emphasizes.

The Art of Dying, as indicated by the death—rite associated with initiation into the Mysteries of Antiquity, and referred to by Apuleius,¹ the Platonic philosopher, himself an initiate, and by many other illustrious initiates, and as The Egyptian Book of the Dead suggests, appears to have been far better known to the ancient peoples inhabiting the Mediterranean countries than it is now by their descendants in Europe and the Americas.

To those who had passed through the secret experiencing of pre—mortem death, right dying is initiation, conferring, as does the initiatory death—rite, the power to control consciously the process of death and regeneration. Throughout the Middle Ages, and during the Renaissance that followed, Europe still retained enough of the Mystery teachings concerning death to understand the paramount importance of knowing how to die; and many treatises, hereinafter referred to, on the Art of Dying were then current there. Various primitive Churches of Christendom, notably the Roman, Greek, Anglican, Syrian, Armenian, and Coptic, and other of the Churches dating from Reformation days, wisely incorporated into their rituals and observances many principles of this pre-Christian Art of Dying. And to-day, in their efforts thus to aid the dying, these Churches are in outstanding contrast, sociologically and culturally, to an Earth-limited medical science which has no word of guidance to convey to the dying concerning the after-death state, but which, on the contrary, frequently augments rather than ameliorates, by its questionable practices, the unfounded fears and often extreme unwillingness to die of its death-bed patients, to whom it is likely to have administered stupefying drugs and injections.

As The Tibetan Book of the Dead teaches, the dying should face death not only calmly and clear-mindedly and heroically, but with an intellect rightly trained and rightly directed, mentally transcending, if need be, bodily suffering and infirmities, as they would be able to do had they practised efficiently during their active lifetime the Art of Living, and, when about to die, the Art of Dying. When Milarepa, Tibet's saintly master of Yoga, was preparing to die, he chose not only a favourable external environment, in the Cave of Brilche, in Chubar, Tibet, but an inner state of mental equilibrium in keeping with his approaching Nirvana. Indomitably controlling his body, which, having been poisoned by an enemy, was disease-weakened and pain-wracked, he welcomed death with song, as being natural and inevitable. After having delivered his final testamentary teachings and parting admonitions to his assembled disciples, he composed, extemporaneously, a remarkable hymn in grateful praise of his Guru Marpa, which is yet preserved in his Biography. Then, when Milarepa had completed the singing of the hymn, he entered the quiescent state of Samādhi, and relinquished his fleshly form. Thus did Milarepa die triumphantly, as do the saints and sages of all saving faiths throughout the ages.¹

But in the Occident, where the Art of Dying is little known and rarely practised, there is, contrastingly, the common unwillingness to die, which, as the Bardo ritual suggests, produces unfavourable results. As here in America, every effort is apt to be made by a materialistically inclined medical science to postpone, and thereby to interfere with, the death—process. Very often the dying is not permitted to die in his or her own home, or in a normal, unperturbed mental condition when the hospital has been reached. To die in a hospital, probably while under the mind—benumbing influence of some opiate, or else under the stimulation of some drug injected into the body to enable the dying to cling to life as long as possible, cannot but be productive of a very undesirable death, as undesirable as that of a shell—shocked soldier on a battle—field. Even as the normal result of the birth—process may be aborted by malpractices, so, similarly, may the normal result of the death—process be aborted.

The oriental Sages believe that, despite these unfortunate circumstances which now encompass him when dying, occidental man will, as he grows in right understanding, recognize that everywhere throughout the all—embracing universe, whose immensities he measures in millions of light years, there is the reign of unerring Law. The Cycle of Necessity, the Circle of Existence of the old Druidic faith, the Round of Life and Death, he will know to be universal, that worlds and suns, no less than he himself and every living thing, repeatedly come into the illusory manifestation of embodiment, and that each of these many manifestations is rounded by what the LāMas of Tibet call the Bardo, the state intervening between death and rebirth.

If the suggestive observations herein presented in this new Preface, which are born of the doctrines contained in the translated texts of this book, aid in any small degree to awaken the Occident to the extreme dangers into which it has been led, in large measure by a medical science ignorant for the most part of the Art of Dying, they will have furthered the prayers of the LāMas by helping to dissipate that Darkness of Ignorance which, as the Buddha realized, enshrouds the world. As the Fully Enlightened One and all the Supreme Guides of Humanity have taught, it is only by the inner Light of Wisdom, ‘the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world¹ that the Darkness of Ignorance can be dispersed.

The Egyptian Book of the Dead, correctly entitled, is The Coming Forth from Day, with reference to the sacred Egyptian art of the coming forth from this life into another life, or, in the language of Pharaonic Egypt, the Per em hru.² Similarly, The Tibetan Book of the Dead, in the original Tibetan, is the Bardo Thödol, meaning 'Liberation by Hearing on the After—Death Plane', and implying a yogic method of coming forth into Nirvānic Liberation, beyond the Cycle of Birth and Death. Each of these two books concerning death thus inculcates, by its own peculiar method, an Art of Dying and Coming Forth into a New Life, but in a more symbolic and esoterically profound manner than do the treatises of medieval Christian Europe on the Art of Dying, among which the Ars Moriendo ('Craft of Dying') may be taken as being typical and illustrative of this contrasting difference.

It was the fervent hope of the late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup, the translator, and of other of the learned LāMas who directed the editor's Tibetan research—a hope in which the editor, too, shares—that, aided by the Mystery teachings and its own Christianized versions of many principles of them, the Occident might reformulate and practise an Art of Dying, and, also, an Art of Living. For the peoples of the Occident, as it was for the initiates of antiquity and still is for the peoples of the Orient, the transition from the human plane of consciousness, in the process called death, can be and should be accompanied by solemn joyousness. Eventually, as the master yogins declare, when humanity shall have grown spiritually strong, death will be experienced ecstatically, in that state known to them as Samādhi. By right practising of a trustworthy Art of Dying, death will then, indeed, have lost its sting and been swallowed up in victory.

Whilst this Preface is being written it is Easter, in California. As was the custom in many great civilizations of yore, so here to—day, from hilltop and mountain, with prayer and joyous singing, obeisance is being paid to the new—born Sun at dawn, amidst the fresh and glistening greenery of renascent leaves and the fragrance of blossoms and the joy of Spring. It is, truly, the ever—recurrent Resurrection, the coming forth into a new life of things that had (Led; and, in like manner, are those who have—fallen asleep in the Christos to be empowered to rise from their tombs. Over the bosom of the Earth—Mother, in pulsating vibrations, radiant and energizing, flows the perennial Stream of Life; and whosoever has the power of right—seeing sees that for uneman—cipated beings death is but the necessary and Law—directed prelude to birth.

W. Y. E—W.

San Diego, California, Easter 1948.

RIGHT DIRECTING OF THOUGHT WHEN DYING

Buddhists and Hindus alike believe that the last thought at the moment of death determines the character of the next incarnation. As the Bardo Thödol teaches, so have the Sages of India long taught, that the thought—process of a dying person should be rightly directed, preferably by the dying person if he or she has been initiated or psychically trained to meet death, or, otherwise, by a guru or a friend or relative versed in the science of death.

Sri Krishna, in the Bhagavad Gitā (viii, 6), says to Arjuna, ‘One attaineth whatever state [of being] one thinketh about at the last when relinquishing the body, being ever absorbed in the thought thereof.’

Our past thinking has determined our present status, and our present thinking will determine our future status; for man is what man thinks. In the words of the opening verse of the Dhatnmapāda, ‘All that we are is the result of what we have thought: it is founded on our thoughts, it is made up of our thoughts.’

Likewise did the Hebrew Sages teach, as in Proverbs xxiii, 7, ‘As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.’

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

In this Book I am Seeking—SO far as possible—to suppress my own views and to act simply as the mouthpiece of a Tibetan sage, of whom I was a recognized disciple.

He was quite willing that I should make known his interpretation of the higher lāmaic teachings and of the subtle esotericism underlying the Bardo T'iödol, following the private and orally transmitted instructions which he as a young man had received when living the life of an ascetic with his late hermit-guru in Bhutan. Being himself a man who possessed a considerable amount of Western learning, he took great trouble to enable me to reproduce Oriental ideas in a form which would be intelligible to the European mind. If, in amplification, I have frequently referred to Occidental parallels of various mystic or occult doctrines current in the Orient, I have done so largely because in my wanderings there, chiefly in the high Himalayas and on the Tibetan frontiers of Kashmir, Garhwal, and Sikkim, I had come across learned philosophers and holy men who have found or thought they had found beliefs and religious practices—some recorded in books, some preserved by oral tradition alone—not only analogous to their own, but so closely akin to those of the Occident as to imply some historical connexion therewith. Whether the supposed influence passed from East to West or from West to East, was not so clear to their minds. A certain similarity docs, however, seem to attach to the culture of these geographically divided provinces.

I have spent more than five years in such research, wandering from the palm—wreathed shores of Ceylon, and thence through the wonder—land of the Hindus, to the glacier—clad heights of the Himalayan Ranges, seeking out the Wise Men of the East. Sometimes I lived among city dwellers, sometimes in jungle and mountain solitudes among yogis—sometimes in monasteries with monks; sometimes I went on pilgrimages, as one of the salvation—seeking multitude. The Introduction—which in its unusual lengthiness is intended to serve as a very necessary commentary to the translation—and the annotations to the text record the more important results of this research, more especially in relation to Northern or Mahāyāna Buddhism.

Nevertheless, I have been really little more than a compiler and editor of 'The Tibetan Book of the Dead \ To the deceased translator—who combined in himself a greater knowledge of the Occult Sciences of Tibet and of Western Science than any Tibetan scholar of this epoch—the chief credit for its production very naturally belongs.

In addition to that greatest of all debts which the student ever owes to his preceptor, I acknowledge my indebtedness to each of my many good friends and helpers who have personally aided me herewith. Some of them are of one Faith, some of another; some are far away in Japan and in China, some in the land of my birth, America; many are in Ceylon and in India; a few are in Tibet.

Here in England I think first of all of Dr. R. R. Marett, Reader in Social Anthropology in the University of Oxford, and Fellow of Exeter College, who ever since I first came up to Oxford, in the year 1907, has faithfully guided my anthropological research. Sir John Woodroffe, late a Judge of the High Court, Calcutta, now Reader in Indian Law in the University of Oxford, and the foremost authority in the West on the Tantra has read through our translation, chiefly in relation to the character of the work as a ritual more or less Tantric and offered important advice. I am also very grateful to him for the Foreword.

To S. Atal Bihari Ghosh, of Calcutta, Joint Honorary Secretary with Sir John Woodroffe of the āgamānusandhāna Samiti, as to Sir E. Denison Ross, Director of the School of Oriental Studies, London Institution, and to Dr. F. W. Thomas, Librarian of the India Office, London, I am under a special obligation for important constructive criticism on the book as a whole. To Major W. L. Campbell, British Political Representative in Tibet, Bhutan, and Sikkim during my sojourn in Gangtok, I am indebted for much encouragement and scholarly aid, and for the gift of two valuable paintings prepared by his orders in the chief monastery of Gyantse, Tibet, to illustrate the symbolism of the Bardo Thödol text, and herein reproduced. To his predecessor and successor in the same post, Sir Charles Bell, I am also a debtor for important advice at the outset of my Tibetan research, when in Darjeeling. To Mr. K. S. Bouchier, M.A. (Oxon.), F. R. Hist. S.—, author of Syria as a Roman Province, A Short History of Antioch, &c, my heartiest thanks are due for the assistance which he has so kindly rendered in reading the whole of this book when in proof.

Sardar Bahadur S.W. Laden La, Chief of Police, Darjeeling, who sent me to Gangtok with a letter of introduction to the late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup, the translator of the Bardo Thödol \ Dr. Johan Van Manen, Secretary of the Asiatic Society, Calcutta, who lent me Tibetan books which proved very helpful while the translation was taking shape, and who afterwards contributed advice concerning translations ; and Dr. Cassius A. Pereira, of Colombo, Ceylon, who criticized parts of the Introduction in the light of Theravāda Buddhism, are among many others to whom my thanks are due.

Thus, under the best of auspices, this book is sent forth to the world, in the hope that it may contribute something to the sum total of Right Knowledge, and serve as one more spiritual strand in an unbreakable bond of good will and universal peace, binding East and West together in mutual respect and understanding, and in love such as overleaps every barrier of creed and caste and race.

W. Y. E—W.

JKSUS COLLEGE, OXFORD, Easter, 1927.

I. RENUNCIATION

‘Get thee away from life—lust, from conceit,
From ignorance, and from distraction’s craze;
Sunder the bonds; so only shall thou come
To utter end of Ill. Throw off the Chain
Of birth and death—thou knowest what they mean.
So, free from craving, in this life on earth,
Thou shalt go on thy way calm and serene.’—The Buddha.

Psalms of the Early Buddhists, I. Ivi
(Mrs. Rhys Davids’ Translation).

II. VICTORY

‘But anguish crept upon me, even me,
Whcnas I pondered in my little cell:

Ah me! how have I come into this evil road.
Into the power of Craving have I strayed!
Brief is the span of life yet left to me;
Old age, disease, hang imminent to crush.
Now ere this body perish and dissolve,
Swift let me be; no time have I for sloth.
And contemplating, as they really are,
The Aggregates of Life that come and go,
I rose and stood with mind emancipate!
For me the Buddha's words had come to pass'.—

Mittaka!, a Brahmin Bhikkhuni.
Psalms of the Early Buddhists, I. xliii
(Mrs. Rhys Davids' Translation).

CONTENTS

ILLUSTRATIONS

PSYCHOLOGICAL COMMENTARY, by Dr. C. G. Jung

INTRODUCTORY FOREWORD by LāMa Anagarika Govinda

FOREWORD: The Science of Death, by Sir John Woodroffe

INTRODUCTION

I. The Importance of the Bardo Thödol

II. The Symbolism

III. The Esoteric Significance of the Forty—Nine Days of the Bardo

IV. The Esoteric Significance of the Five Elements

V. The Wisdom Teachings

VI. The Death Ceremonies

VII. The Bardo, or After—Death State

VIII. The Psychology of the Bardo Visions

IX. The Judgement

X. The Rebirth Doctrine

XI. The Cosmography

XII. The Fundamental Teachings Summarized

XIII. The Manuscript

XIV. The Origin of the Bardo Thödol

XV. The Translating and the Editing

BOOK I
THE CHIKHAI BARDO AND THE CHÖNYID BARDO

THE OBEISANCES

THE INTRODUCTION

The Transference of the Consciousness—Principle

The Reading of this Thödol

The Practical Application of this Thödol by the Officiant

PART I

THE BARDO OF THE MOMENTS OF DEATH

INSTRUCTIONS ON THE SYMPTOMS OF DEATH, OR
THE FIRST STAGE OF THE CHIKHAI BARDO: THE PRIMARY CLEAR LIGHT SEEN AT THE MOMENT OF DEATH

INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING THE SECOND STAGE OF THE CHIKHAI BARDO: THE SECONDARY CLEAR LIGHT SEEN IMMEDIATELY AFTER DEATH

PART II

THE BARDO OF THE EXPERIENCING OF REALITY

INTRODUCTORY INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING THE EXPERIENCING OF REALITY DURING THE THIRD STAGE OF THE BARDO, CALLED THE CHÖMYIDBARDO, WHEN THE KARMIC APPARITIONS APPEAR

THE DAWNING OF THE PEACEFUL DEITIES, FROM THE FIRST TO THE SEVENTH DAY

The First Day
The Second Day
The Third Day
The Fourth Day
The Fifth Day
The Sixth Day
The Seventh Day

THE DAWNING OF THE WRATHFUL DEITIES, FROM THE EIGHTH TO THE FOURTEENTH DAY

Introduction
The Eighth Day
The Ninth Day
The Tenth Day
The Eleventh Day
The Twelfth Day
The Thirteenth Day
The Fourteenth Day

THE CONCLUSION, SHOWING THE FUNDAMENTAL IMPORTANCE OF THE BARDO TEACHINGS

BOOK II
THE SIDPA BARDO

THE OBEISANCES

INTRODUCTORY VERSES

PART I
THE AFTER—DEATH WORLD

THE BARDO BODY: ITS BIRTH AND ITS SUPERNORMAL FACULTIES

CHARACTERISTICS OF EXISTENCE IN THE INTERMEDIATE STATE

THE JUDGEMENT

THE ALL—DETERMINING INFLUENCE OF THOUGHT

THE DAWNING OF THE LIGHTS OF THE SIX LOKAS

PART II THE PROCESS OF REBIRTH

THE CLOSING OF THE DOOR OF THE WOMB

Method of Preventing Entry into a Womb

The First Method of Closing the Womb—Door

The Second Method of Closing the Womb—Door

The Third Method of Closing the Womb—Door

The Fourth Method of Closing the Womb—Door

The Fifth Method of Closing the Womb—Door

THE CHOOSING OF THE WOMB—DOOR

The Premonitory Visions of the Place of Rebirth

The Protection against the Tormenting Furies

THE ALTERNATIVE CHOOSING: SUPERNORMAL BIRTH; OR WOMB—BIRTH

Supernormal Birth by Transference to a Paradise Realm
Womb—Birth: the Return to the Human World

THE GENERAL CONCLUSION

THE APPENDIX

I. THE INVOCATION OF THE BUDDHAS AND BODHISATTVAS

II. 'THE PATH OF GOOD WISHES FOR SAVING FROM THE DANGEROUS NARROW PASSAGE—WAY OF THE BARDO'

III. 'THE ROOT VERSES OF THE SIX BARDOS'

IV. 'THE PATH OF GOOD WISHES WHICH PROTECT —ETH FROM FEAR IN THE BARDO'

V. THE COLOPHON

ADDENDA

I. YOGA

II. TANTRICISM

III. MANTRAS, OR WORDS OF POWER

IV. THE GURU AND SHISHYA (OR CHELA) AND INITIATIONS

V. REALITY

VI. NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN BUDDHISM AND CHRISTIANITY

VII. THE MEDIEVAL CHRISTIAN JUDGEMENT

INDEX

ILLUSTRATIONS

I. THE TRANSLATOR AND THE EDITOR.

preceding Pinte II From a photograph of the Translator and the Editor in Tibetan dress, taken in Gangtok, Sikkim, during the year 1919.

II. FOLIOS 35a AND 67a OF THE BARDO THÖDOL MS.

Frontispiece

A photographic reproduction (about two—thirds of the original size). In the original the illuminations are in colour (now much faded) painted on the folios (cf. p. 68).

The painting on the upper folio illustrates, with the colours, emblems, and orientation in strict accord with the traditions of Tibetan monastic art, the description in the text of the united mamlalas, or divine conclaves, of the Peaceful Deities of the First to the Sixth Day of the Bardo that dawn thus in one complete conclave on the Sixth Day (cf. pp. 118—26). In the central circle (Centre) is the Dhyani Buddha Vairochana, embraced by his shakti, or divine spouse, the Mother of Infinite Space. In the next circle, each likewise embraced by his shakti, are the four Dhyani Buddhas, who, with Vairochana, constitute the mándala of the Five Dhyáni Buddhas. In the outermost circle are typical Bodhisattvas and other deities who accompany the Five Dhyani Buddhas (cf. pp. 118—20); and in the four small outer circles the four female Door—Keepers of the complete conclave (cf. p. 120).

The painting on the lower folio similarly illustrates, in colours, emblems, and orientation, the united māṇḍalas of the Wrathful Deities of the Eighth to the Fourteenth Day that dawn thus in one complete conclave on the Fourteenth Day (cf. pp. 143—6). In the cruciform design at the centre are the three—headed Herukas of the Buddha, Vajra, Ratna, Padma, and Karma Order, each with his shakti, that dawn, māṇḍala by māṇḍala, from the Eighth to the Twelfth Day (cf. pp. 136—41). The outer circle contains representations of the various animal—headed deities that dawn on the Thirteenth and the Fourteenth Day (cf. pp. 141—6). In the four small outer circles are the Four Yoginis of the Door (cf. pp. 145—6).

The translation of the text on the two folios is indicated by special markings on pages 120 and 144.

III. EFFIGY OF THE DEAD PERSON p. 21

A reproduction (slightly reduced) of a copy of a Tibetan printed Chang—kit paper.

IV. THE GREAT MANDALA OF THE PEACEFUL DEITIES

facing p. 118

This and the companion illustration, number V, following, are photographic reproductions (about one—fourth of the original size) of two paintings in colour, on heavy cotton cloth, made in the chief monastery of Gyantse, Tibet, on the instructions of Major W. L. Campbell, to illustrate our Barāo Thödol translation (see Preface, p. xi). The colours, emblems, and orientations, as in the two manuscript illuminations described above, are in accord with the strict conventions of the religious art of Tibet. The correlations, too, between the text and the deities depicted, as brought out in the description of the two manuscript illuminations, also apply to these two more elaborate paintings.

Innermost circle (representing the Centre of the orientation): at the centre, Vairochana (white) and shakti, on lion throne (cf. pp. 105—6); at the top, Sam anta— Bh adra (blue) and shakti; in subordinate circle on the left, Chcnrazee (above), Mañjushri (below, on left), Vajra—Pani (below, on right); in subordinate circle on the right, Tsoñ Khapa, a famous Tibetan guru (above), and his two chief shishyas (or disciples), Gendundub (below, on left), and Gyalshabje (below, on right).

Lower circle (East): at the centre, Vajra—Sattva (blue), the reflex of Akshobhya, and shakti, on elephant throne; Pushpā (above); Lāsya (below); and Bodhisattvas (on left and right). Cf. pp. 108—9.

Left circle (South): at the centre, Ratna—Sambhava (yellow) and shakti, on horse throne; Dhūpa (above); Mālā (below); and Bodhisattvas (on left and right). Cf. pp. no—11.

Upper circle (West): at the centre, Amitābha (red) and s/takti, on peacock throne; āloka (above); Gīta (below); and Bodhisattvas (on left and right). Cf. p. 113.

Right circle (North): at the centre, Amogha—Siddhi (green) and shakti, on harpy throne; Naivedya (above); Gandha (below); and Bodhisattvas (on left and right). Cf. pp. 115—6.

Occupying the four corners of the great circle are the four chief Door—Keepers (cf. p. 120) of the Mandala, each pair on a fire—enhaloed lotus throne: upper left, Yamāntaka (yellow) and shakti, the Door—Keepers of the South ; upper right, Hayagrīva (red) and shakti, the Door—Keepers of the West; lower right, Amritā—Dhāra (white) and shakti, the Door—Keepers of the North; lower left, Vijaya (green) and shakliy the Door—Keepers of the East. At the bottom, in the centre, Padma Sambhava, the Great Human Guru of the Bardo Thodól Doctrine, in royal robes and pandit head—dress, holding a skull filled with blood, symbolical of renunciation of life, in his left hand, and a dorje, symbolical of mastery over life, in his right. At his feet lie offerings: (1) the Tri—Ratna or Three Jewels of the Buddhist Faith, (2) a pair of elephant tusks, and (3) a branch of red coral. To the right of the Guru stands the Buddha of the Human Loka (yellow), Shakyā Muni, holding a bhikkhu— staff and a begging—bowl; to the right, the Buddha of the Brute Loka (blue) holding a book, symbolizing language and expression, or divine wisdom, which brute creatures lack.

In the four corners are the four other Buddhas of the Six Lokas (cf. p. 121): upper left, the Buddha of the Deva Loka (white), holding a guitar, symbolizing excellence in arts and sciences and the harmony of existence in the world of the devas ; upper right, the Buddha of the Asura Loka (green), holding a sword symbolizing the warlike nature of asuras; lower left, the Buddha of the Preta Loka (red), holding a box filled with all desirable objects to satisfy the cravings of the pretas; lower right, the Buddha of Hell (smoke—coloured), holding fire for consuming and water for purifying.

Among other embellishments added by the artist are a sacred mirror (symbolizing form or body, which it reflects) near the trees on the left, and a sacred conch—shell trumpet of victory over the Sangsāra (symbolizing sound) near the tree on the right; and, between the two Buddhas at the bottom, in two caves, yogis, or holy men, in the Tibetan wilderness.

At the top, in the centre, presiding over the whole māndala, Buddha Amitābha (red), on an enhaloed lotus and lunar throne holding a begging—bowl, with lotuses and the moon (white) on the left and lotuses and the sun (gold) on the right.

V. THE GREAT MÁNDALA OF THE KNOWLEDGE—HOLDING AND WRATHFUL DEITIES facing p. 136

Innermost circle: upper centre, Samanta—Bhadra (blue) and shakti in wrathful aspect; lower centre (Centre), the Buddha Heruka (dark brown) and shakti (cf. p. 137); lower left (East), the Vajra Heruka (dark blue) and shakti (cf. p. 138); upper left (South), the Ratna Heruka (yellow) and shakti (cf. pp. 138—9); upper right (West), the Padma Heruka (reddish—brown) and shakti (cf. pp. 139—40); lower right (North), the Karma Heruka (dark green) and shakti (cf. pp. 140—1). Each pair of these deities arc on a lotus and solar throne, enhaloed by flames of wisdom, and treading under foot mara beings (i.e. human beings, whose existence, being purely phenomenal, or karmic, is illusion, or may a), symbolizing the treading under foot of sangsāric (i. e. worldly) existence. At the bottom are offerings of the ñve sangsāric senses, symbolized by (1) two eyes, (2) two ears, (3) a tongue, (4) a heart (in the centre), and (5) a nose (above the heart); also of three blood—filled human skull—cups, held in position by small human skulls, all of which symbolize renunciation of the world.

Second circle: the Eight Kerimas (cf. pp. 142—3).

Third circle: the Eight Htamenmas (cf. p. 143) and the Four Female Door—Keepers (cf. pp. 143—4).

Outermost circle: the Twenty—Eight Various—Headed Mighty Goddesses (cf. pp. 144—5), four of whom are the Four Yoginis of the Door (cf. pp. 145—6).

At the bottom, in the centre (Centre) the supreme Knowledge—Holding Deity, the Lotus Lord of Dance (red, for the five colours of text) and shakti. In the four corners his four companion deities: lower left (East), the Earth—Abiding Knowledge—Holder (white) and shakti ; upper left (South), the Knowledge—Holder Having Power Over Duration of Life (yellow) and shakti ; upper right (West), the Knowledge—Holding Deity of the Great Symbol (red) and shakti ; lower right (North), the Self—Evolved Knowledge—Holder (green) and shakti. Each pair of deities of this māndala, that dawns intermediately (i. e. between the māndalas of the Peaceful Deities and the māndalas of the Wrathful Deities) on the Seventh Day (cf. pp. 126—8), are in peaceful aspect, on an enhaloed lotus and lunar throne, performing a mystic dance which is Tantric.

At the top, in the centre, presiding over the whole greater mandala is Samanta—Bhadra (dark blue), the ādi—Buddha, and shakti (white), in peaceful aspect, on a lotus and lunar throne, enhaloed in rainbow colours, with lotuses and the moon (white) on his right and lotuses and the sun (gold) on his left.

VI. THE TIBETAN JUDGEMENT facing?

166

A photographic reproduction (about one—fourth of the original size) of a monastic painting in colour, on heavy cotton cloth, made on the instructions of the editor, in Gangtok, Sikkim, by a Tibetan artist named Lharipa—Pempa—Tendup—La, to illustrate the Judgement (sec P. 37).

Occupying the central position is Dharma—Raja, the King of Truth, or Administrator of Truth and Justice, otherwise called Yama—Raja, the King and Judge of the Dead. He is the wrathful aspect of Chenrazce, the National Divine Protector of Tibet. The third eye of spiritual insight is in his forehead. He stands enhaloed in flames of wisdom, on a solar throne supported by a lotus throne, treading under foot a mara form, symbolic of the maya (i. e. illusionary) nature of human existence. His head—dress is adorned with human skulls, and a serpent forms his necklace. His necklet is a human hide, the head of which protrudes from behind his right side, and a hand and foot hang down over the centre of his breast. A girdle of human heads surrounds his waist. His pavilion and the walls of his Court are adorned with the skull—symbols of death. His sword is the sword of spiritual power. The mirror in his left hand is the Mirror of Kanna, in which are reflected every good and evil act (cf. p. 166) of each of the dead who are being judged, one by one. There is written on the mirror, in Tibetan, 'Hri the btja, or chief, manirá of Chenrazce.

Directly in front of Dharma—Rāja is the Monkey—Headed One, Sprehu—gochan (Tib. Spre~hu—tngo—chan), otherwise called Shinje (cf. pp. 36—7), holding the scales, on one side of which are heaped—up black pebbles, the evil deeds, and, on the other, heaped—up white pebbles, the good deeds. On the right of Shinje stands the Little White God, emptying a sack of white pebbles; on the other side, the Little Black God, emptying a sack of black pebbles (cf. p. 166).

Guarding the weighing arc the Bull—Headed One, Lang—gochan (Tib. Glang—mgo—chan), holding another mirror of kanna, and the Serpent—Headed One, Dul—gochan (Tib. Sbrnl—mgo—chan), holding a scourge and a noose.

A yellow deity, on the right of Dharma—Rāja, holding a writing—tablet and a stilus, and a brown deity, on the left, holding a sword and a noose, are the two Advocates. The yellow advocate is the defender, the brown advocate is the accuser. The six deities, five of whom are animal—headed, sitting in the Court of Judgement, three on either side, like a jury of subordinate judges, supervise the proceedings in order to ensure regularity of procedure and impartial justice (cf. pp. 35—7). The first above on the right holds a mirror of kanna and a skull—cup of blood, the second a battle—axe and a skull—cup of blood, the third a noose. The first above on the left holds a battle—axe and skull—cup of blood, the second a small vase of blossoms in his right hand, the third a dorje and a skull—cup of blood.

Near the gate on the left and the gate on the right stands one of the avenging furies who act as warders. There are ten Tibetans in the foreground of the Court awaiting judgement. The one with a conical head—dress (in red) is a red—cap lāma ; the one with a round headdress (in yellow) is a government official. The others are ordinary people. The three gates, through which the condemned enter the Hells below, are guarded by three animal—headed porters, each holding a noose.

Issuing from the Court, at either side of the Judge, are the Six Karmic Pathways, leading to the Six Buddhas of the Six Lokas, in whom the Pathways end, each Pathway and Buddha in appropriate colour (cf. p. 124 and Illustration IV). Traversing the Pathways are twelve of the dead who have recently been judged. The highest one, upon the left, on the white light—path approaching the Buddha of the Deva Loka, is a yellow—cap lāma ; next to him is a government official on the yellow light—path approaching the Buddha of the Human Loka; the highest upon the right, on the green light—path approaching the Buddha of the Asura Loka, is a red—cap lāma.

In the Lower World, at the bottom of the painting, typical punishments in various Hells are depicted, none of which, however, are everlasting. On the left, in the upper corner, where two sinners are immersed in a glacial region, the Eight Cold Hells are suggested. Near the edge of the painting, on the opposite side, a sinner amidst flames suggests the Eight Hot Hells. The commission of any of the ten impious acts, deliberately and from selfish motives, leads to purgation in the Cold Hells; any of the same acts done through anger lead to purgation in the Hot Hells.

Just below the Cold Hells is the Hell of the 'Spiked Tree' or 'Hill of Spikes' (Tib. ShaJ—ma—ri), in which an evil—doer has been quartered and affixed to the spikes. Beside it, in charge of a hell—fury, is 'The Doorless Iron House*' (Tib. Lchags—khang—sgo—med). Next to this there are four lāmas held under the mountainous weight of an enormous Tibetan sacred book; they are being punished thus for having in their earth—life hurried through and skipped passages when reading religious texts. The triangle, in which an evil—doer is fixed, symbolizes the terrible Avitchi Hell, wherein one guilty of a heinous sin, such as using sorcery to destroy enemies or deliberate failure to fulfil Tantric vows, endures punishment for ages which are almost immeasurable. Close to the triangle, a hell—fury is pouring spoonfuls of molten metal into a woman condemned for prostitution. The person next to her, bowed under the weight of a heavy rock tied to his back, is being punished in that manner for having killed small living creatures like vermin or other insects. The sinner whom a hell—fury is holding stretched out on a floor of spiked iron while another hell—fury is preparing to hack him to pieces (cf. p. 166) has been found guilty of another of the ten impious acts. So also has been the woman who is about to be sawn in two lengthwise ; her sin has been murder. As in Dante's Inferno, other evil—doers, incapable, as our text explains, of succumbing to the process (cf. p. 166), are being cooked in the iron cauldron at the lower right—hand corner. Three hell—furies (one brown, one yellow, one blue in the original) are to be seen holding by the end of nooses and leading and dragging along (cf. p. 166) to appropriate punishments three of the dead who have just been cast into Hell.

At the top of the picture, in the centre, on an enhaloed lotus and lunar throne, with the moon (white) at his right and the sun (gold) at his left, presiding over all, is Dorjé Chang (blue), the Divine Guru of the Red—Hat School of Padma Sambhava; for he is held to be the Ever—living and Spiritual Source whence continue to emanate, as in the days of the Buddha Shakyamuni, all the Esoteric Doctrines underlying the Bardo Thödol, which are referred to on pages 133 to

EMBLEMS

1. THE INDIAN WHEEL OF THE LAW (Dharma—Chakra)

From designs sculptured on the Sanchi Topes, dating from about 500 B.c. to 100 a. D.

2. THE LāMAIC CROSSED DORJE

Symbolical of equilibrium, immutability, and almighty power. (Cf. pp. 63, 116¹.)

3. THE TIBETAN WHEEL OF THE LAW (Ch'os—'k'or—bskor)

facing p. 119

The Eight—Spoked Wheel (cf. p. 106), on a lotus throne and enhaloed by Flames of Wisdom, is representative of the Thousand—Spoked Wheel of the Good Law of the Buddha, symbol of the symmetry and completeness of the Sacred Law of the D/ianna, or Scriptures. The design at the centre, called in Tibetan rgyan—'k'yil, composed of three whirling segments, symbolizes—as docs the svastika at the centre of the Indian Wheel of the Law—the Sangsara, or ceaseless change or 'becoming'.

4. THE DORJE, THE LāMAIC SCEPTRE . . facing p. 137

A type of the Thunderbolt of Indra, the Indian Jupiter, used in most lāmate rituals (cf. pp. 10, 108², 137—8, 142—5), symbolical of dominion over sangsāric (or worldly) existence.

5. THE MANTRA OF CHENRAZEE (Avalokiteshvara)

facing p. 167

In Ranja or Lantsa Indian characters of about the seventh century A.D. Lantsa characters, slightly modified, are used in Tibetan manuscripts, commonly on title—pages. In Tibetan characters the sacred Mantra is ཨོཾ་མ་ཎི་པ་རྒྱེ་ཏུ་ which means literally: ‘Öm! The Jewel in the Lotus! Hum!’ (Cf. pp. 134², 149¹, 206.)

THE TIBETAN BOOK OF THE DEAD

PSYCHOLOGICAL COMMENTARY

By Dr. C. G. Jung⁽¹⁾

Translated by R. F. C. Hull from Das Tibeianische Totenbuch

Before embarking upon the psychological commentary, I should like to say a few words about the text itself. The Tibetan Book of the Dead, or the Bardo Thödol, is a book of instructions for the dead and dying. Like The Egyptian Book of the Dead, it is meant to be a guide for the dead man during the period of his Bardo existence, symbolically described as an intermediate state of forty—nine days' duration between death and rebirth. The text falls into three parts. The first part, called Chikhai Bardo, describes the psychic happenings at the moment of death. The second part, or Chönyid Bardo, deals with the dream—state which supervenes immediately after death, and with what are called 'karmic illusions'. The third part, or Sidpa Bardo, concerns the onset of the birth—instinct and of prenatal events. It is characteristic that supreme insight and illumination, and hence the greatest possibility of attaining liberation, are vouchsafed during the actual process of dying. Soon afterward, the 'illusions' begin which lead eventually to reincarnation, the illuminative lights growing ever fainter and more multifarious, and the visions more and more terrifying. This descent illustrates the estrangement of consciousness from the liberating truth as it approaches nearer and nearer to physical rebirth. The purpose of the instruction is to fix the attention of the dead man, at each successive stage of delusion and entanglement, on the ever—present possibility of liberation, and to explain to him the nature of his visions. The text of the Bardo Thödol is recited by the lāma in the presence of the corpse.

I do not think I could better discharge my debt of thanks to the two previous translators of the Bardo Thödol, the late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup and Dr. Evans—Wentz, than by attempting, with the aid of a psychological commentary, to make the magnificent world of ideas and the problems contained in this treatise a little more intelligible to the Western mind. I am sure that all who read this book with open eyes, and who allow it to impress itself upon them without prejudice, will reap a rich reward.

The Bardo Thödol, fitly named by its editor, Dr. W. Y. Evans—Wentz, ‘The Tibetan Book of the Dead’, caused a considerable stir in English—speaking countries at the time of its first appearance in 1927. It belongs to that class of writings which are not only of interest to specialists in Mahāyāna Buddhism, but which also, because of their deep humanity and their still deeper insight into the secrets of the human psyche, make an especial appeal to the layman who is seeking to broaden his knowledge of life. For years, ever since it was first published, the Bardo Thödol has been my constant companion, and to it I owe not only many stimulating ideas and discoveries, but also many fundamental insights. Unlike The Egyptian Book of the Dead, which always prompts one to say too much or too little, the Bardo Thodol offers one an intelligible philosophy addressed to human beings rather than to gods or primitive savages. Its philosophy contains the quintessence of Buddhist psychological criticism; and, as such, one can truly say that it is of an unexampled superiority. Not only the ‘wrathful’ but also the ‘peaceful’ deities are conceived as sangsāric projections of the human psyche, an idea that seems all too obvious to the enlightened European, because it reminds him of his own banal simplifications. But though the European can easily explain away these deities as projections, he would be quite incapable of positing them at the same time as real. The Bardo Thodol can do that, because, in certain of its most essential metaphysical premises, it has the enlightened as well as the unenlightened European at a disadvantage. The ever—present, unspoken assumption of the Bardo Thodol is the antinomial character of all metaphysical assertions, and also the idea of the qualitative difference of the various levels of consciousness and of the metaphysical realities conditioned by them. The background of this unusual book is not the niggardly European 'either—or', but a magnificently affirmative 'both—and'. This statement may appear objectionable to the Western philosopher, for the West loves clarity and unambiguity; consequently, one philosopher clings to the position, 'God is', while another clings equally fervently to the negation. * God is not'. What would these hostile brethren make of an assertion like the following:

'Recognizing the voidness of thine own intellect to be Buddha—hood, and knowing it at the same time to be thine own consciousness, thou shalt abide in the state of the divine mind of the Buddha.'

Such an assertion is, I fear, as unwelcome to our Western philosophy as it is to our theology. The Bar do Thodol is in the highest degree psychological in its outlook; but, with us, philosophy and theology are still in the mediaeval, pre—psychological stage where only the assertions are listened to, explained, defended, criticized and disputed, while the authority that makes them has, by general consent, been deposed as outside the scope of discussion.

Metaphysical assertions, however, are statements of the psyche, and are therefore psychological. To the Western mind, which compensates its well—known feelings of resentment by a slavish regard for 'rational' explanations, this obvious truth seems all too obvious, or else it is seen as an inadmissible negation of metaphysical 'truth'. Whenever the Westerner hears the word 'psychological', it always sounds to him like 'only psychological'. For him the 'soul' is something pitifully small, unworthy, personal, subjective, and a lot more besides. He therefore prefers to use the word 'mind' instead, though he likes to pretend at the same time that a statement which may in fact be very subjective indeed is made by the 'mind' naturally by the 'Universal Mind', or even—at a pinch—by the 'Absolute' itself. This rather ridiculous presumption is probably a compensation for the regrettable smallness of the soul. It almost seems as if Anatole France had uttered a truth which were valid for the whole Western world when, in his Penguin Island, Catherine d' Alexandrie offers this advice to God: 'Donnez leur une ante, mats une petite' ! ['Give them a soul, but a little one!']

It is the soul which, by the divine creative power inherent in it, makes the metaphysical assertion; it posits the distinctions between metaphysical entities. Not only is it the condition of all metaphysical reality, it is that reality.¹

With this great psychological truth the Bardo Thödol opens. The book is not a ceremonial of burial, but a set of instructions for the dead, a guide through the changing phenomena of the Bardo realm, that state of existence which continues for 49 days after death until the next incarnation. If we disregard for the moment the supra—temporality of the soul—which the East accepts as a self—evident fact—we, as readers of the Bardo Thödol, shall be able to put ourselves without difficulty in the position of the dead man, and shall consider attentively the teaching set forth in the opening section, which is outlined in the quotation above. At this point, the following words are spoken, not presumptuously, but in a courteous manner:—

'O nobly—born (so and so), listen. Now thou art experiencing the Radiance of the Clear Light of Pure Reality. Recognize it. O nobly—born, thy present intellect, in real nature void, not formed into anything as regards characteristics or colour, naturally void, is the very Reality, the All—Good.

'Thine own intellect, which is now voidness, yet not to be regarded as of the voidness of nothingness, but as being the intellect itself, unobstruced, shining, thrilling, and blissful, is the very consciousness, the All—good Buddha.'

This realization is the Dhartna—Kāya state of perfect enlightenment; or, as we should express it in our own language, the creative ground of all metaphysical assertion is consciousness, as the invisible, intangible manifestation of the soul. The 'Voidness' is the state transcendent over all assertion and all predication. The fulness of its discriminative manifestations still lies latent in the soul.

The text continues:—

'Thine own consciousness, shining, void, and inseparable from the Great Body of Radiance, hath no birth, nor death, and is the Immutable Light—Buddha Amitabha.'

The soul [or, as here, one's own consciousness] is assuredly not small, but the radiant Godhead itself. The West finds this statement either very dangerous, if not downright blasphemous, or else accepts it unthinkingly and then suffers from a theosophical inflation. Somehow we always have a wrong attitude to these things. But if we can master ourselves far enough to refrain from our chief error of always wanting to do something with things and put them to practical use, we may perhaps succeed in learning an important lesson from these teachings, or at least in appreciating the greatness of the Bardo Thödol, which vouchsafes to the dead man the ultimate and highest truth, that even the gods are the radiance and reflection of our own souls. No sun is thereby eclipsed for the Oriental as it would be for the Christian, who would feel robbed of his God; on the contrary, his soul is the light of the Godhead, and the Godhead is the soul. The East can sustain this paradox better than the unfortunate Angelus Silesius, who even today would be psychologically far in advance of his time.

It is highly sensible of the Bardo Thödol to make clear to the dead man the primacy of the soul, for that is the one thing which life does not make clear to us. We are so hemmed in by things which jostle and oppress that we never get a chance, in the midst of all these 'given' things, to wonder by whom they are 'given'. It is from this world of 'given' things that the dead man liberates himself; and the purpose of the instruction is to help him towards this liberation. We, if we put ourselves in his place, shall derive no lesser reward from it, since we learn from the very first paragraphs that the 'giver' of all 'given' things dwells within us. This is a truth which in the face of all evidence, in the greatest things as in the smallest, is never known, although it is often so very necessary, indeed vital, for us to know it. Such knowledge, to be sure, is suitable only for contemplatives who are minded to understand the purpose of existence, for those who are Gnostics by temperament and therefore believe in a saviour who, like the saviour of the Mandaeans, calls himself 'gnosis of life' (manda d'hajie). Perhaps it is not granted to many of us to see the world as something 'given'. A great reversal of standpoint, calling for much sacrifice, is needed before we can see the world as 'given* by the very nature of the soul. It is so much more straight—forward, more dramatic, impressive, and therefore more convincing, to see that all the things happen to me than to observe how I make them happen. Indeed, the animal nature of man makes him resist seeing himself as the maker of his circumstances. That is why attempts of this kind were always the object of secret initiations, culminating as a rule in a figurative death which symbolized the total character of this reversal. And, in point of fact, the instruction given in the Bardo Thödol serves to recall to the dead man the experiences of his initiation and the teachings of his guru, for the instruction is, at bottom, nothing less than an initiation of the dead into the Bardo life, just as the initiation of the living was a preparation for the Beyond. Such was the case, at least, with all the mystery cults in ancient civilizations from the time of the Egyptian and Eleusinian mysteries. In the initiation of the living, however, this 'Beyond * is not a world beyond death, but a reversal of the mind's intentions and outlook, a psychological 'Beyond 'or, in Christian terms, a 'redemption 'from the trammels of the world and of sin. Redemption is a separation and deliverance from an earlier condition of darkness and unconsciousness, and leads to a condition of illumination and releasedness, to victory and transcendence over everything 'given '.

Thus far the Bardo Thödol is, as Dr. Evans—Wentz also feels, an initiation process whose purpose it is to restore to the soul the divinity it lost at birth. Now it is a characteristic of Oriental religious literature that the teaching invariably begins with the most important item, with the ultimate and highest principles which, with us, would come last—as for instance in Apuleius, where Lucius is worshipped as Helios only right at the end. Accordingly, in the Bardo Thödol, the initiation is a series of diminishing climaxes ending with rebirth in the womb. The only ‘initiation process’ that is still alive and practised today in the West is the analysis of the unconscious as used by doctors for therapeutic purposes. This penetration into the ground—layers of consciousness is a kind of rational maieutics in the Socratic sense, a bringing forth of psychic contents that are still germinal, subliminal, and as yet unborn. Originally, this therapy took the form of Freudian psychoanalysis and was mainly concerned with sexual fantasies. This is the realm that corresponds to the last and lowest region of the Bardo, known as the Sidpa Bardo, where the dead man, unable to profit by the teachings of the Chikhai and Chonyid Bardo, begins to fall a prey to sexual fantasies and is attracted by the vision of mating couples. Eventually he is caught by a womb and born into the earthly world again. Meanwhile, as one might expect, the Oedipus complex starts functioning. If his karma destines him to be reborn as a man, he will fall in love with his mother—to—be and will find his father hateful and disgusting. Conversely, the future daughter will be highly attracted by her father—to—be and repelled by her mother. The European passes through this specifically Freudian domain when his unconscious contents are brought to light under analysis, but he goes in the reverse direction. He journeys back through the world of infantile—sexual fantasy to the womb. It has even been suggested in psychoanalytical circles that the trauma par excellence is the birth—experience itself—nay more, psychoanalysts even claim to have probed back to memories of intrauterine origin. Here Western reason reaches its limit, unfortunately. I say ‘unfortunately’, because one rather wishes that Freudian psychoanalysis could have happily pursued these so called intra—uterine experiences still further back; had it succeeded in this bold undertaking, it would surely have come out beyond the Sidpa Bardo and penetrated from behind into the lower reaches of the Chönyid Bardo. It is true that with the equipment of our existing biological ideas such a venture would not have been crowned with success; it would have needed a wholly different kind of philosophical preparation from that based on current scientific assumptions. But, had the journey back been consistently pursued, it would undoubtedly have led to the postulate of a pre—uterine existence, a true Bardo life, if only it had been possible to find at least some trace of an experiencing subject. As it was, the psychoanalysts never got beyond purely conjectural traces of intra—uterine experiences, and even the famous ‘birth trauma’ has remained such an obvious truism that it can no longer explain anything, any more than can the hypothesis that life is a disease with a bad prognosis because its outcome is always fatal.

Freudian psychoanalysis, in all essential aspects, never went beyond the experiences of the Sidpa Bardo; that is, it was unable to extricate itself from sexual fantasies and similar ‘incompatible ‘tendencies which cause anxiety and other affective states. Nevertheless, Freud’s theory is the first attempt made by the West to investigate, as if from below, from the animal sphere of instinct, the psychic territory that corresponds in Tantric Lāmaism to the Sidpa Bardo. A very justifiable fear of metaphysics prevented Freud from penetrating into the sphere of the ‘occult’. In addition to this, the Sidpa state, if we are to accept the psychology of the Sidpa Bardo, is characterized by the fierce wind of karma, which whirls the dead man along until he comes to the ‘womb—door’ In other words, the Sidpa state permits of no going back, because it is sealed off against the Chönyid state by an intense striving downwards, towards the animal sphere of instinct and physical rebirth. That is to say, anyone who penetrates into the unconscious with purely biological assumptions will become stuck in the instinctual sphere and be unable to advance beyond it, for he will be pulled back again and again into physical existence. It is therefore not possible for Freudian theory to reach anything except an essentially negative valuation of the unconscious. It is a ‘nothing but’. At the same time, it must be admitted that this view of the psyche is typically Western, only it is expressed more blatantly, more plainly, and more ruthlessly than others would have dared to express it, though at bottom they think no differently. As to what ‘mind’ means in this connection, we can only cherish the hope that it will carry conviction. But, as even Max Scheler noted with regret, the power of this ‘mind’ is, to say the least of it, doubtful.

I think, then, we can state it as a fact that with the aid of psychoanalysis the rationalizing mind of the West has pushed forward into what one might call the neuroticism of the Sidpa state, and has there been brought to an inevitable standstill by the uncritical assumption that everything psychological is subjective and personal. Even so, this advance has been a great gain, inasmuch as it has enabled us to take one more step behind our conscious lives. This knowledge also gives us a hint of how we ought to read the Bardo Thödol—that is, backwards. If, with the help of our Western science, we have to some extent succeeded in understanding the psychological character of the Sidpa Bardo, our next task is to see if we can make anything of the preceding Chönyid Bardo.

The Chönyid state is one of karmic illusion—that is to say, illusions which result from the psychic residua of previous existences. According to the Eastern view, karma implies a sort of psychic theory of heredity based on the hypothesis of reincarnation, which in the last resort is an hypothesis of the supra—temporality of the soul. Neither our scientific knowledge nor our reason can keep in step with this idea. There are too many if's and but's. Above all, we know desperately little about the possibilities of continued existence of the individual soul after death, so little that we cannot even conceive how anyone could prove anything at all in this respect. Moreover, we know only too well, on epistemological grounds, that such a proof would be just as impossible as the proof of God. Hence we may cautiously accept the idea of karma only if we understand it as psychic heredity in the very widest sense of the word. Psychic heredity does exist—that is to say, there is inheritance of psychic characteristics such as predisposition to disease, traits of character, special gifts, and so forth. It does no violence to the psychic nature of these complex facts if natural science reduces them to what appear to be physical aspects (nuclear structures in cells, and so on). They are essential phenomena of life which express themselves, in the main, psychically, just as there are other inherited characteristics which express themselves, in the main, physiologically, on the physical level. Among these inherited psychic factors there is a special class which is not confined either to family or to race. These are the universal dispositions of the mind, and they are to be understood as analogous to Plato's forms (eidola), in accordance with which the mind organizes its contents. One could also describe these forms as categories analogous to the logical categories which are always and everywhere present as the basic postulates of reason. Only, in the case of our 'forms', we are not dealing with categories of reason but with categories of the imagination. As the products of imagination are always in essence visual, their forms must, from the outset, have the character of images and moreover of typical images, which is why, following St. Augustine, I call them 'archetypes'. Comparative religion and mythology are rich mines of archetypes, and so is the psychology of dreams and psychoses. The astonishing parallelism between these images and the ideas they serve to express has frequently given rise to the wildest migration theories, although it would have been far more natural to think of the remarkable similarity of the human psyche at all times and in all places. Archetypal fantasy—forms are, in fact, reproduced spontaneously anytime and anywhere, without there being any conceivable trace of direct transmission. The original structural components of the psyche are of no less surprising a uniformity than are those of the visible body. The archetypes are, so to speak, organs of the pre—rational psyche. They are eternally inherited forms and ideas which have at first no specific content. Their specific content only appears in the course of the individual's life, when personal experience is taken up in precisely these forms. If the archetypes were not pre—existent in identical form everywhere, how could one explain the fact, postulated at almost every turn by the Bardo Thödol, that the dead do not know that they are dead, and that this assertion is to be met with just as often in the dreary, half—baked literature of European and American Spiritualism? Although we find the same assertion in Swedenborg, knowledge of his writings can hardly be sufficiently widespread for this little bit of information to have been picked up by every small—town' medium \ And a connection between Swedenborg's and the Bardo Thödol is completely unthinkable. It is a primordial, universal idea that the dead simply continue their earthly existence and do not know that they are disembodied spirits—an archetypal idea which enters into immediate, visible manifestation whenever anyone sees a ghost. It is significant, too, that ghosts all over the world have certain features in common. I am naturally aware of the unverifiable spiritualistic hypothesis, though I have no wish to make it my own. I must content myself with the hypothesis of an omnipresent, but differentiated, psychic structure which is inherited and which necessarily gives a certain form and direction to all experience. For, just as the organs of the body are not mere lumps of indifferent, passive matter, but are dynamic, functional complexes which assert themselves with imperious urgency, so also the archetypes, as organs of the psyche, are dynamic, instinctual complexes which determine psychic life to an extraordinary degree. That is why I also call them dominants of the unconscious. The layer of unconscious psyche which is made up of these universal dynamic forms I have termed the collective unconscious.

So far as I know, there is no inheritance of individual prenatal, or pre—uterine, memories, but there are undoubtedly inherited archetypes which are, however, devoid of content, because, to begin with, they contain no personal experiences. They only emerge into consciousness when personal experiences have rendered them visible. As we have seen, Sidpa psychology consists in wanting to live and to be born. (The Sidpa Bardo is the ‘Bardo of Seeking Rebirth’.) Such a state, therefore, precludes any experience of transsubjective psychic realities, unless the individual refuses categorically to be born back again into the world of consciousness. According to the teachings of the Bardo Thödol, it is still possible for him, in each of the Bardo states, to reach the Dharma—Kāya by transcending the four—faced Mount Meru, provided that he does not yield to his desire to follow the ‘dim lights’. This is as much as to say that the dead man must desperately resist the dictates of reason, as we understand it, and give up the supremacy of egohood, regarded by reason as sacrosanct. What this means in practice is complete capitulation to the objective powers of the psyche, with all that this entails; a kind of symbolical death, corresponding to the Judgement of the Dead in the Sidpa Bardo. It means the end of all conscious, rational, morally responsible conduct of life, and a voluntary surrender to what the Bardo Thödol calls ‘karmic illusion \ Karmic illusion springs from belief in a visionary world of an extremely irrational nature, which neither accords with nor derives from our rational judgements but is the exclusive product of uninhibited imagination. It is sheer dream or ‘fantasy’, and every well—meaning person will instantly caution us against it; nor indeed can one see at first sight what is the difference between fantasies of this kind and the phantasmagoria of a lunatic. Very often only a slight abaissement du niveau mental is needed to unleash this world of illusion. The terror and darkness of this moment has its equivalent in the experiences described in the opening sections of the Sidpa Bardo. But the contents of this Bardo also reveal the archetypes, the karmic images which appear first in their terrifying form. The Chönyid state is equivalent to a deliberately induced psychosis.

One often hears and reads about the dangers of yoga, particularly of the ill—reputed Kundaliniyoga. The deliberately induced psychotic state, which in certain unstable individuals might easily lead to a real psychosis, is a danger that needs to be taken very seriously indeed. These things really are dangerous and ought not to be meddled with in our typically Western way. It is a meddling with fate, which strikes at the very roots of human existence and can let loose a flood of sufferings of which no sane person ever dreamed. These sufferings correspond to the hellish torments of the Chönyid state, described in the text as follows:—

’ Then the Lord of Death will place round thy neck a rope and drag thee along; he will cut off thy head, tear out thy heart, pull out thy intestines, lick up thy brain, drink thy blood, eat thy flesh, and gnaw thy bones; but thou wilt be incapable of dying. Even when thy body is hacked to pieces, it will revive again. The repeated hacking will cause intense pain and torture.’

These tortures aptly describe the real nature of the danger: it is a disintegration of the wholeness of the Bardo body, which is a kind of ‘subtle body’ constituting the visible envelope of the psychic self in the after—death state. The psychological equivalent of this dismemberment is psychic dissociation. In its deleterious form it would be schizophrenia (split mind). This most common of all mental illnesses consists essentially in a marked abaissement du niveau mental which abolishes the normal checks imposed by the conscious mind and thus gives unlimited scope to the play of the unconscious ‘dominants’.

The transition, then, from the Sidpa state to the Chönyid state is a dangerous reversal of the aims and intentions of the conscious mind. It is a sacrifice of the ego’s stability and a surrender to the extreme uncertainty of what must seem like a chaotic riot of phantasmal forms. When Freud coined the phrase that the ego was ‘the true seat of anxiety’, he was giving voice to a very true and profound intuition. Fear of self—sacrifice lurks deep in every ego, and this fear is often only the precariously controlled demand of the unconscious forces to burst out in full strength. No one who strives for selfhood (individuation) is spared this dangerous passage, for that which is feared also belongs to the wholeness of the self—the sub—human, or supra—human, world of psychic ‘dominants’ from which the ego originally emancipated itself with enormous effort, and then only partially, for the sake of a more or less illusory freedom. This liberation is certainly a very necessary and very heroic undertaking, but it represents nothing final: it is merely the creation of a subject, who, in order to find fulfilment, has still to be confronted by an object. This, at first sight, would appear to be the world, which is swelled out with projections for that very purpose. Here we seek and find our difficulties, here we seek and find our enemy, here we seek and find what is dear and precious to us; and it is comforting to know that all evil and all good is to be found out there, in the visible object, where it can be conquered, punished, destroyed or enjoyed. But nature herself does not allow this paradisaical state of innocence to continue for ever. There are, and always have been, those who cannot help but see that the world and its experiences are in the nature of a symbol, and that it really reflects something that lies hidden in the subject himself, in his own transsubjective reality. It is from this profound intuition, according to lāmaist doctrine, that the Chönyid state derives its true meaning, which is why the Chönyid Bardo is entitled ‘The Bardo of the Experiencing of Reality’ \

The reality experienced in the Chönyid state is, as the last section of the corresponding Bardo teaches, the reality of thought. The ‘thought—forms’ appear as realities, fantasy takes on real form, and the terrifying dream evoked by karma and played out by the unconscious ‘dominants’ begins. The first to appear (if we read the text backwards) is the all—destroying God of Death, the epitome of all terrors; he is followed by the 28 ‘power—holding’ and sinister goddesses and the 58 ‘blood—drinking’ goddesses. In spite of their daemonic aspect, which appears as a confusing chaos of terrifying attributes and monstrosities, a certain order is already discernible. We find that there are companies of gods and goddesses who are arranged according to the four directions and are distinguished by typical mystic colours. It gradually becomes clearer that all these deities are organized into mandolas, or circles, containing a cross of the four colours. The colours are co—ordinated with the four aspects of wisdom:

- (1) White =the light—path of the mirror—like wisdom;
- (2) Yellow =the light—path of the wisdom of equality;
- (3) Red=the light—path of the discriminative wisdom;
- (4) Green =the light—path of the all—performing wisdom.

On a higher level of insight, the dead man knows that the real thought—forms all emanate from himself, and that the four light—paths of wisdom which appear before him are the radiations of his own psychic faculties. This takes us straight to the psychology of the lāmaistic mandala, which I have already discussed in the book I brought out with the late Richard Wilhelm, The Secret of the Golden Flower.

Continuing our ascent backwards through the region of the Chönyid Bardo, we come finally to the vision of the Four Great Ones: the green Amogha—Siddhi, the red Amitabha, the yellow Ratna—Sambhava, and the white Vajra—Sattva. The ascent ends with the effulgent blue light of the Dharma—Dhātu, the Buddha—body, which glows in the midst of the mandala from the heart of Vairochana.

With this final vision the karmic illusions cease; consciousness, weaned away from all form and from all attachment to objects, returns to the timeless, inchoate state of the Dharma—Kāya. Thus (reading backwards) the Chikhai state, which appeared at the moment of death, is reached.

I think these few hints will suffice to give the attentive reader some idea of the psychology of the Bardo ThödoL The book describes a way of initiation in reverse, which, unlike the eschato—logical expectations of Christianity, prepares the soul for a descent into physical being. The thoroughly intellectualistic and rationalistic worldly—mindedness of the European makes it advisable for us to reverse the sequence of the Bardo ThödoL and to regard it as an account of Eastern initiation experiences, though one is perfectly free, if one chooses, to substitute Christian symbols for the gods of the Chönyid Bardo. At any rate, the sequence of events as I have described it offers a close parallel to the phenomenology of the European unconscious when it is undergoing an 'initiation process' that is to say, when it is being analyzed. The transformation of the unconscious that occurs under analysis makes it the natural analogue of the religious initiation ceremonies, which do, however, differ in principle from the natural process in that they forestall the natural course of development and substitute for the spontaneous production of symbols a deliberately selected set of symbols prescribed by tradition. We can see this in the Exercitia of Ignatius Loyola, or in the yoga meditations of the Buddhists and Tantrists.

The reversal of the order of the chapters, which I have suggested here as an aid to understanding, in no way accords with the original intention of the Bardo Thödol. Nor is the psychological use we make of it anything but a secondary intention, though one that is possibly sanctioned by lāmaist custom. The real purpose of this singular book is the attempt, which must seem very strange to the educated European of the twentieth century, to enlighten the dead on their journey through the regions of the Bardo. The Catholic Church is the only place in the world of the white man where any provision is made for the souls of the departed. Inside the Protestant camp, with its world-affirming optimism, we only find a few mediumistic 'rescue circles' whose main concern is to make the dead aware of the fact that they are dead. But, generally speaking, we have nothing in the West that is in any way comparable to the Bardo Thödol, except for certain secret writings which are inaccessible to the wider public and to the ordinary scientist. According to tradition, the Bardo Thödol, too, seems to have been included among the 'hidden' books, as Dr. Evans—Wentz makes clear in his Introduction. As such, it forms a special chapter in the magical 'cure of the soul' which extends even beyond death. This cult of the dead is rationally based on the belief in the supra-temporality of the soul, but its irrational basis is to be found in the psychological need of the living to do something for the departed. This is an elementary need which forces itself upon even the most 'enlightened' individuals when faced by the death of relatives and friends. That is why, enlightenment or no enlightenment, we still have all manner of ceremonies for the dead. If Lenin had to submit to being embalmed and put on show in a sumptuous mausoleum like an Egyptian pharaoh, we may be quite sure it was not because his followers believed in the resurrection of the body. Apart, however, from the Masses said for the soul in the Catholic Church, the provisions we make for the dead are rudimentary and on the lowest level, not because we cannot convince ourselves of the soul's immortality, but because we have rationalized the above—mentioned psychological need out of existence. We behave as if we did not have this need, and because we cannot believe in a life after death we prefer to do nothing about it. Simpler—minded people follow their own feelings, and, as in Italy, build themselves funeral monuments of gruesome beauty. The Catholic Masses for the soul are on a level considerably above this, because they are expressly intended for the psychic welfare of the deceased and are not a mere gratification of lachrymose sentiments. But the highest application of spiritual effort on behalf of the departed is surely to be found in the instructions of the Bardo Thödol. They are so detailed and thoroughly adapted to the apparent changes in the dead man's condition that every serious—minded reader must ask himself whether these wise old lāmas might not, after all, have caught a glimpse of the fourth dimension and twitched the veil from, the greatest of life's secrets.

If the truth is always doomed to be a disappointment, one almost feels tempted to concede at least that much reality to the vision of life in the Bardo. At any rate, it is unexpectedly original, if nothing else, to find the after—death state, of which our religious imagination has formed the most grandiose conceptions, painted in lurid colours as a terrifying dream—state of a progressively degenerative character. The supreme vision comes not at the end of the Bardo, but right at the beginning, in the moment of death; what happens afterward is an ever—deepening descent into illusion and obscurity, down to the ultimate degradation of new physical birth. The spiritual climax is reached at the moment when life ends. Human life, therefore, is the vehicle of the highest perfection it is possible to attain; it alone generates the karma that makes it possible for the dead man to abide in the perpetual light of the Voidness without clinging to any object, and thus to rest on the hub of the wheel of rebirth, freed from all illusion of genesis and decay. Life in the Bardo brings no eternal rewards or punishments, but merely a descent into a new life which shall bear the individual nearer to his final goal. But this eschatological goal is what he himself brings to birth as the last and highest fruit of the labours and aspirations of earthly existence. This view is not only lofty, it is manly and heroic.

The degenerative character of Bardo life is corroborated by the spiritualistic literature of the West, which again and again gives one a sickening impression of the utter inanity and banality of communications from the 'spirit world'. The scientific mind does not hesitate to explain these reports as emanations from the unconscious of the 'mediums' and of those taking part in the seance, and even to extend this explanation to the description of the Hereafter given in The Tibetan Book of the Dead. And it is an undeniable fact that the whole book is created out of the archetypal contents of the unconscious. Behind these there lie—and in this our Western reason is quite right—no physical or metaphysical realities, but 'merely' the reality of psychic facts, the data of psychic experience. Now whether a thing is 'given' subjectively or objectively, the fact remains that it is. The Bardo Thödol says no more than this, for its five Dhyāni Buddhas are themselves no more than psychic data. That is just what the dead man has to recognize, if it has not already become clear to him during life that his own psychic self and the giver of all data are one and the same. The world of gods and spirits is truly 'nothing but' the collective unconscious inside me. To turn this sentence round so that it reads: The collective unconscious is the world of gods and spirits outside me, no intellectual acrobatics are needed, but a whole human lifetime, perhaps even many lifetimes of increasing completeness. Notice that I do not say 'of increasing perfection', because those who are 'perfect' make another kind of discovery altogether.

* * *

The Bardo Thödol began by being a 'closed' book, and so it has remained, no matter what kind of commentaries may be written upon it. For it is a book that will only open itself to spiritual understanding, and this is a capacity which no man is born with, but which he can only acquire through special training and special experience. It is good that such to all intents and purposes ‘useless’ books exist. They are meant for those ‘queer folk’ who no longer set much store by the uses, aims, and meaning of present—day ‘civilisation’.

INTRODUCTORY FOREWORD

By LāMa Anagarika Govinda

It may be argued that nobody can talk about death with authority who has not died; and since nobody, apparently, has ever returned from death, how can anybody know what death is, or what happens after it?

The Tibetan will answer: ‘There is not one person, indeed, not one living being, that has not returned from death. In fact, we all have died many deaths, before we came into this incarnation. And what we call birth is merely the reverse side of death, like one of the two sides of a coin, or like a door which we call “entrance” from outside and “exit” from inside a room.’

It is much more astonishing that not everybody remembers his or her previous death; and, because of this lack of remembering, most persons do not believe there was a previous death. But, likewise, they do not remember their recent birth—and yet they do not doubt that they were recently born. They forget that active memory is only a small part of our normal consciousness, and that our subconscious memory registers and preserves every past impression and experience which our waking mind fails to recall.

There are those who, in virtue of concentration and other yogic practices, are able to bring the subconscious into the realm of discriminative consciousness and, thereby, to draw upon the unrestricted treasury of subconscious memory, wherein are stored the records not only of our past lives but the records of the past of our race, the past of humanity, and of all pre—human forms of life, if not of the very consciousness that makes life possible in this universe.

If, through some trick of nature, the gates of an individual's subconsciousness were suddenly to spring open, the unprepared mind would be overwhelmed and crushed. Therefore, the gates of the subconscious are guarded, by all initiates, and hidden behind the veil of mysteries and symbols.

For this reason, the Bardo Thödol, the Tibetan book vouch—safing liberation from the intermediate state between life and re—birth,—which state men call death,—has been couched in symbolical language. It is a book which is sealed with the seven seals of silence,—not because its knowledge should be withheld from the uninitiated, but because its knowledge would be misunderstood, and, therefore, would tend to mislead and harm those who are unfitted to receive it. But the time has come to break the seals of silence; for the human race has come to the juncture where it must decide whether to be content with the subjugation of the material world, or to strive after the conquest of the spiritual world, by subjugating selfish desires and transcending self—imposed limitations.

According to Tibetan tradition, the Bardo Thödol is one of those works of Padma—Sambhava which were secretly hidden in order to preserve them for later generations, and which were to be revealed to the world when the time was ripe. However this may be, it is a fact that during the persecution of Buddhism by Langdarma, at the beginning of the ninth century, A.D., innumerable books of the earliest period of Tibetan Buddhism were concealed under rocks, in caves, and other places, to prevent their destruction. Since all members of the Buddhist Order and their supporters were either killed or driven out of Tibet, most of these buried scriptures remained where they had been hidden. Many of them were recovered during the succeeding centuries and designated Termas, a term derived from the Tibetan word Gter, pronounced Ter, meaning 'Treasure'. Those who discovered these spiritual treasures and propagated their teachings were called Tertöns, from Tibetan Gter—bston, pronounced Tertön, meaning 'Revealer of Treasure'.

This seems to me a far more reasonable explanation for the tradition of the Tertöns, which, significantly, is held in the oldest Schools of Tibetan Buddhism, like the Nyingmapa and Kargyütpa, than the theory advanced by certain Western critics, that these scriptures had been ‘faked’ by people who wanted to pass off their own ideas under the guise of ancient revelations. Such critics underestimate the religious sincerity and the deep respect for the sanctity of spiritual tradition which is engrained in every Tibetan, layman and lāma alike. To add to or omit from the Sacred Scriptures a single word or letter has ever been looked upon by Tibetans as a heinous sin, which even the most impious would fear to commit.

Furthermore, these same critics underestimate the difficulties of forging and issuing such scriptures, for the forging would require a technical and critical knowledge of history and linguistics such as was not only unknown in Tibet, but such as would have required a master—mind for its execution. Had a genius of that sort existed in Tibet, he would have had no need to resort to the subterfuge of forgery, for he could have stood on his own feet, as did many scholarly geniuses who wrote and taught in their own name. Nor is it likely that men who could create and propagate such profound thoughts and lofty ideals as the Termas contain would stoop so low as to deceive their fellow—men. And when we consider that the literature in question is not a matter of a few isolated treatises but of about a hundred big volumes (according to tradition 108 volumes), running into tens of thousands of folios, then the theory of wilful deception becomes not only improbable, but absurd.

In considering the influences on the Bardo Thödol of the pre—Buddhistic religion of Tibet, namely that of the Bön—pos, there must be taken into account the fact that all of those Termas attributed to Padma—Sambhava declare, in no uncertain terms, their adherence to him, the very personage who opposed and defeated the Bön—pos. These recovered scriptures cannot, therefore, be regarded as propagating Bön ideas.

Even though Padma—Sambhava did adopt into the Buddhist system some of the local Tibetan deities, to serve as guardians of the Faith, in doing so he did not give up one inch of Buddhist ground to the Bön—pos, but acted in perfect conformity with the principles of orthodox Buddhism, wherein, in all Buddhist countries, the deities of the Earth and of space have always been honoured and propitiated, as being protectors of the Dharma. Thus, the following Pali verses are still recited, in the course of the regular pujā (or ceremony of worship), by the followers of Theravāda Buddhism, in Ceylon, Burma, Siam, Cambodia, and elsewhere:—

‘Akāsatthā ca bhummatthā, devā nāgā mahiddhikā, Puññantam anutnoditvā, dram rakkhantu sāsanaṃ.’

These verses may be rendered into English as follows:—

‘May the beings of the sky [or of space] and of the Earth, Devas and Nāgas [i.e., gods and serpent—spirits] of great power,
After having shared in the merit [of this puja],
Long protect the Sacred Doctrine.’

Any cultural influence, as between Buddhism and Bönism, was more in the nature of a one—way traffic than a mutual exchange of ideas; for the Bön—pos, who had no literature of their own, took over Buddhist concepts and symbols on a vast scale, and thereby created a literature and an iconography which so greatly resemble those of the Buddhists as to be almost indistinguishable to the casual observer.

There is also current the wholly arbitrary assertion that it was the Bön influence which encouraged laxity in the observance of Buddhist monastic rules in Tibet and led to a general decline in the standard of Tibetan learning and morality. Whoever has had the opportunity to stay for even a short time in one of the still existing Bön monasteries of Tibet, will have noticed, with surprise, that the rules of celibacy and monastic discipline are stricter there than in most Buddhist monasteries, and that for many of the major scriptures of the Tibetan Buddhist Canon a parallel can be found in the scriptures of the Bön—pos. They have their * Prajñāpāramitā Sūtras, ‘ their ‘Pratīyasamutpāda * (represented in a Wheel of Life of thirteen divisions), their Tāntras and Mantras; and their deities more or less correspond to the various Buddhas, Bodhisattvas, Devatas, and Dharmapalas of Buddhism.

It may seem paradoxical, but it is a fact, that whereas the older Schools of Tibetan Buddhism, despite their tolerance of local deities, succeeded in breaking the power of Bönism, it was the Gelugpas, the youngest and most vigorously reformed School, which re—introduced one of the most influential institutions of the Bön—pos, namely, State Oracles in Oracle—Temples, in all important monasteries of the Yellow Sect. The deities who are invoked in these Oracle—Temples are exclusively of Bön origin. Among the older Buddhist sects, and especially among the Kargyütpas, no such Oracle—Temples exist. This shows that the Old Schools, contrary to common belief, are less under the influence of Bönism than the Gelugpas, in spite of the Gelugpas' reforms and stricter monastic discipline. This stricter monastic discipline of the Gelugpas really brings them nearer to the above—mentioned puritanism of the Bön—pos.

We must, therefore, beware of sweeping statements, as to what can be attributed to the influence of Bönism and what not. Especially is this so because we do not know of what the teachings of Bön consisted before the advent of Buddhism, although we can safely assume that they were animistic, the spiritualised forces of man and nature being worshipped, chiefly in their awe—inspiring and terrifying aspects; and certain rituals were performed for the benefit and the guidance of the dead. Such religious practices as these are commonly found in almost all early civilizations; and they prevailed in India as much as they did in Tibet. This 'animism' permeates all Buddhistic texts, wherein every tree and grove, and every locality, is held to have its own peculiar deities; and the Buddha is represented as discoursing with gods and other spiritual beings, inhabiting the Earth and the realms beyond, as if that were a most natural procedure. Only a completely intellectualized and Westernized Buddhism, which attempts to separate the rational thought—content of Buddhism from its equally profound mythological elements, can deny this animistic background and with it the metaphysical foundations of Buddhism.

The Buddhist universe is alive through and through; it has no room for inert matter and mere mechanism. And what is more, the Buddhist is alert to all possibilities of existence and to all aspects of reality. If we have read of the fearful apparitions which surrounded the Buddha during the night preceding His Enlightenment, we need not search for Bön influences in relation to the animal-headed monsters that appear from the abyss of the subconscious mind in the hour of death, or in the visions of meditation. Wrathful deities, demons in animal form, and gods in demonical guise are as much at home in Indian as in Tibetan tradition. Despite the popular usages to which the Bardo Thödol has been put in connection with the death rituals—and herein, probably, is discernible the only trace of Bön influence worth considering—the central idea and the profound symbolism of the Bardo Thödol are genuinely Buddhistic.

The Tibetans themselves have put forth considerable effort to free their Scriptures from errors and non-Buddhistic accretions, and to ensure the correctness and reliability of their traditions. After the rules for the translation of Sanskrit texts and the necessary corresponding Tibetan terminology had been established by the early Tibetan translators and pioneers of the Dharma, 'translators were explicitly forbidden to coin new terms. When this was unavoidable, they were directed to report the matter to a special Tribunal, called "the Tribunal of the Doctrine of the Blessed One/' attached to the royal palace. The translation of Tantric works could be undertaken with the king's permission only. These rules were promulgated by King Ti—de Song—tsen (Ral—pa—can, 817—36 A.D.) and have been followed by all Tibetan translators ever since.'¹

With the advent of wooden block—prints, similar precautions were taken, not only with regard to translations, but with regard to all religious literature. Thus it became a rule that no religious book could be published without the sanction of the highest spiritual authorities, who appointed qualified proof—readers and scholars to prevent faulty renderings or unwarranted interpolations. This, however, did not interfere with the diversity of interpretations by the various acknowledged Schools and their Teachers. The chief purpose was to prevent the degeneration of established traditions either through carelessness or ignorance of unqualified copyists and interpreters.

It is for this reason that the authorized block—prints contain the most reliable versions of the generally accepted traditional sacred texts. But hand—written books, although sometimes suffering from mistakes in spelling and from other errors of the copyist, who often shows lack of understanding of the archaic or classical language of the text, are, nevertheless, valuable, especially if they go back to originals of greater antiquity than those of the current block—prints, or if they represent some lesser known tradition handed down from guru to chela through many generations.

If, therefore, I direct the reader's attention to certain differences between the officially accepted version of the block—print and that of the manuscript, which formed the basis of LāMa Kazi Dawa Samdup's translation, I do not wish to question the value of the manuscript, but merely to throw light upon some important points of Buddhist tradition, which may lead to a deeper understanding, not only from the historical, but, likewise, from a spiritual point of view.

Indeed, it is the spiritual point of view that makes this book so important for the majority of its readers. If the Bardo Thödol were to be regarded as being based merely upon folklore, or as consisting of religious speculation about death and a hypothetical after—death state, it would be of interest only to anthropologists and students of religion. But the Bardo Thödol is far more. It is a key to the innermost recesses of the human mind, and a guide for initiates, and for those who are seeking the spiritual path of liberation.

Although the Bardo Thödol is at the present time widely used in Tibet as a breviary, and read or recited on the occasion of death, —for which reason it has been aptly called 'The Tibetan Book of the Dead'—one should not forget that it was originally conceived to serve as a guide not only for the dying and the dead, but for the living as well. And herein lies the justification for having made The Tibetan Book of the Dead accessible to a wider public.

Notwithstanding the popular customs and beliefs which, under the influence of age—old traditions of pre—Buddhist origin, have grown around the profound revelations of the Bardo Thödol, it has value only for those who practise and realize its teaching during their life—time.

There are two things which have caused misunderstanding. One is that the teachings seem to be addressed to the dead or the dying; the other, that the title contains the expression "Liberation through Hearing" (in Tibetan, Thos—grol). As a result, there has arisen the belief that it is sufficient to read or to recite the Bardo Thödol in the presence of a dying person, or even of a person who has just died, in order to effect his or her liberation.

Such misunderstanding could only have arisen among those who do not know that it is one of the oldest and most universal practices for the initiate to go through the experience of death before he can be spiritually reborn. Symbolically he must die to his past, and to his old ego, before he can take his place in the new spiritual life into which he has been initiated. The dead or the dying person is addressed in the Bardo Thödol mainly for three reasons: (1) the earnest practitioner of these teachings should regard every moment of his or her life as if it were the last; (2) when a follower of these teachings is actually dying, he or she should be reminded of the experiences at the time of initiation, or of the words (or mantra) of the guru, especially if the dying one's mind lacks alertness during the critical moments; and (3) one who is still incarnate should try to surround the person dying, or just dead, with loving and helpful thoughts during the first stages of the new, or after—death, state of existence, without allowing emotional attachment to interfere or to give rise to a state of morbid mental depression. Accordingly, one function of the Bardo Thödol appears to be more to help those who have been left behind to adopt the right attitude towards the dead and towards the fact of death than to assist the dead, who, according to Buddhist belief, will not deviate from their own karmic path.

In applying the Bardo Thödol teachings, it is ever a matter of remembering the right thing at the right moment. But in order so to remember, one must prepare oneself mentally during one's life—time; one must create, build up, and cultivate those faculties which one desires to be of deciding influence at death and in the after—death state,—in order never to be taken unawares, and to be able to react, spontaneously, in the right way, when the critical moment of death has come.

This is clearly expressed in the Root Verses of the Bardo Thödol as rendered in The Tibetan Book of the Dead: —

['O] procrastinating one, who thinketh not of the coming of death,

Devoting thyself to the useless doings of this life,
Improvident art thou in dissipating thy great opportunity;
Mistaken, indeed, will thy purpose be now if thou returnest empty —handed [from this life].

Since the Holy Dharma is known to be thy true need, Wilt thou not devote [thyself] to the Holy Dharma even now?’

It is recognized by all who are acquainted with Buddhist philosophy that birth and death are not phenomena which happen only once in any given human life; they occur uninterruptedly. At every moment something within us dies and something is reborn. The different bardos, therefore, represent different states of consciousness of our life: the state of waking consciousness, the normal consciousness of a being born into our human world, known in Tibetan as the skyes—nas bardo; the state of dream—consciousness (rmi—lam bar—do) ; the state of dhyāna, or trance—consciousness, in profound meditation (bsam—gtan bar—do) the state of the experiencing of death (hchhi—kha bar—do) ; the state of experiencing of Reality (chhos—nyid bar—do) ; the state of rebirth—consciousness (srid—pa bar—do).

All this is clearly described in The Root—Verses of the Six Bardos, which, together with The Paths of Good Wishes, form the authentic and original nucleus of the Bardo Thodol, around which the prose parts crystallized as commentaries. This proves that we have to do here with life itself and not merely with a mass for the dead, to which the Bardo Thodol was reduced in later times.

The Bardo Thodol is addressed not only to those who see the end of their life approaching, or who are very near death, but to those who still have years of incarnate life before them, and who, for the first time, realize the full meaning of their existence as human beings. To be born as a human being is a privilege, according to the Buddha’s teaching, because it offers the rare opportunity of liberation through one’s own decisive effort, through a ‘turning—about in the deepest seat of consciousness,’ as the Lankāvatāra Sūtra puts it.

Accordingly, The Root Verses of the Six Bardos open with the words:

’ O that now, when the *Bardo of Life*¹ is dawning upon me,
—After having given up indolence, since there is no time to waste in life—

May I undistractedly enter the path of listening, reflecting, and meditating,

So that, . . . once having attained human embodiment,
No time may be squandered through useless distractions.’

Listening, reflecting, and meditating are the three stages of discipleship. The Tibetan word for ‘listening’, or ‘hearing’ \ thos in this connection, as well as in the expression ‘Thödol * (thos—grol), cannot be confused with the mere physical sense—awareness of hearing, as may be seen from the Tibetan term ‘nyan—thos, ‘ the equivalent of the Sanskrit word ‘śravaka, ‘ referring to a ‘disciple/ and, more particularly, to a personal disciple of the Buddha, and not merely to one who by chance happened to hear the Buddha’s teaching. It refers to one who has accepted this teaching in his heart and has made it his own. Thus the word ‘listening/ in this connection, implies ‘hearing with one’s heart/ that is, with sincere faith (śraddha). This represents the first stage of discipleship. In the second stage, this intuitive attitude is transformed into understanding through reason; while, in the third stage, the disciple’s intuitive feeling, as well as intellectual understanding, are transformed into living reality through direct experience. Thus intellectual conviction grows into spiritual certainty, into a knowing in which the knower is one with the known.

This is the high spiritual state vouchsafed by the teachings set forth in the Bardo Thödol. Thereby the initiated disciple attains dominion over the realm of death, and, being able to perceive death’s illusory nature, is freed from fear. This illusoriness of death comes from the identification of the individual with his temporal, transitory form, whether physical, emotional, or mental, whence arise the mistaken notion that there exists a personal, separate egohood of one’s own, and the fear of losing it. If, however, the disciple has learned, as the Bardo Thödol directs, to identify himself with the Eternal, the Dharma, the Imperishable Light of Buddhahood within, then the fears of death are dissipated like a cloud before the rising sun. Then he knows that whatever he may see, hear, or feel, in the hour of his departure from this life, is but a reflection of his own conscious and subconscious mental content; and no mind—created illusion can then have power over him if he knows its origin and is able to recognize it. The illusory Bardo visions vary, in keeping with the religious or cultural tradition in which the percipient has grown up, but their underlying motive—power is the same in all human beings. Thus it is that the profound psychology set forth by the Bardo Thödol constitutes an important contribution to our knowledge of the human mind and of the path that leads beyond it. Under the guise of a science of death the Bardo Thödol reveals the secret of life; and therein lies its spiritual value and its universal appeal.

The Bardo Thödol is a treatise which needs more than philological knowledge for its translation and interpretation, namely, a thorough knowledge of its traditional background and of the religious experience of one who either has grown up in the tradition or who has imbibed its tradition from a competent living guru. In times of old ‘it was not considered that the mere knowledge of language sufficed to make a man a “translator” in any serious sense of the word; no one would have undertaken to translate a text who had not studied it for long years at the feet of a traditional and authoritative exponent of its teaching, and much less would anyone have thought himself qualified to translate a book in the teachings of which he did not believe.’¹

Our modern attitude, unfortunately, is a complete reversal of this; a scholar is regarded as being all the more competent (‘scholarly’) the less he believes in the teachings which he has undertaken to interpret. The sorry results are only too apparent, especially in the realm of Tibetology, which such scholars have approached with an air of their own superiority, thus defeating the very purpose of their endeavours.

LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup and Dr. Evans—Wentz were the first to re—establish the ancient method of Lotsavas (as the translators of sacred texts are called in Tibet). They approached their work in the spirit of true devotion and humility, as a sacred trust that had come into their hands through generations of initiates, a trust which had to be handled with the utmost respect for even the smallest detail. At the same time, they did not regard their translation as final, or infallible, but rather like the pioneer translations of the Bible, that is, as being a starting—point for ever deeper and more perfect renderings in accordance with our growing acquaintance with the sources of Tibetan tradition.

Such an attitude is not only the hall—mark of spiritual understanding and true scholarship, but it makes even the reader feel that he is treading on sacred ground. This explains the deep impression which The Tibetan Book of the Dead, as well as the other complementary volumes of the Oxford Tibetan Series, have made upon thoughtful readers all over the world. The outstanding success of these works was due to their convincing sincerity and seriousness of purpose. Indeed, the world owes a great debt of gratitude to these two devoted scholars. * Sabbadānam dhatmadānam jināti ‘ : ‘The best of all gifts is the gift of Truth/ 1

THE BUDDHA’S REMEMBERING

’ In recollection all former births passed before His eyes. Born in such a place, of such a name, and downwards to His present birth, so through hundreds, thousands, myriads, all His births and deaths He knew.’

Ashvaghosha’s Life of the Buddha
(Samuel Beal’s Translation).

FOREWORD

BY SIR JOHN WOODROFFE

THE SCIENCE OF DEATH¹

'Strive after the Good before thou art in danger, before pain masters thee and thy mind loses its keenness.' —Kulārṇava Tantra, I. 97.

THE thought of death suggests two questions. The first is: 'How may one avoid death, except when death is desired as in "death—at-will" (Ichchhāmṛitya)?' The avoidance of death is the aim when Hathayoga is used to prolong present life in the flesh. This is not, in the Western sense, a 'yea—saying' to 'life' but, for the time being, to a particular form of life. Dr. Evans—Wentz tells us that according to popular Tibetan belief no death is natural. This is the notion of most, if not of all, primitive peoples. Moreover, physiology also questions whether there is any 'natural death', in the sense of death through mere age without lesion or malady. This Text, however, in the language of the renouncer of fleshly life the world over, tells the nobly—born that Death comes to all, that human kind are not to cling to life on earth with its ceaseless wandering in the Worlds of birth and death (Sangsāra). Rather should they implore the aid of the Divine Mother for a safe passing through the fearful state following the body's dissolution, and that they may at length attain all—perfect Buddhahood.

The second question then is: 'How to accept Death and die?' It is with this that we are now concerned. Here the technique of dying makes Death the entrance to good future lives, at first out of, and then again in, the flesh, unless and until liberation (Nirvana) from the wandering (Sangsāra) is attained.

This Book, which is of extraordinary interest, both as regards Text and Introduction, deals with the period (longer or shorter according to the circumstances) which, commencing immediately after death, ends with 'rebirth'¹. In the Buddhists' view, Life consists of a series of successive states of consciousness. The first state is the Birth—Consciousness; the last is the consciousness existing at the moment of death, or the Death—Consciousness. The interval between the two states of Consciousness, during which the transformation from the 'old' to a * new * being is effected, is called the Bardo or intermediate state (Antar ābhāva), divided into three stages, called the Chikhai Chönyid) and Sidpa Bardo respectively.

This Manual, common in various versions throughout Tibet, is one of a class amongst which Dr. Evans—Wentz includes the Egyptian Book of the Dead, a guide for the use of the Ka or so—called 'Double \ the De Arte Moriendi and other similar medieval treatises on the craft of dying, to which may be added the Orphic Manual called The Descent into Hades (cf. 'He descended into Hell') and other like guide—books for the use of the dead, the Pretakhanda of the Hindu Gartida Purana, Swedenborg's De Coelo et de Infer HO% Rusca's De Inferno i and several other eschatological works both ancient and modern. Thus, the Gañida Purāna deals with the rites used over the dying, the death—moment, the funeral ceremonies, the building up, by means of the Pretashrāddha rite, of a new body for the Prcta or deceased in lieu of that destroyed by fire, the Judgement, and thereafter (ch. V) the various states through which the deceased passes until he is reborn again on earth.

Both the original text and Dr. Evans—Wentz's Introduction form a very valuable contribution to the Science of Death from the standpoint of the Tibetan Mahāyāna Buddhism of the so—called 'Tantrik' type. The book is welcome not merely in virtue of its particular subject—matter, but because the ritual works of any religion enable us more fully to comprehend the philosophy and psychology of the system to which they belong.

The Text has three characteristics. It is, firstly, a work on the Art of Dying ; for Death, as well as Life, is an Art, though both are often enough muddled through. There is a Bengali saying, * Of what use are Japa and Tapas (two forms of devotion) if one knoweth not how to die ?' Secondly, it is a manual of religious therapeutic for the last moments, and a psychurgy exorcising, instructing, consoling, and fortifying by the rites of the dying, him who is about to pass on to another life. Thirdly, it describes the experiences of the deceased during the intermediate period, and instructs him in regard thereto. It is thus also a Traveller's Guide to Other Worlds.

The doctrine of 'Reincarnation' on the one hand and of 'Resurrection' on the other is the chief difference between the four leading Religions—Brahmanism, Buddhism, Christianity, and Islam. Christianity, in its orthodox form, rejects the most ancient and widespread belief of the Kúklos geneseön, or Sangsāra, or 'Reincarnation', and admits one universe only—this, the first and last—and two lives, one here in the natural body and one hereafter in the body of Resurrection.

It has been succinctly said that as Metempsychosis makes the same soul, so Resurrection makes the same body serve for more than one Life. But the latter doctrine limits man's lives to two in number, of which the first or present determines for ever the character of the second or future.

Brahmanism and Buddhism would accept the doctrine that as a tree falls so shall it lie', but they deny that it so lies for ever. To the adherents of these two kindred beliefs this present universe is not the first and last. It is but one of an infinite series, without absolute beginning or end, though each universe of the series appears and disappears. They also teach a series of successive existences therein until morality, devotion, and knowledge produce that high form of detachment which is the cause of Liberation from the cycle of birth and death called 'The Wanderingf (or Sangsāra). Freedom is the attainment of the Supreme State called the Void, Nirvana, and by other names. They deny that there is only one universe, with one life for each of its human units, and then a. division of men for all eternity into those who are saved in Heaven or are in Limbo and those who are lost in Hell. Whilst they agree in holding that there is a suitable body for enjoyment or suffering in Heaven and Hell, it is not a resurrected body, for the fleshly body on death is dissolved for ever.

The need of some body always exists, except for the non—dualist who believes in a bodiless (Videha) Liberation {Mukti} \ and each of the four religions affirms that there is a subtle and death—surviving element—vital and psychical—in the physical body of flesh and blood, whether it be a permanent entity or Self, such as the Brahmanic Atona, the Moslem Ruh, and the Christian' Soul', or whether it be only a complex of activities (or Skandha), psychical and physical, with life as their function—a complex in continual change, and, therefore, a series of physical and psychical momentary states, successively generated the one from the other, a continuous transformation, as the Buddhists are said to hold. Thus to none of these Faiths is death an absolute ending, but to all it is only the separation of the Psyche from the gross body. The former then enters on a new life, whilst the latter, having lost its principle of animation, decays. As Dr. Evans—Wentz so concisely says, Death disincarnates the * soul—complex \ as Birth incarnates it In other words, Death is itself only an initiation into another form of life than that of which it is the ending.

On the subject of the physical aspect of Death, the attention of the reader is drawn to the remarkable analysis here given of symptoms which precede it. These are stated because it is necessary for the dying man and his helpers to be prepared for the final and decisive moment when it comes.¹ Noteworthy, too, is the description of sounds heard as (to use Dr. Evans—Wentz's language) 'the psychic resultants of the disintegrating process called death \ They call to mind the humming, rolling, and crackling noises heard before and up to fifteen hours after death, which, recognized by Greunwaldi in 1618 and referred to by later writers, were in 1862 made the subject of special study by Dr. Collingues.

But it is said that the chain of conscious states is not always broken by death, since there is Phozva, or power to project consciousness and enter the body of another.¹ Indian occultism speaks of the same power of leaving one's body (Svech—chhotkrānti), which, according to the TantraRāja (ch. XXVII, vv. 45—7, 72—80), is accomplished through the operation (Vāyudhārand) of the vital activity (or Vāyu) in thirty—eight points, or junctions (Alarma), of the body. How, it may be asked, does this practice work in with the general doctrine or ‘reincarnation’? We should have been glad if Dr. Evans—Wentz had elucidated this point. On principle, it would seem that in the case of entry into an unborn body such entry may be made into the Matrix in the same way as if it had occurred after a break of consciousness in death. But in the case of entry into beings already born the operation of the power or Siddhi would appear to be by the way of possession (āveshd) by one consciousness of the consciousness and body of another, differing from the more ordinary case by the fact that the possessing consciousness does not return to its body, which ex hypothesi is about to die when the consciousness leaves it.

If transference of consciousness is effected, there is, of course, no Bardo, which involves the break of consciousness by death. Otherwise, the Text is read.

Then, as the breathing is about to cease, instruction is given and the arteries are pressed. This is done to keep the dying person conscious with a consciousness rightly directed. For the nature of the Death—consciousness determines the future state of the ‘soul—complex’, existence being the continuous transformation of one conscious state into another. Both in Catholic and Hindu ritual for the dying there is constant prayer and repetition of the sacred names.

The pressing of the arteries regulates the path to be taken by the outgoing vital current (Frāna). The proper path is that which passes through the Brāhmarandhra or Foramen of Monro. This notion appears to have been widely held (to quote an instance) even in so remote and primitive a spot as San Cristoval in the Solomon Islands (see Threshold of the Pacific by C. E. Fox). The function of a holed—stone in a Dolmen found there (reminiscent of the Dolmen à dalleprcée common in the Marne district of Western Europe, in South Russia, and in Southern India) is ‘to allow the free passage to its natural seat, the head, of the dead man’s adaro, or ¹¹ double “\

According to Hindu belief (see Pretakhanda of Garuda Purāna) there are nine apertures of the body which are the means of experience, and which, in the divine aspect, are the Lords (Nātha) or Gurus.¹ A good exit is one which is above the navel. Of such exits the best is through the fissure on the top of the cranium called Brāhmarandhra. This is above the physical cerebrum and the Yoga centre called ‘Lotus of the Thousand Petals’ (Sahasrāra Padma), wherein Spirit is most manifest, since it is the seat of Consciousness. Because of this, the orthodox Hindu wears a crest—lock (S/iikha) at this spot; not, as some have absurdly supposed, so that he may thereby be gripped and taken to Heaven or Hell, but because the Shikkā is, as it were, a flag and its staff, raised before and in honour of the abode of the Supreme Lord, Who is Pure Consciousness itself. (The fancy—picture in a recent work by C. Lancelin, La Vic posthume p. 96, does not show the aperture of exit, which is given in Plate 8 of the second edition of Arthur Avalon's Serpent Power p. 93.)

Whatever be the ground for the belief and practice of primitive peoples, according to Yoga doctrine, the head is the chief centre of consciousness, regulating other subordinate centres in the spinal column. By withdrawal of the vital current through the central or Sushumnā * nerve' (nadi) the lower parts of the body are devitalized, and there is vivid concentrated functioning at the cerebral centre.

Exotericism speaks of the * Book of Judgement*. This is an objective symbol of the 'Book of Memory. The 'reading' of that Book' is the recalling to mind by the dying man of the whole of his past life on earth before he passes from it.²

The vital current at length escapes from the place where it last functioned. In Yoga, thought and breathing being interdependent, exit through the Brāhmarandhra connotes previous activity at the highest centre. Before such exit, and whilst self—consciousness lasts, the mental contents are supplied by the ritual, which is so designed as to secure a good death, and, therefore (later on), birth—consciousness.

At the moment of death the empiric consciousness, or consciousness of objects, is lost. There is what is popularly called a 'swoon', which is, however, the corollary of super—consciousness itself, or the Clear Light of the Void; for the swoon is in, and of, the Consciousness as knower of objects (Vijnāna Skandha). This empiric consciousness disappears, unveiling Pure Consciousness, which is ever ready to be 'discovered' by those who have the will to seek and the power to find It.

That clear, colourless Light is a sense—symbol of the formless Void, 'beyond the Light of Sun, Moon, and Fire', to use the words of the Indian Gītā. It is clear and colourless, but māyik (or 'form') bodies are coloured in various ways. For colour implies and denotes form. The Formless is colourless. The use of psycho—physical chromatism is common to the Hindu and Buddhist Tantras, and may be found in some Islamic mystical systems also.

What then is this Void ? It is not absolutely * nothingness*. It is the A logical, to which no categories drawn from the world of name and form apply. But whatever may have been held by the Mādhyamika Buddha, a Vedantist would say that * Being¹, or 'Is—ness', is applicable even in the case of the Void, which is experienced as 'is1 (asti). The Void is thus, in this view, the negation of all determinations, but not of 'Is—ness' as such, as has been supposed in accounts given of Buddhist 'Nihilism'; but it is nothing known to finite experience in form, and, therefore, for those who have had no other experience, it is no—thing.

A description of Buddhist Mahāyāna teaching which is at once more succinct and clear than, to my knowledge, any other, is given in the Tibetan work, The Path of Good Wishes of Samanta Bhadra, which I have published in the seventh volume of Tantrik Texts (p. xxi et seq.) and here summarize and explain.

All is either Sangṣāra or Nirvana. The first is finite experience in the 'Six Worlds' or Loka—a. word which means 'that which is experienced* (Lokyante). The second, or Nirvana, is, negatively speaking, release from such experience, that is from the worlds of Birth and Death and their pains. The Void cannot even be strictly called Nirvana, for this is a term relative to the world, and the Void is beyond all relations. Positively, and concomitantly with such release, it is the Perfect Experience which is Buddhahood, which, again, from the cognitive aspect, is Consciousness unobscured by the darkness of Unconsciousness, that is to say, Consciousness freed of all limitation. From the emotional aspect, it is pure Bliss unaffected by sorrow; and from the volitional aspect, it is freedom of action and almighty power (Amogha—Siddhi). Perfect Experience is an eternal or, more strictly speaking, a timeless state. Imperfect Experience is also eternal in the sense that the series of universes in which it is undergone is infinite. The religious, that is practical, problem is then how from the lesser experience to pass into that which is complete, called by the Upanishads 'the Whole' or Puma. This is done by the removal of obscuration. At base, the two are one—the Void, uncreated, independent, uncompounded, and beyond mind and speech. If this were not so, Liberation would not be possible. Man is in fact liberated, but does not know it. When he realizes it, he is freed. The great saying of the Buddhist work the Prajnā—Pāramitā runs thus : ‘Form (Rūpa) is the Void and the Void is Form.’ Realization of the Void is to be a Buddha, or ‘Knower’, and not to realize it is to be an ‘ignorant being’ in the Sangsāra. The two paths, then, are Knowledge and Ignorance. The first path leads to—and, as actual realization, is—Nirvana. The second means continuance of fleshly life as man or brute, or as a denizen of the other four Lok as. Ignorance in the individual is in its cosmic aspect Māyā, which in Tibetan (sGyutna) means a magical show. In its most generic form, the former is that which produces the pragmatic, but, in a transcendental sense, the * unreal’ notion of self and otherness. This is the root cause of error (whether in knowing, feeling, or action) which becomes manifest as the ‘Six Poisons’ (which Hindus call the ‘Six Enemies’) of the Six Lokas of Sangsāra (of which the Text gives five only)—pride, jealousy, sloth (or ignorance), anger, greed, and lust. The Text constantly urges upon the dying or ‘dead’ man to recognize in the apparitions, which he is about to see or sees, the creatures of his own māya—governed mind, veiling from him the Clear Light of the Void. If he does so, he is liberated at any stage.

This philosophical scheme has so obvious a resemblance to the Indian Māyāvāda Vedānta that the Vaishnava Padma Parana dubs that system ‘a bad scripture and covert Buddhism’ ((māyāvādam asachchāstram prachekhannam bauddham)). Nevertheless, its great scholastic, ‘the incomparable Shang—karāchāryya’, as Sir William Jones calls him, combated the Buddhists in their denial of a permanent Self (ātmā), as also their subjectivism, at the same time holding that the notion of an individual self and that of a world of objects were pragmatic truths only, superseded by and on the attainment of a state of Liberation which has little, if anything, to distinguish it from the Buddhist Void. The difference between the two systems, though real, is less than is generally supposed. This is a matter, however, which it would be out of place to discuss further here.

However this may be, the after—death apparitions are ‘real’ enough for the deceased who does not, as and when they appear, recognize their unsubstantiality and cleave his way through them to the Void. The Clear Light is spoken of in the Bardo Thödol as such a Dazzlement as is produced by an infinitely vibrant landscape in the springtide. This joyous picture is not, of course, a statement of what It is in itself, for It is not an object, but is a translation in terms of objective vision of a great, but, in itself, indescribable joyful inner experience. My attention was drawn, in this connexion, to a passage in a paper on the Avatamsaka Sūtra (ch. xv), by Mr. Hsu, a Chinese scholar, which says, ‘The Bodhisattva emits the light called “ Seeing the Buddha” in order to make the dying think about the Tathāgata and so enable them to go to the pure realms of the latter after death’.

The dying or deceased man is adjured to recognize the Clear Light and thus liberate himself. If he does so, it is because he is himself ripe for the liberated state which is thus presented to him. If he does not (as is commonly the case), it is because the pull of worldly tendency (Saṅskāra) draws him away. He is then presented with the secondary Clear Light, which is the first, somewhat dimmed to him by the general Māyā. If the mind does not find its resting—place here, the first or Chikhai Bardo, which may last for several days, or ‘for the time that it takes to snap a finger’ (according to the state of the deceased), comes to an end.

In the next stage (Chonyid Bardo) there is a recovery of the Death—Consciousness of objects. In one sense, that is compared with a swoon, it is a reawakening. But it is not a waking—state such as existed before death. The (soul—complex ‘emerges from its experience of the Void into a state like that of dream. This continues until it attains a new fleshly body and thus really awakes to earth—life again. For this world—experience is life in such a body.

When I first read the account of the fifteen days following recovery from the * swoon’, I thought it was meant to be a scheme of gradual arising of limited consciousness, analogous to that described in the thirty—six Tattvas by the Northern Shaivāgama and its Tantras, a process which is given in its ritual form in the Tantrik Bhūtaśuddhi rite and in Laya or Kundalini Yoga. But on closer examination I found that this was not so. After the ending of the first Bardo the scheme commences with the complete recovery, without intermediate stages, of the Death—Consciousness. The psychic life is taken up and continued from that point, that is from the stage immediately prior to the ‘swoon’.¹ Life im—mediatel}’ after death is, according to this view, as Spiritists assert, similar to, and a continuation of, the life preceding it. As in Swedenborg’s account, and in the recent play Outward Bound, the deceased does not at first know that he is ‘dead’. Swedenborg, who also speaks of an intermediate state, says that, except for those immediately translated to Heaven or Hell, the first state of man after death is like his state in the world, so that he knows no other, believing that he is still in the world notwithstanding his death.¹

Two illustrations may be given of the doctrine of the continuity and the similarity of experience before and immediately after death. In India, on the one hand, there are reports of hauntings by unhappy ghosts or Prctas which hauntings are said to be allayed by the performance of the Preta Shrāddha rite at the sacred town of Gaya. On the other hand, I have heard of a case in England where it was alleged that a haunting ceased on the saying of a Requiem Mass. In this case, it was supposed that a Catholic soul in Purgatory felt in need of a rite which in its earth—life it had been taught to regard as bringing peace to the dead. The Hindu ghost craves for the Hindu rite which gives to it a new body in lieu of that destroyed on the funeral pyre. These souls do not (in an Indian view) cease to be Hindu or Catholic, or lose their respective beliefs because of their death. Nor (in this view) do those who have passed on necessarily and at once lose any habit, even though it be drinking and smoking. But in the after—death state the * whisky and cigars’ of which we have heard are not gross, material things. Just as a dream reproduces waking experiences, so in the after—death state a man who was wont to drink and smoke imagines that he still docs so. We have here to deal with * dream—whisky’ and ‘dream—cigars’ which, though imaginary, are, for the dreamer, as real as the substances he drank and smoked in his waking state.²

Subsequently, the deceased becomes aware that he is’ dead \ But as he carries over with him the recollection of his past life, he, at first, still thinks that he has such a physical body as he had before. It is, in fact, a dream—body, such as that of persons seen in dreams. It is an imagined body, which, as the Text says, is neither reflected in a mirror nor casts a shadow, and which can do such wonders as passing through mountains and the like, since Imagination is the greatest of magicians. Even in life on earth a man may imagine that he has a limb where he has none. Long after a man's leg has been amputated above the knee he can 'feel his toes', or is convinced that the soles of his feet (buried days before) are tickling. In the after—death state the deceased imagines that he has a physical body, though he has been severed therefrom by the high surgery of death. In such a body the deceased goes through the experiences next described.

In the First Bardo the deceased glimpses the Clear Light, as the Dharma—Kāya, called by Professor Sylvain Levy the 'Essential Body'. This, which is beyond form (Arūpa), is the Dharma—Dhātu, or Matrix of Dharma—substance, whence all the Blessed Ones, or Tathāgatas, issue. This is the body of a Buddha in Nirvana. The second body, or Sambhoga—Kāya, has such subtle form (Rūpavān) as is visible to the Bodhisattvas and is an intermediate manifestation of the Dharma—Dhātu. In the third body, or Nirvāna—Kāya, or State of Buddha—hood, is exteriorized into multiple individual appearances more material, and, therefore, visible to the gross senses of men, such as the forms in which the manifested Buddhas (for there are many and not, as some think, only one, or Gautama) have appeared on earth. If the deceased recognizes the Clear Light of the First Bardo, he is liberated in the Dharma—Kāya. In the Second Bardo Liberation is into the Sambhoga—Kāya (the passage touching the Paradise Realms is not, I think, meant to conflict with this); and in the Third Bardo Liberation is experienced in the Nirvāna—Kāya.

During the Second and Third Bardo the deceased is in the Mayik—world (or world of forms), and if Liberation is then attained it is with form (Rūpavān). The deceased being thus in the world of duality, we find that from this point onwards there is a double parallel presentation to his consciousness. There is firstly a Nirvānic line, comprising the Five Dhyāni Buddhas of the Sambhoga—Kāya, symbolized by various dazzling colours, with certain Divinities, peaceful and wrathful, emanating from them; and, secondly, a Saṅgāric line, consisting of the Six Lokas. These latter, with one exception (if it be one and not due to corruption of text, viz. the association of the smoky or black light of Hell with the blue Vajra—Sattva), have the same colour as their Nirvānic counterparts, but of a dull hue. With the Lokas are given their ‘Poisons’, or the sinful characteristics of their inhabitants. The ‘soul—complex’ is then adjured, on the one hand, to seek Liberation through the compassionate grace of the Nirvānic line of Buddhas and Devatās (Divinities), and, on the other hand, to shun the particular Loka (World) which is concomitantly presented to his mental vision. With these Buddhas, Devatās, and Lokas are associated certain Nidānas (Causal Connexions), Skandhas (Constituent Factors), material elements, and the colours of the latter. This account appears to have suffered from corruption of the Text. Thus the Nidānas and Skandhas are not complete. Logically, Vijnāna Skandha should go first with Vairochana, and Nāma—rupa with Vajra—Sattva. Only four out of the five elements are mentioned. Ether, which is omitted, should be associated with Vairochana and Vijnāna. The colours of the elements accord with those given in the Hindu Tantras except as regards ‘air’, to which is assigned a green colour, appropriate for Asuric jealousy, though it is not that of the Hindu colouration, which is smoky grey. Again, the order of the Six Lokas is not the usual one, viz. first the better Lokas, of Devas, Asuras, and Men, and then the Lohas of Ghosts (Pretas), Brutes, and Hell. Each Loka is characterized by its ‘poison’ or besetting sin, but, of these, five only are mentioned. The editor has, however, referred to corruption in the Text in some of these matters, and others I have noted on a careful analysis of the translated Text.

The peaceful Devatās follow on the sixth and seventh day, and the wrathful Devatās on the eighth and subsequent days. The latter are of the terrific type, characteristic both of the Buddhist and Hindu Shākta Tantras, with their Bhairavas, Bhairavis, Dākinis, Yoginis, and so on. Hinduism also makes this distinction in the nature of Divinities and interprets the wrathful orders as representative of the so—called ‘destructive’ power of the Supreme Lord and of his lesser manifestations; though, in truth, ‘God never destroys’ (na devo nāshakah kvachit), but withdraws the Universe to Himself.

But Power, which thus dissolves the world, is ever terrible to those who are attached to the world. All bad action (Adhanna)> too, is dissolvent; and, according to the Text, the deceased's evil Karma in the Sangsāra is reflected in the Nirvānic line in its forms as Divinities of the Lower Bardo, who so terrify the deceased that he flees from them and sinks therefore more and more into such a state as will eventually bring him birth in one or other of the Lokas.

The Peaceful Devatās are said to issue from the heart, and the Wrathful from the head. I do not, however, think that this statement necessarily lets in the Yoga doctrine of the 'Serpent Power'¹ and the Six Centres, which the editor has shortly set out in Part II of the Addenda, assuming (a matter of which I have no personal knowledge) that the Tibetans both practise this Yoga and teach it in its Indian form. I myself think that the mention of the heart and head does not refer to these places as F—centres, but possibly to the fact that the Peaceful Deities reflect, as stated in the Text, the love of the deceased which springs from his heart.

I make a reservation also as regards the subject of Mantras, dealt with in Part III of the Addenda. No doubt the Tibetans employ Sanskrit Mantras, but such Mantras are often found in a sadly corrupt form in their books—a fact which suggests that the Tibetans feel little appreciation of the supposed sound—value of Mantras. But whether their theory on this subject is the same in all respects as that of the Hindus I cannot say.¹ The Hindu theory, which I have elsewhere endeavoured to elucidate (cf. Garland of Letters) is still on several points obscure; the subject being perhaps the most difficult of any in Hinduism. Even though Tibetan Buddhism may have Mantra—Sādhanā, the presentment of it is likely to differ as much as does the general substance of these two Faiths.

About the fifteenth day, passage is made into the Third Bardo, in which the deceased, if not previously liberated, seeks 'Rebirth' His past life has now become dim. That of the future is indicated by certain premonitory signs which represent the first movements of desire towards fulfilment. The 'soul—complex' takes on the colour of the Loka in which it is destined to be born. If the deceased's Karma leads him to Hell, thither he goes after the Judgement, in a subtle body which cannot be injured or destroyed, but in which he may suffer atrocious pain. Or he may go to the Heaven—world or other Loka, to return at length and in all cases (for neither punishment nor reward are eternal) to earth, whereon only can new Karma *be made. Such return takes place after expiation of his sins in Hell, or the expiration of the term of enjoyment in Heaven which his Karma has gained for him. If, however, the lot of the deceased is immediate rebirth on earth, he sees visions of mating men and women. He, at this final stage towards the awakening to earth—life, now knows that he has not a gross body of flesh and blood. He urgently desires to have one, in order that he may again enjoy physical life on the earth—world.

The Freudian psycho-analyst will find herein a remarkable passage supporting his doctrine of the aversion of the son for the father. The passage says that, if the deceased is to be born as a male, the feeling of its being a male comes upon the knower, and a feeling of intense aversion for the father and attraction for the mother is begotten, and vice versa as regards birth as a female. This is, however, an old Buddhist doctrine found elsewhere. Professor De la Vallée Poussin cites the following passage: 'L'esprit trouble par désir d'amour, il va au lieu de sa destinée. Même très éloigné, il voit, par né de la force de l'acte, le lieu de sa naissance; voyant la son père et sa mère unis, il conçoit désir pour la mère quand il est mâle, désir pour le père quand il est femelle, et, inversement, haine ' (Bouddhisme: Etudes et Matériaux, Abhidharmakosha, iii. 15, p. 25). The work cited also contains other interesting details concerning the embryo, (See, too, the same author's La Théorie de douze causes.)

At length the deceased passes out of the Bardo dreamworld into a womb of flesh and blood, issuing thence once more into the waking state of earth—experience. This is what in English is called Re—incarnation, or Re—birth in the flesh. The Sanskrit term is Sangsāra, that is, rising and rising again' (Punarutpatti) in the worlds of birth and death. Nothing is permanent, but all is transitory. In life, the * soul—complex' is never for two consecutive moments the same, but is, like the body, in constant change. There is thus a series (Santāna) of successive, and, in one sense, different states, which are in themselves but momentary. There is still a unifying bond in that each momentary state is a present transformation representative of all those which are past, as it will be the generator of all future transformations potentially involved in it.

This process is not interrupted by death. Change continues in the Skandhas (or constituents of the organism) other than the gross body which has been cast off and which undergoes changes of its own. But there is this difference: the after—death change is merely the result of the action of accumulated past Karma and does not, as in earthly life, create new Karma, for which a physical body is necessary. (Buddhism, Hinduism, and Christianity are in agreement in holding that man's destiny is decided on Earth, though the last differs from the first two, as explained above, on the question whether there is more than one life on Earth.) There is no breach (Uckchheda) of consciousness, but a continuity of transformation. The Death—Consciousness is the starting—point, followed by the other states of consciousness already described. Karma at length generates a fully—formed desire or mental action. This last is followed by the consciousness taking up its abode in a suitable matrix, whence it is born again as a Birth—Consciousness. What is so born is not altogether different from what has gone before, because it is the present transformation of it; and has no other independent existence.

There are thus successive births of (to use Professor de la Vallée Poussin's term) a 'fluid soul—complex' because the series of psychic states continues at intervals of time to enter the physical womb of living beings. It has been said by the authority cited (Way to Nirvana, p. 85) that the birth—consciousness of a new celestial or infernal being makes for itself and by itself, out of unorganized matter, the body it is to inhabit. Therefore the birth of such beings will follow immediately after the death of the being which is to be reborn as an infernal or celestial being. But the case is said to be different, as a rule, where there is to be 'reincarnation', that is 'rebirth' in the flesh. Conception and birth then presuppose physical circumstances that may not be realized at the moment of the death of the being to be * re—incarnated \ In these cases and others it is alleged that the dying consciousness cannot be continued at once into the birth—consciousness of a new being. The Professor says that this difficulty is solved by those Schools which, maintaining the intermediary existence (Antarābhāva), hold that the dying consciousness is continued into a short—lived being called Gandharva, which lasts for seven days, or seven times seven days (cf. the forty—nine days of the Bardó). This Gandharva creates, with the help of the conceptional elements, an embryo as soon as it can find opportunity. This doctrine, if it has been rightly understood, is apparently another and cruder version of the Bardo doctrine. There cannot, in any philosophic view of the doctrine of Karma be any 'hold up' of what is a continuous life—process. Such process does not consist of independent sections waiting upon one another. And so a 'soul—complex' cannot be ready to reincarnate before the circumstances are fit for it. The law which determines that a being shall incarnate is the same as that which provides the means and conditions by, and under, which the incarnation is to take place. Nor is the body of the infernal or celestial being gross matter. This is clear from the present Text.

Dr. Evans—Wentz raises again the debated question of the transmigration of human 'souls' into sub—human bodies, a process which this Text, exoterically viewed, seems to assume, and which is, as he points out, the general Hindu and Buddhist belief. It seems to be an irrational, though it may be a popular, belief that a human 'soul' can permanently inhabit a sub—human body as its own. For the body cannot exist in such disagreement with its occupant. The right doctrine appears to be that, as man has evolved through the lowest forms of being (Hinduism speaks of 8,400,000 graded kinds of births culminating in man),¹ so by misconduct and neglect to use the opportunity of manhood there can, equally, be a descent along the 'downward path' to the same low forms of being from which humanity has, with difficulty, emerged. The Sanskrit term Durlabham, meaning 'difficult to get' refers to this difficulty of securing human birth. But such descent involves (as Dr. Evans—Wentz says) the loss of the human nature and the enormous lengths of time of a creation epoch.

If the series (Santāna) of conscious states are determined by the past Karma, it may be asked how that liberty of choice exists which the whole Text assumes by its injunctions to the deceased to do this or to avoid that. No doubt even in one individual there are diverse tendencies (Sangskāra). But the question still remains. If the Karma ready to ripen determines the action, then advice to the accused is useless. If the 'soul' is free to choose, there is no determination by Karma. Hinduism holds that, notwithstanding the influence of Karma, the Ātmā is essentially free. Here the answer appears to be twofold. Apart from what is next stated, the instructions given may, by their suggestions, call up that one of several latent tendencies which tends towards the action counselled. Further, this system allows that one 'soul' can help another. And so there are prayers for, and application of merits to, the deceased, just as we find in Hinduism the Pretashrāddka, in Catholicism the Requiem Mass, and in Islam the Moslem's Fatiha. In this and other matters one mind can, it is alleged, influence another otherwise than through the ordinary sense channels whether before or after death. There is also a tendency to overlook collective Karma and its effects. An individual is not only affected by his own Karma, but by that of the community to which he belongs. A wider question arises as to the meaning of the Re—incarnation Doctrine itself, but this is not the place to discuss it.

There are many other points of interest in this remarkable Book, but I must now stop and let the reader discover them for himself. I would like, however, to add a word as to the manner of its making. The Text has been fortunate in finding as its editor Dr. Evans—Wentz, whose knowledge of, and sympathy with, his subject has enabled him to give us a very comprehensible account of it. He, in his turn, was fortunate in his teacher, the translator, the late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup (Tib. Zla—va—bsam—hgrub) who, when I first met him, was Chief Interpreter on the staff of His Excellency Lonchen Satra, the Tibetan Plenipotentiary to the Government of India. He was also attached to the Political Staff of His Holiness the Dalai LāMa on the latter's visit to India. At the time of his premature and greatly regretted death LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup was Lecturer in Tibetan to the University of Calcutta. These, and the other appointments which the translator held, and to which Dr. Evans—Wentz has referred, sufficiently establish his high competency both in Tibetan and English. He had also, I may add, some knowledge of Sanskrit, which I found of much use in discussing with him the meaning of terms used in Tibetan—Buddhist doctrine and ritual. I can, then, speak personally of his attainments, for I saw a good deal of him when he was preparing for me a translation of the Tibetan Shrichakrasambhāra Tantra, which I have published as the seventh volume of the series of Tantrik Texts (Luzac & Co.). I can, likewise, from my own knowledge, associate myself with what Dr. Evans—Wentz has said as to this remarkable man. May their joint work have the success it deserves, and so encourage Dr. Evans—Wentz to publish some at least of the other Texts which he tells me he has in store.

JOHN WOODROFFE.

OXFORD,
October 3, 1925.

INTRODUCTION¹

‘The phenomena of life may be likened unto a dream, a phantasm, a bubble, a shadow, the glistening dew, or lightning flash; and thus they ought to be contemplated/—The Buddha, in The Immutable Sutra.

I. THE IMPORTANCE OF THE BARDO THÖDOL

As a contribution to the science of death and of the existence after death, and of rebirth, The Tibetan Book of the Dead, called, in its own language, Bardo Thödol (‘Liberation by Hearing on the After—Death Plane’),¹ is, among the sacred books of the world, unique. As an epitomized exposition of the cardinal doctrines of the Mahāyāna School of Buddhism, it is of very great importance, religiously, philosophically, and historically. As a treatise based essentially upon the Occult Sciences of the Yoga Philosophy, which were fundamental in the curriculum of the great Buddhist University of Nālanda, the Oxford of ancient India, it is, perhaps, one of the most remarkable works the West has ever received from the East. As a mystic manual for guidance through the Otherworld of many illusions and realms, whose frontiers are death and birth, it resembles The Egyptian Book of the Dead sufficiently to suggest some ultimate cultural relationship between the two; although we only know with certainty that the germ of the teachings, as herein made accessible to English readers, has been preserved for us by a long succession of saints and seers of the God—protected Land of the Snowy Ranges, Tibet.

II. THE SYMBOLISM

The Bardo Thwdol is unique in that it purports to treat rationally of the whole cycle of sangsāric (i. e. phenomenal) existence intervening between death and birth;—the ancient doctrine of karma or consequences (taught by Emerson as compensation), and of rebirth being accepted as the most essential laws of nature affecting human life. Often, however, its teaching appears to be quite the antithesis of rational, because much of it is recorded in an occult cipher. Dr. L. A. Waddell has declared, after careful research, that * the lāmas have the keys to unlock the meaning of much of Buddha's doctrine which has been almost inaccessible to Europeans.¹

Some of the more learned lāmas, including the late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup, have believed that since very early times there has been a secret international symbol—code in common use among the initiates, which affords a key to the meaning of such occult doctrines as are still jealously guarded by religious fraternities in India, as in Tibet, and in China, Mongolia, and Japan.

In like manner, Occidental occultists have contended that the hieroglyphical writings of ancient Egypt and of Mexico seem to have been, in some degree, a popularized or exoteric outgrowth of a secret language. They argue, too, that a symbol—code was sometimes used by Plato and other Greek philosophers, in relation to Pythagorean and Orphic lore; that throughout the Celtic world the Druids conveyed all their esoteric teachings symbolically; that the use of parables, as in the sermons of Jesus and of the Buddha, and of other Great Teachers, illustrates the same tendency; and that through works like Aesop's Fables, and the miracle and mystery plays of medieval Europe, many of the old Oriental symbols have been introduced into the modern literatures of the West.² Be this as it may, it is certain that none of the great systems of ancient thought, nor even vernacular literatures, have always found the ordinary work—a—day language of the world adequate to express transcendental doctrines or even to bring out the full significance of moral maxims.

The lamb, the dragon (or serpent), the dove above the altar, the triangle enclosing the all—seeing eye (common to Freemasonry as well), the sacred fish—symbol, the ever—burning fire, or the image of the risen sun upon the receptacle for the consecrated wafer in the Roman Mass, the architectural symbols and the orientation of church and cathedral, the cross itself, and even the colours and designs of the robes of priest and bishop and pope, are a few of the silent witnesses of the survival in the modern Christian churches of the symbolism of paganism. But the key to the interpretation of the inner significance of almost all such Christianized symbols was unconsciously thrown away: uninitiated ecclesiastics, gathered together in heresy—seeking councils, having regarded that primitive Christianity, so deeply involved in symbolism, called Gnosticism, as ‘Oriental imagery gone mad’ repudiated it as being ‘heretical’, whereas from its own point of view it was merely esoteric.

Similarly, Northern Buddhism, to which symbolism is so vital, has been condemned by Buddhists of the Southern School for claiming to be the custodian of an esoteric doctrine, for the most part orally transmitted by recognized initiates, generation by generation, direct from the Buddha—as well as for teaching (as, for example, in the Saddhanna—Pandartkā) recorded doctrines not in agreement with doctrines contained in the Ti—Pitaka (Skt. Tri—Pitaka), the Pali Canon. And yet, though the Southern Buddhist commonly assumes that there cannot be any but a literal interpretation of the Buddha’s teachings, the Pali Scriptures contain many parables and metaphorical expressions, some of which the lāmas regard as symbolical and confirmatory of their own esoteric tradition, and to which they thus claim to hold—perhaps not without good reason—the initiate’s key.

The lāmas grant that the Ti—Pitaka (‘Three Pitakas, or Baskets’ [of the Law]) are, as the Southern Buddhist holds, the recorded Word (or Doctrine) of the Ancients, the Thera—vāda ; but they claim that the Pitakas do not contain all the Word, that the Pitakas lack much of the Buddha’s yogic teachings, and that it is chiefly these teachings which, in many instances, have been handed down esoterically to the present day. ‘Esoteric Buddhism’, as it has come to be called—rightly or wrongly—seems to depend in large measure upon ‘ear—whispered’ doctrines of this character, conveyed according to long—established and inviolable rule, from guru to shishya, by word of mouth alone.

The Pali Canon records that the Buddha held no doctrine secretly ‘in a closed fist* (cf. Mahā Parinibbāna Sūttanta, Dīgha Nikāya II), that is to say, withheld no essential doctrine from the members of the Sangka (Priesthood), just as no guru nowadays withholds a doctrine necessary for the spiritual enlightenment of his initiated or accepted disciples. This, however, is far from implying that all such teachings were intended to be set down in writing for the uninitiated and worldly multitude, or that they ever were so recorded in any of the Canons. The Buddha Himself wrote down nothing of His teachings, and His disciples who after His death compiled the Buddhist Scriptures may not have recorded therein all that their Master taught them. If they did not, and there are, therefore, as the lāmas contend, certain unwritten teachings of the Buddha which have never been taught to those who were not of the Sangha, then there is, undoubtedly, an extra—canonical, or esoteric, Buddhism. An esoteric Buddhism thus conceived is not, however, to be regarded as in any wise in disagreement with canonical, or exoteric, Buddhism, but as being related to it as higher mathematics are to lower mathematics, or as being the apex of the pyramid of the whole of Buddhism.

In short, the evidence adducible gives much substantial support to the claim of the lāmas, to whom we refer, that there is—as the Bardo Thödol appears to suggest—an unrecorded body of orally transmitted Buddhistic teachings complementary to canonical Buddhism.¹

III. THE ESOTERIC SIGNIFICANCE OF THE FORTY—NINE DAYS OF THE BARDO

Turning now to our text itself, we find that structurally it is founded upon the symbolical number Forty—nine, the square of the sacred number Seven; for, according to occult teachings common to Northern Buddhism and to that Higher Hinduism which the Hindu—born Bodhisattva Who became the Buddha Gautama, the Reformer of the Lower Hinduism and the Codifier of the Secret Lore, never repudiated, there are seven worlds or seven degrees of *Mâyā*² within the *Sangsāra*³ constituted as seven globes of a planetary chain. On each globe there are seven rounds of evolution, making the forty—nine (seven times seven) stations of active existence. As in the embryonic state in the human species the foetus passes through every form of organic structure from the amoeba to man, the highest mammal, so in the after—death state, the embryonic state of the psychic world, the Knower or principle of consciousness, anterior to its re—emergence in gross matter, analogously experiences purely psychic conditions. In other words, in both these interdependent embryonic processes—the one physical, the other psychical—the evolutionary and the involutionary attainments, corresponding to the forty—nine stations of existence, are passed through.

Similarly, the forty—nine days of the Bardo may also be symbolical of the Forty and Nine Powers of the Mystery of the Seven Vowels. In Hindu mythology, whence much of the Bardo symbolism originated, these Vowels were the Mystery of the Seven Fires and their forty—nine subdivisional fires or aspects. They are also represented by the Svastika signs upon the crowns of the seven heads of the Serpent of Eternity of the Northern Buddhist Mysteries, originating in ancient India. In Hermetic writings they are the seven zones of after—death, or Bardo, experiences, each symbolizing the eruption in the Intermediate State of a particular sevenfold element of the complex principle of consciousness, thus giving the consciousness—principle forty—nine aspects, or fires, or fields of manifestation¹.

The number seven has long been a sacred number among Aryan and other races. Its use in the Revelation of John illustrates this, as does the conception of the seventh day being regarded as holy. In Nature, the number seven governs the periodicity and phenomena of life, as, for example, in the series of chemical elements, in the physics of sound and colour, and it is upon the number forty—nine, or seven times seven, that the Bardo Thódol is thus scientifically based.

IV. THE ESOTERIC SIGNIFICANCE OF THE FIVE ELEMENTS

Likewise, in a very striking manner, the esoteric teachings concerning the Five Elements, as symbolically expounded in the Bardo Tködol, parallel, for the most part, certain of the teachings of Western Science, as the following interpretation, based upon that made by the translator himself, indicates:

In the First Round of our Planet, one element alone— Fire—was evolved. In the fire—mist, which, in accordance with the karmic law governing the Sangsåfa, or cosmos, assumed a rotary motion and became a blazing globular body of undifferentiated primeval forces, all the other elements lay in embryo. Life first manifested itself clothed in robes of fire; and man, if we conceive him as then existing, was incarnate—as the Salāmanders of medieval occultism were believed to be—in a body of fire. In the Second Round, as the Element Fire assumed definite form, the Element Air separated from it and enwrapped the embryonic Planet as a shell covers an egg. The body of man, and of all organic creatures, thereupon became a compound of fire and air. In the Third Round, as the Planet, bathed in the Element Air and fanned by it, abated its fiery nature, the Element Water came forth from the vaporous air. In the Fourth Round, in which the Planet still is, air and water neutralized the activities of their Parent Fire; and the Fire, bringing forth the Element Earth, became encrusted with it. Esoterically, the same teachings are said to be conveyed by the old Hindu myth of the churning of the Sea of Milk, which was the Fire—Mist, whence came, like butter, the solid earth. Upon the earth, so formed, the gods are credited with having fed; or, in other words, they, hankering after existence in gross physical bodies, became incarnated on this Planet and so became the Divine Progenitors of the human race.

In the Bardo, on the first four days these Four Elements manifest themselves, or dawn upon the deceased, in their primordial form, although not in their true occult order.¹The Fifth Element, Ether, in its prima⁴ form, symbolized as ' the green light—path of the Wisdom of Perfected Actions \ does not dawn, for, as the text explains, the Wisdom (or Bodhic) Faculty of the consciousness of the deceased has not been perfectly developed.

The Ether Element, like the aggregate of matter (symbolical of the fire—mist), is personified in Vairochana, He Who in Shapes makes visible all things. The psychical attribute of the Ether Element is—to render the lámate conception in the language of the psychology of the West—that of the subconsciousness; and the subconsciousness, as a transcendental consciousness higher than the normal consciousness in mankind, and as yet normally undeveloped, is—as the vehicle for the manifestation of the Bodhic Faculty—believed to be destined to become the active consciousness of the humanity of the Fifth Round. The memory—records of all past experiences throughout the many states of sangsāric existence being latent in the subconsciousness, as the Buddha's own teachings imply (see pp. 40—41), the Fifth Round races in whom it becomes active will thus be able to recall all their past existences. In place of faith or mere belief, Man will then possess Knowledge, will come to know himself in the sense implied by the Mysteries of ancient Greece; he will realize the unreality of sangsāric existence, attaining Enlightenment and Emancipation from the Sangsāra from all the Elements; and this will come as a normal process of human evolution. It is, however, the aim in all schools of Indian and Tibetan Yōga alike—as in the Bardo Th'ōdol—to outstrip this tedious process of normal evolution and win Freedom even now.

In the body of man as he is—in our present Fourth Round—there are four kingdoms of living creatures: (1) those of the Element Fire, (2) those of the Element Air, (3) those of the Element Water, and (4) those of the Element Earth. Over this collective life of innumerable myriads of lives man is king. If he be a Great King, filled with the transcendent consciousness of the triumphant Yōgi (or Saint), to him the countless multitude of his elemental subjects severally reveal themselves in their true nature and place in his hand the Sceptre (symbolized by the Tibetan dorje, or thunderbolt) of Universal Dominion over Matter. Then, indeed, is he Lord of Nature, becoming in his turn Ruler by Divine Right, a Chakravartin, or Universal Emperor, God and Creator.¹

V. THE WISDOM TEACHINGS

Also involved in symbolical language there are, as fundamental occult doctrines of the Bardo Thödol, what the translator called The Wisdom Teachings; and these—which are essential Mahāyāna doctrines—may be outlined as follows:

The Voidness. —In all Tibetan systems of yoga, realization of the Voidness (Tib. S tong—pa—ñid—pron. Tong—pa—ñid: Skt. Shunyatā) is the one great aim; for to realize it is to attain the unconditioned Dharma—Kāya, or ‘Divine Body of Truth’ (Tib. Chos—sku—pron. Chö—Ku), the primordial state of un—createdness, of the supramundane Bodhic All—Consciousness— Buddhahood. Realization of the Voidness (Pali, Suññatd) is the aim of Theravādists too.

The Three Bodies. —The Dharma—Kāya is the highest of the Three Bodies (Tib. Sku—gsum—pron. Kü—sutn : Skt. Tri—Kāya) of the Buddha and of all Buddhas and beings who have Perfect Enlightenment. The other two bodies are the Sambhoga—Kāya or ‘Divine Body of Perfect Endowment’ (Tib. Longs—spyod—rzogs—sku—pron. Long—chöd—zo—ku) and the Nirmāna—Kāya or ‘Divine Body of Incarnation’ (Tib. Sprul—pahi—sku—pron. Tul—pal—ku).

The Dharma—Kāya is symbolized—for all human word—concepts are inadequate to describe the Qualityless—as an infinite ocean, calm and without a wave, whence arise mist—clouds and rainbow, which symbolize the Sambhoga—Kāya, and the clouds, enhaloed in the glory of the rainbow, condensing and falling as rain, symbolize the *Nirmāna—Kāya*¹

The Dharma—Kāya is the primordial, formless Bohdi> which is true experience freed from all error or inherent or accidental obscuration. In it lies the essence of the Universe, including both Sangsāra and Nirvana which, as states or conditions of the two poles of consciousness, are, in the last analysis, in the realm of the pure intellect, identical.²

In other words, the Dharma—Kāya (lit. ‘Law Body’) being Essential Wisdom (Bodht) unmodified, the Sambhoga—Kāya (lit. ‘Compensation Body, or ‘Adorned Body’) embodies, as in the Five Dhyānī Buddhas, Reflected or Modified Wisdom, and the Nirtnāna—Kāya (lit. ‘Changeable Body’, or ‘Transformed Body’) embodies, as in the Human Buddhas, Practical or Incarnate Wisdom.³

The Uncreated, the Unshaped, the Unmodified is the Dharma—Kāya. The Offspring, the Modification of the Unmodified, the manifestation of all perfect attributes in one body, is the Sambhoga—Kāya : ‘The embodiment of all that is wise, merciful and loving in the Dharvia—Kāya — as clouds on the surface of the heavens or a rainbow on the surface of the clouds—is said to be Sambhoga—Kaya. The condensation and differentiation of the One Body as many is the Nirmāna—Kāya, or the Divine Incarnations among sentient beings, that is to say, among beings immersed in the Illusion called Sang—sāra, in phenomena, in worldly existence. All enlightened beings who are reborn in this or in any other world with full consciousness, as workers for the betterment of their fellow creatures, are said to be Nirmāna—Kāya incarnates.

With the Dharma—Kāya Tantric Buddhism associates the Primordial Buddha Samanta—Bhadra (Tib. Kiin—tu—bzang—po — pron. Kun—tu—zang—po) Who is without Beginning or End, the Source of all Truth, the All—Good Father of the Lāmaistic Faith. In this same highest Buddha realm Lāmaism places Vajra—Dhāra (Tib. Rdorje—Chang —pron. Dorje—Chang), ‘The Holder of the Dorje (or Thunderbolt) V the Divine Expounder of the Mystic Doctrine called Vajra Yāna (Tib. Rdorje Theg—pa — pron. Dorje Theg—pd) or Mantra Yāna * ; and also the Buddha Amitabha (Tib. Hod—dpag—med —pron. Wod—pag—med) or, as in the text, page 113¹), the Buddha of Boundless Light, Who is the Source of Life Eternal. In the Sambhoga—Kāya are placed the Five Dhyāni Buddhas (or Buddhas of Meditation), the Lotus Herukas, and the Peaceful and Wrathful Deities, all of whom will appear in the Bardo visions. With the Nirmāna—Kāya is associated Padma Sambhava, who, being the first teacher in Tibet to expound the Bardo Thödol, is the Great Guru for all devotees who follow the Bardo teachings.

The opinion commonly held by men not initiated into the higher lāmak teachings, that Northern Buddhism recognizes in the Primordial or ādi—Buddha a Supreme Deity, is apparently erroneous. The translator held that the ādi—Buddha, and all deities associated with the Dhartna—Kāya, are not to be regarded as personal deities, but as Personifications of primordial and universal forces, laws, or spiritual influences, which sustain—as the sun sustains the earth’s physical life — the divine nature of all sentient creatures in all worlds, and make man’s emancipation from all sangsāric existences possible:

‘In the boundless panorama of the existing and visible universe, whatever shapes appear, whatever sounds vibrate, whatever radiances illuminate, or whatever consciousnesses cognize, all are the play or manifestation of the Tri—Kāya the Three—fold Principle of the Cause of All Causes, the Primordial Trinity. Impenetrating all, is the All—Pervading Essence of Spirit, which is Mind. It is uncreated, impersonal, self—existing, immaterial, and indestructible.’

(Lāma Kazi Dawa—Samdup.)

Thus, the Tri—Kāya symbolizes the Esoteric Trinity of the higher Buddhism of the Northern School; the Exoteric Trinity being, as in the Southern School, the Buddha, the Dharma (or Scriptures), the Sahgha (or Priesthood). Regarded in this way—the one trinitarian doctrine as esoteric, the other as exoteric—there are direct correspondences between the two Trinities. Detailed and comprehensive understanding of the Tri—Kāya Doctrine, so the lāmas teach, is the privilege of initiates, who, alone, are fitted to grasp and to realize it.

The translator himself regarded the Tri—Kāya Doctrine as having been transmitted by a long and unbroken line of initiates, some Indian, some Tibetan, direct from the days of the Buddha. He considered that the Buddha, having re—discovered it, was merely its Transmitter from preceding Buddhas; that it was handed on orally, from guru to guru, and not committed to writing until comparatively recent times, when Buddhism began to decay, and there were not always sufficient living gurus to transmit it in the old way. The theory of Western scholars, that simply because a doctrine is not found recorded before a certain time it consequently did not exist previously, he—as an initiate—laughed at; and the rather strenuous efforts of Christian apologists to daiqi for the Tri—Kāya Doctrine a Christian origin he held, likewise, to be wholly untenable. He had been a close and sympathetic student of Christianity; and, as a young man, he had been much sought after by Christian missionaries, who looked upon him, with his remarkable learning and superior social standing, as an unusually desirable subject for conversion. He carefully examined their claims, and then rejected them, on the ground that, in his opinion, Christianity, as presented by them, is but an imperfect Buddhism, that the Asokan Buddhist missionaries to Asia Minor and Syria, as to Alexandria,¹ must have profoundly influenced Christianity through some such probable connecting link as the Essenes, that, if Jesus were an historical character, He, being—as the LāMa interpreted the Jesus of the New Testament clearly to be—a Bodhisattva (i.e. a Candidate for Buddhahood), was, undoubtedly, well acquainted with Buddhist ethics, and taught them, as in the Sermon on the Mount.

The Doctrine of the Three Bodies conveys the esoteric teachings concerning the Path of the Teachers, their descent from the Higher to the Lower, from the threshold of Nirvana to the Sangsāra ; and progression from the Lower to the Higher, from the Sangsāra to Nirvana, is symbolized by the Five Dhyāni Buddhas, each personifying a universal divine attribute. Contained in the Five Dhyāni Buddhas lies the Sacred Way leading to At—one—ment in the Dharma—Kāya, to Buddhahood, to Perfect Enlightenment, to Nirvana — which is spiritual emancipation through Desirelessness.

The Five Wisdoms. —As the All—Pervading Voidness, the Dharma—Kāya is the shape (which is shapelessness) of the Body of Truth; the Thatness constituting it is the Dharma—Dhātu (Tib. Chös—kyi—dvyings —pron. Chö—kyi—ing), The Seed or Potentiality of Truth ; and this dawns on the First Day of the Bardo as the glorious blue light of the Dhyāni Buddha Vairochana, the Manifester, ‘He Who in Shapes Makes Visible’ [the universe of matter]. The Dharma—Dhātu is symbolized as the Aggregate of Matter, From the Aggregate of Matter arise the creatures of this world, as of all worlds, in which animal stupidity is the dominant characteristic; and the mara (or illusion of shape) constitutes in all realms of the Sangsāra —as in the human kingdom where manas (or mind) begins to operate—the Bondage, emancipation from which is Nirvana. When in man, made as perfect as human life can make him, the stupidity of his animal nature and the illusion of shape, or personality, are transmuted into Right Knowledge, into Divine Wisdom, there shines forth in his consciousness the All—Pervading Wisdom of the Dharma—Dhātu, or the Wisdom born of the Voidness, which is all—pervading.

As the Aggregate of Matter, dawning in the Bardo of the First Day, produces physical bodies, so the Water—Element, dawning on the Second Day, produces the life—stream, the blood; Anger is the obscuring passion, consciousness is the aggregate, and these, when transmuted, become the Mirror—like Wisdom, personified in Vajra—Sattva (the Sambhoga—Kāya reflex of the Dhyānī Buddha Akshobhya), the ‘Triumphant One of Divine Heroic Mind’.

The Earth—Element of the Third Day, producing the chief solid constituents of the human form, and of all physical forms, gives rise to the passion of Egoism, and the aggregate is Touch; and these, when divinely transmuted, become the Wisdom of Equality, personified in Ratna—Sambhava, the * Gem—born One’, the Beautifier.

The Fire—Element of the Fourth Day, producing the animal—heat of embodied human and animal beings, gives rise to the passion of Attachment, or Lust, and the Aggregate of Feelings. Herein the transmutation gives birth to the All—Discriminating Wisdom, which enables the devotee to know each thing separately, yet all things as one; personified in the Dhyānī Buddha Amitābha, ‘He of Boundless Light’, the Illuminator, or Enlightener.

The Element Air, of the Fifth Day, produces the breath of life. Its quality, or passions, in man is Envy, or Jealousy. Its aggregate is Volition. The transmutation is into the All—Performing Wisdom, which gives perseverance and unerring action in things spiritual, personified in Amogha—Siddhi, the ‘Almighty Conqueror’, the Giver of Divine Power.

As explained above, in Section IV, the last Element, Ether, which produces the mind, or Knower, and the desire—body of the dwellers in the Intermediate State, does not dawn for the deceased, because—as the text tells us—the Wisdom Faculty of the Consciousness, that is to say, the supramundane Buddha (or Bodhic) consciousness, has not been developed in the ordinary humanity. To it is related—as in our text—Vajra—Sattva and the Mirror—like Wisdom and the Aggregate of Bodhic Wisdom, Vajra—Sattva being then synonymous, esoterically, with Samanta—Bhadra (who, in turn, is often personified in Vairochana, the Chief of the Five Dhyānī Buddhas), the ādi—Buddha, the Primordial, the Unborn, Unshaped, Unmodified Dharma—Kāya.

When the perfection of the Divine Body—Aggregate is attained by man, it becomes the unchanging, immutable Vajra—Sattva When the perfection of the Divine Speech—Principle is attained, with it comes the power of divine speech, symbolized by Amitābha. The perfection of the Divine Thought—Principle brings divine infallibility, symbolized by Vairochana. The perfection of the Divine Qualities of Goodness and Beauty is the realization of Ratna—Sambhava, their producer. With the perfection of Divine Actions comes the realization of Amogha—Siddhi, the Omnipotent Conqueror.

To one after another of these divine attributes, or principles, innate in every human being, the deceased is introduced, as though in a symbolic drama of initiation, to test him and discover whether or not any part of his divine (or bodhic) nature has been developed. Full development in all the bodhic powers of the Five Dhyāni Buddhas, who are the personifications of them, leads to Liberation, to Buddhahood. Partial development leads to birth in one of the happier states: deva—loka the world of the devas or gods ; asura—loka, the world of the asuras or titans; nara—loka, the world of mankind.

After the Fifth Day the Bardo visions become less and less divine; the deceased sinks deeper and deeper into the morass of sangśāric hallucinations; the radiances of the higher nature fade into the lights of the lower nature. Then—the after—death dream ending as the Intermediate State exhausts itself for the percipient, the thought—forms of his mental—content all having shown themselves to him like ghostly spectres in a nightmare—he passes on from the Intermediate State into the equally illusionary state called waking, or living, either in the human world or in one of the many mansions of existence, by being born there. And thus revolves the Wheel of Life, until the one who is bound on it breaks his own bonds through Enlightenment, and there comes, as the Buddha proclaims, the Ending of Sorrow.

In Sections I to V, above, the more prominent occult teachings underlying the Bardo Thödol have been briefly expounded. In Sections VI to XII, which are to follow, the chief Bardo rites and ceremonies, the Bardo psychology, and other of the Bardo doctrines will be explained and interpreted. The last Sections, XIII to XV, will be devoted to a consideration of our manuscript, its history, the origin of the Bardo Thodol texts, and our translating and editing.

In addition to these fifteen sections, there are, as Addenda (see pp.

211—41), six complementary sections, addressed chiefly to the student, who, more than the ordinary reader, will be interested in certain of the more abstruse doctrines and problems which arise from a careful study of the translation and its annotations.

VI. THE DEATH CEREMONIES

When the death—symptoms, as described in the first sections of our text, are completed, a white cloth is thrown over the face of the corpse ; and no person then touches the corpse, in order that the culminating process of death, which ends only upon the complete separation of the Bardo body from its earth—plane counterpart, shall not be interfered with. It is commonly held that normally the process takes from three and one—half to four days, unless assisted by a priest called the hpho—bo (pron. pho—o) or ‘extractor of the consciousness—principle’; and that, even if the priest be successful in the extracting, the deceased ordinarily does not wake up to the fact of being separated from the human body until the said period of time has expired.

The hpho—bo upon his arrival, takes a seat on a mat or chair at the head of the corpse; he dismisses all lament—making relatives from the death—chamber and orders its doors and windows to be closed, so as to secure the silence necessary for the right performance of the hpho—bo service. This consists of a mystic chant containing directions for the spirit of the deceased to find its way to the Western Paradise of Amitābha, and thus escape—if karma permits—the undesirable Intermediate State. After commanding the spirit to quit the body and its attachment to living relatives and goods, the lāma examines the crown of the head of the corpse at the line of the sagittal suture, where the two parietal bones articulate, called the * Aperture of Brahma’ (Skt. Brāhma—randhra), to determine if the spirit has departed thence, as it should have done; and, if the scalp be not bald, he pulls out a few of the hairs directly over the aperture. If through accident or otherwise there be no corpse, the lāma mentally concentrates upon the deceased, and, visualizing the body of the deceased, imagines it to be present; and, calling the spirit of the deceased, performs the ceremony, which usually lasts about one hour.

Meanwhile, the tsi—pa, or astrologer—, has been engaged to cast a death—horoscope, based upon the moment of death of the deceased, to determine what persons may approach and touch the corpse, the proper method of disposing of the corpse, the time and manner of the funeral, and the sort of rites to be performed for the benefit of the departed. Then the corpse is tied up in a sitting posture, much the same as that in which mummies and skeletons have been found in ancient graves or tombs in various parts of the world, and sometimes called the embryonic posture, symbolical of being born out of this life into the life beyond death. The corpse, so postured, is then placed in one of the corners of the death—chamber which has not been assigned to the household daemon.

Relatives and friends, having been notified of the death, gather together at the house of the deceased; and there they are fed and lodged until the corpse is disposed of. If doubt exists concerning the complete separation of the consciousness—principle (or spirit) of the deceased from the body, there is not likely to be any disposal of the corpse until three and one—half to four days after the time of the death. So long as the entertaining of the mourners continues—usually for not less than two, but more often for three days—the spirit of the deceased is offered a part of all food, both solid and liquid, of each meal. This food is placed in a bowl in front of the corpse; and then, after the spirit of the deceased has extracted from the food thus offered the subtle invisible essences, the food is thrown away. After the corpse has been removed from the house for final disposaj, an effigy of the deceased is put in the corner of the room which the corpse had occupied ; and before this effigy food continues thus to be offered until the forty—nine days of the Bardo have expired.

Whilst the funeral rites—including the reading of the Bardo Thödol—are being performed, in the house of the deceased or at the place of death, other lāmas chant by relays, all day and night, the service for assisting the spirit of the deceased to reach the Western Paradise of Amitabha. In Tibetan, this service (which the hpho—bo also chants) is called De—wa—chan—kyi—mon—lam. If the family be well—to—do, another service of like nature may be performed at the temple wherein the deceased used to worship, by all of the monks of the temple assembled.

After the funeral, the lāmas who read the Bardo Thödol return to the house of death once a week until the forty—ninth day of the Intermediate State has ended. It is not uncommon, however, for them to intermit one day of the first week and of each of the succeeding periods in order to shorten the service, so that they return after six, five, four, three, two, and one day respectively, thereby concluding the reading in about three weeks.

From the First to the Fourteenth Day, as the arrangement of Book One of our text suggests, the Chönyid Bardo is to be read and re—read, and from the Fifteenth Day onwards the Sidpa Bardo. In poorer families the rites may cease after the Fourteenth Day ; for families in better circumstances it is usual in Sikkim to continue the rites at least until the expiration of the twenty—one—day period and sometimes during the whole period of the Forty—nine Days of the Bardo. On the first day of the funeral rites, if the deceased were a man of wealth or position, as many as one hundred lāmas may assist; at the funeral of a poor man only one or two lāmas are likely to be present. After the Fourteenth Day, as a rule for all alike, only one lāma is retained to complete the reading.

The effigy of the body of the deceased is made by dressing a stool, block of wood, or other suitable object in the clothes of the deceased; and where the face should be there is inserted a printed paper called the mtshan—spyang or spyang—pu (pronounced chaug—ku), of which the following reproduction of a specimen is typical.¹

of 'the five excellent sensuous things': (1) a mirror (the first of the three objects on the left and numbered 1), symbolical of the body, which reflects all phenomena or sensations, and of sight as well; (2) a conch (numbered 2) and a lyre (numbered 3), symbolical of sound; (3) a vase of flowers (numbered 4), symbolical of smell; (4) holy cakes in a receptacle like that employed at the Roman Catholic Eucharist (numbered 5), symbolical of essence or nutriment, and of taste; (5) the silk clothes of the central figure and the overhanging royal canopy, symbolical of dress and ornamental art, and of the sense of touch. It is before such a paper figure, inserted in the effigy as a head and face, that the food offerings to the spirit of the deceased continue to be made, and to which, when visualized by the lāma as the deceased in person, the Bardo Thödol is read.

Having begun my Tibetan researches fresh from three years of research in the ancient funeral lore of the Nile Valley, I realized as soon as I gained knowledge of the Tibetan funeral rites—which are very largely pre-Buddhistic—that the effigy of the dead, as now used in Tibet and Sikkim, is so definitely akin to the effigy of the deceased called 'the statue of the Osiris (or deceased one)', as used in the funeral rites of ancient Egypt, as to suggest a common origin. Furthermore, the spyang—pu taken by itself alone, as the head—piece for the effigy, has its Egyptian parallel in the images made for the Ka or spirit. These sometimes were merely heads, complete in themselves, to replace or duplicate the head of the mummy and to furnish additional assistance to the Ka when seeking—as the Knower in the Bardo seeks—a body to rest in, or that which our text calls a prop for the body (see p. 182). And even as to 'the statue of the Osiris' the ancient priests of Egypt read their Book of the Dead, so to the Tibetan effigy the lāmas now read the Bardo Thödol—both treatises alike being nothing more than guide-books for the traveller in the realm beyond death.

Again, the preliminary rituals of the Egyptian funeral were designed to confer upon the deceased the magic power of rising up in the ghost—body or Ka possessed of all sense faculties, the service having consisted of * the opening of the mouth and eyes' and the restoration of the use of all other parts of the body. Likewise, the lāmas aim, at the outset, is to restore complete consciousness to the deceased after the swoon—state immediately following death, and to accustom him to the unfamiliar environment of the Otherworld, assuming that he be, like the multitude, one of the unenlightened, and thus incapable of immediate emancipation.

In conformity with our own view, that that part of the Tibetan funeral rites directly concerned with the effigy and the spyang—pu has come down to our day as a survival from pre—Buddhist, probably very ancient, times, Dr. L. A. Waddell writes of it as follows: ‘This is essentially a Bön rite, and is referred to as such in the histories of Guru Pad ma Sambhava, as being practised by the Bön [i. e. the religion prevalent in Tibet before the advent of Buddhism, and, in its transcendentalism, much like Taoism], and as having incurred the displeasure of the Guru Padma Sambhava, the founder of Lāmaism.’

Of the spyang—pu itself, Dr. Waddell adds: ‘Its inscription [as in our copy above] usually runs:

‘I, the world—departing One, . . . (and here is inserted the name of the deceased), adore and take refuge in my lāma—confessor, and all the deities, both mild [translated by us as "peaceful"] and wrathful;¹ and [may] "the Great Pitier"² forgive my accumulated sins and impurities of former lives, and show me the way to another good world!’³

At the left shoulder of the central figure of the spyang—pu, as in our copy, and sometimes down the middle In other copies, are inscribed phonetic symbols referring to the six worlds of sangsāric existence, translated as follows :

S = surety or god, referring to the deva— world ;

A = asura, or titan, referring to the asura—world;

Na = nara, or man, referring to the human—world ;

Tri = trisan, or brute animal, referring to the brute—world;

Pre spreta, or unhappy ghost, referring to the hell—world.¹

and Hung (from hunu, meaning ‘fallen’) = hell, referring to the hell—world.¹

At the termination of the funeral rites the spyang—pu or face—paper is ceremoniously burned in the flame of a butter—lamp, and the spirit of the deceased given a final farewell. By the colour of the flame and the way in which the flame acts the after—death fate which the deceased has met with is determined.

The ashes of the cremated spyang—pu are collected in a plate, and then, upon being mixed with clay, are made into miniature stupas called sa—tschha usually in moulds leaving impressions either of symbolical ornamentation or of sacred letters. One is kept for the family altar in the home of the deceased, and the rest are deposited in a sheltered place at a cross—roads or on a hill—top, usually under a projecting ledge of rock, or in a cave if there happens to be a cave.

With the burning of the paper, the rest of the effigy of the deceased is taken apart, the clothes going to the lanías who carry them off and sell them to the first purchaser, keeping the proceeds as part of their fee. When one year has elapsed after the death, a feast in honour of the deceased is usually given and the service of the Medical Buddhas is performed.² Thereafter, a widow of the deceased is free to remarry.³

Connected with the Tibetan funeral itself there is much interesting ritual. Thus, when the officiating lāma is preparing to assist at the removal of the corpse from the house, he presents a ‘scarf of honour’ to the corpse and, addressing the corpse as the deceased, advises it to partake freely of the food offered, warns it that it is dead and that its ghost must not haunt the place or trouble living relatives, saying in conclusion, * Remember the name of thy spiritual Jzrøø—teacher, which is ... [so and so], and by his aid take the right path—the white one. Come this way!’¹

Then, as the lāma begins to lead the funeral procession, he takes hold of one end of the long scarf, the other end having been tied to the corpse, and begins to chant a liturgy to the accompaniment of a miniature hand—drum (having loose—hanging knotted cords attached, which, striking the drum as it is twirled by the hand of the lāma cause it to sound) and of a trumpet made of a human thigh—bone. When there are a number of priests, the chief priest, going before the rest, rings a handbell (as the Breton priest does in a Breton peasant funeral procession), and the other priests assist with the chanting and the music, one blowing at intervals the sacred conch—shell, another clashing brass cymbals, and perhaps another twirling the small drum, or blowing the thigh—bone trumpet. From time to time the chief lāma looks back to invite the spirit to accompany the body and to assure it that the route is in the right direction. After the corpse—bearers come the main body of mourners, some bearing refreshments (to be in part cast on the funeral—pyre for the benefit of the deceased and in part partaken of by the priests and mourners), and last of all the weeping and wailing relatives. Such priestly guiding of the deceased's spirit is for the laity alone, for the spirits of deceased lāmas, having been trained in the doctrines of the Bardo Thödol, know the right path and need no guidance.

In Tibet itself all known religious methods of disposing of a corpse are in vogue; but, owing to lack of fuel for purposes of cremation, ordinarily the corpse, after having been carried to a hill—top or rocky eminence, is chopped to pieces and, much after the Parsee custom in Persia and Bombay, given to the birds and beasts of prey. If the corpse be that of a nobleman, whose family can well afford a funeral pyre, it may be cremated. In some remote districts earth burial is customary; and it is commonly employed everywhere when death has been caused by a very contagious and dangerous disease, like small—pox for example. Otherwise, Tibetans generally object to earth burial, for they believe that when a corpse is interred the spirit of the deceased, upon seeing it, attempts to re—enter it, and that if the attempt be successful a vampire results, whereas cremation, or other methods of quickly dissipating the elements of the dead body, prevent vampirism. Sometimes, too, as among the Hindus, corpses are cast into rivers or other bodies of water. In the case of the Dalái LāMa and the Tashi LāMa, and of some very great man or saint, embalming is practised; and the corpse, in a way somewhat resembling the ancient Egyptian embalming process, is packed in a box of marsh salt, usually for about three months, or until the salt has absorbed all the watery parts of the corpse. Then, after the corpse is well cured, it is coated with a cement—like substance made of clay, pulverized sandal—wood, spices, and drugs. This adheres and hardens ; and all the sunken or shrivelled parts of the body, such as the eyes, cheeks, and stomach, having been rounded out by it to their natural proportions, a very Egyptian—like mummy is produced. Finally, when thoroughly dried and then covered with a paint made of dissolved gold, the mummy is set up like an image in a sort of Tibetan Westminster Abbey.

At Shigatze, the seat of the Tashi LāMa, there are five such funereal temples. With their double roofs, resplendent with gold, they resemble the palaces or royal shrines of China. In size and embellishment they differ, in accordance with the rank and wealth of the mummies occupying them, some being inlaid with gold, some with silver.¹ Before these enshrined mummies prayer is offered up, incense burnt, and elaborate rituals are performed, as in the ancestral cults of the Chinese and Japanese.

The four Northern Buddhist methods of disposing of a corpse correspond to those mentioned in various of the sacred books of the Hindus: a human body is said to consist of four elements,—earth, water, air, and fire,—and it should be returned to these elements as quickly as possible. Cremation is considered the best method to adopt. Earth—burial, as among Christians also, is the returning of the body to the element Earth; water—burial is the returning of the body to the element Water, air—burial, to the element Air—the birds which devour the corpse being the denizens of the air; and fire—burial, or cremation, the returning of the body to the element Fire.

When air—burial is adopted in Tibet, even the bones of the corpse, after the birds have stripped them of flesh, are disposed of by being hammered to bits in small cavities in the rocks of the funereal hill, then mixed with flour and formed into a dough and given to the birds to devour.¹ The Tibetan air—burial is thus more thorough than that of the Parsees, who allow the bones of their dead to remain in the air and slowly decompose.

In a Tibetan funeral of the ordinary sort, neither a coffin nor any corpse—receptacle is used. The corpse after being laid upon its back on a sheet or piece of cloth spread over a framework, commonly made of a light material like wicker affixed to two poles, is covered with a pure white cloth. Two men, inserting their heads between the projecting ends of the two poles, act as pall—bearers. In Sikkim, however, the corpse is carried thus sitting, in the embryonic posture described above.

Both in Sikkim and in Tibet every funeral is conducted in strict accordance with the directions which have been given by the astrologer who cast the death—horoscope, indicating who shall touch or handle the corpse, who shall carry it, and the form of the burial. The astrologer also declares what kind of evil spirit caused the death, for in popular belief—as also among the Celtic peoples of Europe—no death is natural, but is always owing to interference by one of the innumerable death—demons. The astrologer announces, too, what ceremonies are necessary to exorcize the death—demon from the house of death, what special rituals need to be read for the benefit of the spirit of the deceased, the precautions necessary to secure for the deceased a good rebirth, and the country and sort of family in which the rebirth will occur.

In Sikkim, on the space of ground levelled for the funeral—pyre, a mystic diagram, symbolical of the Happy Realm of Sukhavati, or the Red Western Realm of Happiness (see text, p. 113), is outlined with flour and divided into compartments, the central space (upon which the funeral—pyre is built) being dedicated to the Dhyānī Buddha Amitābha. At the beginning of the cremation ceremonies the chief lāma visualizes the funeral—pyre as being the māṇḍala of Amitābha, and the fire as being Amitābha, who, as in our text (see p. 113), personifies the element Fire. Then the corpse itself, when laid upon the pyre, is visualized as the māṇḍala of Amitābha and its heart as the dwelling—place of Amitābha. As the fire begins to grow in volume, sweet—smelling oils and spices and sandal—wood and incense—sticks are cast into it in sacrifice, as in the Hindu ritual of Homa, or sacrifice to fire. Finally, as the cremation ceremonies end, the priests and the mourners visualize the spirit of the departed as being purged of all karmic obscurations by the fire which is Amitābha, the Incomprehensible Light.

Such, in brief, is the mysticism underlying the beautiful rites performed for the dead at the place of cremation in Sikkim.

In all other forms of burial, throughout Tibet or territories under Tibetan influence, a parallel or corresponding funeral service, based on the same symbolical rituals, is performed, with variations according to sect and province.

VII. THE *BARDO*¹ OR AFTER—DEATH STATE

From the moment of death and for three and one—half or sometimes four days afterwards, the Knower, or principle of consciousness, in the case of the ordinary person deceased, is believed to be thus in a sleep or trance—state, unaware, as a rule, that it has been separated from the human—plane body. This period is the First Bardo, called the Chikhai Bardo (Tib. Hchi—khahi Bar—do) or * Transitional State of the Moment of Death¹, wherein dawns the Clear Light, first in primordial purity, then the percipient, being unable to recognize it, that is to say, to hold on to and remain in the transcendental state of the unmodified mind concomitant with it, perceives it karmically obscured, which is its secondary aspect. When the First Bardo ends, the Knower, awakening to the fact that death has occurred, begins to experience the Second Bardo, called the Chönyid Bardo (Tib. Chös—nyid Bar—do), or ‘Transitional State of [the Experiencing or Glimpsing of] Reality’; and this merges into the Third Bardo, called the Sidpa (or Sidpai) Bardo (Tib. Srid—pahi Bar—do) > or ‘Transitional State of [or while seeking] Rebirth’, which ends when the principle of consciousness has taken rebirth in the human or some other world, or in one of the paradise realms.

As explained in Section III, above, the passing from one Bardo to another is analogous to the process of birth ; the Knower wakes up out of one swoon or trance state and then another, until the Third Bardo ends. On his awakening in the Second Bardo, there dawn upon him in symbolic visions, one by one, the hallucinations created by the karmic reflexes of actions done by him in the earth—plane body. What he has thought and what he has done become objective: thought—forms, having been consciously visualized and allowed to take root and grow and blossom and produce, now pass in a solemn and mighty panorama, as the consciousness—content of his personality.¹

In the Second Bardo, the deceased is, unless otherwise enlightened, more or less under the delusion that although he is deceased he still possesses a body like the body of flesh and blood. When he comes to realize that really he has no such body, he begins to develop an overmastering desire to possess one; and, seeking for one, the karmic predilection for sangsāric existence naturally becoming all—determining, he enters into the Third Bardo of seeking Rebirth, and eventually, with his rebirth in this or some other world, the after—death state comes to an end.

For the commonalty, this is the normal process; but for those very exceptional minds, possessed of great yogic knowledge and enlightenment, only the more spiritual stages of the Bardo of the first few days will be experienced; the most enlightened of yogis may escape all of the Bardo, passing into a paradise realm, or else reincarnating in this world as soon as the human body has been discarded, maintaining all the while unbroken continuity of consciousness.¹ As men think, so are they, both here and hereafter, thoughts being things, the parents of all actions, good and bad alike; and, as the sowing has been, so will the harvest be.

If escape from the Intermediate State is not achieved, through rebirth into some other state—that of Hell being possible for the very exceptional evil—doer, though not for the ordinary person, who expiates normal moral delinquencies upon being reborn as a human being—within the symbolic period of Forty—nine Days, a period whose actual duration is determined by karma, the deceased remains subject to all the karmic illusions of the Bardo, blissful or miserable as the case may be, and progress is impossible. Apart from liberation by gaining Nirvana after death—thus cutting asunder for ever the karmic bonds of worldly or sangsāric existence in an illusionary body of propensities—the only hope for the ordinary person of reaching Buddhahood lies in being reborn as a human being; for birth in any other than the human world causes delay for one desirous of reaching the Final Goal.

VIII. THE PSYCHOLOGY OF THE BARDO VISIONS

Definite psychological significance attaches to each of the deities appearing in the Bardo Thödol; but, in order to grasp it, the student must bear in mind that—as suggested above—the apparitional visions seen by the deceased in the Intermediate State are not visions of reality, but nothing more than the hallucinatory embodiments of the thought—forms born of the mental—content of the percipient; or, in other words, they are the intellectual impulses which have assumed personified form in the after—death dream—state.

Accordingly, the Peaceful Deities (Tib. ZH—wa) are the personified forms of the sublimest human sentiments, which proceed from the psychic heart—centre. As such, they are represented as the first to dawn, because, psychologically speaking, the heart—born impulses precede the brain—born impulses. They come in peaceful aspect to control and to influence the deceased whose connexion with the human world has just been severed; the deceased has left relatives and friends behind, works unaccomplished, desires unsatisfied, and, in most cases, he possesses a strong yearning to recover the lost opportunity afforded by human embodiment for spiritual enlightenment. But, in all his impulses and yearnings, karma is all—masterful; and, unless it be his karmic lot to gain liberation in the first stages, he wanders downwards into the stages wherein the heart—impulses give way to brain—impulses.

Whereas the Peaceful Deities are the personifications of the feelings, the Wrathful Deities (Tib. To—zvo) are the personifications of the reasonings and proceed from the psychic brain—centre. Yet, just as impulses arising in the heart—centre may transform themselves into the reasonings of the brain—centre, so the Wrathful Deities are the Peaceful Deities in a changed aspect.

As the intellect comes into activity, after the sublime heart—born impulses subside, the deceased begins to realize more and more the state in which he is; and with the supernormal faculties of the Bardo—body which he begins to make use of— in much the same manner as an infant new—born in the human world begins to employ the human plane sense—faculties—he is enabled to think how he may win this or that state of existence. Karma is, however, still his master, and defines his limitations. As on the human plane the sentimental impulses are most active in youth and often lost in mature life, wherein reason commonly takes the place of them, so on the after—death plane, called the Bardo, the first experiences are happier than the later experiences.

From another aspect, the chief deities themselves are the embodiments of universal divine forces, with which the deceased is inseparably related, for through him, as being the microcosm of the macrocosm, penetrate all impulses and forces, good and bad alike. Samanta—Bhadra, the All—Good, thus personifies Reality, the Primordial Clear Light of the Unborn, Unshaped *Dharina Kāya (cf. p. 95). Vairochana is the Originator of all phenomena, the Cause of all Causes. As the Universal Father, Vairochana manifests or spreads forth as seed, or semen, all things; his shakti, the Mother of Great Space, is the Universal Womb into which the seed falls and evolves as the world—systems. Vajra—Sattva symbolizes Immutability. Ratna—Sambhava is the Beautifier, the Source of all Beauty in the Universe. Amitābha is Infinite Compassion and Love Divine, the Christos. Amogha—Siddhi is the personification of Almighty Power or Omnipotence. And the minor deities, heroes, dākinis (or ‘fairies’), goddesses, lords of death, rāk—s/iasas, demons, spirits, and all others, correspond to definite human thoughts, passions, and impulses, high and low, human and sub—human and superhuman, in karmic form, as they take shape from the seeds of thought forming the percipient’s consciousness—content (cf. p. 219).

As the Bardo Th’ödol text makes very clear by repeated assertions, none of all these deities or spiritual beings has any real individual existence any more than have human beings: ‘It is quite sufficient for thee [i. e. the deceased percipient] to know that these apparitions are [the reflections of] thine own thought—forms’ (p. 104). They are merely the consciousness—content visualized, by karmic agency, as apparitional appearances in the Intermediate State—airy nothings woven into dreams.

The complete recognition of this psychology by the deceased sets him free into Reality. Therefore is it that the Bardo Thödoly as the name implies, is The Great Doctrine of Liberation by Hearing and by Seeing.

The deceased human being becomes the sole spectator of a marvellous panorama of hallucinatory visions; each seed of thought in his consciousness—content karmically revives; and he, like a wonder—struck child watching moving pictures cast upon a screen, looks on, unaware, unless previously an adept in yoga of the non—reality of what he sees dawn and set.

At first, the happy and glorious visions born of the seeds of the impulses and aspirations of the higher or divine nature awe the uninitiated ; then, as they merge into the visions born of the corresponding mental elements of the lower or animal nature, they terrify him, and he wishes to flee from them ; but, alas, as the text explains, they are inseparable from himself, and to whatsoever place he may wish to flee they will follow him.

It is not necessary to suppose that all the dead in the Intermediate State experience the same phenomena, any more than all the living do in the human world, or in dreams. The Bardo Thödol is merely typical and suggestive of all after—death experiences. It merely describes in detail what is assumed will be the Bardo visualizations of the consciousness—content of the ordinary devotee of the Red Hat School of Padma Sambhava. As a man is taught, so he believes. Thoughts being things, they may be planted like seeds in the mind of the child and completely dominate his mental content. Given the favourable soil of the will to believe, whether the seed—thoughts be sound or unsound, whether they be of pure superstition or of realizable truth, they take root and flourish, and make the man what he is mentally.

Accordingly, for a Buddhist of some other School, as for a Hindu, or a Moslem, or a Christian, the Bardo experiences would be appropriately different: the Buddhist's or the Hindu's thought—forms, as in a dream state, would give rise to corresponding visions of the deities of the Buddhist or Hindu pantheon; a Moslem's, to visions of the Moslem Paradise; a Christian's, to visions of the Christian Heaven, or an American Indian's to visions of the Happy Hunting Ground. And, similarly, the materialist will experience after—death visions as negative and as empty and as deityless as any he ever dreamt while in the human body. Rationally considered, each person's after—death experiences, as the Bardo Thödol teaching implies, are entirely dependent upon his or her own mental content. In other words, as explained above, the after—death state is very much like a dream state, and its dreams are the children of the mentality of the dreamer. This psychology scientifically explains why devout Christians, for example, have had—if we are to accept the testimony of Christian saints and seers—visions (in a trance or dream state, or in the after—death state) of God the Father seated on a throne in the New Jerusalem, and of the Son at His side, and of all the Biblical scenery and attributes of Heaven, or of the Virgin and Saints and Archangels, or of Purgatory and Hell.

In other words, the Bardo Thödol seems to be based upon verifiable data of human physiological and psychological experiences; and it views the problem of the after—death state as being purely a psycho—physical problem; and is, therefore, in the main, scientific. It asserts repeatedly that what the percipient on the Bardo plane sees is due entirely to his own mental—content; that there are no visions of gods or of demons, of heavens or of hells, other than those born of the hallucinatory karmic thought—forms constituting his personality, which is an—impermanent product arising from the thirst for existence and from the will to live and to believe.

From day to day the Bardo visions change, concomitant with the eruption of the thought—forms of the percipient, until their karmic driving force exhausts itself; or, in other words, the thought—forms, born of habitual propensities, being mental records comparable as has already been suggested to records on a cinema—film, their reel running to its end, the after—death state ends, and the Dreamer, emerging from the womb, begins to experience anew the phenomena of the human world.

The Bible of the Christians, like the Koran of the Moslems, never seems to consider that the spiritual experiences in the form of hallucinatory visions by prophet or devotee, reported therein, may, in the last analysis, not be real. But the Bardo Thödol is so sweeping in its assertions that it leaves its reader with the clear—cut impression that every vision, without any exception whatsoever, in which spiritual beings, gods or demons, or paradises or places of torment and purgation play a part, in a Bardo or any Bardo—like dream or ecstasy, is purely illusionary, being based upon sangsāric phenomena.

The whole aim of the Bardo Thödol teaching, as otherwise stated elsewhere, is to cause the Dreamer to awaken into Reality, freed from all the obscurations of karmic or sangsāric illusions, in a supramundane or Nirvānic state, beyond all phenomenal paradises, heavens, hells, purgatories, or worlds of embodiment. In this way, then, it is purely Buddhistic and unlike any non—Buddhist book in the world, secular or religious.

IX. THE JUDGEMENT

The Judgement Scene as described in our text and that described in the Egyptian Book of the Dead seem so much alike in essentials as to suggest that common origin, at present unknown, to which we have already made reference. In the Tibetan version, Dharma—Raja (Tib. Shinje—ckho—gyal) King of the Dead (commonly known to Theravādists as Yama—Rāja), the Buddhist and Hindu Pluto, as a Judge of the Dead, corresponds to Osiris in the Egyptian version. In both versions alike there is the symbolical weighing: before Dharma—Rāja there are placed on one side of the balance black pebbles and on the other side white pebbles, symbolizing evil and good deeds; and similarly, before Osiris, the heart and the feather (or else in place of the feather an image of the Goddess of Truth which it symbolizes) are weighed one against the other, the— heart representing the conduct or conscience of the deceased and the feather righteousness or truth.

In the Egyptian Book of the Dead, the deceased, addressing his heart, says: * Raise not thyself in evidence against me. Be not mine adversary before the Divine Circle; let there be no fall of the scale against me in the presence of the great god, Lord of Amenta.' In the Egyptian Judgement Scene it is the ape—headed (less commonly the ibis—headed) Thoth, god of wisdom, who supervises the weighing; in the Tibetan Judgement Scene it is the monkey—headed Shinje ; and in both scenes there is the jury of deities looking on, some animal—headed, some human—headed.¹ In the Egyptian version there is a monstrous creature waiting to devour the deceased should the deceased be condemned, whilst in the Tibetan version devils wait to conduct the evil—doer to the hell—world of purgation; and the record—board which Thoth is sometimes depicted as holding corresponds to the Mirror of Karma held by Dharma—Raja or, as in some versions, by one of the divine jury. Furthermore, in both Books of the Dead, the deceased when first addressing the Judge pleads that he has done no evil. Before Osiris, this plea seems to be accepted all the texts now known; before Dharma—Rāja it is subject to the test of the Mirror of Karma, and this seems to be distinctly an Indian and Buddhist addition to the hypothetical prehistoric version, whence arose the Egyptian and the Tibetan versions, the Egyptian being the less affected.

Plato, too, in recording the other—world adventures of Er, in the tenth book of the Republic, describes a similar Judgement, in which there are judges and kannic record—boards (affixed to the souls judged) and paths—one for the good, leading to Heaven, one for the evil, leading to Hell—and demons waiting to take the condemned souls to the place of punishment, quite as in the Bardo Thödol (see p. 49).²

The purgatorial lore now Christianized and associated with St. Patrick in the originally pagan St. Patrick's Purgatory in Ireland, the whole cycle of Otherworld and Rebirth legends of the Celtic peoples connected with their Fairy—Faith, and similar Proserpine lore recorded in the Sacred Books of mankind the world over, as well as the Semitic doctrines of heaven and hell and judgement, and of resurrection as the Christianized corruption of a pre—Christian and Jewish rebirth doctrine, as also the passage in Plato, all testify to beliefs universal among mankind, probably far older than the oldest of ancient records from Babylon or from Egypt.¹

The painting of the Tibetan Judgement Scene as reproduced herein (see opposite p. 166) was made, in strict accord with monastic tradition, in Gangtok, Sikkim, during the year 1919, by Lharipa—Pempa—Tendup—La, a Tibetan artist then sojourning there. An early prototype of it was, until quite recently, preserved as one of the old frescoes contained within the pictorial Wheel of Life of the Tashiding temple—picture in Sikkim, which Dr. L. A. Waddell has described as follows: * The judgement is in every case meted out by the impartial Shinje—chho—gyal or "Religious King of the Dead" [Dharma—Rāja] a form of Yama, the Hindu god of the dead, who holds a mirror in which the naked soul is reflected, while his servant Shinje weighs out in scales the good as opposed to the bad deeds; the former being represented by white pebbles, and the latter by black.² And Dr. Waddell has traced back the origin of the picture to a similar Wheel of Life, commonly, though incorrectly, known as the Zodiac' in the verandah of the Ajantā Cave No. XVII, India. (See p. 56.) This, then, establishes the antiquity of the Judgement Scene, of which our text contains one version.

Throughout the canonical and apocryphal literature of Northern Buddhism other versions are numerous. In the Pali canon of Southern Buddhism there are parallel versions, for example in the Devadūta Vagga of the Anguttara Nikāya and in the Devadūta Sūttam of the Majjhima Nikāya. The latter version may be summarized as follows: The Exalted One, the Buddha, while sojourning at the Jetavana Monastery, addresses the monks assembled therein concerning the after—death state of existence. Like a man of clear vision, sitting between two houses, each with six doors, He beholds all who come and go; the one house symbolizing the Bardo or state of disembodied existence, the other the embodied state of existence, and the twelve doors the six entrances and the six exits of the six Jokas. Then, after explaining the manner in which kanna governs all states of existence, the Buddha describes how the evil—doer is brought before the King of Death and questioned about the Five Messengers of Death.

The first messenger is symbolized by a new—born babe lying on its back; and the message is that even for it, as for all living creatures, old age and death are inevitable. The second messenger comes in the guise of an aged person, eighty, ninety, or a hundred years of age, decrepit, crooked as the curved rafter of a gabled roof, leaning on a staff, trembling as he walks, pathetically miserable, with youth entirely gone, broken—toothed, grey—haired and nearly bald, and with wrinkled brow; and his message is that the babe but grows up and matures and decays to become a victim of Death. The third messenger, a person confined by illness, rolling in his own filth, unable to rise or to lie down without the aid of an attendant, brings the message that disease, too, is inevitable, even as death. The fourth messenger, a thief undergoing most terrible punishment, bears the message that the punishment for evil—doing in this world is as nothing compared to the punishment which karma inflicts after death. The fifth messenger, to emphasize the same message of death and the corruptibility of the body, is a corpse, swollen, discoloured, and putrid.

In each instance, King Yama asks the deceased if he had seen the messenger and receives the reply, 'No \ Then the King explains to him who the messenger was and the meaning of the messages; and the deceased, thereby remembering, is obliged to confess that, not having done good deeds, he had not acted upon the messages, but had done evil instead, forgetting the inevitability of death. Thereupon, Yama pronounces the judgement, that since the deceased had failed to do good he must suffer the kannic consequences. Accordingly, the hell—furies take the deceased and cause him to suffer five sorts of purgatorial punishments; and, though he suffers most unbearable pains, he is, as the Bardo Th'ódol makes clear, incapable of dying

In the Angnttara NiKāya version, wherein there are but three messengers, the aged person, the man or woman overcome with disease, and the corpse, the Buddha concludes the discourse thus:

‘If men who have been warned by heavenly messengers have been indifferent as regards religion they suffer long, being born in a low condition.

‘If virtuous men have been warned by heavenly messengers in this world, they do not neglect to profess the holy doctrines. Seeing the danger of attachment, which is the cause of birth and death, they have in this life extinguished the miseries of existence by arriving at a condition free from fear, happy and free from passions and sins/^l

X. THE REBIRTH DOCTRINE

In examining the Rebirth Doctrine, more particularly as it presents itself in our text, two interpretations must be taken into account: the literal or exoteric interpretation, which is the popular interpretation; and the symbolical or esoteric interpretation, which is held to be correct by the initiated few, who claim not scriptural authority or belief, but knowledge. With respect to Tibet, these few are chiefly learned lāmas who are said to have made successful application of methods like those which the Buddha expounded for remembering past incarnations, and for acquiring the yogic power of seeing what really takes place in the natural process of death and rebirth. To the devotee, seeking thus to know rather than merely to believe on the authority of priests or books, the Buddha has offered the following guidance:

‘If he desireth to be able to call to mind his various temporary states in days gone by, such as one birth, two births, three, four, five, ten, twenty, thirty, forty, fifty, a hundred, a thousand, or a hundred thousand births, his births in many an aeon of destruction, in many an aeon of renovation, in many an aeon of both destruction and renovation [so as to be able to say] : " In that place such was my name, such my family, such my caste, such my subsistence, such my experience of comfort or of pain, and such the limit of my life; and when I passed from thence I took form again in that other place, where my name was so and so, such my family, such my caste, such my subsistence, such my experience of comfort or of pain, and such my term of life; and from thence I was born here—thus I am able to call to mind my various temporary states of existence in days gone by" —in that state of self—concentration, if the mind be fixed on the acquirement of any object, that object will be attained.

‘ If he desireth to see with pure and heavenly vision, surpassing that of men, beings as they pass from one state of existence and take form in others—beings base or noble, good—looking or ill—favoured, happy or miserable, according to the karma they inherit—in that state of self—concentration, if the mind be fixed on the acquirement of any object, that object will be attained’ (Lonaphala Vagga, Anguttara NiKāya).

Again in the Brāhmana Vagga > Anguttara NiKāya, where the yogh method of recovering from the content of the sub—consciousness (which—in confirmation of the Buddha’s psychology—the science of the West has now proven ‘is the abode of everything that is latent’ *) is likewise described, there is this additional passage: * Thus he calleth to mind the various appearances and forms of his previous births. This is the first stage of his knowledge; his ignorance [as regards prior births] hath vanished, and his knowledge [as regards prior births] hath arisen: darkness hath departed, and light hath arrived, the result due to one who liveth in meditation, subduing his passions promptly. ²

Nowhere, to our knowledge, are there nowadays—as there are said to have been in Buddhaghosa’s time— —yogis among Southern Buddhists who have carried this practice to a successful issue. It is only among Northern Buddhists (as among Hindus) that such yoga seems to be, according to trustworthy evidence from well—informed Tibetans and Indians, a practically applied science even until now, producing modern saints, some few of whom are believed worthy to be called perfected saints, or Arhants.

As the question, What is and is not the right interpretation of the Rebirth Doctrine ? is by no means settled among the Oriental peoples who hold the Doctrine, it is necessary for us frankly to recognize the problem as highly controversial. Consequently in this Section we should try to weigh both interpretations carefully; and, if possible, arrive at a sound conclusion, in order to guide the student aright in what is the most fundamental doctrine underlying the Bardo ThödoL. In doing so, it seems desirable to invoke the aid of such facts of Western Science as appear to be directly applicable.

As to the esoteric interpretation, the editor has discovered that the initiates who hold to it invariably follow the Buddha's command as contained in the K alarna Sütta, Angtttara NiKāya, or else the Hindu equivalent in works on Yoga, not to accept any doctrine as true until it be tested, and proven true, even though it be * found written in the Scriptures'; and they hold no Scriptures to be infallible, on this or any doctrine, or free from corruptions, Pali, Sanskrit, Tibetan, or others.

The exoteric interpretation, namely that the human stream of consciousness, that is to say, the human life—flux, not only can, but very often does take re—embodiment in sub—human creatures immediately after having been in human form, is accepted universally by Buddhists, both of the Northern and Southern Schools—as by Hindus—who, referring to Scriptures, invariably regard it as being incontrovertible. Their belief, being based on the authority of written records, and on untested theories of gurus and priests who consider the literally interpreted written records to be infallible and who are not adept in yoga, is nowadays considered to be the orthodox interpretation.

Over against the exoteric interpretation, which, without any doubt, the Bardo Thödol, if read literally, conveys, the esoteric interpretations may be stated—on the authority of the various philosophers, both Hindu and Buddhist, from whom the editor has received instruction—as follows:

The human form (but not the divine nature in man) is a direct inheritance from the sub—human kingdoms; from the lowest forms of life it has evolved, guided by an evergrowing and ever—changing life—flux, potentially consciousness, which figuratively may be called the seed of the life—force, connected with or overshadowing each sentient creature, being in its essence psychical. As such, it is the evolving principle, the principle of continuity, the principle capable of acquiring knowledge and understanding of its own nature, the principle whose normal goal is Enlightenment. And, just as the physical seed of a vegetable or animal organism— even man’s seed—is seen by the eyes to be capable of producing after its own kind only, so with that which figuratively may be called the psychical seed of the life—flux which the eyes cannot see—if of a human being it cannot incarnate in, or overshadow, or be intimately bound up with a body foreign to its evolved characteristics, either in this world, in Bardo, or in any realm or world of sangsāric existence This is held to be a natural law governing the manifestation of life, as inviolable as the law of karma which sets it into operation.

For a human life—flux to flow into the physical form of a dog, or fowl, or insect, or worm, is, therefore, held to be as impossible as would be—let us say—the transferring of the waters of Lake Michigan into the depression occupied by the waters of Lake Killarney, or—as the Hindu would say—as putting into the bed of the Ganges River the waters of the Indian Ocean.

Degeneration, in a highly developed flowering plant, or apple, or vegetable, or wheat, or animal, is, of course, concomitant with cultural neglect; but within this creation period—at least so far as the physical vision of science has penetrated therein—the flowering plant does not degenerate into the apple, nor into the corn, nor one species of animals into another, nor does man degenerate into anything but the savage man—never into a sub—human creature. As to the processes affecting the life—flux which the human eye cannot see, the esoteric teaching coincides with that of the ancient Greek and Egyptian mystics: ‘As below, so above’; which implies that there is one harmonious karmic law governing with unwavering and impartial justice the visible as well as the invisible operations of nature.

From this follows the corollary, which the Oriental advocates of the esoteric interpretation give out: Progression or retrogression—never an unchanging neutral state of inactivity—are the alternatives within the Sangsāra) and the one or the other, within any of the mansions of existence, cannot lead the life—flux to the threshold of that mansion—neither the sub—human to the human, nor the human to the subhuman—save step by step. And retrogression and progression alike are time—processes: ages pass ere the fire—mist becomes the solidified planet; an Enlightened One is the rare fruit of unknown myriads of embodiments; and man, the highest of the animal—beings, cannot become the lowest of the animal—beings, no matter how heinous his sins, at one bound.

Given ages of continual retrogression, the life—flux which is now human may cease to be human, the human constituents of it becoming atrophied or latent through lack of exercise, in much the same way as atrophy overcomes the activity of a bodily organ or function which is not used. Thereupon, being no longer kinetically, but merely potentially human—just as a dog or horse or elephant are potentially, but not kinetically, human—that life—flux can and ordinarily would fall back into the sub—human kingdoms, whence it may begin anew to rise upwards to the human state or continue to retrograde even below the brute world.

The late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup, the translator, has left on record his own complementary opinion, as follows: ‘The forty—nine days of the Bardo symbolize ages either of evolution or of degeneration. Intellects able to grasp Truth do not fall into the lower conditions of existence.

‘The doctrine of the transmigration of the human to the sub—human may apply solely to the lower or purely brutish constituents of the human principle of consciousness; for the Knower* itself neither incarnates nor re—incarnates—it is the Spectator.

‘In the Bardo Thödol> the deceased is represented as retrograding, step by step, into lower and lower states of consciousness. Each step downwards is preceded by a swooning into unconsciousness; and possibly that which constitutes his mentality on the lower levels of the Bardo is some mental element or compound of mental elements formerly a part of his earth—plane consciousness, separated, during the swooning, from higher or more spiritually enlightened elements of that consciousness. Such a mentality ought not to be regarded as on a par with a human mentality; for it seems to be a mere faded and incoherent reflex of the human mentality of the deceased. And perhaps it is some such thing as this which incarnates in sub—human animal bodies—if anything does in a literal sense.’

This theory, coming from the translator, is unusually interesting, for he expressed it while quite unaware of its similarity to the theory held esoterically by the Egyptian priests and exoterically recorded by Herodotus, who, apparently, became their pupil in the monastic college at Heliopolis. Judging from what Herodotus and others of the ancient Greeks, and Romans as well, have written touching thereon, we arrive at the following summary: The human soul was believed to remain in the after—death state during a period of three thousand years. Its human—plane body of the moment of death disintegrating, the constituents went to form the bodies of animals and plants, transmigrating from one to another during the three thousand years. At the end of that period the soul gathers together the identical particles of matter which had thus been continually transmigrating and which had constituted its former earth—plane body of the moment of death, and from them rebuilds, through habit, as a bird its nest, a new body and is reborn in it as a human being.¹ And this theory, when amended with certain necessary modifications, helps to illustrate the symbolical or esoteric interpretation of the Bardo Rebirth Doctrine.

In further illustration, applicable to the higher Hinduism as to the higher Buddhism, advocates of this interpretation point out that even before the final dissolution of the human body of the moment of death there is incessant transmigration of the bodily atoms. So long as the body is the receptacle of the consciousness—principle, it is said to renew itself completely every seven years. And even as the constituents of the physical man thus transmigrate throughout all organic and inorganic kingdoms and the mind remains unchangedly human during the brief cycle of one life—time, so, normally, it likewise remains human during the greater evolutionary cycle—i. e. until it reaches the end of all sang̃s̃aric evolution, namely, Nirvānic Enlightenment.

The esoteric teaching concerning this may be stated literally: That which is common to the human and to the sub—human worlds alike, namely, matter in its varied aspects as solids, liquids, and gases, eternally transmigrates. That which is specifically human and specifically sub—human remains so, in accordance with the law of nature that like attracts like and produces like, that all forces ever follow the line of least resistance, that such highly evolved mental compounds as are bound up with the complex human consciousness cannot be disintegrated instantaneously, but require due allowance of time for their degeneration and ultimate dissolution and transmigration.¹

Accordingly, the esotericists hold it to be unscientific to believe that a human life—flux or consciousness—principle could re—incarnate in the body of a sub—human creature within forty—nine days after its extraction from the human form, as the exotericist believes who accepts literally such a rebirth doctrine as the Bardo Thödol, when viewed exoterically, or literally, presents.

The Bardo rebirth symbols themselves ought now to be considered from the standpoint of the esoteric interpretation; and to elucidate them innumerable parallels could be chosen from widely separated sources, but because of its recognized authority no parallel seems more appropriate than that contained in the tenth book of Plato's Republic describing certain of the Greek Heroes in the Sidpa Bardo choosing their bodies for the next incarnations:

The Bardo legend as recorded in the Republic concerns Er the son of Armenius, a Pamphylian by birth, who, as Plato tells us, 'was slain in battle, and ten days afterwards, when the bodies of the dead were taken up already in a state of corruption, his body was found unaffected by decay, and carried home to be buried. And on the twelfth day, as he was lying on the funeral pile, he returned to life and told them what he had seen in the other world. He said that when his soul left the body he went on a journey with a great company, and they came to a mysterious place at which there were two openings in the earth ; they were near together, and over against them were two other openings in the heaven above. In the intermediate space there were judges seated, who commanded the just, after they had given judgement on them and had bound their sentences in front of them, to ascend by the heavenly way on the right hand ; and in like manner the unjust were bidden by them to descend by the lower way on the left hand ; these also bore the symbols of their deeds, but fastened to their backs.’

Having thus described the otherworld Judgement—which closely resembles the Judgement described in our text—Plato goes on to describe the souls of the Greek Heroes in their Sidpa Bardo preparing for reincarnation: ‘Most curious, he said, was the spectacle—sad and laughable and strange; for the choice of the souls was in most cases based on their own experience of a previous life. There he saw the soul which had once been Orpheus choosing the life of a swan out of enmity to the race of women, hating to be born of a woman because they had been his murderers; he beheld also the soul of Thamyras choosing the life of a nightingale; birds, on the other hand, like the swan and other musicians, wanting to be men. The soul which obtained the twentieth lot chose the life of a lion, and this was the soul of Ajax the son of Telamón, who would not be a man, remembering the injustice which was done him in the judgement about the arms. The next was Agamemnon, who took the life of an eagle, because, like Ajax, he hated human nature by reason of his sufferings. About the middle came the lot of Atalanta; she, seeing the great fame of an athlete, was unable to resist the temptation : and after her there followed the soul of Epeius the son of Panopeus passing into the nature of a woman cunning in the arts; and far away among the last who chose, the soul of the jester Thersites was putting on the form of a monkey. There came also the soul of Odysseus having yet to make a choice, and his lot happened to be the last of them all. Now the recollection of former toils had disenchanted him of ambition, and he went about for a considerable time in search of the life of a private man who had no cares; he had some difficulty in finding this which was lying about and had been neglected by everybody else; and when he saw it he said that he would have done the same had his lot been first instead of last, and that he was delighted to have it. And not only did men pass into animals, but I must also mention that there were animals tame and wild which changed into one another and into corresponding human natures—the good into the gentle and the evil into the savage, in all sorts of combinations.’

If read superficially, this Platonic account of the rebirth process may be understood literally—even as the Bardo Thödol may be; and it is not impossible to imagine that Plato, as an initiate into the Greek Mysteries, who, like Herodotus, never refers to their esoteric teachings openly, but only in figurative and very often intentionally misleading phraseology, intended that it should be understood so by the uninitiated. Nevertheless, when the passage is examined closely, the exoteric doctrine of transmigration of the human into the sub—human, or vice versa, is evidently not the meaning underlying it.

The reference to the choice made by Odysseus, as italicized by us, gives the clue to the real meaning intended. Odysseus' choice was last; each of the heroes preceding him in choosing their lot had neglected the lot of * the life of a private man who had no cares', and Odysseus chooses this lot as the best of all.

If we consider the sort of life chosen by each of the Greeks who preceded Odysseus, we find it to be definitely symbolical of the character of the chooser:

Thus, Orpheus, the founder of the Orphic Mysteries, a divine teacher sent to instruct mankind by the god of song and music, Apollo, and held by the Greeks to have been the greatest of harp—players and the most enlightened of poets and singers, very appropriately chooses * the life of a swan'; for since immemorial time the swan has symbolized—as it still does—song and music; and Plato's figurative language, correctly interpreted, implies that Orpheus was to reincarnate as a great poet and musician, as was but natural. To assume—as the exotericist may—that such a being as Orpheus could be born as a swan in reality thus appears to the esotericist to be untenable.

Likewise, Thamyras, an ancient Thracian bard, renowned as a harp—player and singer, symbolically chooses the life of the sweet—singing nightingale.

Ajax, the Homeric hero, who, next to Achilles, was the bravest of the Greeks, most fittingly chooses the life of a lion ; for the king of beasts is, and has been for unknown ages, the symbol denoting bravery or fearlessness, which almost all nations and races of men have recognized.

Agamemnon, the next to choose, selects the life of an eagle; for among Greek heroes he was the chief, as Zeus was among the gods of Olympus; and, he having been regarded as an incarnation of Zeus and worshipped as one of the divinities, there is assigned to him the symbol of Zeus, which is the eagle.

Atalanta, the most swift—footed of mortals and famous for her foot—races with her many suitors, very naturally is reborn as a great athlete; and, in her case, Plato uses no symbol. Nor is a symbol used in connexion with Epeius, who, noted for his cunning in constructing the wooden horse at the siege of Troy, and whose cowardice afterwards became proverbial, is seen ‘passing into the nature of a woman cunning in the arts’.

As to the jester Thersites, who puts on the form of a monkey, comment is unnecessary.

Accordingly, the expressions concerning the heroes’ hatred of being born of woman seem to be purely metaphorical and employed to carry out logically the literary use of the animal—symbols, just as the passages are concerning ‘animals tame and wild which changed into one another and into corresponding human natures— the good into the gentle and the evil into the savage in all sorts of combinations’, and of ‘birds, on the other hand, like the swan and other musicians, wanting to be men’.

Even the ordinary soul, the first seen by Er to make choice—although neither an incarnate divinity like Orpheus or Agamemnon, nor a hero like Ajax—and though possessed of a mind obscured by animal propensities, is not assigned by Plato, as he would be by a believer in the exoteric rebirth doctrine, to birth in sub—human form. In his case, too, no animal—symbol is made use of:

‘He who had the first choice came forward and in a moment chose the greatest tyranny; his mind having been darkened by folly and sensuality, he had not thought out the whole matter before he chose, and did not at first perceive that he was fated, among other evils, to devour his own children. . . Now he was one of those who came from heaven, and in a former life had dwelt in a well—ordered State, but his virtue was a matter of habit only and he had no philosophy.’¹

And, as the Bardo Thödol teaches, in other language, in its insistence on the need of Right Knowledge to the devotee who follows the Bodhic Path, so Plato teaches:

‘For if a man had always on his arrival in this world dedicated himself from the first to sound philosophy, and had been moderately fortunate in the number of the lot, he might, as the messenger reported, be happy here, and also his journey to another life and return to this, instead of being rough and underground, would be smooth and heavenly.’¹

With the assistance of symbols and metaphors, Pindar, Empedocles, Pythagoras, and Socrates, like Plato and the Greek Mysteries, also taught the rebirth doctrine.

On a golden funereal tablet dug up near the site of Sybaris there is the following line of an inscription: ‘And thus I escaped from the cycle, the painful, the misery—laden.’² This, like known Orphic teachings, is purely Buddhistic and Hindu, and suggests that in ancient Greece the rebirth doctrine was widespread, at least among Greeks of culture who had been initiated into the Mysteries.

Symbolism similar to that used by Plato has been used by the recorders of the Buddhist Scriptures as well, as, for example, in the account of the Northern School of the birth of the Buddha Himself. This latter from the Tibetan Vinaya Pitaka or Dulva (the most trustworthy and probably oldest part of the Bkah—hgyur) III, folio 452 of the copy in the East India Office, Calcutta, runs thus:

‘Now the future Buddha was in the Tushita Heaven, and knowing that his time had come, he made the five preliminary examinations : first, of the proper family [in which to be born] ; second, of the country ; third, of the time; fourth, of the race; fifth, of the woman. And having decided that Mahāmāyā was the right mother, in the midnight watch he entered her womb under the appearance of an elephant. Then the queen had four dreams: first, she saw a six—tusked white elephant enter her womb; second, she moved in space above; third, she ascended a great rocky mountain ; fourth, a great multitude bowed down to her.

‘The soothsayers predicted that she would bring forth a son with the thirty—two signs of the great man. "If he stay at home, he will become a universal monarch; but if he shave his hair and beard, and, putting on an orange—coloured robe, leave his home for the homeless state and renounce the world, he will become a Tāthagata, Arhant, a perfectly enlightened Buddha.”’

Again, the Jātaka —of the Southern School,—a compilation of folk—lore, folk—belief, and popular mythology touching the Buddha and his many incarnations, which crystallized round about His personality in much the same way as the matter of the Arthurian Legend crystallized round about King Arthur, during the third century after His death¹—attributes to Him many previous births in sub—human form ; and although the esotericist would concede that in remote aeons of evolution such incarnations could possibly have been really sub—human, he would give to such of them as may have occurred in this world—period a symbolical significance, whereas the orthodox Theravādīst interprets all of them literally.

In any case, a literal interpretation of the Jātaka —seeing that it is, according to the esotericist, essentially an exoteric treatise designed for the people²—appears to be more plausible than that of the Dulva account of the Buddha's birth. Furthermore, since there is a parallel account in the Pali Scriptures wherein the same animal symbol, namely, the six—tusked white elephant, is employed, we have here an example of the use of symbolism, definite in purpose, common to both Northern and Southern Buddhism, which even the exotericist could not but interpret symbolically.

Similarly, as the popular interpretation appears to have fundamentally shaped the Jātaka, so it may have also affected the compilation of the Bardo Thödol for like all treatises which have had at least a germ—origin in very ancient times and then grown up by the ordinary process of amalgamating congenial material, the Bardo Thödo as a Doctrine of Death and Rebirth, seems to have existed at first unrecorded, like almost all sacred books now recorded in Pali, Sanskrit, or Tibetan, and was a growth of unknown centuries. Then by the time it had fully developed and been set down in writing no doubt it had lost something of its primitive purity. By its very nature and religious usage, the Bardo Thodol would have been very susceptible to the influence of the popular or exoteric view; and in our own opinion it did fall under it, in such manner as to attempt the impossible, namely, the harmonizing of the two interpretations. Nevertheless, its original esotericism is still discernible and predominant. Let us take, for example, the animal—thrones of the Five Dhyanī Buddhas as it describes them, in harmony with Northern Buddhist symbology: the Lion—throne is associated with Vairochana, the Elephant—throne with Vaira—Sattva, the Horse—throne with Ratna—Sambhava, the Peacock—throne with Ami—tābha, the Harpy—throne with Amogha—Siddhi. And, in interpreting the symbols, we find them to be poetically descriptive of the peculiar attributes of each deity: the Lion symbolizes courage or might, and sovereign power; the Elephant, immutability ; the Horse, sagacity and beauty of form; the Peacock, beauty and power of transmutation, because in popular belief it is credited with the power of eating poisons and transforming them into the beauty of its feathers; the Harpy, mightiness and conquest over all the elements. The deities, too, in the last analysis, are symbolical of particular Bodhic attributes of the Dharma—Kāya and of supramundane forces of Enlightenment emanating thence, upon which the devotee may depend for guidance along the Path to Buddhahood.

In attempting the esoteric interpretation of the animal symbols used in the Sidpa Bardo —and this interpretation finds its parallel in the esoteric interpretation obviously intended by the Sidpa Bardo episode in Plato, as in the Dulva account of the birth of the Buddha—we have sufficient Buddhist rebirth symbols whose esoteric interpretation is clearly known and generally accepted to guide us.

Dr. L. A. Waddell, a well-known authority on Lāmaism, in Lātnaism in Sikkim refers to the symbolism of the famous, but recently ruined, wall—painting of the Si—pa—i—khor—lo or * Circle of Existence' in the Tashiding monastery, Sikkim, as follows: * This picture is one of the purest Buddhist emblems that the lāmas have preserved for us. And by its means I have been able to restore the fragment of a cycle in the verandah of Ajantā Cave No. XVII, hitherto uninterpreted, and merely known as "the Zodiac". This picture portrays in symbolic and concrete form the three original sins and the recognized causes of rebirth (Nidānas), so as to ensure their being vividly perceived and avoided; while the evils of existence in its various forms and the tortures of the damned are intended to intimidate evil—doers.¹In it, the three original sins are depicted as a pig, a cock, and a snake, and their esoteric significance is given by Dr. Waddell thus: 'The pig symbolizes the ignorance of stupidity; the cock, animal desire or lust; and the snake, anger.'¹ In the accompanying symbolic illustrations of the Twelve Nidānas, only the third is an animal symbol, the others being human and figurative symbols; and this is a monkey eating fruit, symbolizing entire knowledge (Tib. nam—she ; Skt. Vijnāna) of good and evil fruits, through tasting every fruit or sensuous experience in the manner of a roving non—philosophically guided libertine, thus engendering consciousness.²

Accordingly, the animal forms and environments named in the Second Book of the Bardo Thödol (see pp. 178—9, 185) as possible forms and environments to be entered by the human consciousness—principle upon rebirth in this world may be interpreted as follows:

(1) The dog—form (like that of the cock in ‘The Wheel of Life’) symbolizes excessive sexuality or sensuality.³ It also symbolizes, in popular Tibetan lore, jealousy. And the dog—kennel environment symbolizes abiding in, or living in, a state of sensuality.

(2) The pig symbolizes (as in ‘The Wheel of Life’) the ignorance of stupidity dominated by lust; and selfishness and uncleanness as well. The pigsty environment symbolizes worldly existence dominated by these characteristics.

(3) The ant symbolizes (as it does amongst the nations of the West) industry, and the lust for worldly possessions; and the ant—hill environment the dwelling under the corresponding conditions of life.

(4) The insect or grub symbolizes an earthly or grovelling disposition, and its hole the dwelling in an environment dominated by such disposition (see text, p. 179).

(5) The calf, kid, lamb, horse, and fowl forms mentioned (see text, pp. 178—9) symbolize, in like manner, corresponding characteristics common to those animals and to the highest of the animal beings, man, such as almost all civilized races have associated therewith, and popularly illustrated in animal mythology like that which Aesop made the basis of his Fables, In the Old Testament the visions of the prophet Ezekiel and in the New Testament the Revelation of John show how similar animal symbolism affected even the Bible. And, in our view, should the Buddhist and Hindu exotericists re—read their own Scriptures in the light of the Science of Symbols their opposition to Esotericism would probably be given up.

Accordingly, the animal symbols in the Sidpa Bardo — despite evident corruptions of the text and of the esoteric rebirth doctrine denoted by these symbols—should rightly be taken to imply that, in accordance with its karma, a human principle of consciousness, unless winning Emancipation, will, under the normal karmic conditions of gradual progression which govern the majority of mankind, continue to be born in a human form in this creation—period, with the mental traits or characteristics symbolized by animals. Under exceptional or abnormal karmic conditions of retrogression, it may, on the other hand, during the course of ages, gradually lose its human nature and fall back into sub—human kingdoms.

As the translator explained, we need but look round us in the human world to find the bloodthirsty tiger—man, the murderer; the lustful swine—man; the deceitful fox—man; the thieving and imitating monkey—man; the grovelling worm—man; the industrious and oft—times miserly ant—man; the ephemeral—sometimes professedly aesthetic—butterfly—man ; the strong ox—man; or the fearless lion—man. Human life is far richer in possibilities for the workings out of evil karma—no matter how animal—like the karma may be—than any sub—human species could possibly be. The illiterate folk—beliefs so common in Buddhist and Hindu lands, that a human murderer must inevitably be reborn as a ferocious beast of prey, or a sensualist as a pig or dog, or a miser as an ant, are, therefore, like many other popular beliefs, evidently based upon false analogies—some of which have crept into Oriental Scriptures—and upon an unduly limited view of the innumerable conditions offered by human embodiment, from the saint to the criminal, from the King—Emperor to the slum—dweller, or from the man of culture to the lowest savage.

In accordance with our findings, that higher and rational teaching concerning rebirth, which in the Bardo Thödol is, perhaps, confused because of corruptions of text, may now be summarized. If, on the Plane of Uncertainty, the influence of innate or karmic propensities of desire for the grosser sensations of sangsāric existence, such as govern life in a human body, can be dominated through the exercise of the more powerful influence of Right Knowledge, that part of the consciousness—principle capable of realizing Buddhahood triumphs, and the deceased, instead of being obsessed with the frightful hallucinatory spectres of his lower or animal nature, passes the interval between human death and rebirth in one of the paradise realms instead of in the Bardo. If such a more enlightened one be very unusually developed spiritually, that is to say if he be a great yogic saint, he may gain even the highest of the paradises and be reborn among mankind under the guiding power of the 'Lords of Karma, who, though still sangsāric beings, are described by the lāmas as being immeasurably higher in evolution than man. When thus directed by the * Guardians of the Great Law', the earth—returning one is said to reincarnate out of compassion, to assist human kind; he comes as a Teacher, as a Divine Missionary, as a Nirmāna—Kāya incarnate. Normally, however, rebirth is of the lower or ordinary sort, unendowed—because of the lack of enlightenment of the one undergoing it—with consciousness of the process. Even as a child knowing not the higher mathematics cannot measure the velocity of light, so the animal—man cannot profit by the higher law governing the rebirth of the divine—man; and, drinking of the River of Forgetfulness, he enters the door of the womb and is reborn, direct from the desire—world called the Bardo. This lower rebirth, almost brutish in many instances, because controlled chiefly by animal propensities such as sub—human and human creatures have in common, differs, however, from that of brutes in virtue of the functional activity of the purely human element of the consciousness, which in all sub—human creatures is latent and not active; and for this element, even in the lowest of mankind, to become latent instead of active requires approximately as long a period of cyclic time as it does for the sub—human consciousness to evolve its latent human element into full human activity. The popular misunderstanding of this aspect of the higher or esoteric Doctrine of Rebirth thus appears to have assisted in no small measure to give rise to the obviously irrational belief, found almost everywhere throughout the Scriptures of both Buddhism and Hinduism, that the brute principle of consciousness in its entirety and the human principle of consciousness in its entirety are capable of alternately exchanging places with one another.

It was the late Dr. E. B. Tylor, father of the modern science of Anthropology, who after a very careful examination of the data pronounced the higher doctrine of rebirth to be the more reasonable:

' So it may seem that the original idea of transmigration was the straightforward and reasonable one of human souls being reborn in new human bodies. . . . The beast is the very incarnation of familiar qualities of man; and such names as lion, bear, fox, owl, parrot, viper, worm, when we apply them as epithets to men, condense into a word some leading feature of a human life.¹ That this is the true interpretation is confirmed—so far as Europe is concerned—by the teachings of the Druids, the learned Brahmin—like priests of Europe's scientific pre-Christian religion, held by the Celtic nations.¹

In The Fairy—Faith in Celtic Countries, in the year 1911, I suggested that the rebirth doctrine, in its straightforward, Druidic form, accords, in its essentials, with the psychological science of the West—that the subconscious mind is the storehouse of all latent memories; that these memories are not limited to one lifetime; that these memory—records, being recoverable, prove the doctrine to be based upon demonstrable facts. Since the year 1911 the whole trend of Western psychological research in the realm of the subconscious and in psycho—analysis has tended to confirm that view.

I was unaware when I wrote The Fairy—Faith that Huxley held—as he did—the theory of human reincarnation to offer the best explanation of even ordinary physiological and biological phenomena. And since the testimony of Huxley, as one of the greatest biologists, coincides with that, as above given, of the late Dr. Tylor, the foremost of modern anthropologists, and also confirms from the standpoint of our own Western Science the higher or esoteric interpretation of the Rebirth Doctrine as offered by the Occult Sciences of the East, we here record it as a fitting conclusion to this Section:

‘Everyday experience familiarizes us with the facts which are grouped under the name of heredity. Every one of us bears upon him obvious marks of his parentage, perhaps of remoter relationships. More particularly, the sum of tendencies to act in a certain way, which we call "character", is often to be traced through a long series of progenitors and collaterals. So we may justly say that this "character"—this moral and intellectual essence of a man—does veritably pass over from one fleshly tabernacle to another, and does really transmigrate from generation to generation. In the new—born infant, the character of the stock lies latent, and the Ego is little more than a bundle of potentialities. But, very early, these become actualities ; from childhood to age they manifest themselves in dullness or brightness,—weakness or strength, viciousness or uprightness; and with each feature modified by confluence with another character, if by nothing else, the character passes on to its incarnation in new bodies. The Indian philosophers called character, as thus defined, "karma". . .

‘In the theory of evolution, the tendency of a germ to develop according to a certain specific type, e.g. of the kidney—bean seed to grow into a plant having all the characters of Phaseolus vulgaris, is its " Karma ". It is the " last inheritor and the last result " of all the conditions that have affected a line of ancestry which goes back for many millions of years, to the time when life first appeared on the earth. . . .

‘As Prof. Rhys—Davids aptly says [in Hibbert Lectures, p. 114], the snowdrop "is a snowdrop and not an oak, and just that kind of snowdrop, because it is the outcome of the Karma of an endless series of past existences".¹

XI. THE COSMOGRAPHY

Buddhist cosmography as understood by the lāmas, and continually referred to throughout our text, more especially in connexion with the Doctrine of Rebirth, is a very vast and complex subject; and to consider it here in any detail would involve the esoteric as well as the exoteric interpretation of an enormous mass of doctrines, more or less of Brahmanic origin, concerning the many states of sentient existence within the Sangsāra, or cosmos—some planetary as in this world, some in the many heavens and paradises, and others in the numerous states of purgation called hells. Generalizing, it may be said that when the Brahmanic and Buddhist teachings concerning cosmography are carefully examined from the standpoint of the initiated Oriental, and not from the too—oft prejudiced standpoint of the Christian philologist, it seems to suggest far—reaching knowledge, handed down from very ancient times, of astronomy, of the shape and motion of planetary bodies, and of the interpenetration of worlds and systems of worlds, some solid and visible (such as are alone known to Western Science) and some ethereal and invisible existing in what we may perhaps call a fourth dimension of space.

Esoterically explained, Mt. Meru (Tib. Ri—rab) the central mountain of Hindu and Buddhist cosmography, round which our cosmos is disposed in seven concentric circles of oceans separated by seven intervening concentric circles of golden mountains, is the universal hub, the support of all the worlds. We may possibly regard it, like the Central Sun of Western astronomy, as the gravitational centre of the known universe. Outside the seven circles of oceans and the intervening seven circles of golden mountains lies the circle of continents.

In illustration, an onion of fifteen layers may be taken to represent roughly the lámate conception of our universe. The core, to which the fifteen layers cohere, is Mt. Meru. Below, are the various hells ; above, supported by Mt. Meru, are the heavens of the gods, the more sensuous, like the thirty—three heavens ruled by Indra, and those under the sway of Mara, being ranged in their own regular gradation beneath the less sensuous heavens of Brāhma. As apex over all, is the final heaven, called ‘The Supreme’ (Tib. ‘Gg—min). Being the last outpost of our universe, ‘Og—min’ as the vestibule to Nirvana, is the transitional state leading from the mundane to the supramundane; and thus there presides over it the divine influence of ‘The Best of All’ (Tib. Kuntu—zang—po) Skt. Samanta—Bhadra), the lātnaic personification of Nirvana.

On a level with Indra’s realm dwell, in their own heaven worlds, the eight Mother Goddesses (Tib. Hlāmo)> all of whom appear in our text. They are the Mother Goddesses of the early Hindus, called in Sanskrit the Matrix.

Within Mt. Meru itself, upon which the Heavens rest, there are four realms, one above another. Of these, the three lower are inhabited by various orders of genii; and in the fourth, immediately beneath the Heavens, from which, like the fallen angels of Christian belief, they were expelled on account of their pride, dwell the * Ungodly Spirits’, the Asuras (Tib. Lha—ma—yitt) or Titans, who, as rebels, live and die waging unending war with the gods above.

The innermost layer of the onion is the Ocean surrounding Mt.

Meru. The next layer, outwardly expanding, is that of the Golden Mountains; the next beyond is another Ocean; and so on, a circle of Golden Mountains always coming after a circle of Ocean until the fifteenth layer containing the outermost Ocean, in which float the Continents and their satellites. The skin of the onion is a wall of iron enclosing the one universe.

Beyond one such universe there lies another, and so on to infinity.¹ Each universe, like a great cosmic egg, is enclosed within the iron—wall shell, which shuts in the light of the sun and moon and stars, the iron—wall shell being symbolical of the perpetual darkness separating one universe from another. All universes alike are under the domination of natural law, with which karma is commonly made synonymous; for, in the Buddhist view, there is no scientific necessity to affirm or to deny the existence of a supreme God—Creator, the Karntic Law furnishing a complete explanation of all phenomena and being of itself demonstrable.

Each universe, like our own, rests upon ‘a warp and woof’ of blue air (i.e. ether), symbolized by crossed dorjes (such as are depicted by the emblem on the cover of our book). Upon this rests ‘the body of the waters’ of the outer Ocean. Each Ocean symbolizes a stratum of air (or ether), and each of the intervening mountains a stratum of congealed air (or ether), that is to say, material substance; or, from a more occult view—point, the Oceans are the Subtle and the Mountains the Gross, the one alternating with the other as Opposites.

Like the Seven Days of the Mosaic version of Creation, the numerical dimensions which the lāmas assign to our universe are more often to be taken as suggestive or symbolical than literal. Mt. Meru, they say, towers 80,000 miles above the Central Enchanted Ocean and extends below the surface of the waters the same distance, the Central Ocean itself being also 80,000 miles deep and 80,000 miles wide. The succeeding girdle of Golden Mountains is just half that number of miles in height and width and depth, and the next Ocean, correspondingly, 40,000 miles deep and 40,000 miles wide. The consecutive circles of alternating pairs composed of Golden Mountains and an Enchanted Ocean gradually diminish as to width, depth, and height, being respectively 20,000, 10,000, 5,000, 2,500, 1,250, and 625 miles. This brings us to the Continents in the Outer Ocean of Space.

Of these Continents, the four chief ones—as described in the Second Book of our Bardo Thödol—Kxz situated in the Four Directions. On either side of each of these Four Continents are smaller or satellite Continents, thus making the total number of Continents twelve, which, again, is a symbolical number, like the number seven of the cosmographical arrangement.

The Eastern Continent is called in Tibetan Lii—pah (Lus—hpags) or ‘Vast Body’ (Skt. Virat—deha). Its symbolical shape is like that of a crescent moon; and, accordingly, the colour white is assigned to it, and crescentic faces are ascribed to its inhabitants, who are said to be tranquil—minded and virtuous. Its diameter is given as being 9,000 miles.

The Southern Continent is our Planet Earth, called Jambu—ling (Skt. Jambūdvīpa), probably an onomatopoeic word—as the translator held—descriptive of the fruit of a jambu—tree falling into water, ling itself meaning ‘place’, or ‘region’. The name Jatnbuling would thus mean the region or continent wherein jambu—fruit fall into the water. Its symbolic shape is like that of the shoulder—blade of a sheep, that is sub—triangular, or rather pear—shaped, to which the faces of its inhabitants conform. Blue is the colour assigned to it. Riches and plenty abound in it, along with both good and evil. It is said to be the smallest of the Four Continents, being but 7,000 miles in diameter.

The Western Continent is called Balongchöd (Ba—glang—spyöd), literally meaning cow + ox faction (Skt. Godhana, or ‘Wealth of Oxen’). In shape it is like the sun, and red of colour. Its inhabitants, whose faces are round like the sun, are believed to be very powerful and to be addicted to eating cattle, as the literal meaning of its name itself may suggest. Its diameter measures 8,000 miles.

The Northern Continent is Daminyan, or Graminyan (Sgra—mi—snyan), equivalent to the Sanskrit Uttara Kuru, meaning ‘Northern Kuru [Race]’. It is of square shape and green colour. Its inhabitants have corresponding faces, square like those of horses. Trees supply all their sustenance and wants, and the Kuru, on dying, haunt the trees as tree—spirits. This is the largest of the Continents, being 10,000 miles in diameter.

Each satellite Continent resembles the Continent to which it is attached, and is one—half its size. The left Satellite of our world

(Jambūdvīpa), called Ngāyabaling is, for example, the world of the Rākṣasas, to which Padma Sambhava, the Great Guru of Lāmaism, is believed to have gone to teach the Rākṣasas goodness and salvation, and to be there now as their king.¹

Underlying this lāmaic cosmology there is, as research will show, an elaborate symbolism. Take, for instance, the description of Mt. Meru as given by Dr. Waddell: * Its eastern face is of silver, the south of jasper, the west of ruby, and the north of gold²—which illustrates a use of ancient symbols very similar to that in the Revelation of John. The complete rational explanation of all the symbolism connected with Hindu and in turn Buddhist cosmography would be—even if it were possible for us—quite beyond the scope of an introduction. Suffice it to say that the possession of a key to such explanation is claimed by expert professors of the Occult Sciences in India and in Tibet—compared to which, in the realm of mind and matter, our Western Science is, so they maintain, but at the Threshold of the Temple of Understanding.

XII. THE FUNDAMENTAL TEACHINGS SUMMARIZED

Ere passing on to the final Sections of this Introduction, touching the Manuscript itself, we may now summarize the chief teachings upon which the whole of the Bardo Thödol is based, as follows:

1. That all possible conditions, or states, or realms of sang—sāric existence, heavens, hells, and worlds, are entirely dependent upon phenomena, or, in other words, are nought but phenomena;

2. That all phenomena are transitory, are illusionary, are unreal, and non—existent save in the sangsāric mind perceiving them;

3. That in reality there are no such beings anywhere as gods, or demons, or spirits, or sentient creatures—all alike being phenomena dependent upon a cause;

4. That this cause is a yearning or thirsting after sensation, after the unstable sangsāric existence;

5. That so long as this cause is not overcome by Enlightenment death follows birth and birth death, unceasingly—even as the wise Socrates believed;

6. That the after—death existence is but a continuation, under changed conditions, of the phenomena—born existence of the human world—both states alike being karmic;

7. That the nature of the existence intervening between death and rebirth in this or any other world is determined by antecedent actions;

8. That, psychologically speaking, it is a prolonged dreamlike state, in what may be called the fourth dimension of space, filled with hallucinatory visions directly resultant from the mental—content of the percipient, happy and heaven—like if the karma be good, miserable and hell—like if the karma be bad;

9. That, unless Enlightenment be won, rebirth in the human world, directly from the Bardo—world or from any other world or from any paradise or hell to which karma has led, is inevitable;

10. That Enlightenment results from realizing the unreality of the sangsāra, of existence;

11. That such realizing is possible in the human world, or at the important moment of death in the human world, or during the whole of the after—death or Bardo—state, or in certain of the non—human realms;

12. That training in yoga, i.e. in control of the thinking processes so as to be able to concentrate the mind in an effort to reach Right Knowledge, is essential;

13. That such training can best be had under a human guru, or teacher;

14. That the Greatest of Gurus known to mankind in this cycle of time is Gautama the Buddha ;

15. That His Doctrine is not unique, but is the same Doctrine which has been proclaimed in the human world for the gaining of Salvation, for the Deliverance from the Circle of Rebirth and Death, for the Crossing of the Ocean of Sangsāra, for the Realization of Nirvana, since immemorial time, by a long and illustrious Dynasty of Buddhas, who were Gautama's Predecessors;

16. That lesser spiritually enlightened beings, Bodhisattvas and gurus, in this world or in other worlds, though still not freed from the

Net of Illusion, can, nevertheless, bestow divine grace and power upon the shishya (i.e. the chela, or disciple) who is less advanced upon the Path than themselves;

17. That the Goal is and can only be Emancipation from the Sangsāra ;

18. That such Emancipation comes from the Realization of Nirvana ;

19. That Nirvana is non—sangsāric, being beyond all paradises, heavens, hells, and worlds;

20. That it is the Ending of Sorrow;

21. That it is Reality.

He who realized Nirvana, the Buddha Gautama Himself, has spoken of it to His own disciples thus:

‘There is, disciples, a Realm devoid of earth and water, fire and air. It is not endless space, nor infinite thought, nor nothingness, neither ideas nor non—ideas. Not this world nor that is it I call it neither a coming nor a departing, nor a standing still, nor death, nor birth; it is without a basis, progress, or a stay ; it is the ending of sorrow.

’ For that which dingeth to another thing there is a fall; but unto that which dingeth not no fall can come. Where no fall cometh, there is rest, and where rest is, there is no keen desire. Where keen desire is not, naught cometh or goeth ; and where naught cometh or goeth there is no death, no birth. Where there is neither death nor birth, there neither is this world nor that, nor in between—it is the ending of sorrow,

‘There is, disciples, an Unbecome, Unborn, Unmade, Unformed ; if there were not this Unbecome, Unborn, Unmade, Unformed, there would be no way out for that which is become, bom, made, and formed; but since there is an Unbecome, Unborn, Unmade, Unformed, there is escape for that which is become, born, made, and formed.’¹

XIII. THE MANUSCRIPT

Our manuscript copy of the Bardo Thödol was procured by the editor early in the year 1919 from a young lāma of the Kargyūtpa

Sect of the Red Hat School attached to the Bhutia Basti Monastery, Darjeeling, who said that it had been handed down in his family for several generations. The manuscript is unlike any other seen by the translator or editor, in that it is illustrated by paintings in colour painted on the folios of the text. All other similarly illustrated Tibetan manuscripts seen by us have had the illustrations made on separate pieces of manuscript paper or else of cotton cloth, pasted to the folios. When procured, the manuscript was in a very ragged and worn condition, now remedied by each folio being inserted in a protective frame of Tibetan paper of the same sort as that upon which the manuscript is written. Fortunately, all of the illuminated folios, though faded, were in a fair state of preservation. One of the ordinary folios, folio number 111, was missing, but this has now been replaced by a faithful copy of the same passage found in a Block—Print version of the Bardo Thödol belonging to Dr. Johan Van Manen, Secretary of the Asiatic Society, Calcutta, well known as a Tibetan scholar. Reference to this Block—Print version is made throughout our translation. In all essentials, and, generally, word for word, our manuscript and Dr. Van Manen's Block—Print were found to be identical. In some spellings of proper names of deities of Sanskrit origin there are variations in the two versions, and in both books a number of clerical errors. The manuscript is far older than the modern Block—Print and seems to have been copied from an earlier manuscript.

The manuscript itself is undated, but the translator judged it to be from 150 to 300 years old. It has seen very much service, having been read many times over the dead; its ragged and worn condition is, therefore, no criterion—as it might seem to be—of its age. It is written in an excellent hand on the ordinary paper used for manuscripts among the Tibetans and Himalayan peoples, made from the pulped bark of the Hdal (pronounced Dää) > otherwise known as Daphne, a kind of laurel of which one species bears a purplish white blossom, another a yellowish white. It is usually by lāmas in a monastery that the paper is manufactured. On account of the bark of the Hdal being extremely tough, the Sikkimese used it as ropes.

The total number of folios composing the manuscript is 137, each measuring about 91/2 by 31/4 inches. Excepting the first folio and the first half of the second, the space actually occupied by the text on each measures on an average $8\frac{1}{4}$ by $2\frac{1}{4}$ inches. Most of the folios contain five lines of matter, a few contain four lines. The title—page contains two lines in a space 7 by 1 inches; the second page of the first folio along with the first page of the second folio, which give the Obeisances, consist of three lines, occupying a space $4\frac{1}{4}$ by $2\frac{1}{4}$ inches respectively, and these, like the title—page, are written in gold (now much faded) on a black background. The illustrations are on fourteen of the folios, each illustration being in the centre of the text, on one side of the folio (see Frontispiece), as follows:

On folio 18, Vairochana embraced by his shakti, the Mother of the Space of Heaven, seated upon a lion throne, the deities of the First Day ;

On folio 20, Vajra—Sattva, embraced by his shakti, the Mother Māmaki, surrounded by their four accompanying deities of the Second Day;

On folio 23, Ratna—Sambhava, embraced by his shakti, the Mother Sangyay Chanma (‘ She of the Buddha Eye’), surrounded by their four accompanying deities of the Third Day;

On folio 36, Amitābha, embraced by his shakti, the Mother Gökarmo (‘ She of White Raiment’), surrounded by their four accompanying deities of the Fourth Day ;

On folio 31, Amogha—Siddhi, embraced by his shakti, the Faithful Dölma (or Skt. Tāra), surrounded by their four accompanying deities of the Fifth Day;

On folio 35, the united māndalas of the deities that dawn on the Sixth Day;

On folio 44, the māndala of the Ten Knowledge—Holding Deities of the Seventh Day;

On folio 55, the Buddha Heruka and shakti of the Eighth Day;

On folio 57, the Vajra Heruka and shakti of the Ninth Day;

On folio 58, the Ratna Heruka and shakti of the Tenth Day;

On folio 59, the Padma Heruka and shakti of the Eleventh Day;

On folio 61, the Karma Heruka and shakti of the Twelfth Day;

On folio 64, the Eight Kerima and the Eight Htamenma of the Thirteenth Day; and the Four Female Door—keepers of the Fourteenth Day;

On folio 67, the māṇḍala of the animal-headed deities of the Fourteenth Day.

Each deity is depicted in conformity with the description given in the text as to colour, position, posture, mudra, and symbols.

All of the illustrations in the manuscript thus belong to the Chönyid Bardo of the First Book. In our translation, copious annotations contain the textual name of each deity and the Sanskrit equivalent when, as in most cases, there is one.

No attempt has been made to collate our manuscript with other manuscripts of the same text, none having been available. Such manuscripts are, no doubt, numerous in Tibet, and the production of a standard or uniform text would require years of careful labour—a task remaining for scholars of the future. The only comparison of texts attempted was with Dr. Van Manen's Block—Print, which is probably not more than about twenty to thirty years old. The translator said that, so far as he was aware, Block—Prints of the Bardo Thödol have appeared—at least in Sikkim and Darjeeling—rather recently, although probably known in Tibet itself much longer, block—type printing having been carried on for unknown centuries in China, and thence brought to Tibet, long before printing was done in Europe.¹

Each Buddhist Sect in Tibet, according to the opinion of the translator, probably has its own version of the Bardo Thödol more or less changed in some details, but not in essentials, from our version, the version used by the reformed Gelugpa, otherwise known as the Yellow—Hat School, being the most altered, with all references to Padma Sambhava, the Founder of the Ñingmapa, the Red—Hat School of Lāmaism, as well as the names of deities peculiar to the Red—Hats, expurgated.

Major W. L. Campbell, who was the British Political Representative in Sikkim during my residence there, wrote to me, from the Residency in Gangtok, under date of the twelfth of July, 1919, concerning the various versions of the Bardo Thödol, as follows: * The Yellow Sect have six, the Red Sect seven, and the Kar—gyut—pas five.'

Our text being of the primitive or Red—Hat School and attributed to the Great Guru Padma Sambhava himself, who introduced Tantric Buddhism into Tibet, has been deemed by us to be substantially representative of the original version, which, on the basis of internal evidence derived from our manuscript text, was probably, at least in essentials, pre—Buddhistic.

As elsewhere noted, our manuscript is arranged as one work in two parts or books, with thirteen folios of texts of Bardo prayers as an appendix at the end. The Block—Print is arranged as two distinct books and lacks the appendix of prayers. But at the end of the first book of the Block—Print there comes a very important account of the origin of the Bardo Thödol, which is not contained in our manuscript, and this is given in translation in the following Section.

XIV. THE ORIGIN OF THE BARDO THÖDOL

Thus, from the Block—Print, and also from other Tibetan sources, we learn that the Bardo Thödol text originated, or, what is perhaps more correct, was first committed to writing in the time of Padma Sambhava, in the eighth century A. D.; was subsequently hidden away, and then, when the time came for it to be given to the world, was brought to light by Rigzin Karma Ling—pa. The Block—Print account is as follows:

‘This has been brought from the Hill of Gampodar (Tib. Gatnpodar), on the bank of the Serdan (Tib. Gser—ldan, meaning ‘Possessing Gold’ or ‘Golden’) River, by Rigzin Karma Ling—pa (Tib. Rigs—hdzin Kar—ma Gling—pa).

Rigzin, as herein given, is a personal title, and Karma Ling—pa the name of a place in Tibet meaning ‘Karma Land’. The translator has pointed out that Rigs is an erroneous spelling of Rig; for, if Rigs were correct, the name Rigzin would mean Class—Holder (Rigs + hZin). That Rig is intended—thus making the name mean Knowledge—Holder (Rig + hdzin), a caste or class designation¹—was confirmed by a small section of a Bardo Thödol manuscript in the possession of the translator, in which Rigzin Karma Ling—pa is otherwise called Tertön (Tib. Gter—bston), or ‘Taker—Out of Treasures’. The Bardo Thödol is, therefore, one of the Tibetan Lost Books recovered by Rigzin of Karma Ling—pa, who is held to be an emanation or incarnation of Padma Sambhava, the Founder of Lāmaism.

It was in the eighth century A. D. that Lāmaism, which we may define as Tantric Buddhism, took firm root in Tibet. A century earlier, under the first king to rule over a united Tibet, King Srong—Tsan—Gampo (who died in A.D. 650), Buddhism itself entered Tibet from two sources: from Nepal, the land of the Buddha's ancestors, through the Tibetan King's marriage with a daughter of the royal family of Nepal; and from China, through his marriage—in the year 641—with a princess of the Chinese Imperial Family. The King had been nurtured in the old Bön faith of Tibet, which, with its primitive doctrine of rebirth, was quite capable of serving as an approach to Buddhism; and under the influence of his two Buddhist wives he accepted Buddhism, making it the state religion; but it made little headway in Tibet until a century later, when his powerful successor, Thl—Srong—Detsan, held the throne from A.D. 740 to 786. It was Thl—Srong—Detsan who invited Padma Sambhava (Tib. Pednia Jungue, i.e. 'The Lotus—Born'), better known to the Tibetans as Guru Rin—po—clie, 'The Precious Guru' to come to Tibet. The famous Guru was at that time a Professor of Yoga in the great Buddhist University of Nālanda, India, and far—famed for expert knowledge of the Occult Sciences. He was a native of Udyāna or Swat, in what is now a part of Afghanistan.

The Great Guru saw the wonderful opportunity which the King's invitation offered, and promptly accepted the call, passing through Nepal and arriving at Saniye (Sam—yas) Tibet, in the year 747. It was to Samye that the King had invited him, in order to have exorcized the demons of the locality; for as soon as the walls of a monastery which the King was having erected there were raised they were overthrown by local earthquakes, which the demons opposing Buddhism were believed to have caused. When the Great Guru had driven out the demons, all the local earthquakes ceased, much to the wonder of the people; and he himself supervised the completion of the royal monastery, and established therein the first community of Tibetan Buddhist lāmas, in the year .749.

During his sojourn in Tibet at that time, and during subsequent visits, Padma Sambhava had many Tantric books translated into Tibetan out of Indian Sanskrit originals— some of which have been preserved in the monasteries of Tibet—and hidden away with appropriate mystic ceremonies in various secret places. He also endowed certain of his disciples with the yogic power of reincarnating at the proper time, as determined by astrology, in order to take them out, along with the treasures hidden away with them and the requisites needed for properly performing the rites described in the texts. This is the generally accepted tradition; but according to another tradition the Tertons are to be regarded as various incarnations of the Great Guru himself. According to a rough estimate, the religious texts already taken out by such Tertons, from century to century, would form an encyclopaedia of about sixty—five volumes of block—prints, each, on an average, consisting of about four hundred ordinary—sized folios.

Our text, the Bardo ThödoU being one of these recovered apocryphal books, should, therefore, be regarded as having been compiled (for the internal evidence suggests that it was a Tibetan compilation rather than a direct translation from some unknown Sanskrit original) during the first centuries of Lāmaism, either—as it purports to have been—in the time of Padma Sambhava or soon afterwards. Its present general use all over Tibet as a funeral ritual and its acceptance by the different sects, in varying versions, could not have been the outcome of a few generations; it testifies rather convincingly to its antiquity, bears out the pre—Buddhistic and at least partially Bön origin which we attribute to it, and suggests some validity in the claims made for the Tertóns.

We are well aware of the adverse criticisms passed by European critics on the Tertön tradition. There is not lacking, nevertheless, sound reason for suspecting that the European critics are not altogether right. Therefore, it seems to us that the only sound attitude to assume towards the Tertön problem is to keep an open mind until sufficient data accumulate to pronounce judgement. Though the Tertön claim be proven false, the fact that the Bardo Thödol is now accepted as a sacred book in Tibet and has for some considerable time been used by the lāmas for reading over the dead would, of course, not be affected; only the theory concerning the textual compilation of what, in its essentials, is apparently a prehistoric ritual would be subject to revision.

As for Padma Sambhava's own sources, apart from such congenial traditional teachings as no doubt he incorporated in some of his Tibetan treatises, we are told, by oral tradition now current among the lāmas, that he had eight gurus in India, each representing one of the eight chief Tantric doctrines

In a Tibetan block—print, which belonged to the translator, purporting to record the history, but much mixed with myth, of the Great Guru entitled Orgyan—Padmas—mzad—paJti—bkah—thang—bsdüid—pa (pronounced Ugyan Padtnay—zad—pai—ba—thang—du—pa), meaning 'The Abridged Testament made by Ugyan Padma' (or 'by the Lotus-Born Ugyan'—Padma Sambhava), consisting of but seventeen folios, there is recorded on the twelfth folio, sixteenth section, the following passage, confirming the historical tradition touching the origin of the Bardo Thödol text:

'Behold! the Sixteenth Section, showing the Eight Ling—pas, the Leaders of Religion, is [thus]:

'The Eight Incarnations of the Great Bodhisattvas are:

Ugyan—ling—pa, in the centre;
Dorje—ling—pa, in the east;
Rinchen—ling—pa, in the south;
'Padma—ling—pa, in the west;
'Karma—ling—pa, in the north;
'Samten—ling—pa and Nyinda—ling,
'[And] Shig—po—ling (or Terdag—ling).
'These Eight Great Tertöns shall come;
'Mine own incarnations alone are they.'

Padma Sambhava himself is herein represented as declaring that the Tertöns 'or *Takers—out' of the hidden books, are to be his own incarnations. According to this account, the Tertön of our own book, the Bardo TAödol, is the fifth, named after the place called Karma Land, thus confirming the Block—Print of the Bardo Th'ödol and Karma Land is in the northern quarter of Tibet. We have been unable to ascertain the exact time in which this Tertön lived, although he is a popular figure in the traditional history of Tibet. The name Rigzin, given to him in the Block Print first above quoted, meaning 'Knowledge—Holder', riféis to his character as a religious devotee or lāma; Karma ling—pa, as given in both accounts, refers also to an ancient Tibetan monastery of primitive Lāmaism in the Kams Province, northern Tibet.

According to our view, the best attitude to take touching the uncertain history and origin of the Bardo Thödol is that of a critical truth—seeker who recognizes the anthropological significance of the passing of time, and of the almost inevitable reshaping of ancient teachings handed down at first orally and then, after having crystallized, being recorded in writing. As in the case of the Egyptian Bardo Thödol, popularly known as 'The Egyptian Book of the Dead', so in 'The Tibetan Book of the Dead', there is, no doubt, the record of the belief of innumerable generations in a state of existence after death. No one scribe could have been its author and no one generation its creator; its history as a book, if completely known, could only be the history of its compilation and recording; and the question, Whether this compilation and recording were done within comparatively recent times, or in the time of Padma Sambhava or earlier? could not fundamentally affect the ancient teachings upon which it is based.

Although it is remarkably scientific in its essentials, there is no need to consider it as being accurate in all its details; for, undoubtedly, considerable corruption has crept into the text. In its broad outlines, however, it seems to convey a sublime truth, heretofore veiled to many students of religion, a philosophy as subtle as that of Plato, and a psychical science far in advance of that, still in its infancy, which forms the study of the Society for Psychical Research. And, as such, it deserves the serious attention of the Western World, now awakening to a New Age, freed, in large measure, from the incrustations of medievalism, and eager to garner wisdom from all the Sacred Books of mankind, be they of one Faith or of another.

XV. THE TRANSLATING AND THE EDITING

Although the translating of this manuscript was done wholly in the presence of the editor in Gangtok, Sikkim, the chief credit should be given to the late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup, the translator. The LāMa himself aptly summarized the editor's part in the work by saying that the editor was his living English dictionary. Indeed the editor could have been little more than this, for his knowledge of Tibetan was almost as nothing.

The aim of both the translator and the editor has been to keep as closely to the sense of the text as the idiomatic structures of the Tibetan and English tongues permit. Sometimes the translator, preferring to render into English the real meaning which a lāma would derive from certain more or less technically—worded phrases, has departed from a strictly literal translation.

The Tibetan of Tantric texts, such as ours, is especially difficult to turn into good English ; and owing to the terseness of many passages it has been necessary to interpolate words and phrases, which are bracketed.

In years to come, it is quite probable that our rendering— as has been the case with the pioneer translations of the Bible —may be subject to revision. A strictly literal rendering of a work so abstruse in its real meanings as this, and written in symbolical language as well, if attempted by Europeans—who, finding it difficult to get out of their Western mentality, too often are Christians first and scholars second when working with non—Christian sacred texts—would, perhaps, be as misleading as some of their renderings of the ancient Sanskrit Vedas. Even to a Tibetan, unless he be a lāma and well versed in Tantricism, as the translator was, the Bardo Thödol is almost a sealed book.

His profound lāmate training, his fervent faith in the higher yogU teachings of The Great Perfectionist School of Guru Padma Sambhava (he being an initiate of the semi—reformed sect known as Kargyutpa, founded by the great yogis Marpa and Milarepa), his practical knowledge of the Occult Sciences as taught to him by his late Guru in Bhutan, and his marvellous command both of English and of Tibetan, lead me to think that rarely, if ever again in this century, is there likely to arise a scholar more competent to render the Bardo Thödol than the late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup, the actual translator. To him each reader of this book owes a debt of gratitude; for herein he has, in part, opened to the peoples of the West the treasure—house, so long tightly locked, of Tibetan Literature and Northern Buddhism.

As his close disciple for many months, I hereby formally acknowledge that debt of gratitude and respect which is ever due from the disciple to the teacher.

Though the translation was completed and revised by the translator during the year 1919, whilst he was the Head Master of the Maharaja's Bhutia Boarding School, chiefly for Sikkimese boys of good Tibetan ancestry, near Gangtok, Sikkim (formerly a part of Tibet), it is unfortunate for us that he is not now in this world to read the printer's proofs of it as he had hoped to do.

As to the transliterations, it may rightly be objected by philologists that they are in some instances less technically exact than they might be. The editor, however, preferring to preserve the simpler transliterations according to the old* fashioned style—to which ordinary readers are more accustomed—just as the translator dictated them to him, has left them unchanged save for the correcting of a few obvious errors which had crept in.

The editor himself cannot expect, in a book of this nature, that his own interpretations of controversial problems will meet with universal acceptance; nor can he hope to have escaped all error. He trusts, however, that critics, in recognizing the pioneer character of the work, will be prepared to concede to the editor, as to the translator, such measure of indulgence as it may perhaps seem to deserve.

A brief account of the unusual career of the translator will, no doubt, be interesting to all who read this book. The late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup—the honorific term Kazi indicating his superior social standing as a member of a landholding family of Tibetan origin settled in Sikkim—was born on the seventeenth day of June, 1868.

From December of the year 1887 and until October, 1893, as a young man whose learning the British authorities of India had already recognized, he was stationed at Buxaduar, in Bhutan, as Interpreter to the British Government. (In later years he also acted as Interpreter to the Government of Tibet.) It was at Buxaduar that he first met his guru, commonly known there as The Hermit Guru Norbu (Slob—dpon—mt shams—pa—Norbu —pronounced Lob—on—tshatn—pa—Norbu), a man of vast knowledge and of strict ascetical habits of life; and from him, afterwards, received the mystic initiation.

The late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup once confided to me that at that time he had made all necessary preparations, as a shishya on probation, to renounce the world completely; but his father, then an old man, called him home and requested him to perform the usual duties of an eldest son and marry, to perpetuate the family. The son had no option, and he married; two sons and one daughter being born to him.

In the year 1906 the Maharaja of Sikkim appointed him Head Master of the Gangtok School, where, in the early part of the year 1919, I first met him, through a letter of introduction from Mr. S. W. Laden La, Sardar Bahadur, Chief of Police, Darjeeling, who is a well—known Buddhist Scholar of Tibetan ancestry. About a year later, in 1920, after our work together was finished, the LāMa was appointed Lecturer in Tibetan to the University of Calcutta ; but, very unfortunately, as is usual with peoples habituated to the high Himalayan regions, he lost his health completely in the tropical climate of Calcutta, and departed from this world on the twenty—second day of March, 1933.

As records of the LāMa's ripe scholarship, there are his English—Tibetan Dictionary published by the University of Calcutta in 1919, and his edition of the Shrīchakrasambhava Tantra with English translation and Tibetan text, published by Sir John Woodroffe (pseudonym, Arthur Avalon) as volume ii of Tantrik Texts, London, 1919. In addition to these, and a few small works published by the Asiatic Society of Calcutta, the LāMa left behind him many important translations out of the Tibetan, as yet unpublished, some with the editor, others with Sir E. Denison Ross and with Major W. L. Campbell.

May this book help further to perpetuate the memory of him who revered the teachings of the Great Masters of Tibetan Wisdom and bequeathed this translation of the Bardo Th'ödol to the English—speaking peoples of the world.

‘The Dharma—Kāya of thine own mind thou shalt see; and seeing That, thou shalt have seen the All—The Vision Infinite, the Round of Death and Birth and the State of Freedom.’ —Milarepa.

Jetsün Kahbum, xii (LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup’s Translation.)

[BOOK I]
[THE CHIKHAI BARDO AND THE CHÖNYID BARDO]

HEREIN LIETH THE SETTING—FACE—TO—FACE TO THE REALITY IN THE INTERMEDIATE STATE: THE GREAT DELIVERANCE BY HEARING WHILE ON THE AFTER—DEATH PLANE, FROM ‘THE PROFOUND DOCTRINE OF THE EMANCIPATING OF THE CONSCIOUSNESS BY MEDITATION
UPON THE PEACEFUL AND WRATHFUL DEITIES’¹

DEATH’S MESSENGERS

‘ALL they who thoughtless are, nor heed, what time death’s messengers appear,
Must long the pangs of suffering feel
In some base body habiting.
But all those good and holy men,
What time they see death’s messengers,
Behave not thoughtless, but give heed
To what the noble doctrine says;
And in attachment frightened see
Of birth and death the fertile source,
And from attachment free themselves,
Thus birth and death extinguishing.
Secure and happy ones are they,
Released from all this fleeting show;
Exempted from all sin and fear,
All misery have they overcome.’

Atiguitara—N’kāya, iii. 35⁵ (Warren’s Translation).

[THE OBEISANCES]

To the Divine Body of Truth,¹ the Incomprehensible, Boundless Light;

To the Divine Body of Perfect Endowment,² Who are the Lotus and the Peaceful and the Wrathful Deities;³

To the Lotus—born Incarnation, Padma Sambhava,⁴ Who is the Protector of all sentient beings;

To the Gurus, the Three Bodies,⁵ obeisance.

[THE INTRODUCTION]

This Great Doctrine of Liberation by Hearing, which conferreth spiritual freedom on devotees of ordinary wit while in the Intermediate State, hath three divisions: the preliminaries, the subject—matter, and the conclusion.

At first, the preliminaries, *The Guide Series*⁶ for emancipating beings, should be mastered by practice.

[THE TRANSFERENCE OF THE CONSCIOUSNESS—PRINCIPLE⁷]

By The Guide, the highest intellects ought most certainly to be liberated; but should they not be liberated, then while in the Intermediate State of the Moments of Death they should practise the Transference, which giveth automatic liberation by one's merely remembering it.

Devotees of ordinary wit ought most certainly to be freed thereby; but should they not be freed, then, while in the Intermediate State [during the experiencing] of Reality, they should persevere in the listening to this Great Doctrine of Liberation by Hearing.

Accordingly, the devotee should at first examine the symptoms of death as they gradually appear [in his dying body], following Self—Liberation \by Observing the" \ Characteristics [of tAe] Symptoms of Death} Then, when all the symptoms of death are complete [he should] apply the Transference, which conferreth liberation by merely remembering [the process].²

[THE READING OF THIS THÖDOL]

If the Transference hath been effectually employed, there is no need to read this Thodol; but if the Transference hath not been effectually employed, then this Thödol is to be read, correctly and distinctly, near the dead body.

If there be no corpse, then the bed or the seat to which the deceased had been accustomed should be occupied [by the reader], who ought to expound the power of the Truth. Then, summoning the spirit [of the deceased], imagine it to be present there listening, and read.¹ During this time no relative or fond mate should be allowed to weep or to wail, as such is not good [for the deceased] ; so restrain them.²

If the body be present, just when the expiration hath ceased, either a lāma [who hath been as a guru to the deceased], or a brother in the Faith whom the deceased trusted, or a friend for whom the deceased had great affection, putting the lips close to the ear [of the body] without actually touching it,³ should read this Great Thödol

[THE PRACTICAL APPLICATION OF THIS THÖDOL BY THE OFFICIANT]

Now for the explaining of the Thödol itself:

If thou canst gather together a grand offering, offer it in worship of the Trinity. If such cannot be done, then arrange whatever can be gathered together as objects on which thou canst concentrate thy thoughts and mentally create as illimitable an offering as possible and worship.

Then the ‘Path of Good Wishes Invoking the Aid of the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas’ * should be recited seven times or thrice.

After that, the ‘Path of Good Wishes Giving Protection from Fear in the Bardo’,¹ and the ‘Path of Good Wishes for Safe Delivery from the Dangerous Pitfalls of the Bardo’, together with the ‘Root Words of the Bardo,’¹ are to be read distinctly and with the proper intonation.²

Then this Great Thödol is to be read either seven times or thrice,⁸ according to the occasion. [First cometh] the setting—face—to—face [to the symptoms of death] as they occur during the moments of death ; [second] the application of the great vivid reminder, the setting—face—to—face to Reality while in the

[PART I]
[THE BARDO OF THE MOMENTS OF DEATH]

[INSTRUCTIONS ON THE SYMPTOMS OF DEATH, OR THE FIRST STAGE OF THE CHIKHAI BARDO—, THE PRIMARY CLEAR LIGHT SEEN AT THE MOMENT OF DEATH]

The first, the setting—face—to—face with the Clear Light, during the Intermediate State of the Moments of Death, is:

Here [some there may be] who have listened much [to religious instructions] yet not recognized ; and [some] who, though recognizing, are, nevertheless, weak in familiarity. But all classes of individuals who have received the practical teachings [called] *Guides*² will, if this be applied to them, be set face to face with the fundamental Clear Light; and, without any Intermediate State, they will obtain the Unborn Dhartna—Kaya, by the Great Perpendicular Path.³

The manner of application is:

It is best if the guru from whom the deceased received guiding instructions can be had; but if the guru cannot be obtained, then a brother of the Faith; or if the latter is also unobtainable, then a learned man of the same Faith; or, should all these be unobtainable, then a person who can read correctly and distinctly ought to read this many times over. Thereby [the deceased] will be put in mind of what he had [previously] heard of the setting—face—to—face and will at once come to recognize that Fundamental Light and undoubtedly obtain Liberation.

As regards the time for the application [of these instructions]:

When the expiration hath ceased, the vital—force will have sunk into the nerve—centre of Wisdom¹ and the Knower² will be experiencing the Clear Light of the natural condition.³ Then, the vital—force,⁴ being thrown backwards and flying downwards through the right and left nerves,⁶ the Intermediate State momentarily dawns.

The above [directions] should be applied before [the vital—force hath] rushed into the left nerve [after first having traversed the navel nerve—centre].

The time [ordinarily necessary for this motion of the vital force] is as long as the inspiration is still present, or about the time required for eating a meal.¹

Then the manner of the application [of the instructions] is:

When the breathing is about to cease, it is best if the Transference hath been applied efficiently; if [the application] hath been inefficient, then [address the deceased] thus:

O nobly—born (so and so by name), the time hath now come for thee to seek the Path [in reality]. Thy breathing is about to cease. Thy guru hath set thee face to face before with the Clear Light; and now thou art about to experience it in its Reality in the Bardo state, wherein all things are like the void and cloudless sky, and the naked, spotless intellect is like unto a transparent vacuum without circumference or centre. At this moment, know thou thyself; and abide in that state. I, too, at this time, am setting thee face to face.

Having read this, repeat it many times in the ear of the person dying, even before the expiration hath ceased, so as to impress it on the mind [of the dying one].

If the expiration is about to cease, turn the dying one over on the right side, which posture is called the ‘Lying Posture of a Lion’. The throbbing of the arteries [on the right and left side of the throat] is to be pressed.

If the person dying be disposed to sleep, or if the sleeping state advances, that should be arrested, and the arteries pressed gently but firmly.² Thereby the vital—force will not be able to return from the median—nerve³ and will be sure to pass out through the Brahmanic aperture.⁴ Now the real setting—face—to—face is to be applied.

At this moment, the first [glimpsing] of the Bardo of the Clear Light of Reality, which is the Infallible Mind of the Dharma—Kāya, is experienced by all sentient beings.

The interval between the cessation of the expiration and the cessation of the inspiration is the time during which the vital—force remaineth in the median—nerve.²

The common people call this the state wherein the consciousness—principle³ hath fainted away. The duration of this state is uncertain. [It dependeth] upon the constitution, good or bad, and [the state of] the nerves and vital—force. In those who have had even a little practical experience of the firm, tranquil state of dkyāna, and in those who have sound nerves, this state continueth for a long time.⁴

In the setting—face—to—face, the repetition [of the above address to the deceased] is to be persisted in until a yellowish liquid beginneth to appear from the various apertures of the bodily organs [of the deceased].

In those who have led an evil life, and in those of unsound nerves, the above state endureth only so long as would take to snap a finger. Again, in some, it endureth as long as the time taken for the eating of a meal.

In various Tantras it is said that this state of swoon endureth for about three and one—half days. Most other [religious treatises] say for four days; and that this setting—face—to—face with the Clear Light ought to be persevered in [during the whole time].

The manner of applying [these directions] is:

If [when dying] one be by one's own self capable [of diagnosing the symptoms of death], use [of the knowledge] should have been made ere this.¹ If [the dying person be] unable to do so, then either the guru> or a skishya, or a brother in the Faith with whom the one [dying] was very intimate, should be kept at hand, who will vividly impress upon the one [dying] the symptoms [of death] as they appear in due order [repeatedly saying, at first] thus.²

Now the symptoms of earth sinking into water are come.³

When all the symptoms [of death] are about to be completed, then enjoin upon [the one dying] this resolution, speaking in a low tone of voice in the ear:

O nobly—born (or, if it be a priest, O Venerable Sir), let not thy mind be distracted.

If it be a brother [in the Faith], or some other person, then call him by name, and [say] thus:

O nobly—born, that which is called death being come to thee now, resolve thus: * O this now is the hour of death. By taking advantage of this death, I will so act, for the good of all sentient beings, peopling the illimitable expanse of the heavens, as to obtain the Perfect Buddhahood, by resolving on love and compassion towards [them, and by directing my entire effort to] the Sole Perfection.’

Shaping the thoughts thus, especially at this time when the Dharma—Kāya of Clear Light [in the state] after death can be realized for the benefit of all sentient beings, know that thou art in that state; [and resolve] that thou wilt obtain the best boon of the State of the Great Symbol,¹ in which thou art, [as follows]:

‘Even if I cannot realize it, yet will I know this Bardo, and, mastering the Great Body of Union in Bardo, will appear in whatever [shape] will benefit [all beings] whomsoever.² I will serve all sentient beings, infinite in number as are the limits of the sky.’

Keeping thyself unseparated from this resolution, thou shouldst try to remember whatever devotional practices thou wert accustomed to perform during thy lifetime.¹

In saying this, the reader shall put his lips close to the ear, and shall repeat it distinctly, clearly impressing it upon the dying person so as to prevent his mind from wandering even for a moment.

After the expiration hath completely ceased, press the nerve of sleep firmly; and, a lāma, or a person higher or more learned than thyself, impress in these words, thus:

Reverend Sir, now that thou art experiencing the Fundamental Clear Light, try to abide in that state which now thou art experiencing.

And also in the case of any other person the reader shall set him face—to—face thus :

O nobly—born (so—and—so), listen. Now thou art experiencing the Radiance of the Clear Light of Pure Reality. Recognize it. O nobly—born, thy present intellect,² in real nature void, not formed into anything as regards characteristics or colour, naturally void, is the very

Reality, the All—Good.³

Thine own intellect, which is now voidness, yet not to be regarded as of the voidness of nothingness, but as being the intellect itself, unobstructed, shining, thrilling, and blissful, is the very consciousness,¹ the All—good Buddha.²

Thine own consciousness, not formed into anything, in reality void, and the intellect, shining and blissful,—these two,—are inseparable. The union of them is the Dharma—Kāya state of Perfect Enlightenment.³

Thine own consciousness, shining, void, and inseparable from the Great Body of Radiance, hath no birth, nor death, and is the Immutable Light—Buddha Amitābha.⁴

Knowing this is sufficient. Recognizing the voidness of thine own intellect to be Buddhahood, and looking upon it as being thine own consciousness, is to keep thyself in the [state of the] divine mind⁵ of the Buddha.⁶

Repeat this distinctly and clearly three or [even] seven times. That will recall to the mind [of the dying one] the former [i. e. when living] setting—face—to—face by the guru. Secondly, it will cause the naked consciousness to be recognized as the Clear Light; and, thirdly, recognizing one's own self [thus], one becometh permanently united with the Dharma—Kāya and Liberation will be certain.¹

[INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING THE SECOND STAGE OF THE CHIKHAI BARDO. THE SECONDARY CLEAR LIGHT SEEN IMMEDIATELY AFTER DEATH]

Thus the primary Clear Light is recognized and Liberation attained. But if it be feared that the primary Clear Light hath not been recognized, then [it can certainly be assumed] there is dawning [upon the deceased] that called the secondary Clear Light, which dawneth in somewhat more than a mealtime period after that the expiration hath ceased.¹

According to one's good or bad karma, the vital—force floweth down into either the right or left nerve and goeth out through any of the apertures [of the body].² Then cometh a lucid condition of the mind.³

To say that the state [of the primary Clear Light] endureth for a meal—time period [would depend upon] the good or bad condition of the nerves and also whether there hath been previous practice or not [in the setting—face—to—face].

When the consciousness—principle getteth outside [the body, it sayeth to itself],ⁱ 'Am I dead, or am I not dead?' It cannot determine. It seeth its relatives and connexions as it had been used to seeing them before. It even heareth the wailings. The terrifying karmic illusions have not yet dawned. Nor have the frightful apparitions or experiences caused by the Lords of Death⁴ yet come.

During this interval, the directions are to be applied [by the lāma or reader]:

There are those [devotees] of the perfected stage and of the visualizing stage. If it be one who was in the perfected stage, then call him thrice by name and repeat over and over again the above instructions of setting—face—to—face with the Clear Light. If it be one who was in the visualizing stage, then read out to him the introductory descriptions and the text of the Meditation on his tutelary deity,¹ and then say,

O thou of noble—birth, meditate upon thine own tutelary deity.— [Here the deity's name is to be mentioned by the reader.²] Do not be distracted. Earnestly concentrate thy mind upon thy tutelary deity. Meditate upon him as if he were the reflection of the moon in water, apparent yet in—existent [in itself]. Meditate upon him as if he were a being with a physical body.

So saying, [the reader will] impress it.

If [the deceased be] of the common folk, say,

Meditate upon the Great Compassionate Lord.³

By thus being set—face—to—face even those who would not be expected to recognize the Bardo [unaided] are undoubtedly certain to recognize it.

Persons who while living had been set face to face [with the Reality] by a guru yet who have not made themselves familiar with it, will not be able to recognize the Bardo clearly by themselves. Either a guru or a brother in the Faith will have to impress vividly such persons.⁴

There may be even those who have made themselves familiar with the teachings, yet who, because of the violence of the disease causing death, may be mentally unable to withstand illusions. For such, also, this instruction is absolutely necessary.

Again [there are those] who, although previously familiar with the teachings, have become liable to pass into the miserable states of existence, owing to breach of vows or failure to perform essential obligations honestly. To them, this [instruction] is indispensable.

If the first stage of the Bardo hath been taken by the forelock, that is best. But if not, by application of this distinct recalling [to the deceased], while in the second stage of the Bardo, his intellect is awakened and attaineth liberation.

While on the second stage of the Bardo, one's body is of the nature of that called the shining illusory—body.¹

Not knowing whether [he be] dead or not, [a state of] lucidity cometh [to the deceased].² If the instructions be successfully applied to the deceased while he is in that state, then, by the meeting of the Mother—Reality and the Offspring—Reality,³ karma controlleth not.⁴ Like the sun's rays, for example, dispelling the darkness, the Clear Light on the Path dispelleth the power of karma.

¹ The Knower² hovereth within those places to which its activities had been limited. If at this time this special teaching be applied efficiently, then the purpose will be fulfilled; for the karmic illusions will not have come yet, and, therefore, he [the deceased] cannot be turned hither and thither [from his aim of achieving Enlightenment].

[PART II]
[THE BARDO OF THE EXPERIENCING OF REALITY]

[INTRODUCTORY INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING THE EXPERIENCING OF REALITY DURING THE THIRD STAGE OF THE BARDO, CALLED THE CHÖNYID BARDO, WHEN THE KARMIC APPARITIONS APPEAR]

But even though the Primary Clear Light be not recognized, the Clear Light of the second Bardo being recognized, Liberation will be attained. If not liberated even by that, then that called the third Bardo or the Chönyid Bardo dawneth.

In this third stage of the Bardo, the karmic illusions come to shine. It is very important that this Great Setting—face—to—face of the Chonyid Bardo be read : it hath much power and can do much good*

About this time [the deceased] can see that the share of food is being set aside, that the body is being stripped of its garments, that the place of the sleeping—rug 13 being swept;³ can hear all the weeping and wailing of his friends and relatives, and, although he can see them and can hear them calling upon him, they cannot hear him calling upon them, so he goeth away displeased.

At that time, sounds, lights, and rays—all three—are experienced. These awe, frighten, and terrify, and cause much fatigue. At this moment, this setting—face—to—face with the Bardo [during the experiencing] of Reality is to be applied. Call the deceased by name, and correctly and distinctly explain to him, as follows :

O nobly—born, listen with full attention, without being distracted: There are six states of Bardo, namely: the natural state of Bardo while in the womb;¹ the Bardo of the dream—state;² the Bardo of ecstatic equilibrium, while in deep meditation;³ the Bardo of the moment of death;⁴ the Bardo [during the experiencing] of Reality;⁶ the Bardo of the inverse process of sangsāric existence.⁶ These are the six.

O nobly—born, thou wilt experience three Bardos, the Bardo of the moment of death, the Bardo [during the experiencing] of Reality, and the Bardo while seeking rebirth. Of these three, up to yesterday, thou hadst experienced the Bardo of the moment of death. Although the Clear Light of Reality dawned upon thee, thou wert unable to hold on, and so thou hast to wander here. Now henceforth thou art going to experience the [other] two, the Chönyid Bardo and the Sidpa Bardo.

Thou wilt pay undistracted attention to that with which I am about to set thee face to face, and hold on:

O nobly—born, that which is called death hath now come. Thou art departing from this world, but thou art not the only one; [death] cometh to all. Do not cling, in fondness and weakness, to this life. Even though thou clingest out of weakness, thou hast not the power to remain here. Thou wilt gain nothing more than wandering in this Sangsāra! Be not attached [to this world]; be not weak. Remember the Precious Trinity.²

O nobly—born, whatever fear and terror may come to thee in the Chönyid Bardo forget not these words; and, bearing their meaning at heart, go forwards: in them lieth the vital secret of recognition:

‘Alas! when the Uncertain Experiencing of Reality is dawning upon me here,³

With every thought of fear or terror or awe for all [apparitional appearances] set aside,

May I recognize whatever [visions] appear, as the reflections of mine own consciousness;

May I know them to be of the nature of apparitions in the Bardo:

When at this all—important moment [of opportunity] of achieving a great end,

May I not fear the bands of Peaceful and Wrathful [Deities], mine own thought—forms.⁴

Repeat thou these [verses] clearly, and remembering their significance as thou repeatest them, go forwards, [O nobly—born]. Thereby, whatever visions of awe or terror appear, recognition is certain; and forget not this vital secret art lying therein.

O nobly—born, when thy body and mind were separating, thou must have experienced a glimpse of the Pure Truth, subtle, sparkling, bright, dazzling, glorious, and radiantly awesome, in appearance like a mirage moving across a landscape in spring—time in one continuous stream of vibrations. Be not daunted thereby, nor terrified, nor awed. That is the radiance of thine own true nature. Recognize it.

From the midst of that radiance, the natural sound of Reality, reverberating like a thousand thunders simultaneously sounding, will come. That is the natural sound of thine own real self. Be not daunted thereby, nor terrified, nor awed.

The body which thou hast now is called the thought—body of propensities.¹ Since thou hast not a material body of flesh and blood, whatever may come,—sounds, lights, or rays, —are, all three, unable to harm thee: thou art incapable of dying. It is quite sufficient for thee to know that these apparitions are thine own thought—forms. Recognize this to be the Bardo.

O nobly—born, if thou dost not now recognize thine own thought—forms, whatever of meditation or of devotion thou mayst have performed while in the human world—if thou hast not met with this present teaching—the lights will daunt thee, the sounds will awe thee, and the rays will terrify thee. Shouldst thou not know this all—important key to the teachings, —not being able to recognize the sounds, lights, and rays,—thou wilt have to wander in the Sangsāra.

[THE DAWNING OF THE PEACEFUL DEITIES, FROM THE FIRST TO THE SEVENTH DAY]

[Assuming that the deceased is karmically bound—as the average departed one is—to pass through the forty—nine days of the Bardo existence, despite the very frequent settings—face—to—face, the daily trials and dangers which he must meet and attempt to triumph over, during the first seven days, wherein dawn the Peaceful Deities, are next explained to him in detail; the first day, judging from the text, being reckoned from the time in which normally he would be expected to wake up to the fact that he is dead and on the way back to rebirth, or about three and one—half to four days after death.]

[THE FIRST DAY]

O nobly—born, thou hast been in a swoon during the last three and one—half days. As soon as thou art recovered from this swoon, thou wilt have the thought, ‘What hath happened!’

Act so that thou wilt recognize the Bardo. At that time, all the Sangsāra will be in revolution ;¹ and the phenomenal appearances that thou wilt see then will be the radiances and deities.² The whole heavens will appear deep blue.

Then, from the Central Realm, called the Spreading Forth of the Seed,³ the Bhagavān Vairochana,⁴ white in colour, and seated upon a lion—throne, bearing an eight—spoked wheel in his hand, and embraced by the Mother of the Space of Heaven,¹ will manifest himself to thee.

It is the aggregate of matter resolved into its primordial state which is the blue light.²

The Wisdom of the Dharma—Dhātu, blue in colour, shining, transparent, glorious, dazzling, from the heart of Vairochana as the Father—Mother, ¹ will shoot forth and strike against thee with a light so radiant that thou wilt scarcely be able to look at it.

Along with it, there will also shine a dull white light from the devas which will strike against thee in thy front.

Thereupon, because of the power of bad karma, the glorious blue light of the Wisdom of the Dharma—Dhātu will produce in thee fear and terror, and thou wilt [wish to] flee from it. Thou wilt beget a fondness for the dull white light of the devas.

At this stage, thou must not be awed by the divine blue light which will appear shining, dazzling, and glorious; and be not startled by it. That is the light of the Tathāgata⁴ called the Light of the Wisdom of the Dharma—Dkātu. Put thy faith in it, believe in it firmly, and pray unto it, thinking in thy mind that it is the light proceeding from the heart of the Bhagavān Vairochana coming to receive thee while in the dangerous ambushade of the Bardo. That light is the light of the grace of Vairochana.

Be not fond of the dull white light of the devas Be not attached [to it]; be not weak. If thou be attached to it, thou wilt wander into the abodes of the devds and be drawn into the whirl of the Six Lokas. That is an interruption to obstruct thee on the Path of Liberation. Look not at it. Look at the bright blue light in deep faith. Put thy whole thought earnestly upon Vairochana and repeat after me this prayer:

‘Alas! when wandering in the Sangsāra, because of intense stupidity,

On the radiant light—path of the Dhartna—Dhātu Wisdom
May [I] be led by the Bhagavān Vairochana, May the Divine Mother of Infinite Space be [my] rearguard ; May [I] be led safely across the fearful ambush of the Bardo;

May [I] be placed in the state of the All—Perfect Buddha—hood.²

Praying thus, in intense humble faith, [thou] wilt merge, in halo of rainbow light, into the heart of Vairochana, and obtain Buddhahood in the Satnbhoga—Kāya, in the Central Realm of the Densely—Packed.³

[THE SECOND DAY]

But if, notwithstanding this setting—face—to—face, through power of anger or obscuring karma one should be startled at the glorious light and flee, or be overcome by illusions, despite the prayer, on the Second Day, Vajra—Sattva and his attendant deities, as well as one's evil deeds [meriting] Hell, will come to receive one.

Thereupon the setting—face—to—face is, calling the deceased by name, thus:

O nobly—born, listen undistractedly. On the Second Day the pure form of water will shine as a white light. At that time, from the deep blue Eastern Realm of Pre—eminent Happiness, the Bhagavān Akshobhya [as] Vajra—Sattva,¹ blue in colour, holding in his hand a five—pronged *dorje seated upon an elephant—throne, and embraced by the Mother Māmakf³, will appear to thee, attended by the Bodhisattvas Kshiti—garbha⁴ and Maitreya,⁵ with the female Bodhisattvas, Lasema and Pushpema.⁶ These six Bodhic deities will appear to thee.

The aggregate of thy principle of consciousness,¹ being in its pure form—which is the Mirror—like Wisdom—will shine as a bright, radiant white light, from the heart of Vajra—Sattva, the Father—Mother,² with such dazzling brilliancy and transparency that thou wilt scarcely be able to look at it, [and] will strike against thee. And a dull, smoke—coloured light from Hell will shine alongside the light of the Mirror—like Wisdom and will [also] strike against thee.

Thereupon, through the power of anger, thou wilt beget fear and be startled at the dazzling white light and wilt [wish to] flee from it; thou wilt beget a feeling of fondness for the dull smoke—coloured light from Hell. Act then so that thou wilt not fear that bright, dazzling, transparent white light. Know it to be Wisdom. Put thy humble and earnest faith in it That is the light of the grace of the Bhagavān Vajra—Sattva. Think, with faith, * I will take refuge in it'; and pray.

That is the Bhagavān Vajra—Sattva coming to receive thee and to save thee from the fear and terror of the Bardo. Believe in it; for it is the hook of the rays of grace of Vajra—Sattva.⁴

Be not fond of the dull, smoke—coloured light from Hell. That is the path which openeth out to receive thee because of the power of accumulated evil karma from violent anger. If thou be attracted by it, thou wilt fall into the Hell—Worlds; and, falling therein, thou wilt have to endure unbearable misery, whence there is no certain time of getting out. That being an interruption to obstruct thee on the Path of Liberation, look not at it; and avoid anger.⁴ Be not attracted by it; be not weak. Believe in the dazzling bright white light; [and] putting thy whole heart earnestly upon the Bhagavān Vajra—Sattva, pray thus :

‘Alas! when wandering in the Sangsāra because of the power of violent anger,

On the radiant light—path of the Mirror—like Wisdom,

May [I] be led by the Bhagavān Vajra—Sattva,

May the Divine Mother Māmaki be [my] rear—guard;

May [I] be led safely across the fearful ambush of the Bardo;

And may [I] be placed in the state of the All—perfect Buddhahood.¹

Praying thus, in intense humble faith, thou wilt merge, in rainbow light, into the heart of the Bhagavān Vajra—Sattva and obtain Buddhahood in the Sambhoga—Kaya> in the Eastern Realm called Pre—eminently Happy.

[THE THIRD DAY]

Yet, even when set face to face in this way, some persons, because of obscurations from bad karma, and from pride, although the hook of the rays of grace [strikereth against them] flee from it. [If one be one of them], then, on the Third Day, the Bhagavān Ratna—Sambhava¹ and his accompanying deities, along with the light—path from the human world, will come to receive one simultaneously.

Again, calling the deceased by name, the setting—face—to—face is thus:

O nobly—born, listen undistractedly. On the Third Day the primal form of the element earth will shine forth as a yellow light. At that time, from the Southern Realm Endowed with Glory, the Bhagavān Ratna—Sambhava, yellow in colour, bearing a jewel in his hand, seated upon a horse—throne and embraced by the Divine Mother Sangyay—Chanma,¹ will shine upon thee.

The two Bodhisattvas, ākāsha—Garbha³ and Samanta—Bhadra,³ attended by the two female Bodhisattvas, Mahlaima and Dhupema,⁴—in all, six Bodhic forms,—will come to shine from amidst a rainbow halo of light. The aggregate of touch in its primal form, as the yellow light of the Wisdom of Equality, dazzlingly yellow, glorified with orbs having satellite orbs of radiance, so clear and bright that the eye can scarcely look upon it, will strike against thee. Side by side with it, the dull bluish—yellow light from the human [world] will also strike against thy heart, along with the Wisdom light.

Thereupon, through the power of egotism, thou wilt beget a fear for the dazzling yellow light and wilt [wish to] flee from it. Thou wilt be fondly attracted towards the dull bluish—yellow light from the human [world].

At that time do not fear that bright, dazzling—yellow, transparent light, but know it to be Wisdom ; in that state, keeping thy mind resigned, trust in it earnestly and humbly. If thou knowest it to be the radiance of thine own intellect—although thou exertest not thy humility and faith and prayer to it— the Divine Body and Light will merge into thee inseparably, and thou wilt obtain Buddhahood.

If thou dost not recognize the radiance of thine own intellect, think, with faith,⁴ It is the radiance of the grace of the Bhagavān Ratna—Sambhava; I will take refuge in it'; and pray. It is the hook of the grace—rays of the Bhagavān Ratna—Sambhava; believe in it.

Be not fond of that dull bluish—yellow light from the human [world]. That is the path of thine accumulated propensities of violent egotism come to receive thee. If thou art attracted by it, thou wilt be born in the human world and have to suffer birth, age, sickness, and death; and thou wilt have no chance of getting out of the quagmire of worldly existence. That is an interruption to obstruct thy path of liberation. Therefore, look not upon it, and abandon egotism, abandon propensities; be not attracted towards it; be not weak. Act so as to trust in that bright dazzling light. Put thine earnest thought, one—pointedly, upon the Bhagavān Ratna—Sambhava; and pray thus:

‘Alas! when wandering in the Sangsāra because of the power of violent egotism,

On the radiant light—path of the Wisdom of Equality,

May [I] be led by the Bhagavān Ratna—Sambhava;

May the Divine Mother, She—of—the—Buddha—Eye, be [my] rear—guard;

May [I] be led safely across the fearful ambush of the Bardo;

And may [I] be placed in the state of the All—Perfect Buddhahood.’

By praying thus, with deep humility and faith, thou wilt merge into the heart of the Bhagavān Ratna—Sambhava, the Divine Father—Mother, in halo of rainbow light, and attain Buddhahood in the

[THE FOURTH DAY]

By thus being set face to face, however weak the mental faculties may be, there is no doubt of one's gaining Liberation. Yet, though so often set face to face, there are classes of men who, having created much bad kartna, or having failed in observance of vows, or, their lot [for higher development] being altogether lacking, prove unable to recognize: their obscurations and evil karma from covetousness and miserliness produce awe of the sounds and radiances, and they flee. [If one be of these classes], then, on the Fourth Day, the Bhagavān Amitābha¹ and his attendant deities, together with the light—path from the Preta—loka proceeding from miserliness and attachment, will come to receive one simultaneously.

Again the setting—face—to—face is, calling the deceased by name, thus:

O nobly—born, listen undistractedly. On the Fourth Day the red light, which is the primal form of the element fire, will shine. At that time, from the Red Western Realm of Happiness,² the Bhagavān Buddha Amitābha, red in colour, bearing a lotus in his hand, seated upon a peacock—throne and embraced by the Divine Mother Gökarmo,² will shine upon thee, [together with] the Bodhisattvas Chenraze* and Jampal,⁴ attended by the female Bodhisattvas Ghirdhima⁵ and āloke.⁵ The six bodies of Enlightenment will shine upon thee from amidst a halo of rainbow light.

The primal form of the aggregate of feelings as the red light of the All—Discriminating Wisdom, glitteringly red, glorified with orbs and satellite orbs, bright, transparent, glorious and dazzling, proceeding from the heart of the Divine Father—Mother Amitābha, will strike against thy heart [so radiantly] that thou wilt scarcely be able to look upon it. Fear it not.

Along with it, a dull red light from the Preta—loka coming side by side with the Light of Wisdom, will also shine upon thee. Act so that thou shalt not be fond of it. Abandon attachment [and] weakness [for it].

At that time, through the influence of intense attachment, thou wilt become terrified by the dazzling red light, and wilt [wish to] flee from it. And thou wilt beget a fondness for that dull red light of the Preta—loka.

At that time, be not afraid of the glorious, dazzling, transparent, radiant red light. Recognizing it as Wisdom, keeping thine intellect in the state of resignation, thou wilt merge [into it] inseparably and attain Buddhahood.

If thou dost not recognize it, think, * It is the rays of the grace of the Bhagavān Amitābha, and I will take refuge in it'; and, trusting humbly in it, pray unto it. That is the hook—rays of the grace of the Bhagavān Amitābha, Trust in it humbly; flee not. Even if thou fleest, it will follow thee inseparably [from thyself]. Fear it not. Be not attracted towards the dull red light of the Preta—loka. That is the light—path proceeding from the accumulations of thine intense attachment [to sangsāric existence] which hath come to receive thee. If thou be attached thereto, thou wilt fall into the World of Unhappy Spirits and suffer unbearable misery from hunger and thirst. Thou wilt have no chance of gaining Liberation [therein].¹ That dull red light is an interruption to obstruct thee on the Path of Liberation. Be not attached to it, and abandon habitual propensities. Be not weak. Trust in the bright dazzling red light. In the Bhagavān Amitābha, the Father—Mother, put thy trust one—pointedly and pray thus:

‘Alas! when wandering in the Sangsāra because of the power of intense attachment,

On the radiant light—path of the Discriminating Wisdom

May [I] be led by the Bhagavān Amitābha;

May the Divine Mother, She—of—White—Raiment, be [my] rear—guard;

May [I] be safely led across the dangerous ambush of the Bardo;

And may [I] be placed in the state of the All—Perfect Buddhahood.⁷

By praying thus, humbly and earnestly, thou wilt merge into the heart of the Divine Father—Mother, the Bhagavān Amitābha, in halo of rainbow—light, and attain Buddhahood in the Sambhoga—Kāya> in the Western Realm named Happy.

[THE FIFTH DAY]

It is impossible that one should not be liberated thereby. Yet, though thus set face to face, sentient beings, unable through long association with propensities to abandon propensities, and, through bad karma and jealousy, awe and terror being produced by the sounds and radiances—the hook—rays of grace failing to catch hold of them—wander down also to the Fifth Day. [If one be such a sentient being], thereupon the Bhagavān Amogha—Siddhi,¹ with his attendant deities and the light and rays of his grace, will come to receive one. A light proceeding from the Asura—loka, produced by the evil passion of jealousy, will also come to receive one.

The setting—face—to—face at that time is, calling the deceased by name, thus:

O nobly—born, listen undistractedly. On the Fifth Day, the green light of the primal form of the element air will shine upon thee. At that time, from the Green Northern Realm of Successful Performance of Best Actions, the Bhagavān Buddha Amogha—Siddhi, green in colour, bearing a crossed—dorje in hand,¹ seated upon a sky—traversing Harpy—throne,² embraced by the Divine Mother, the Faithful Dölma,³ will shine upon thee, with his attendants,—the two Bodhisattvas Chag—na—Dorje⁴ and Dibpanamsel,⁵ attended by two female Bodhisattvas, Gandhema⁶ and Nidhema.⁷ These six Bodhic forms from amidst a halo of rainbow light, will come to shine.

The primal form of the aggregate of volition, shining as the green light of the All—Performing Wisdom, dazzlingly green, transparent and radiant, glorious and terrifying, beautified with orbs surrounded by satellite orbs of radiance, issuing from the heart of the Divine Father—Mother Amogha—Siddhi, green in colour, will strike against thy heart [so wondrously bright] that thou wilt scarcely be able to look at it. Fear it not. That is the natural power of the wisdom of thine own intellect. Abide in the state of great resignation of impartiality.

Along with it [i. e. the green light of the All—Performing Wisdom], a light of dull green colour from the Asura—loka, produced from the cause of the feeling of jealousy, coming side by side with the Wisdom Rays, will shine upon thee. Meditate upon it with impartiality,—with neither repulsion nor attraction. Be not fond of it: if thou art of low mental capacity, be not fond of it.

Thereupon, through the influence of intense jealousy,¹ thou wilt be terrified at the dazzling radiance of the green light and wilt [wish to] flee from it; and thou wilt beget a fondness for that dull green light of the Asura—loka. At that time fear not the glorious and transparent, radiant and dazzling green light, but know it to be Wisdom ; and in that state allow thine intellect to rest in resignation. Or else [think], ‘It is the hook—rays of the light of grace of the Bhagavān Amogha—Siddhi, which is the All—Performing Wisdom*. Believe [thus] on it. Flee not from it.

Even though thou shouldst flee from it, it will follow thee inseparably [from thyself]. Fear it not. Be not fond of that dull green light of the Asura—loka. That is the kartnic path of acquired intense jealousy, which hath come to receive thee. If thou art attracted by it, thou wilt fall into the Asura—loka and have to engage in unbearable miseries of quarrelling and warfare.² [That is an] interruption to obstruct thy path of liberation. Be not attracted by it. Abandon thy propensities. Be not weak. Trust in the dazzling green radiance, and putting thy whole thought one—pointedly upon the Divine Father—Mother, the Bhagavān Amogha—Siddhi, pray thus: ‘Alas! when wandering in the Sangsāra because of the power of intense jealousy,

On the radiant light—path of the All—Performing Wisdom
May [I] be led by the Bhagavān Amogha—Siddhi; May the Divine Mother, the Faithful Tāra, be [my] rearguard ; May [I] be led safely across the dangerous ambush of the Bardo ; And may [I] be placed in the state of the All—Perfect Buddhahood.’

By praying thus with intense faith and humility, thou wilt merge into the heart of the Divine Father—Mother, the Bhagavān Amogha—Siddhi, in halo of rainbow light, and attain Buddhahood in the Sambkoga—Kāya in the Northern Realm of Heaped—up Good Deeds.¹

[THE SIXTH DAY]

Being thus set face to face at various stages, however weak one’s kartnic connexions may be, one should have recognized in one or the other of them ; and where one has recognized in any of them it is impossible not to be liberated. Yet, although set face to face so very often in that manner, one long habituated to strong propensities and lacking in familiarity with, and pure affection for, Wisdom, may be led backwards by the power of one’s own evil inclinations despite these many introductions. The hook—rays of the light of grace may not be able to catch hold of one: one may still wander downwards because of one’s begetting the feeling of awe and terror of the lights and rays.

Thereupon all the Divine Fathers—Mothers of the Five Orders [of Dhyānī Buddhas] with their attendants will come to shine upon one simultaneously. At the same time, the lights proceeding from the Six Lokas will likewise come to shine upon one simultaneously.

The setting—face—to—face for that is, calling the deceased by name, thus:

O nobly—born, until yesterday each of the Five Orders of

THE GREAT MANDALA OF THE PEACEFUL DEITIES
Described on pages xxviii—xxix, 1x8—22, 217—220

THE TIBETAN WHEEL OF THE LAW

Described on page xxxiii

Deities had shone upon thee, one by one; and thou hadst been set face to face, but, owing to the influence of thine evil propensities, thou wert awed and terrified by them and hast remained here till now.

If thou hadst recognized the radiances of the Five Orders of Wisdom to be the emanations from thine own thought—forms, ere this thou wouldst have obtained Buddhahood in the Sambhoga—Kāya) through having been absorbed into the halo of rainbow light in one or another of the Five Orders of Buddhas. But now look on undistractedly. Now the lights of all Five Orders, called the Lights of the Union of Four Wisdoms,¹ will come to receive thee. Act so as to know them.

O nobly—born, on this the Sixth Day, the four colours of the primal states of the four elements [water, earth, fire, air] will shine upon thee simultaneously. At that time, from the Central Realm of the Spreading Forth of Seed, the Buddha²Vairochana, the Divine Father—Mather, with the attendant [deities], will come to shine upon thee. From the Eastern Realm of Pre—eminent Happiness, the Buddha Vajra—Sattva, the Divine Father—Mother, with the attendant [deities] will come to shine upon thee. From the Southern Realm endowed with Glory, the Buddha Ratna—Sambhava, the Divine Father—Mother, with the attendant [deities] will come to shine upon thee, From the Happy Western Realm¹ of Heaped—up Lotuses, the Buddha Amitābha, the Divine Father—Mother, along with the attendant [deities] will come to shine upon thee. From the Northern Realm of Perfected Good Deeds, the Buddha Amogha—Siddhi, the Divine Father—Mother, along with the attendants will come, amidst a halo of rainbow light, to shine upon | thee at this very moment.

O nobly—born, on the outer circle of these five pair of Dhyānī Buddhas, the [four] Door—Keepers, the Wrathful[Ones]: the Victorious *One*² the Destroyer of the Lord of Death,³ the Horse—necked King,⁴ the Urn of Nectar,⁵ with the four female Door—keepers: the Goad—Bearer,⁶ the Noose—Bearer,⁷ the Chain—Bearer,⁸ and the Bell—Bearer,⁹ along with the Buddha of the Devas, named the One of Supreme Power,¹ the Buddha of the Asuras named [He of] Strong Texture,² the Buddha of Mankind, named the Lion of the Shākya, the Buddha of the brute kingdom, named the Unshakable Lion, the Buddha of the Pre tas, named the One of Flaming Mouth, and the Buddha of the Lower World, named the King of Truth,³— [these], the Eight Father—Mother Door—keepers and the Six Teachers, the Victorious Ones—will come to shine, too.

The All—Good Father, and the All—Good Mother,⁴ the Great Ancestors of all the Buddhas: Samanta—Bhadra [and Samanta—Bhadrā], the Divine Father and the Divine Mother— these two, also will come to shine.

These forty—two perfectly endowed deities, issuing from within thy heart, being the product of thine own pure love, will come to shine. Know them.

O nobly—born, these realms are not come from somewhere outside [thyself]. They come from within the four divisions of thy heart, which, including its centre, make the five directions. They issue from within there, and shine upon thee. The adeities, too, are not come from somewhere else: they exist from eternity within the faculties of thine own intellect¹ Know them to be of that nature.

O nobly—born, the size of all these deities is not large, not small, [but] proportionate. [They have] their ornaments, their colours, their sitting postures, their thrones, and the emblems that each holds.

These deities are formed into groups of five pairs, each group of five being surrounded by a fivefold circle of radiances, the male Bodhisattvas partaking of the nature of the Divine Fathers, and the female Bodhisattvas partaking of the nature of the Divine Mothers. All these divine conclaves will come to shine upon thee in one complete conclave.² They are thine own tutelary deities.³ Know them to be such.

O nobly—born, from the hearts of the Divine Fathers and Mothers of the Five Orders, the rays of light of the Four Wisdoms united, extremely clear and fine, like the rays of the sun spun into threads, will come and shine upon thee and strike against thy heart.

On that path of radiance there will come to shine glorious orbs of light, blue in colour, emitting rays, the Dharma—Dhātu Wisdom [itself], each appearing like an inverted turquoise cup, surrounded by similar orbs, smaller in size, glorious and dazzling, radiant and transparent, each made more glorious with five yet smaller [satellite] orbs dotted round about with five starry spots of light of the same nature, leaving neither the centre nor the borders [of the blue light—path] unglorified by the orbs and the smaller [satellite] orbs.

From the heart of Vajra—Sattva, the white light—path of the Mirror—like Wisdom, white and transparent, glorious and dazzling, glorious and terrifying, made more glorious with orbs surrounded by smaller orbs of transparent and radiant light upon it, each like an inverted mirror, will come to shine.

From the heart of Ratna—Sambhava, the yellow light—path of the Wisdom of Equality, [glorified] with yellow orbs [of radiance], each like an inverted gold cup, surrounded by smaller orbs, and these with yet smaller orbs, will come to shine.

From the heart of Amitābha, the transparent, bright red light—path of the Discriminating Wisdom, upon which are orbs, like inverted coral cups, emitting rays of Wisdom, extremely bright and dazzling, each glorified with five [satellite] orbs of the same nature,—leaving neither the centre nor the borders [of the red light—path] unglorified with orbs and smaller satellite orbs,—will come to shine.

These will come to shine against thy heart simultaneously.¹

O nobly—born, all those are the radiances of thine own intellectual faculties come to shine. They have not come from any other place. Be not attracted towards them; be not weak; be not terrified ; but abide in the mood of non— thought—formation.² In that state all the forms and radiances will merge into thyself, and Buddhahood will be obtained.

The green light—path of the Wisdom of Perfected Actions will not shine upon thee, because the Wisdom—faculty of thine intellect hath not been perfectly developed.

O nobly—born, those are called the Lights of the Four

Wisdoms United, [whence proceeds that] which is called the Inner Path through Vajra—Sattva.¹

At that time, thou must remember the teachings of the setting—face—to—face which thou hast had from thy guru. If thou hast remembered the purport of the settings—face—to—face, thou wilt have recognized all these lights which have shone upon thee, as being the reflection of thine own inner light, and, having recognized them as intimate friends, thou wilt have believed in them and have understood [them at] the meeting, as a son understandeth his mother.

And believing in the unchanging nature of the pure and holy Truth, thou wilt have had produced in thee the tranquil—flowing Santādhī and, having merged into the body of the perfectly evolved intellect, thou wilt have obtained Buddhahood in the Sambhoga—Kāya whence there is no return.

O nobly—born, along with the radiances of Wisdom, the impure illusory lights of the Six Lokas will also come to shine. If it be asked, ‘What are they ?’ [they are] a dull white light from the devas a dull green light from the asuras a dull yellow light from human beings, a dull blue light from the brutes, a dull reddish light from the pretas> and a dull smoke—coloured light from Hell.² These six thus will come to shine, along with the six radiances of Wisdom ; whereupon, be not afraid of nor be attracted towards any, but allow thyself to rest in the non—thought condition.

If thou art frightened by the pure radiances of Wisdom and attracted by the impure lights of the Six Lokas, then thou wilt assume a body in any of the Six Lokas and suffer sang—sāric miseries; and thou wilt never be emancipated from the Ocean of Sangsāra, wherein thou wilt be whirled round and round and made to taste of the sufferings thereof.

O nobly—born, if thou art one who hath not obtained the select words of the guru, thou wilt have fear of the pure radiances of Wisdom and of the deities thereof. Being thus frightened, thou wilt be attracted towards the impure sangsāric objects. Act not so. Humbly trust in the dazzling pure radiances of Wisdom. Frame thy mind to faith, and think, * The compassionate radiances of Wisdom of the Five Orders of Buddhas¹ have come to take hola of me out of compassion ; I take refuge in them,'

Not yielding to attraction towards the illusory lights of the Six Lokas but devoting thy whole mind one—pointedly towards the Divine Fathers and Mothers, the Buddhas of the Five Orders, pray thus:

‘Alas! when wandering in the Sangsāra through the power of the five virulent poisons,²

On the bright radiance—path of the Four Wisdoms united, May [I] be led by the Five Victorious Conquerors, May the Five Orders of Divine Mothers be [my] rearguard ; May [I] be rescued from the impure light—paths of the Six Lokas ;

And, being saved from the ambushades of the dread Bardo, May [I] be placed within the five pure Divine Realms.¹

By thus praying, one recognizeth one’s own inner light;³

and, merging one’s self therein, in at—one—ment, Buddhahood is attained : through humble faith, the ordinary devotee cometh to know himself, and obtaineth Liberation; even the most lowly, by the power of the pure prayer, can close the doors of the Six Lokas, and, in understanding the real meaning of the Four Wisdoms united, obtain Buddhahood by the hollow pathway through Vajra—Sattva.¹

Thus by being set face to face in that detailed manner, those who are destined to be liberated will come to recognize [the Truth];^a thereby many will attain Liberation.

The worst of the worst, [those] of heavy evil karma, having not the least predilection for any religion—and some who have failed in their vows—through the power of karmic illusions, not recognizing, although set face to face [with Truth], will stray downwards.

[THE SEVENTH DAY]

On the Seventh Day, the Knowledge—Holding Deities, from the holy paradise realms, come to receive one. Simultaneously, the pathway to the brute world, produced by the obscuring passion, stupidity, also cometh to receive one.³ The setting—face—to—face at that time is, calling the deceased by name, thus :

O nobly—born, listen undistractedly. On the Seventh Day the vari—coloured radiance of the purified propensities will cometo shine. Simultaneously, the Knowledge—Holding Deities,¹ from the holy paradise realms, will come to receive one.

From the centre of the Circle [or Mandala], enhaloed in radiance of rainbow light, the supreme Knowledge—Holding [Deity], the Lotus Lord of Dance, the Supreme Knowledge—Holder Who Ripens Karmic Fruits, radiant with all the five colours, embraced by the [Divine] Mother, the Red *Dakini [he] holding a crescent knife and a skull [filled] with blood,³ dancing and making the mudrā of fascination,⁴ [with his right hand held] aloft, will come to shine.

To the east of that Circle, the deity called the Earth—Abiding Knowledge—Holder, white of colour, with radiant smiling countenance, embraced by the White Dākini, the [Divine] Mother, [he] holding a crescent knife and a skull [filled] with blood, dancing and making the mudrā of fascination, [with his right hand held] aloft, will come to shine.

To the south of that Circle, the Knowledge—Holding Deity called [He] Having Power Over Duration of Life, yellow in colour, smiling and radiant, embraced by the Yellow Dākinī, the [Divine] Mother, [he] holding a crescent knife and a skull [filled] with blood, dancing and making the mudrā of fascination, [with his right hand held] aloft, will come to shine.

To the west of that Circle, the deity called the Knowledge—Holding Deity of the Great Symbol,¹ red of colour, smiling and radiant, embraced by the Red Dākini the [Divine] Mother, [he] holding a crescent—knife and a skull [filled] with blood, dancing and making the mudrā of fascination, [with his right hand held] aloft, will come to shine.

To the north of that Circle, the deity called the Self—Evolved Knowledge—Holder, green of colour, with a half—angry, half—smiling radiant countenance, embraced by the Green Dākini, the [Divine] Mother, [he] holding a crescent—knife and a skull [filled] with blood, dancing and making the mudrā of fascination, [with his right hand held] aloft, will come to shine.

In the Outer Circle, round about these Knowledge—Holders, innumerable bands of dākinis, — dākinis of the eight places of cremation, dākinis of the four classes, dākinis of the three abodes, dākinis of the thirty holy—places and of the twenty—four places of pilgrimage,²—heroes, heroines, celestial warriors, and faith—protecting deities, male and female, each bedecked with the six bone—ornaments, having drums and thigh—bone trumpets, skull—timbrels, banners of gigantic human[—like] hides,³ human—hide canopies, human—hide bannerettes, fumes of human—fat incense, and innumerable [other] kinds of musical instruments, filling [with music] the whole world—systems and causing them to vibrate, to quake and tremble with sounds so mighty as to daze one's brain, and dancing various measures, will come to receive the faithful and punish the unfaithful.⁴

O nobly—born, five—coloured radiances, of the Wisdom of the Simultaneously—Born,¹ which are the purified propensities, vibrating and dazzling like coloured threads, flashing, radiant, and transparent, glorious and awe—inspiring, will issue from the hearts of the five chief Knowledge—Hold ing Deities and strike against thy heart, so bright that the eye cannot bear to look upon them.

At the same time, a dull blue light from the brute world will come to shine along with the Radiances of Wisdom. Then, through the influence of the illusions of thy propensities, thou wilt feel afraid of the radiance of the five colours; and [wishing to] flee from it, thou wilt feel attracted towards the dull light from the brute—world. Thereupon, be not afraid of that brilliant radiance of five colours, nor terrified ; but know the Wisdom to be thine own.

Within those radiances, the natural sound of the Truth will reverberate like a thousand thunders. The sound will come with a rolling reverberation, [amidst which] will be heard, ¹ Slay! Slay!’ and awe—inspiring mantras.²¹ Fear not. Flee not. Be not terrified. Know them [i. e. these sounds] to be [of] the intellectual faculties of thine own [inner] light.

Be not attracted towards the dull blue light of the brute—world ; be not weak. If thou art attracted, thou wilt fall into the brute—world, wherein stupidity predominates, and suffer the illimitable miseries of slavery and dumbness and stupidness ;* and it will be a very long time ere thou canst get out. Be not attracted towards it. Put thy faith in the bright, dazzling, five—coloured radiance. Direct thy mind one—pointedly towards the deities, the Knowledge—Holding Conquerors. Think, one—pointedly, thus: ‘These Knowledge—Holding Deities, the Heroes, and the Dākinis have come from the holy paradise realms to receive me ; I supplicate them all: up to this day, although the Five Orders of the Buddhas of the Three Times have all exerted the rays of their grace and compassion, yet have I not been rescued by them. Alas, for a being like me! May the Knowledge—Holding Deities not let me go downwards further than this, but hold me with the hook of their compassion, and lead me to the holy paradises.’

Thinking in that manner, one—pointedly, pray thus:

‘O ye Knowledge—Holding Deities, pray hearken unto me ;Lead me on the Path, out of your great love.

When [I am] wandering in the Sangsāra> because of intensified propensities,

On the bright light—path of the Simultaneously—born Wisdom

May the bands of Heroes, the Knowledge—Holders, lead me;

May the bands of the Mothers, the Dākinis, be [my] rearguard ;

May they save me from the fearful ambushes of the Bardo,

And place me in the pure Paradise Realms.’

Praying thus, in deep faith and humility, there is no doubt that one will be born within the pure Paradise Realms,² after being merged, in rainbow—light, into the heart of the Knowledge—Holding Deities.

All the pandit classes, too, coming to recognize at this stage, obtain liberation ; even those of evil propensities being sure to be liberated here.

Here endeth the part of the Great Thodol concerned with the setting—face—to—face of the Peaceful [Deities] of the Clwnyid Bardo and the setting—face—to—face of the Clear Light of the Chikhai Bardo.

[THE DAWNING OF THE WRATHFUL DEITIES, FROM THE EIGHTH TO THE FOURTEENTH DAY]

[INTRODUCTION]

Now the manner of the dawning of the Wrathful Deities is to be shown.

In the above Bardo of the Peaceful [Deities] there were seven stages of ambushade. The setting—face—to—face at each stage should have [caused the deceased] to recognize either at one or another [stage] and to have been liberated.

Multitudes will be liberated by that recognition; [and] although multitudes obtain liberation in that manner, the number of sentient beings being great, evil karma powerful, obscurations dense, propensities of too long standing, the Wheel of Ignorance and Illusion becometh neither exhausted nor accelerated. Although [all be] set face—to—face in such detail, there is a vast preponderance of those who wander downwards unliberated.

Therefore, after the cessation [of the dawning] of the Peaceful and the Knowledge—Holding Deities, who come to welcome one, the fifty—eight flame—enhaloed, wrathful, blood—drinking deities come to dawn, who are only the former Peaceful Deities in changed aspect—according to the place [or psychic—centre of the Bardo—body of the deceased whence they proceed] ; nevertheless, they will not resemble them.¹

This is the Bardo of the Wrathful Deities; and, they being influenced by fear, terror, and awe,¹ recognition becometh more difficult. The intellect, gaining not in independence, passeth from one fainting state to a round of fainting states. [Yet], if one but recognize a little, it is easier to be liberated [at this stage]. If it be asked why ? [the answer is] : Because of the dawning of the radiances—[which produce] fear, terror, and awe—the intellect is undistractedly alert in one—pointedness; that is why.²

If at this stage one do not meet with this kind of teaching, one's hearing [of religious lore]—although it be like an ocean [in its vastness]—is of no avail. There are even discipline—holding abbots [or bhikkhus] and doctors in metaphysical discourses who err at this stage, and, not recognizing, wander into the Sangsāra.

As for the common worldly folk, what need is there to mention them ! By fleeing, through fear, terror, and awe, they fall over the precipices into the unhappy worlds and suffer. But the least of the least of the devotees of the mystic mantrayāna doctrines, as soon as he sees these blood—drinking deities, will recognize them to be his tutelary deities, and the meeting will be like that of human acquaintances. He will trust them; and becoming merged into them, in at—one—ment, will obtain Buddhahood.³

By having meditated on the description of these blood—drinking deities, while in the human world, and by having performed some worship or praise of them; or, at least, by having seen their painted likenesses and their images, upon witnessing the dawning of the deities at this stage, recognition of them will result, and liberation. In this lieth the art.

Again, at the death of those discipline—holding abbots and doctors in metaphysical discourses [who remain uninstructed in these Bardo teachings], however assiduously they may have devoted themselves to religious practices, and however clever they may have been in expounding doctrines while in the human world, there will not come any phenomenal signs such as rainbow—halo [at the funeral—pyre] nor bone—reliques [from the ashes]. This is because when they lived the mystic [or esoteric] doctrines were never held within their heart, and because they had spoken contemptuously of them, and because they were never acquainted [through initiation] with the deities of the mystic [or esoteric] doctrines; thus, when these dawn on the Bardo, they do not recognize them. Suddenly [seeing] what they had never seen before, they view it as inimical; and, an antagonistic feeling being engendered, they pass into the miserable states because of that. Therefore, if the observers of the disciplines, and the metaphysicians, have not in them the practices of the mystic [or esoteric] doctrines, such signs as the rainbow—halo come not, nor are bone—reliques and seed—like bones ever produced [from the bones of their funeral—pyre].⁴ these are the reasons for it.

The least of the least of mantrayānic [devotees],—who may seem to be of very unrefined manners, unindustrious, untactful, and who may not live in accordance with his vows, and who in every way may be inelegant in his habits, and even unable, perhaps, to carry the practices of his teachings to a successful issue,—let no one feel disrespect for nor doubt him, but pay reverence to the esoteric [or mystic] doctrines [which he holdeth]. By that, alone, one obtaineth liberation at this stage.

Even though the deeds [of one paying such reverence] may not have been very elegant while in the human world, at his death there will come at least one kind of sign, such as rainbow—radiance, bone—images, and bone—reliques. This is because the esoteric [or mystic] doctrines possess great gift—waves.¹

[Those of, and] above, the mystic mantrayānic devotees of ordinary [psychic development], who have meditated upon the visualization and perfection processes and practised the essences [or essence *mantras need not wander down this far on the Chönyid Bardo. As soon as they cease to breathe, they will be led into the pure paradise realms by the Heroes and Heroines and the Knowledge—Holders.³ As a sign of this, the sky will be cloudless; they will merge into rainbow radiance; there will be sun—showers, sweet scent of incense [in the air], music in the skies, radiances; bone—reliques and images [from their funeral—pyre].

Therefore, to the abbots [or discipline—holders], to the doctors, and to those mystics who have failed in their vows, and to all the common people, this Thödol is indispensable.¹ But those who have meditated upon the Great Perfection and the Great Symbol² will recognize the Clear Light at the moment of death; and, obtaining the Dkanna—Kāya, all of them will be such as not to need the reading of this Thödol. By recognizing the Clear Light at the moment of death, they also will recognize the visions of the Peaceful and the Wrathful during the Chönyid Bardo, and obtain the Sambhoga—Kāya\ or, recognizing during the Sidpa Bardo, obtain the Nirmāna—Kāya; and, taking birth on the higher planes, will, in the next rebirth, meet with this Doctrine, and then enjoy the continuity of karma?

Therefore, this Thödol is the doctrine by which Buddhahood may be attained without meditation; the doctrine liberating by the hearing [of it] alone; the doctrine which leadeth beings of great evil karma on the Secret Path; the doctrine which produceth differentiation instantaneously [between those who are initiated into it and those who are not]: being the profound doctrine which conferreth Perfect Enlightenment instantaneously. Those sentient beings who have been reached by it cannot go to the unhappy states.

This [doctrine] and the Tahdol [doctrine] *, when joined together being like unto a mándala of gold inset with turquoise, combine them.

Thus, the indispensable nature of the Thödol being shown, there now cometh the setting—face—to—face with the dawning of the Wrathful [Deities] in the Bardo.

[THE EIGHTH DAY]

Again, calling the deceased by name, [address him] thus:

O nobly—born, listen undistractedly. Not having been able to recognize when the Peaceful [Deities] shone upon thee in the Bardo above, thou hast come wandering thus far. Now, on the Eighth Day, the blood—drinking Wrathful Deities will come to shine. Act so as to recognize them without being distracted.

THE GREAT MANDALA OF THE KNOWLEDGE—
HOLDING AND WRATHFUL DEITIES

Described on pages xxix—xxx, 127—8, 217—20

THE DORJE
THE LAM AIC SCEPTRE

Described on page xxxiii

O nobly—born, the Great Glorious Buddha—Hcruka,¹ dark—brown of colour; with three heads, six hands, and four feet firmly postured; the right [face] being white, the left, red, the central, dark—brown; the body emitting flames of radiance; the nine eyes widely opened, in terrifying gaze; the eyebrows quivering like lightning; the protruding teeth glistening and set over one another; giving vent to sonorous utterances of ‘a—la—la’ and ‘ha—ha’, and piercing whistling sounds; the hair of a reddish—yellow colour, standing on end, and emitting radiance; the heads adorned with dried [human] skulls, and the [symbols of the] sun and moon; black serpents and raw [human] heads forming a garland for the body; the first of the right hands holding a wheel, the middle one, a sword, the last one, a battle—axe; the first of the left hands, a bell, the middle one, a skull—bowl, the last one, a ploughshare; his body embraced by the Mother, Buddha—Kroti—shaurima,² her right hand clinging to his neck and her left putting to his mouth a red shell [filled with blood], [making] a palatal sound like a crackling [and] a clashing sound, and a rumbling sound as loud as thunder; [emanating from the twodeities] radiant flames of wisdom, blazing from every hair—pore [of the body] and each containing a flaming (forje ; [the twodeities together thus], standing with [one] leg bent and [the other] straight and tense, on a dais supported by horned eagles³ will come forth from within thine own brain and shine vividly upon thee. Fear that not. Be not awed. Know it to be the embodiment of thine own intellect. As it is thine own tutelary deity, be not terrified. Be not afraid, for in reality it is the Bhagavān Vairochana, the Father—Mother. Simultaneously with the recognition, liberation will be obtained: if they be recognized, merging [thyself], in at—once—ment, into the tutelary deity, Buddhahood in the Sambhoga * Kāya will be won.

[THE NINTH DAY]

But if one flee from them, through awe and terror being begotten, then, on the Ninth Day, the blood—drinking [deities] of the Vajra Order will come to receive one. Thereupon, the setting—face—to—face is, calling the deceased by name, thus :

O nobly—born, listen undistractedly. [He] of the blood—drinking Vajra Order named the Bhaavfui Vajra—Heruka, dark—blue in colour; with three faces, six hands, and four feet firmly postured; in the first right hand [holding] a dorje, in the middle [one], a skull—bowl, in the last [one], a battle—axe ; in the first of the left, a bell, in the middle [one], a skull—bowl, in the last [one], a ploughshare: his body embraced by the Mother Vajra—Krotishaurima, her right [hand] clinging to his neck, her left offering to his mouth a red shell [filled with blood], will issue from the eastern quarter of thy brain and come to shine upon thee. Fear it not. Be not terrified. Be not awed. Know it to be the embodiment of thine own intellect. As it Is thine own tutelary deity, be not terrified. In reality [they are] the Bhagavfm Vajra—Sattva, the Father and Mother. Believe in them. Recognizing them, liberation will be obtained at once. By so proclaiming [them], knowing them to be tutelary deities, merging [in them] in at—one—ment, Buddhahood will be obtained.

[THE TENTH DAY]

Yet, if one do not recognize them, the obscurations of evil deeds being too great, and flee from them through terror and awe, then, on the Tenth Day, the blood—drinking [deities] of the [Precious]—Gem Order will come to receive one. Thereupon the setting—face—to—face is, calling the deceased by name, thus:

O nobly—born, listen. On the Tenth Day, the blood—drinking [deity] of the [Precious]—Gem Order named Ratna—Heruka, yellow of colour; [having] three faces, six hands, four feet firmly postured ; the right [face] white, the left, red, the central, darkish yellow; enhaloed in flames; in the first of the six hands holding a gem, in the middle [one], a trident—staff, in the last [one], a baton; in the first of the left [hands], a bell, in the middle [one], a skull—bowl, in the last [one], a trident—staff; his body embraced by the Mother Ratna—Krotishaurima, her right [hand] clinging to his neck, her left offering to his mouth a red shell [filled with blood], will issue from the southern quarter of thy brain and come to shine upon thee. Fear not. Be not terrified. Be not awed. Know them to be the embodiment of thine own intellect. [They] being thine own tutelary deity, be not terrified. In reality [they are] the Father—Mother Bhagavān Ratna—Sambhava. Believe in them. Recognition [of them] and the obtaining of liberation will be simultaneous.

By so proclaiming [them], knowing them to be tutelary deities, merging in them in at—one—ment, Buddhahood will be obtained.

[THE ELEVENTH DAY]

Yet, though set face—to—face thus, if, through power of evil propensities, terror and awe being produced, not recognizing them to be tutelary deities, one flee from them, then, on the Eleventh Day, the blood—drinking Lotus Order will come to receive one. Thereupon the setting—face—to—face is, calling the deceased by name, thus :

O nobly—born, on the Eleventh Day, the blood—drinking [deity] of the Lotus Order, called the Bhagavān Padma—Heruka, of reddish—black colour; [having] three faces, six hands, and four feet firmly postured; the right [face] white, the left, blue, the central, darkish red; in the first of the right of the six hands holding a lotus, in the middle [one], a trident—staff, in the last, a club; in the first of the left [hands], a bell, in the middle [one], a skull—bowl filled with blood¹, in the last, a small drum ; his body embraced by the Mother Padma—Krotishaurima, her right hand clinging to his neck, her left offering to his mouth a red shell [full of blood]; the Father and Mother in union ; will issue from the western quarter of thy brain and come to shine upon thee. Fear that not. Be not terrified. Be not awed. Rejoice. Recognize [them] to be the product of thine own intellect; as [they are] thine own tutelary deity, be not afraid. In reality they are the Father—Mother Bhagavān Amitābha. Believe in them. Concomitantly with recognition, liberation will come. Through such acknowledging, recognizing them to be tutelary deities, in at—one—ment thou wilt merge [into them], and obtain Buddhahood.

[THE TWELFTH DAY]

Despite such setting—face—to—face, being still led backwards by evil propensities, terror and awe arising, it may be that one recognize not and flee. Thereupon, on the Twelfth Day, the blood—drinking deities of the Karmic Order, accompanied by the Kerima, Htamenma, and Wang—chugma,¹ will come to receive one. Not recognizing, terror may be produced. Whereupon, the settiftg—face—to—face is, calling the deceased by name, thus :

O nobly—born, on the Twelfth Day, the blood—drinking deity of the Karmic Order, named Karma—Heruka, dark green of colour; [having] three faces, six hands, [and] four feet firmly postured; the right [face] white, the left, red, the middle, dark green; majestic [of appearance]; in the first of the right of the six hands, holding a sword, in the middle [one], a trident—staff, in the last, a club; in the first of the left [hands], a bell, in the middle [one] a skull—bowl, in the last, a ploughshare; his body embraced by the Mother Karma—Kroti—shaurima, her right [hand] clinging to his neck, the left offering to his mouth a red shell; the Father and Mother in union, issuing from the northern quarter of thy brain, will come to shine upon thee. Fear that not. Be not terrified. Be not awed. Recognize them to be the embodiment of thine own intellect. [They] being thine own tutelary deity, be not afraid. In reality they are the Father—Mother Bhagavān Amogha—Siddhi. Believe; and be humble; and be fond [of them]. Concomitantly with recognition, liberation will come. Through such acknowledging, recognizing them to be tutelary deities, in at—one—ment thou wilt merge [into them], and obtain Buddhahood. Through the guru's select teaching, one cometh to recognize them to be the thought—forms issuing from one's own intellectual faculties. For instance, a person, upon recognizing a lion—skin [to be a lion—skin], is freed [from fear]; for though it be only a stuffed lion—skin, if one do not know it to be so actually, fear ariseth, but, upon being told by some person that it is a lion—skin only, one is freed from fear. Similarly here, too, when the bands of blood—drinking deities, huge of proportions, with very thick—set limbs, dawn as big as the skies, awe and terror are naturally produced in one. [But] as soon as the setting—face—to—face is heard [one] recognizeth them to be one's own tutelary deities and one's own thought—forms. Then, when upon the Mother Clear—Light—which one had been accustomed to formerly—a secondary Clear—Light, the Offspring Clear—Light, is produced, and the Mother and Offspring Clear—Light, coming together like two intimate acquaintances, blend inseparably, and [therefrom] a self—emancipating radiance dawneth upon one, through self—enlightenment and self—knowledge one is liberated.

[THE THIRTEENTH DAY]

If this setting—face—to—face be not obtained, good persons on the Path,¹ too, fall back from here and wander into the Sangsāra. Then the Eight Wrathful Ones, the Kcrimas, and the Htamenmas, having various [animal] heads, issue from within one's own brain and come to shine upon one's self. Thereupon the setting—face—to—face is, calling the deceased by name, thus:

O nobly—born, listen undistractedly. On the Thirteenth Day, from the eastern quarter of thy brain, the Eight Kerimas will emanate and come to shine upon thee. Fear that not.

From the east of thy brain, the White Kerima,¹ holding a human corpse, as a club, in the right [hand]; in the left, holding a skull—bowl filled with blood, will come to shine upon thee. Fear not.

From the south, the Yellow Tseurima,² holding a bow and arrow, ready to shoot; from the west, the Red Pramoha,³ holding a *makara*ⁱ~\>a.rmet ; from the north, the Black Petali,⁵ holding a dorje and a blood—filled skull—bowl; from the southeast, the Red Pukkase,⁶ holding intestines in the right [hand] and [with] the left putting them to her mouth; from the south—west, the Dark—Green Ghasmari,⁷ the left [hand] holding a blood—filled skull—bowl, [with] the right stirring it with a dorje) and [she then] drinking it with majestic relish; from the north—west, the Yellowish—White Tsandhali,⁸ tearing asunder a head from a corpse, the right [hand] holding a heart, the left putting the corpse to the mouth and [she then] eating [thereof] ; from the north—east, the Dark—Blue Smasha,⁹ tearing asunder a head from a corpse and eating [thereof]: these, the Eight Kerimas of the Abodes [or Eight Directions], also come to shine upon thee, surrounding the Five Blood—drinking Fathers. Yet be not afraid.

O nobly—born, from the Circle outside of them, the Eight Htamenmas of the [eight] regions [of the brain] will come to shine upon thee: from the east, the Dark—Brown Lion—Headed One, the hands crossed on the breast, and in the mouth holding a corpse, and shaking the mane; from the south, the Red Tiger—Headed One, the hands crossed downwards, grinning and showing the fangs and looking on with protruding eyes; from the west, the Black Fox—Headed One, the right [hand] holding a shaving—knife, the left holding an intestine, and [she] eating and licking the blood [therefrom]; from the north, the Dark—Blue Wolf—Headed One, the two hands tearing open a corpse and looking on with protruding eyes; from the south—east, the Yellowish—White Vulture—Headed One, bearing a gigantic [human—shaped] corpse on the shoulder and holding a skeleton in the hand; from the south—west, the Dark—Red Cemetery—Bird—Headed One, carrying a gigantic corpse on the shoulder; from the north—west, the Black Crow—Headed One, the left [hand] holding a skull—bowl, the right holding a sword, and [she] eating heart and lungs ; from the north—east, the Dark—Blue Owl—Headed One, holding a dorje in the right [hand], and holding a skull—bowl in the left, and eating.

These tight Htamenmas of the [eight] regions, likewise surrounding the Blood—Drinking Fathers, and issuing from within thy brain, come to shine upon thee. Fear that not. Know them to be the thought—forms of thine own intellectual faculties.

[THE FOURTEENTH DAY]

O nobly—born on the Fourteenth Day, the Four Female Door—Keepers, also issuing from within thine own brain, will come to shine upon thee. Again recognize. From the east [quarter] of thy brain will come to shine the White Tiger—Headed Goad—Holding Goddess, bearing a blood—filled skull—bowl in her left [hand]; from the south, the Yellow Sow—Headed Noose—Holding Goddess; from the west, the Red Lion—Headed Iron—Chain—Holding Goddess; and from the north, the Green Serpent—Headed Bell—Holding Goddess. Thus issue the Four Female Door—Keepers also from within thine own brain and come to shine upon thee; as tutelary deities, recognize them.

O nobly—born, on the outer Circle of these thirty wrathful deities, Herukas, the twenty—eight various—headed mighty goddesses, bearing various weapons, issuing from within thine own brain, will come to shine upon thee. Fear that not. Recognize whatever shineth to be the thought—forms of thine own intellectual faculties. At this vitally important time, recollect the select teachings of the guru.

O nobly—born, [there will dawn] from the east the Dark—Brown Yak—Headed Rakshasa—Goddess, holding a dorje and a skull; and the Reddish—Yellow Serpent—Headed Brahma—Goddess, holding a lotus in her hand ; and the Greenish—Black Leopard—Headed Great—Goddess, holding a trident in her hand; and the Blue Monkey—Headed Goddess of In—quisitiveness, holding a wheel; and the Red Snow—Bear—Headed Virgin—Goddess, bearing a short spear in the hand; and the White Bear—Headed Indra—Goddess, holding an intestine—noose in the hand: [these], the Six Yoginis of the East, issuing from within the [eastern quarter of thine own]¹ brain, will come to shine upon thee ; | a fear that not.

Onobly—born, from the south [will dawn] the Yellow Bat—Headed Delight—Goddess, holding a shaving—knife in the hand ; and the Red Makara—Headed Peaceful—[Goddess], holding a murn in the hand; and the Red Scorpion—Headed Amrjtā—Goddess, holding a lotus in the hand; and the White Kite—Headed Moon—Goddess, | holding a dorje in the hand; and the Dark—Green Fox—Headed Baton—Goddess, flourishing a club in the hand; and the Yellowish—Black Tiger—Headed RākshasT, holding a blood—filled skull—bowl in the hand : [these] the Six Yoginis of the South, issuing from within the [southern quarter of thine own] brain, will come to shine upon thee; fear that not.

O nobly—born, from the west [will dawn] the Greenish—Black Vulture—Headed Eater—Goddess, holding a baton in the hand; and the Red Horse—Headed Delight—Goddess, holding a huge trunk of a corpse; and the White Eagle—Headed Mighty—Goddess, holding a club in the hand; and the Yellow Dog—Headed RākshasI, holding a dorje in the hand and a shaving—knife and cutting [with this]; and the Red Hoopoo—Headed Desire—Goddess, holding a bow and arrow in the hand aimed; and the Green Stag—Headed Wealth—Guardian Goddess, holding an urn in the hand: [these], the Six Yoginis of the West, issuing from within the [western quarter of thine own] brain, will come to shine upon thee; fear that not.

O nobly—born, from the north [will dawn] the Blue Wolf—Headed Wind—Goddess, waving a pennant in the hand; and the Red Ibex—Headed Woman—Goddess, holding a pointed stake in the hand ; and the Black Sow—Headed Sow—Goddess, holding a noose of fangs in the hand; and the Red Crow—Headed Thunderbolt—Goddess, holding an infant corpse in the hand; and the Greenish—Black Elephant—Headed Big—Nosed Goddess,¹ holding in the hand a big corpse and drinking blood from a skull; and the Blue Serpent—Headed Water—Goddess, holding in the hand a serpent noose: [these], the Six Yoginis of the North, issuing from within [the northern quarter of] thine own brain, will come to shine upon thee; fear that not.

O nobly—born, the Four Yoginis of the Door, issuing from within the brain, will come to shine upon thee: from the east, the Black Cuckoo—Headed Mystic Goddess,² holding an iron hook in the hand; from the south, the Yellow Goat—Headed Mystic Goddess, holding a noose in the hand ; from the west, the Red Lion—Headed Mystic Goddess, holding an iron chain in the hand; and from the north, the Greenish—Black Serpent—Headed Mystic Goddess: [these], the Four Door—Keeping Yoginis, issuing from within the brain, will come to shine upon thee.

Since these Twenty—eight Mighty Goddesses emanate from the bodily powers of Ratna—Sambhava, [He] of the Six Heruka Deities, recognize them,¹

O nobly—born, the Peaceful Deities emanate from the Void—ness of the Dharma—Kāya ;² recognize them. From the Radiance of the *Dhartna—Kāya emanate the Wrathful Deities; recognize them.

At this time when the Fifty—eight Blood—Drinking Deities⁴ emanating from thine own brain come to shine upon thee, if thou knowest them to be the radiances of thine own intellect, thou wilt merge, in the state of at—one—ment, into the body of the Blood—Drinking Ones there and then, and obtain Buddhahood.

O nobly—born, by not recognizing now, and by fleeing from the deities out of fear, again sufferings will come to overpower thee. If this be not known, fear being begotten of the Blood—Drinking Deities, [one is] awed and terrified and fainteth away: one's own thought—forms turn into illusory appearances, and one wandereth into the Sangsāra; if one be not awed and terrified, one will not wander into the Sangsāra.

Furthermore, the bodies of the largest of the Peaceful and Wrathful Deities are equal [in vastness] to the limits of the heavens; the intermediate, as big as Mt. Meru ;⁵ the smallest, equal to eighteen bodies such as thine own body, set one upon another. Be not terrified at that; be not awed. If all existing phenomena shining forth as divine shapes and radiances be recognized to be the emanations of one's own intellect, Buddhahood will be obtained at that very instant of recognition. The saying, 'Buddhahood will be obtained in a moment [of time] 'is that which applieth now. Bearing this in mind, one will obtain Buddhahood by merging, in at—one—ment, into the Radiances and the Kāyas.

O nobly—born, whatever fearful and terrifying visions thou mayst see, recognize them to be thine own thought—forms.

O nobly—born, if thou recognize not, and be frightened, then all the Peaceful Deities will shine forth in the shape of Mahā—Kāla;¹ and all the Wrathful Deities will shine [forth] in the form of Dharma—Rāja, the Lord of Death; *and thine own thought—forms becoming Illusions [or Māras] thou wilt wander into the Sangsāra.

O nobly—born, if one recognize not one's own thought—forms, however learned one may be in the Scriptures—both Sūtras and Tantras —although practising religion for a ka/pa, one obtaineth not Buddhahood. If one recognize one's own thought—forms, by one important art and by one word, Buddhahood is obtained.

If one's thought—forms be not recognized as soon as one dieth, the shapes of Dharma—Raja, the Lord of Death, will shine forth on the Chönyid Bardo. The largest of the bodies of Dharma—Rāja, the Lord of Death, equalling the heavens [in vastness] ; the intermediate, Mt. Meru ; the smallest, eighteen times one's own body, will come filling the world—systems. They will come having their upper teeth biting the nether lip; their eyes glassy; their hairs tied up on the top of the head ; big—bellied, narrow—waisted ; holding a [karmic] record board¹ in the hand; giving utterance from their mouth to sounds of ‘Strike! Slay I’, licking [human] brain, drinking blood, tearing heads from corpses, tearing out [the] hearts: thus will [they] come, filling the worlds.

—

O nobly—born, when such thought—forms emanate, be thou not afraid, nor terrified; the body which now thou possessest being a mental—body of [kartmc] propensities, though slain and chopped [to bits], cannot die. Because thy body is, in reality, one of voidness, thou needst not fear. The [bodies of the] Lord of Death, too, are emanations from the radiances of thine own intellect; they are not constituted of matter; voidness cannot injure voidness. Beyond the emanations of thine own intellectual faculties, externally, the Peaceful and the Wrathful Ones, the Blood—Drinking Ones, the Various—Headed Ones, the rainbow lights, the terrifying forms of the Lord of Death, exist not in reality: of this, there is no doubt. Thus, knowing this, all the fear and terror is self—dissipated; and, merging in the state of at—one—ment, Buddhahood is obtained.

If thou recognizest in that manner, exerting thy faith and affection towards the tutelary deities and believing that they have come to receive thee amidst the ambushes of the Bardo, think, ‘[I] take refuge [in them]’; and remember the Precious Trinity, exerting towards them [the Trinity] fondness and faith. Whosoever thine own tutelary deity may be, recollect now; [and] calling him by name, pray thus :

‘[Alas!], wandering am I in the Bardo ; run to my rescue; Uphold me by thy grace, O Precious Tutelary!’

Calling upon the name of thine own guru, pray thus:

‘[Alas!] wandering am I in the Bardo ; rescue me ! [O] let not thy grace forsake me !’

Have faith in the Blood—Drinking Deities, too, and offer up this prayer:

‘Alas t when [I am] wandering in the Sangsāra, through force of overpowering illusions,

On the light—path of the abandonment of fright, fear, and awe, May the bands of the Bhagavāns, the Peaceful and Wrathful Ones, lead [me];

May the bands of the Wrathful Goddesses Rich in Space be [my] rear—guard,

And save me from the fearful ambushades of the Barda, And place me in the state of the Perfectly—Enlightened Buddhas.

When wandering alone, separated from dear friends, When the void forms of one's own thoughts are shining here, May the Buddhas, exerting the force of their grace, Cause not to come the fear, awe, and terror in the Bardo. When the five bright Wisdom—Lights are shining here, May recognition come without dread and without awe; When the divine bodies of the Peaceful and the Wrathful are shining here,

May the assurance of fearlessness be obtained and the Bardo be recognized.

When, by the power of evil karma, misery is being tasted, May the tutelary deities dissipate the misery; When the natural sound of Reality is reverberating [like] a thousand thunders,

May they be transmuted into the sounds of the Six Syllables.¹

When unprotected, karma having to be followed here, I beseech the Gracious Compassionate [One]¹ to protect me ; When suffering miseries of karmic propensities here, May the blissfulness of the Clear Light dawn; May the Five Elements² not rise up as enemies; But may I behold the realms of the Five Orders of the Enlightened Ones/

Thus, in earnest faith and humility, offer up the prayer; whereby all fears will vanish and Buddhahood in the Sambhoga—Kāya will undoubtedly be won: important is this. Being un—distracted, repeat it in that manner, three or [even] seven times.

However heavy the evil karma may be and however weak the remaining harina may be, it is not possible that liberation will not be obtained [if one but recognize]. If, nevertheless, despite everything done in these [stages of the Bardo], recognition is still not brought about, then—there being danger of one's wandering further, into the third Bardo, called the Sidpa Bardo —the setting—face—to—face for that will be shown in detail hereinafter.

[THE CONCLUSION, SHOWING THE FUNDAMENTAL IMPORTANCE OF THE BARDO TEACHINGS]

Whatever the religious practices of any one may have been, — whether extensive or limited,—during the moments of death various misleading illusions occur; and hence this Th'ódol is indispensable. To those who have meditated much, the real Truth dawneth as soon as the body and consciousness—principle part. The acquiring of experience while living is important: they who have [then] recognized [the true nature of] their own being,¹ and thus have had some experience, obtain great power during the Bardo of the Moments of Death, when the Clear Light dawneth.

Again, the meditation on the deities of the Mystic Path of the Mantra, [both in the] visualizing and the perfecting stages, while living, will be of great influence when the peaceful and wrathful visions dawn on the Chönyid Bardo. Thus the training in this Bardo being of particular importance even while living,² hold to it, read it, commit it to memory, bear it in mind properly, read it regularly thrice; let the words and the meanings be very clear; it should be so that the words and the meanings will not be forgotten even though a hundred executioners were pursuing [thee].

It is called the Great Liberation by Hearing, because even those who have committed the five boundless sins¹ are sure to be liberated if they hear it by the path of the ear. Therefore read it in the midst of vast congregations. Disseminate it. Through having heard it once, even though one do not comprehend it, it will be remembered in the Intermediate State without a word being omitted, for the intellect becometh ninefold more lucid [there]. Hence it should be proclaimed in the ears of all living persons; it should be read over the pillows of all persons who are ill; it should be read at the side of all corpses: it should be spread broadcast.

Those who meet with this [doctrine] are indeed fortunate. Save for them who have accumulated much merit and absolved many obscurations, difficult is it to meet with it. Even when met with, difficult is it to comprehend it. Liberation will be won through simply not disbelieving it upon hearing it. Therefore treat this [doctrine] very dearly: it is the essence of all doctrines.²

The Setting—Face—to—Face while experiencing Reality in the Intermediate State, called ‘The Teaching Which Liberateth By Merely Being Heard And That Which Liberateth By Merely Being Attached’,³ is finished⁴.

[BOOK II] [THE SIDPA BARDO]

THIS IS KNOWN AS THE GOOD HEAD—PART OF THAT CALLED ‘THE PROFOUND ESSENCE OF THE LIBERATION BY HEARING¹,—THE REMINDER, THE CLEAR SETTING—FACE—TO—FACE IN THE INTERMEDIATE STATE WHEN SEEKING REBIRTH¹

‘The essence of all things is one and the same, perfectly calm and tranquil, and shows no sign of “becoming”; ignorance, however, is in its blindness and delusion oblivious of Enlightenment, and, on that account, cannot recognize truthfully all those conditions, differences, and activities which characterize the phenomena of the Universe.’ - Ashvaghosha. Th$ Awakening of Faith (Suzuki’s Translation).

[THE OBEISANCES]

To the assembled Deities, to the Tutelaries, to the Gurus, Humbly is obeisance paid:

May Liberation in the Intermediate State be vouchsafed by Them.¹

[INTRODUCTORY VERSES]

Above, in the Great Bardo—Thdol, The Bardo called Chönyid was taught; And now, of the Bardo called Sidpa, The vivid reminder is brought.

[PART I]

[THE AFTER—DEATH WORLD]

[Introductory Instructions to the Officiant]: Although, heretofore, while in the Chönyid Bardo, many vivid re—mindings have been given,—setting aside those who have had great familiarity with the real Truth and those who have good karma, —for them of evil karma who have had no familiarity, and for them of evil karma who because of the influence thereof become stricken with fear and terror, recognition is difficult. These go down to the Fourteenth Day; and, to reimpress them vividly, that which follows is to be read.

[THE BARDO BODY: ITS BIRTH AND ITS SUPERNORMAL FACULTIES]

Worship having been offered to the Trinity, and the prayer invoking the aid of the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas having been recited, then, calling the deceased by name, three or seven times, speak thus:

O nobly—born, listen thou well, and bear at heart that birth in the Hell—world, in the Zfow—world, and in this Bardo—body is of the kind called supernormal birth.¹

Indeed, when thou wert experiencing the radiances of the Peaceful and the Wrathful, in the Chönyid Bardo, being unable to recognize, thou didst faint away, through fear, about three ²and one—half days [after thy decease] ; and, then, when thou wert recovered from the swoon, thy Knower must have risen up in its primordial condition and a radiant body, resembling the former body, must have sprung forth³—as the Tantra says,

’ Having a body [seemingly] fleshly [resembling] the former and that to be produced,

Endowed with all sense—faculties and power of unimpeded motion,

Possessing karmic miraculous powers,

Visible to pure celestial eyes [of Bardo beings] of like nature’

Such, then, is the teaching.

That [radiant body]—thus referred to as [resembling] ‘the former and that to be produced’ (meaning that one will have a body just like the body of flesh and blood, the former human, propensity body)—will also be endowed with certain signs and beauties of perfection such as beings of high destiny possess.

This body, [born] of desire, is a thought—form hallucination in the Intermediate State, and it is called desire—body.

At that time—if thou art to be born as a deva—visions of the Deva-v/orld will appear to thee; similarly—wherever thou art to be born—if as an asura, or a human being, or a brute,¹ or a preta, or a being in Hell, a vision of the place will appear to thee.

Accordingly, the word ‘former’ [in the quotation] implieth that prior to the three and one—half days thou wilt have been thinking thou hadst the same sort of a body as the former body of flesh and blood, possessed by thee in thy former existence because of habitual propensities;² and the word ‘I produced’ is so used because, afterwards, the vision of thy future place of birth will appear to thee. Hence, the expression as a whole, ‘former and that to be produced’, referreth to these [i.e. the fleshly body just discarded and the fleshly body to be assumed at rebirth].

At that time, follow not the visions which appear to thee. Be not attracted; be not weak: if, through weakness, thou be fond of them, thou wilt have to wander amidst the Six Lokas and suffer pain.

Up to the other day thou wert unable to recognize the Chönyid Bardo > and hast had to wander down this far. Now, if thou art to hold fast to the real Truth, thou must allow thy mind to rest undistractedly in the nothing—to—do, nothing—to—hold condition of the unobscured, primordial, bright, void state of thine intellect, to which thou hast been introduced by thy guru? [Thereby] thou wilt obtain Liberation without having to enter the door of the womb. But if thou art unable to know thyself, then, whosoever may be thy tutelary deity and thy guru, meditate on them, in a state of intense fondness and humble trust, as overshadowing the crown of thy head.¹This is of great importance. Be not distracted.

[Instructions to the Officiant] : Thus speak, and, if recognition result from that, Liberation will be obtained, without need of the wandering in the Six Lokas. If, however, through influence of bad karma> recognition is made difficult, thereupon say as follows:

O nobly—born, again listen. ‘Endowed with all sense—faculties and power of unimpeded motion¹ implieth [that although] thou mayst have been, when living, blind of the eye, or deaf, or lame, yet on this After—Death Plane thine eyes will see forms, and thine ears will hear sounds, and all other sense—organs of thine will be unimpaired and very keen and complete. Wherefore the Bardo—body hath been spoken of as ‘endowed with all sense—faculties \ That [condition of existence, in which thou thyself now art] is an indication that thou art deceased and wandering in the Bardo. Act so as to know this. Remember the teachings; remember the teachings.

O nobly—born, ‘unimpeded motion’ implieth that thy present body being a desire—body—thine intellect having been separated from its seat²—is not a body of gross matter, so that now thou hast the power to go right through any rock—masses, hills, boulders, earth, houses, and Mt. Meru itself without being impeded.³ Excepting Budh—Gayā and the mother’s womb,⁴ even the King of Mountains, Mt. Meru itself, can be passed through by thee, straight forwards and backwards unimpededly. That, too, is an indication that thou art wandering in the Sidpa Bardo. Remember thy guru’s teachings, and pray to the Compassionate Lord.

O nobly—born, thou art actually endowed with the power of miraculous action,¹ which is not, however, the fruit of any samad/ti, but a power come to thee naturally; and, therefore, it is of the nature of karmic power.² Thou art able in a moment to traverse the four continents round about Mt. Meru.³ Or thou canst instantaneously arrive in whatever place thou wishest; thou hast the power of reaching there within the time which a man taketh to bend, or to stretch forth his hand. These various powers of illusion and of shape—shifting desire not, desire not.⁴

None is there [of such powers] which thou mayst desire which thou canst not exhibit. The ability to exercise them unimpededly existeth in thee now. Know this, and pray to the guru.

O nobly—born, * Visible to pure celestial eyes of like nature’ implieth that those [beings] of like nature, being those of similar constitution [or level of knowledge] in the Intermediate State, will individually see each other.¹ For example, those beings who are destined to be born amongst devas will see each other [and so on]. Dote not on them [seen by thee], but meditate upon the

Compassionate One,

‘Visible to pure celestial eyes’¹ [also] implieth that the devas, being born [pure] in virtue of merit, are visible to the pure celestial eyes of those who practise dhyāna. These will not see them at all times: when mentally concentrated [upon them] they see [them], when not, they see [them] not. Sometimes, even when practising dhyāna they are liable to become distracted [and not see them].²

[CHARACTERISTICS OF EXISTENCE IN THE INTERMEDIATE STATE]

O nobly—born, the possessor of that sort of body will see places [familiarily known on the earth—plane] and relatives [there] as one seeth another in dreams.

Thou seest thy relatives and connexions and speakest to them, but receivest no reply. Then, seeing them and thy family weeping, thou thinkest, ‘I am dead! What shall I do?’ and feelest great misery, just like a fish cast out

[of water] on red—hot embers. Such misery thou wilt be experiencing at present. But feeling miserable will avail thee nothing now. If thou hast a divine guru} pray to him. Pray to the Tutelary Deity, the Compassionate One. Even though thou feelest attachment for thy relatives and connexions, it will do thee no good. So be not attached. Pray to the Compassionate Lord; thou shalt have nought of sorrow, or of terror, or of awe.

O nobly—born, when thou art driven [hither and thither] by the ever—moving wind of karma, thine intellect, having no object upon which to rest, will be like a feather tossed about by the wind, riding on the horse of breath.² Ceaselessly and involuntarily wilt thou be wandering about. To all those who are weeping [thou wilt say], ‘* Here I am ; weep not.’ But they not hearing thee, thou wilt think, ‘I am dead !’ And again, at that time, thou wilt be feeling very miserable. Be not miserable in that way.

There will be a grey twilight—like light, both by night and by day, and at all times.³ In that kind of Intermediate State thou wilt be either for one, two, three, four, ñve, six, or seven weeks, until the forty—ninth day.⁴ It hath been said that ordinarily the miseries of the Sidpa Bardo are experienced for about twenty—two days; but, because of the determining influence of karma, a fixed period is not assured.

O nobly—born, at about that time, the fierce wind of karma, terrific and hard to endure, will drive thee [onwards], from behind, in dreadful gusts. Fear it not. That is thine own illusion. Thick awesome darkness will appear in front of thee continually, from the midst of which there will come such terror—producing utterances as 'Strike! Slay! * and similar threats.¹ Fear these not.

In other cases, of persons of much evil karma, karmicalty—produced flesh—eating rākṣhasas [or demons] bearing various weapons will utter, * Strike! Slay!' and so on, making a frightful tumult. They will come upon one as if competing amongst themselves as to which [of them] should get hold of one. Apparitional illusions, too, of being pursued by various terrible beasts of prey will dawn. Snow, rain, darkness, fierce blasts [of wind], and hallucinations of being pursued by many people likewise will come; [and] sounds as of mountains crumbling down, and of angry overflowing seas, and of the roaring of fire, and of fierce winds springing up.⁸

When these sounds come one, being terrified by them, will flee before them in every direction, not caring whither one fleeth. But the way will be obstructed by three awful precipices—white, and black, and red. They will be terror—inspiring and deep, and one will feel as if one were about to fall down them. O nobly—born, they are not really precipices ; they are Anger, Lust, and Stupidity.⁸

Know at that time that it is the Sidpa Bardo [in which thou art]. Invoking, by name, the Compassionate One, pray earnestly, thus: 'O Compassionate Lord, and my Guru, and the Precious Trinity, suffer it not that I (so—and—o by name) fall into the unhappy worlds.' Act so as to forget this not.

Others who have accumulated merit, and devoted themselves sincerely to religion, will experience various delightful pleasures and happiness and ease in full measure. But that class of neutral beings who have neither earned merit nor created bad karma will experience neither pleasure nor pain, but a sort of colourless stupidity of indifference. O nobly—born, whatever cometh in that manner—whatever delightful pleasures thou mayst experience—be not attracted by them ; dote not [on them]: think, ‘May the Guru and the Trinity be worshipped [with these merit—given delights]’. Abandon all dotings and hankerings.

Even though thou dost not experience pleasure, or pain, but only indifference, keep thine intellect in the undistracted state of the [meditation upon the] Great Symbol, without thinking that thou art meditating.¹ This is of vast importance.

O nobly—born, at that time, at bridge—heads, in temples, by stūpas of eight kinds,² thou wilt rest a little while, but thou wilt not be able to remain there very long, for thine intellect hath been separated from thine [earth—plane] body.¹ Because of this inability to loiter, thou oft—times wilt feel perturbed and vexed and panic—stricken. At times, thy Knower will be dim ; at times, fleeting and incoherent. Thereupon this thought will occur to thee, ‘Alas! I am dead! What shall I do ? * and because of such thought the Knower will become saddened and the heart chilled, and thou wilt experience infinite misery of sorrow.² Since thou canst not rest in any one place, and feel impelled to go on, think not of various things, but allow the intellect to abide in its own [unmodified] state.

As to food, only that which hath been dedicated to thee can be partaken of by thee, and no other food.³ As to friends at this time, there will be no certainty.⁴

These are the indications of the wandering about on the Sidpa Bardo of the mental—body. At the time, happiness and misery will depend upon karma.

Thou wilt see thine own home, the attendants, relatives, and the corpse, and think, ‘ Now I am dead! What shall I do ?’ and being oppressed with intense sorrow, the thought

‘And so thinking, thou wilt be wandering hither and thither seeking a body.

Even though thou couldst enter thy dead body nine times over—owing to the long interval which thou hast passed in the Chónyid Bardo —it will have been frozen if in winter, been decomposed if in summer, or, otherwise, thy relatives will have cremated it, or interred it, or thrown it into the water, or given it to the birds and beasts of prey.¹ Wherefore finding no place for thyself to enter into, thou wilt be dissatisfied and have the sensation of being squeezed into cracks and crevices amidst rocks and boulders.² The experiencing of this sort of misery occurs in the Intermediate State when seeking rebirth. Even though thou seekest a body, thou wilt gain nothing but trouble. Put aside the desire for a body; and permit thy mind to abide in the state of resignation, and act so as to abide therein.

By thus being set face to face, one obtaineth liberation from the Bardo.

[THE JUDGEMENT]

[Instructions to the Officiant]: Yet, again, it may be possible that because of the influence of bad karma one will not recognize even thus. Therefore, call the deceased by name, and speak as follows:

O nobly—born, (so—and—so), listen. That thou art suffering so cometh from thine own karma ; it is not due to any one else's: it is by thine own karma. Accordingly, pray earnestly to the Precious Trinity; that will protect thee. If thou neither prayest nor knowest how to meditate upon the Great Symbol nor upon any tutelary deity, the Good Genius,³ who was born simultaneously with thee, will come now and count out thy good deeds [with] white pebbles, and the Evil Genius,¹ who was born simultaneously with thee, will come and count out thy evil deeds [with] black pebbles. Thereupon, thou wilt be greatly frightened, awed, and terrified, and wilt tremble; and thou wilt attempt to tell lies, saying, * I have not committed any evil deed'.

Then the Lord of Death will say, * I will consult the Mirror of Karma'.

So saying, he will look in the Mirror, wherein every good and evil act is vividly reflected. Lying will be of no avail.

Then [one of the Executive Furies of] the Lord of Death will place round thy neck a rope and drag thee along; he will cut off thy head, extract thy heart, pull out thy intestines, lick up thy brain, drink thy blood, eat thy flesh, and gnaw thy bones;² but thou wilt be incapable of dying. Although thy body be hacked to pieces, it will revive again. The repeated hacking will cause intense pain and torture.

Even at the time that the pebbles are being counted out, be not frightened, nor terrified ; tell no lies; and fear not the Lord of Death.

Thy body being a mental body is incapable of dying even though beheaded and quartered. In reality, thy body is of the nature of voidness;⁸ thou needst not be afraid. The

THE JUDGEMENT Described on pages xxx—xxxiii, 35—8, 165—y, 240

THE MANTRA OF CHEN RAZEE

ॐ नमो भगवते वासुदेवाय

"OM MA—NI PAD—ME HUM"

Described on page xxxiv

Lords of Death¹ are thine own hallucinations. Thy desire—body is a body of propensities, and void. Voidness cannot injure voidness; the qualityless cannot injure the qualityless.

Apart from one's own hallucinations, in reality there are no such things existing outside oneself as Lord of Death, or god, or demon, or the Bull—headed Spirit of Death.² Act so as to recognize this.

At this time, act so as to recognize that thou art in the Bardo. Meditate upon the Samadla of the Great Symbol. If thou dost not know how to meditate, then merely analyse with care the real nature of that which is frightening thee. In reality it is not formed into anything, but is a Voidness which is the Dharma—Kāya?

That Voidness is not of the nature of the voidness of nothingness, but a Voidness at the true nature of which thou feelest awed, and before which thine intellect shineth clearly and more lucidly: that is the [state of] mind of the Sambhoga—Kāya.

In that state wherein thou art existing, there is being experienced by thee, in an unbearable intensity, Voidness and Brightness inseparable,—the Voidness bright by nature and the Brightness by nature void, and the Brightness inseparable from the Voidness,—a state of the primordial [or unmodified] intellect, which is the Ādi—Kāya.⁴ And the power of this, shining unobstructedly, will radiate everywhere; it is the Nirmāna—Kāya.

O nobly—born, listen unto me undistractedly. By merely recognizing the Four Kāyas thou art certain to obtain perfect Emancipation in any of Them. Be not distracted. The line of demarcation between Buddhas and sentient beings lieth herein.¹ This moment is one of great importance; if thou shouldst be distracted now, it will require innumerable aeons of time for thee to come out² of the Quagmire of Misery.

A saying, the truth of which is applicable, is:

‘In a moment of time, a marked differentiation is created; In a moment of time, Perfect Enlightenment is obtained.’

Till the moment which hath just passed, all this Bardo hath been dawning upon thee and yet thou hast not recognized, because of being distracted. On this account, thou hast experienced all the fear and terror. Shouldst thou become distracted now, the chords of divine compassion of the Compassionate Eyes will break,³ and thou wilt go into the place from which there is no [immediate] liberation. Therefore, be careful. Even though thou hast not recognized ere this—despite thus being set face to face—thou wilt recognize and obtain liberation here.

[Instructions to the Officiant]: If it be an illiterate boor who knoweth not how to meditate, then say this:

O nobly—born, if thou knowest not how thus to meditate, act so as to remember the Compassionate One, and the Saṅgha, the Dharma, and the Buddha, and pray. Think of all these fears and terrifying apparitions as being thine own tutelary deity, or as the Compassionate One.⁴ Bring to thy recollection the mystic name that hath been given thee at the time ‘Even though thou fallest down precipices, thou wilt not be hurt Avoid awe and terror.

[THE ALL—DETERMINING INFLUENCE OF THOUGHT]

[Instructions to the Officiant]: Say that; for by such setting—face—to—face, despite the previous non—liberation, liberation ought surely to be obtained² here. Possibly, [however,] liberation may not be obtained even after that setting—face—to—face ; and earnest and continued application being essential, again calling the deceased by name, speak as follows:

O nobly—born, thy immediate experiences will be of momentary joys followed by momentary sorrows, of great intensity, like the [taut and relaxed] mechanical actions of catapults.³ Be not in the least attached [to the joys] nor displeased [by the sorrows] of that.

If thou art to be born on a higher plane, the vision of that higher plane will be dawning upon thee.

Thy living relatives may—by way of dedication for the benefit of thee deceased—be sacrificing many animals,⁴ and performing religious ceremonies, and giving alms. Thou, because of thy vision not being purified, mayst be inclined to grow very angry at their actions and bring about, at this moment, thy birth in Hell: whatever those left behind thee may be doing, act thou so that no angry thought can arise in thee, and meditate upon love for them.

Furthermore, even if thou feelest attached to the worldly goods thou hast left behind, or, because of seeing such worldly goods of thine in the possession of other people and being enjoyed by them, thou shouldst feel attached to them through weakness, or feel angry with thy successors, that feeling will affect the psychological moment in such a way that, even though thou wert destined to be born on higher and happier planes, thou wilt be obliged to be born in Hell, or in the world of pretas [or unhappy ghosts]. On the other hand, even if thou art attached to worldly goods left behind, thou wilt not be able to possess them, and they will be of no use to thee. Therefore, abandon weakness and attachment for them ; cast them away wholly; renounce them from thy heart. No matter who may be enjoying thy worldly goods, have no feeling of miserliness, but be prepared to renounce them willingly. Think that thou art offering them to the Precious Trinity and to thy guru and abide in the feeling of unattachment, devoid of weakness [of desire].

Again, when any recitation of the *Kamkani Mantra*¹ is being made on thy behalf as a funeral rite, or wfaen any rite for the absolving of bad karma liable to bring about thy birth in lower regions is being performed for thee, the sight of their being conducted in an incorrect way, mixed up with sleep and distraction and non—observance of the vows and lack of purity [on the part of any officiant], and such things indicating levity—all of which thou wilt be able to see because thou art endowed with limited karmic power of prescience *—thou mayst feel lack of faith and entire disbelief [in thy religion]. Thou wilt be able to apprehend any fear and fright, any black actions, irreligious conduct, and incorrectly recited rituals.² In thy mind thou mayst think, ‘Alas! they are, indeed, playing me false \ Thinking thus, thou wilt be extremely depressed, and, through great resentment, thou wilt acquire disbelief and loss of faith, instead of affection and humble trustfulness. This affecting the psychological moment, thou wilt be certain to be born in one of the miserable states.

Such [thought] will not only be of no use to thee, but will do thee great harm. However incorrect the ritual and improper the conduct of the priests performing thy funeral rites, [think], ‘What! mine own thoughts must be impure! How can it be possible that the words of the Buddha should be incorrect ? It is like the reflection of the blemishes on mine own face which I see in a mirror; mine own thoughts must [indeed] be impure. As for these [i. e. the priests], the Saṅgha is their body, the Dharma their utterance, and in their mind they are the Buddha in reality: I will take refuge in them’.

Thus thinking, put thy trust in them and exercise sincere love towards them. Then whatever is done for thee [by those] left behind will truly tend to thy benefit. Therefore the exercise of that love is of much importance ; do not forget this.

Again, even if thou wert to be born in one of the miserable states and the light of that miserable state shone upon thee, yet by thy successors and relatives performing white¹ religious rites unmixed with evil actions, and the abbots and learned priests devoting themselves, body, speech, and mind, to the performance of the correct meritorious rituals, the delight from thy feeling greatly cheered at seeing them will, by its own virtue, so affect the psychological moment that, even though thou deservest a birth in the unhappy states, there will be brought about thy birth on a higher and happier plane. [Therefore] thou shouldst not create impious thoughts, but exercise pure affection and humble faith towards all impartially. This is highly important. Hence be extremely careful.

O nobly—born, to sum up: thy present intellect in the Intermediate State having no firm object whereon to depend, being of little weight and continuously in motion, whatever thought occurs to thee now—be it pious or impious—will wield great power; therefore think not in thy mind of impious things, but recall any devotional exercises; or, if thou wert unaccustomed to any such exercises, [show forth] pure affection and humble faith; pray to the Compassionate One, or to thy tutelary deities; with full resolve, utter this prayer :

‘Alas! while wandering alone, separated from loving friends,² When the vacuous, reflected body of mine own mental ideas dawneth upon me,

May the Buddhas, vouchsafing their power of compassion, Grant that there shall be no fear, awe, or terror in the Bardo. When experiencing miseries, through the power of evil karma

May the tutelary deities dispel the miseries.

When the thousand thunders of the Sound of Reality reverberate,

May they all be sounds of the Six Syllables.¹ When Karma follows, without there being any protector, May the Compassionate One protect me, I pi ay. When experiencing the sorrows of karmic propensities here, May the radiance of the happy clear light of Samādhi shine upon me.’

Earnest prayer in this form will be sure to guide thee along; thou mayst rest assured that thou wilt not be deceived. Of great importance is this: through that being recited, again recollection cometh; and recognition and liberation will be achieved.

[THE DAWNING OF THE LIGHTS OF THE SIX LOKAS]

[Instructions to the Officiant] : Yet—though this [instruction] be so oft repeated—if recognition be difficult, because of the influence of evil karma, much benefit will come from repeating these settings—face—to—face many times over. Once more, [then,] call the deceased by name, and speak as follows :

O nobly—born, if thou hast been unable to apprehend the above, henceforth the body of the past life will become more and more dim and the body of the future life will become more and more clear. Saddened at this [thou wilt think], ° O what misery I am undergoing! Now, whatever body I am to get, I shall go and seek [it] \ So thinking, thou wilt be going hither and thither, ceaselessly and distractedly. Then there will shine upon thee the lights of the Six Sangsāric Lokas. The light of that place wherein thou art to be born, through power of karma, will shine most prominently.

O nobly—born, listen. If thou desirest to know what those six lights are: there will shine upon thee a dull white light from the Deva—v/orld, a dull green light from the Asura— world, a dull yellow light from the Human—world, a dull blue light from the Brute—world, a dull red light from the Preta— world, and a smoke—coloured light from the Hell—world.¹ At that time, by the power of karma thine own body will partake of the colour of the light of the place wherein thou art to be born.

O nobly—born, the special art of these teachings is especially important at this moment: whichever light shineth upon thee now, meditate upon it as being the Compassionate One; from whatever place the light cometh, consider that [place] to be [or to exist in] the Compassionate One. This is an exceedingly profound art; it will prevent birth. Or whosoever thy tutelary deity may be, meditate upon the form for much time,— as being apparent yet non—existent in reality, like a form produced by a magician. That is called the pure illusory form. Then let the [visualization of the] tutelary deity melt away from the extremities, till nothing at all remaineth visible of it; and put thyself in the state of the Clearness and the Voidness²—which thou canst not conceive as something— and abide in that state for a little while. Again meditate upon the tutelary deity; again meditate upon the Clear Light: do this alternately. Afterwards, allow thine own intellect also to melt away gradually,³ [beginning] from the extremities.

Wherever the ether⁴ pervadeth, consciousness pervadeth; wherever consciousness pervadeth, the Dharma—Kāya pervadeth. Abide tranquilly in the uncreated state of the Dharma—Kāya. In that state, birth will be obstructed and Perfect Enlightenment gained.

[PART II]

[THE PROCESS OF REBIRTH] [THE CLOSING OF THE DOOR OF THE WOMB]

[Instructions to the Officiant]: Again, if through great weakness in devotions and lack of familiarity one be not able to understand, illusion may overcome one, and one will wander to the doors of wombs. The instruction for the closing of the womb—doors becometh very important: call the deceased by name and say this :

O nobly—born, if thou hast not understood the above, at this moment, through the influence of karma, thou wilt have the impression that thou art either ascending, or moving along on a level, or going downwards. Thereupon, meditate upon the Compassionate One. Remember. Then, as said above, gusts of wind, and icy blasts, hail—storms, and darkness, and impression of being pursued by many people will come upon thee. On fleeing from these [hallucinations], those who are unendowed with meritorious karma will have the impression of fleeing into places of misery; those who are endowed with meritorious karma will have the impression of arriving in places of happiness. Thereupon, O nobly—born, in whatever continent or place thou art to be born, the signs of that birthplace will shine upon thee then.

For this moment there are several vital profound teachings. Listen undistractedly. Even though thou hast not apprehended by the above settings—face—to—face, here [thou wilt, because] even those who are very weak in devotions will recognize the signs. Therefore listen.

[Instructions to the Officiant]: Now it is very important to employ the methods of closing the womb—door. Wherefore it is necessary to exercise the utmost care. There are two [chief] ways of closing: preventing the being who would enter from entering, and closing the womb—door which might be entered.

[METHOD OF PREVENTING ENTRY INTO A WOMB]

The instructions for preventing the being from entering are thus:

O nobly—born, (so—and—so by name,) whosoever may have been thy tutelary deity, tranquilly meditate upon him,—as upon the reflection of the moon in water, apparent yet non—existent [as a moon], like a magically—produced illusion. If thou hast no special tutelary, meditate either upon the Compassionate Lord or upon me; and, with this in mind, meditate tranquilly.

Then, causing the [visualized form of the] tutelary deity to melt away from the extremities, meditate, without any thought—forming, upon the vacuous Clear Light. This is a very profound art; in virtue of it, a womb is not entered.

[THE FIRST METHOD OF CLOSING THE WOMB—DOOR]

In that manner meditate; but even though this be found inadequate to prevent thee from entering into a womb, and if thou findest thyself ready to enter into one, then there is the profound teaching for closing the womb—door. Listen thou unto it:

‘When, at this time, alas! the Sidpa Bardo is dawning upon oneself,

Holding in mind one single resolution, Persist in joining up the chain of good karma ;¹Close up the womb—door, and remember the opposition.²This is a time when earnestness and pure love are necessary;

Abandon jealousy, and meditate upon the Guru Father—Mother/

Repeat this, from thine own mouth, distinctly; and re—member its meaning vividly, and meditate upon it. The putting of this into practice is essential.

The significance of the above teaching, ‘When, at this time, the Sidpa Bardo is dawning upon me [or upon oneself]’, is that now thou art wandering in the Sidpa Bardo, As a sign of this, if thou lookest into water, or into mirrors, thou wilt see no reflection of thy face or body; nor doth thy body cast any shadow. Thou hast discarded now thy gross material body of flesh and blood. These are the indications that thou art wandering about in the Sidpa Bardo.

At this time, thou must form, without distraction, one single resolve in thy mind. The forming of one single resolve is very important now. It is like directing the course of a horse by the use of the reins.

Whatever thou desirest will come to pass. Think not upon evil actions which might turn the course [of thy mind]. Remember thy [spiritual] relationship with the Reader of this Bardo T/wdol, or with any one from whom thou hast received teachings, initiation, or spiritual authorization for reading religious texts while in the human world; and persevere in going on with good acts: this is very essential. Be not distracted. The boundary line between going upwards or going downwards is here now. If thou givest way to indecision for even a second, thou wilt have to suffer misery for a long, long time. This is the moment. Hold fast to one single purpose. Persistently join up the chain of good acts.

Thou hast come now to the time of closing the womb—door.¹ This is a time when earnestness and pure love are necessary', which implieth that now the time hath come when, first of all, the womb—door should be closed, there being five methods of closing. Bear this well at heart.

[THE SECOND METHOD OF CLOSING THE WOMB—DOOR]

O nobly—born, at this time thou wilt see visions of males and females in union. When thou seest them, remember to withhold thyself from going between them. Regarding the father and mother as thy Guru and the Divine Mother,¹ meditate upon them and bow down; humbly exercise thy faith; offer up mental worship with great fervency; and resolve that thou wilt request [of them] religious guidance.

By that resolution alone, the womb ought certainly to be closed; but if it is not closed even by that, and thou findest thyself ready to enter into it, meditate upon the Divine Guru Father—Mother,² as upon any tutelary deity, or upon the Compassionate Tutelary and Shakti and meditating upon them, worship them with mental offerings. Resolve earnestly that thou wilt request [of them] a boon. By this, the womb—door ought to be closed.

[THE THIRD METHOD OF CLOSING THE WOMB—DOOR]

Still, if it be not closed even by that, and thou findest thyself ready to enter the womb, the third method of repelling attachment and repulsion is hereby shown unto thee :

There are four kinds of birth: birth by egg, birth by womb, supernormal birth,³ and birth by heat and moisture.⁴ Amongst these four,⁶ birth by egg and birth by womb agree in character.

As above said, the visions of males and females in union will appear. If, at that time, one entereth into the womb through the feelings of attachment and repulsion, one may be born either as a horse, a fowl, a dog, or a human being.⁶

If [about] to be born as a male, the feeling of itself being a male dawneth upon the Knower, and a feeling of intense hatred towards the father and of jealousy and attraction towards the mother is begotten. If [about] to be born as a female, the feeling of itself being a female dawneth upon the Knower, and a feeling of intense hatred towards the mother and of intense attraction and fondness towards the father is begotten. Through this secondary cause—[when] entering upon the path of ether, just at the moment when the sperm and the ovum are about to unite—the Knower experienceth the bliss of the simultaneously—born state, during which state it fainteth away into unconsciousness. [Afterwards] it findeth itself encased in oval form, in the embryonic state, and upon emerging from the womb and opening its eyes it may find itself transformed into a young dóg. Formerly it had been a human being, but now if it have become a dog it findeth itself undergoing sufferings in a dog's kennel; or [perhaps] as a young pig in a pigsty, or as an ant in an ant—hill, or as an insect, or a grub in a hole, or as a calf, or a kid, or a lamb,¹ from which shape there is no [immediate] returning. Dumbness, stupidity, and miserable intellectual obscurity are suffered, and a variety of sufferings experienced. In like manner, one may wander into hell, or into the world of unhappy ghosts, or throughout the Six Lokas, and endure inconceivable miseries.

Those who are voraciously inclined towards this [i. e. sangsaric existence], or those who do not at heart fear it,—O dreadful! O dreadful! Alas!—and those who have not received a guru's teachings, will fall down into the precipitous depths of the Sangsāra in this manner, and suffer interminably and unbearably. Rather than meet with a like fate, listen thou unto my words and bear these teachings of mine at heart.

Reject the feelings of attraction or repulsion, and remember one method of closing the womb—door which I am going to show to thee. Close the womb—door and remember the opposition. This is the time when earnestness and pure love are necessary. As hath been said, 'Abandon jealousy, and meditate upon the Guru Father—Mother'

As above explained, if to be born as a male, attraction towards the mother and repulsion towards the father, and if to be born as a female, attraction towards the father and repulsion towards the mother, together with a feeling of jealousy [for one or the other] which ariseth, will dawn upon thee.

For that time there is a profound teaching. O nobly—born, when the attraction and repulsion arise, meditate as follows:

'Alas! what a being of evil karma am I! That I have wandered in the Sangsāra hitherto, hath been owing to attraction and repulsion. If I still go on feeling attraction and repulsion, then I shall wander in endless Sangsāra and suffer in the Ocean of Misery for a long, long time, by sinking therein. Now I must not act through attraction and repulsion. Alas, for me! Henceforth I will never act through attraction and repulsion.¹

Meditating thus, resolve firmly that thou wilt hold on to that [resolution]. It hath been said, in the Tantras, ‘The door of the womb will be closed up by that alone/

O nobly—born, be not distracted. Hold thy mind one—pointedly upon that resolution.

[THE FOURTH METHOD OF CLOSING THE WOMB—DOOR]

Again, even if that doth not close the womb, and one findeth [oneself] ready to enter the womb, then by means of the teaching [called] * The Untrue and the Illusory’¹ the womb should be closed. That is to be meditated as follows:

‘O, the pair, the father and the mother, the black rain, the storm—blasts, the clashing sounds, the terrifying apparitions, and all the phenomena, are, in their true nature, illusions. Howsoever—they may appear, no truth is there [in them]; all substances are unreal and false. Like dreams and like apparitions are they; they are non—permanent; they have no fixity. What advantage is there in being attached [to them]! What advantage is there in having fear and terror of them! It is the seeing of the non—existent as the existent. All these are hallucinations of one’s own mind. The illusory mind itself doth not exist from eternity; therefore where should these external [phenomena] exist ?

‘I, by not having understood these [things] in that way hitherto, have held the non—existent to be the existent, the unreal to be the real, the illusory to be the actual, and have wandered in the Sangsāra so long. And even now if I do not recognize them to be illusions, then, wandering in the Sangsāra for long ages, [I shall be] certain to fall into the morass of various miseries.

‘Indeed, all these are like dreams, like hallucinations, like echoes, like the cities of the Odour—eaters,¹ like mirage, like mirrored forms, like phantasmagoria, like the moon seen in water—not real even for a moment. In truth, they are unreal; they are false.’

By holding one—pointedly to that train of thought, the belief that they are real is dissipated ; and, that being impressed upon the inner continuity [of consciousness], one turneth backwards: if the knowledge of the unreality be impressed deeply in that way, the womb—door will be closed.

[THE FIFTH METHOD OF CLOSING THE WOMB—DOOR]

Still, even when this is done, if the holding [phenomena] as real remaineth undissolved, the womb—door is not closed; and, if one be ready to enter into the womb, thereupon one should close the womb—door by meditating upon the Clear Light, this being the fifth [method]. The meditation is performed as follows:

‘Lo! all substances are mine own mind;’ and this mind is vacuousness, is unborn, and unceasing.¹

Thus meditating, allow the mind to rest in the uncreated [state]—like, for example, the pouring of water into water. The mind should be allowed its own easy mental posture, in its natural [or unmodified] condition, clear and vibrant. By maintaining this relaxed, uncreated [state of mind], the womb—doors of the four kinds of birth² are sure to be closed. Meditate thus until the closing is successfully accomplished.

[Instructions to the Officiant]: Many very profound teachings for closing the womb—door have been given above. It is impossible that they should not liberate people of the highest, the average, and the lowest intellectual capacity. If it be asked why this should be so, it is because, firstly, the consciousness in the Bardo possessing supernormal power of perception³ of a limited kind, whatever is spoken to one then is apprehended. Secondly, because—although [formerly] deaf or blind—here, at this time, all one’s faculties are perfect, and one can hear whatever is addressed to one. Thirdly, being continually pursued by awe and terror, one thinketh, ‘What is best?’

and, being alertly conscious, one is always coming to hear whatever may be told to one. Since the consciousness is without a prop,⁴ it immediately goeth to whatever place the mind directeth. Fourthly, it is easy to direct it.¹ The memory² is ninefold more lucid than before. Even though stupid [before], at this time, by the workings of karma, the intellect becometh exceedingly clear and capable of meditating whatever is taught to it. [Hence the answer is], it is because it [i.e. the Knower] possesseth these virtues.

That the performance of funeral rites should be efficacious, is, likewise, because of that reason. Therefore, the perseverance in the reading of the Great Bardo Thödol for forty—nine days is of the utmost importance. Even if not liberated at one setting—face—to—face, one ought to be liberated at another: this is why so many different settings—face—to—face are necessary.

[THE CHOOSING OF THE WOMB— DOOR]

[Instructions to the Officiant]: There are, nevertheless, many classes of those who—though reminded, and instructed to direct their thoughts one—pointedly—are not liberated, owing to the great force of evil karmic obscurations, and because of being unaccustomed to pious deeds, and of being much accustomed to impious deeds throughout the aeons. Therefore, if the womb—door hath not been closed ere this, a teaching also for the selection of a womb—door is going to be given hereinafter. Now, invoking the aid of all the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas, repeat the Refuge; and, once more calling the deceased by name thrice, speak as follows:

O nobly—born, (so—and—so), listen. Although the above setting—face—to—face teachings have been given one—pointedly, yet thou hast not understood them. Therefore, if the womb—door hath not been closed, it is almost time to assume a body. Make thy selection of the womb [according to] this best teaching. Listen attentively, and hold it in mind.

[THE PREMONITORY VISIONS OF THE PLACE OF REBIRTH]

O nobly—born, now the signs and characteristics of the place of birth will come. Recognize them. In observing the place of birth, choose the continent too.¹

If to be born in the Eastern Continent of Liipah, a lake adorned with swans, male and female, [floating thereon], will be seen. Go not there. Recollect the revulsion [against going there].² If one goeth there,

[that] Continent—though endowed with bliss and ease—is one wherein religion doth not predominate. Therefore, enter not therein.

If to be born in the Southern Continent of Jambu, grand delightful mansions will be seen. Enter therein, if one is to enter.

If to be born in the Western Continent of Balang—Chod, a lake adorned with horses, male and female, [grazing on its shores], will be seen. Go not even there, but return here. Although wealth and abundance are there, that being a land wherein religion doth not prevail, enter not therein.

If to be born in the Northern Continent of Daminyan, a lake adorned with male and female cattle, [grazing on its shores], or trees, [round about it], will be seen. Although duration of life, and merits are there, yet that Continent, too, is one wherein religion doth not predominate. Therefore enter not.

These are the premonitory signs [or visions] of the taking rebirth in those [Continents]. Recognize them. Enter not.³

If one is to be born as a deva> delightful temples [or mansions] built of various precious metals also will be seen.⁴One may enter therein; so enter therein.

If to be born as an cisura either a charming forest will be seen or else circles of fire revolving in opposite directions. Recollect the revulsion; and do not enter therein by any means.

If to be born amongst beasts,¹ rock—caverns and deep holes in the earth and mists will appear. Enter not therein.

If to be born amongst pretas, desolate treeless plains and shallow caverns, jungle glades and forest wastes will be seen. If one goeth there, taking birth as a preta, one will suffer various pangs of hunger and thirst. Recollect the revulsion; and do not go there by any means. Exert great energy [not to enter therein].

If to be born in Hell, songs [like wailings], due to evil karma will be heard. [One will be] compelled to enter therein unresistingly. Lands of gloom, black houses and white houses, and black holes in the earth, and black roads along which one hath to go, will appear. If one goeth there, one will enter into Hell; and, suffering unbearable pains of heat and cold, one will be very long in getting out of it² Go not there into the midst of that. It hath been said, 'Exert thine energy to the utmost': this is needed now.

[THE PROTECTION AGAINST THE TORMENTING FURIES]

O nobly—born, although one liketh it not, nevertheless, being pursued from behind by kartnic tormenting furies,³ one feeleth compelled involuntarily to go on; [and with] tormenting furies in the front, and life—cutters as a vanguard leading one, and darkness and kartnic tornadoes, and noises and snow and rain and terrifying hail—storms and whirlwinds of icy blasts occurring, there will arise the thought of fleeing from them.

Thereupon, by going to seek refuge because of fear, [one beholdeth] the aforesaid visions of great mansions, rock—caverns, earth—caverns, jungles, and lotus blossoms which close [on entering them]; and one escapeth by hiding inside [one of such places] and fearing to come out therefrom, and thinking, ‘To go out is not good now*. And fearing to depart therefrom, one will feel greatly attracted to one’s place of refuge [which is the womb]. Fearful lest, by going out, the awe and terror of the Bardo will meet one, and afraid to encounter them, if one hide oneself within [the place or womb chosen], one will thereby assume a very undesirable body and suffer various sufferings.

That [condition] is an indication that evil spirits and rāk—skasas [or demons] are interfering with one.¹ For this time there is a profound teaching. Listen ; and heed it :

At that time—when the tormenting furies will be in pursuit of thee, and when awe and terror will be occurring—instantaneously [visualize] either the Supreme Heruka, or Haya—griva, or Vajra—Pāni,² or [any other] tutelary deity if thou hast such, perfect of form, huge of body, of massive limbs, wrathful and terrifying in appearance, capable of reducing to dust all mischievous spirits. Visualize it instantaneously. The gift—waves and the power of its grace will separate thee from the tormenting furies and thou wilt obtain the power to select the womb—door. This is the vital art of the very profound teaching; therefore bear it thoroughly well in mind.

O nobly—born, the dhyāni and other deities are born of the power of Samādhi [or meditation]. Pretas [or unhappy spirits or shades] and malignant spirits of certain orders are those who by changing their feeling [or mental attitude] while in the Intermediate State assumed that very shape which they thereafter retained, and became pretas, evil spirits, and rāksasas possessed of the power of shape—shifting. All pretas who exist in space, who traverse the sky, and the eighty thousand species of mischievous sprites, have become so by changing their feelings [while] in the mental—body [on the ÅWTjfø—plane].¹

At this time, if one can recollect the Great Symbol [teachings] concerning the Voidness, that will be best. If one be not trained in that, train the [mental] powers¹ into [regarding] all things as illusion [or māyā] Even if this be impossible, be not attracted by anything. By meditating upon the Tutelary Deity, the Great Compassionate [One], Buddhahood will be obtained in the Sambhoga—Kāya.

[THE ALTERNATIVE CHOOSING: SUPERNORMAL BIRTH; OR WOMB—BIRTH]

If, however, O nobly—born, thou hast, because of the influence of karma,² Choose accordingly.

There are two alternatives: the transference [of the consciousness—principle] to a pure Buddha realm, and the selection of the impure sangsaric womb—door, to be accomplished as follows:

[SUPERNORMAL BIRTH BY TRANSFERENCE TO A PARADISE REALM]

In the first—the transference to a pure paradise—the projection is directed [by thinking or meditating] thus :

‘Alas! how sorrowful it is that I, during all the innumerable kalpas since illimitable, beginningless time, until now, have been wandering in the Quagmire of Sangsāra ! O how painful that I have not been liberated into Buddhahood by knowing the consciousness to be the self¹ hitherto ere this! Now doth this Sangsāra disgust me, horrify me, sicken me; now hath the hour come to prepare to flee from it. I myself will so act as to be born in The Happy Western Realm, at the feet of the Buddha Amitābha,² miraculously from amidst a lotus blossom.’³

Thinking thus, direct the resolution [or wish] earnestly [to that Realm]; or, likewise, to any Realm thou mayst desire,—The Pre—eminently Happy Realm, or The Thickly—Formed Realm, or The Realm [of Those] of Long Hair,⁴ or The Illimitable Vihāra of the Lotus Radiance,¹ in Urgyan’s presence; or direct thy wish to any Realm which thou desirest most, in undistracted one—pointedness [of mind]. By doing so, birth will take place in that Realm instantaneously.

Or, if thou desirest to go to the presence of Maitreya, in the Tushita Heavens,² by directing an earnest wish in like manner and thinking, ‘I will go to the presence of Maitreya in the Tushita Heavens, for the hour hath struck for me here in the Intermediate State’, birth will be obtained miraculously inside a lotus blossom³ in the presence of Maitreya.

[WOMB—BIRTH : THE RETURN TO THE HUMAN WORLD]

If, however, such [a supernormal birth] be not possible, and one delighteth in entering a womb or hath to enter, there is a teaching for the selection of the womb—door of impure Sangsāra. Listen:

Looking with thy supernormal power of foresight over the Continents, as above, choose that in which religion prevaileth and enter therein.

If birth is to be obtained over a heap of impurities,⁴ a sensation that it is sweet—smelling will attract one towards that impure mass, and birth will be obtained thereby.

Whatsoever they [the wombs or visions] may appear to be, do not regard them as they are [or seem]; and by not being attracted or repelled a good womb should be chosen. In this, too, since it is important to direct the wish, direct it thus:

‘Ah! I ought to take birth as a Universal Emperor; or as a Brahmin, like a great sal—tree;¹ or as the son of an adept in siddhic powers;² or in a spotless hierarchical line; or in the caste of a man who is filled with [religious] faith; and, being born so, be endowed with great merit so as to be able to serve all sentient beings.’

Thinking thus, direct thy wish, and enter into the womb. At the same time, emit thy gift—waves [of grace, or good—will] upon the womb which thou art entering, [transforming it thereby] into a celestial mansion.³ And believing that the Conquerors and their Sons [or Bodhisattvas] of the Ten Directions,⁴ and the tutelary deities, especially the Great Compassionate [One], are conferring power thereon, pray unto Them, and enter the womb.

In selecting the womb—door thus, there is a possibility of error: through the influence of karma, good wombs may appear bad and bad wombs may appear good; such error is possible. At that time, too, the art of the teaching being important, thereupon do as follows:

Even though a womb may appear good, do not be attracted ; if it appear bad, have no repulsion towards it. To be free from repulsion and attraction, or from the wish to take or to avoid, —to enter in the mood of complete impartiality,—is the most profound of arts. Excepting only for the few who have had some practical experience [in psychical development], it is difficult to get rid of the remnants of the disease of evil propensities.

[Instructions to the Officiant]: Therefore, if unable to part with the attraction and repulsion, those of the least mentality and of evil karma will be liable to take refuge amongst brutes.¹ The way to repel therefrom is to call the deceased by name again, thus:

O nobly—born, if thou art not able to rid thyself of attraction and repulsion, and know not the [art of] selecting the womb—door, whichever of the above visions may appear, call upon the Precious Trinity and take refuge [therein]. Pray unto the Great Compassionate One. Walk with thy head erect. Know thyself in the Bardo. Cast away all weakness and attraction towards thy sons and daughters or any relations left behind thee; they can be of no use to thee. Enter upon the White Light—[Path] of the devas, or upon the Yellow Light —[Path]² of human beings; enter into the great mansions of precious metals and into the delightful gardens.

[Instructions to the Officiant]: Repeat that [address to the deceased] seven times over. Then there should be offered ‘The Invocation of the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas’; ⁴ The Path of Good Wishes Giving Protection from Fears in the Bardo’; ‘The Root Words [or Verses] of the Bardo’; and ‘The Rescuer [or Path of Good Wishes for Saving] from the Ambuscades [or Dangerous Narrow Passage—Way] of the Bardo’. ³ These are to be read over thrice. ‘The Tatidol’, which liberateth the body—aggregate,⁴ should also be read out. Then ‘The Rite which Conferreth of Itself Liberation in [Virtue of] Propensity¹ should be read too.

[THE GENERAL CONCLUSION]

By the reading of these properly, those devotees [or yogis']² at the moment of death. They need not traverse the Intermediate State, but will depart by the Great Straight—Upward [Path].³ Others who are a little less practised [in things spiritual], recognizing the Clear Light in the Chonyid Bardo, at the moment of death, will go by the upward [course]. Those lower than these will be liberated—in accordance with their particular abilities and karmic connexions—when one or other of the Peaceful and Wrathful Deities dawneth upon them, during the succeeding [two] weeks, while in the Chönyid Bardo.

There being several turning—points,⁴ liberation should be obtained at one or other of them through recognizing. But those of very weak karmic connexion, whose mass of obscurations is great [because of] evil actions, have to wander downwards and downwards to the Sidpa Bardo. Yet since there are, like the rungs of a ladder, many kinds of settings—face—to—face [or reminders], liberation should have been obtained at one or at another by recognizing. But those of the weakest karmic connexions, by not recognizing, fall under the influence of awe and terror. [For them] there are various graded teachings for closing the womb—door and for selecting the womb—door; and, at one or other of these, they should have apprehended the method of visualization and [applied] the illimitable virtues [thereof] for exalting one's own condition. Even the lowest of them, resembling the brute order, will have been able—in virtue of the application of the Refuge—to turn from entering into misery; and, [obtaining] the great [boon] of a perfectly endowed and freed human body,¹ will, in the next birth, meeting with a guru who is a virtuous friend, obtain the [saving] vows.

If this Doctrine arrive [while one is] in the Sidpa Bardo, it will be like the connecting up of good actions, resembling [thus] the placing of a trough in [the break of] a broken drain: such is this Teaching.²

Those of heavy evil karma cannot possibly fail to be liberated by hearing this Doctrine [and recognizing]. If it be asked, why? it is because, at that time, all the Peaceful and Wrathful Deities being present to receive [one], and the Māras and the Interrupters likewise coming to receive [one] along with them, the mere hearing of this Doctrine then tumeth one's views, and liberation is obtained; for there is no flesh and blood body to depend upon, but a mental body, which is [easily] affected. At whatever distance one may be wandering in the Bardo, one heareth and cometh, for one possesseth the slender sense of supernormal perception and foreknowledge; and, recollecting and apprehending instantaneously, the mind is capable of being changed [or influenced]. Therefore is it [i.e. the Teaching] of great use here. It is like the mechanism of a catapult¹ It is like the moving of a big wooden beam [or log] which a hundred men cannot carry, but which by being floated upon water can be towed wherever desired in a moment.² It is like the controlling of a horse's mouth by means of a bridle.³

Therefore, going near [the body of] one who hath passed out of this life,—if the body be there,—impress this [upon the spirit of the deceased] vividly, again and again, until blood and the yellowish water—secretion begin to issue from the nostrils. At that time the corpse should not be disturbed. The rules to be observed for this [impressing to be efficacious] are: no animal should be slain on account of the deceased;⁴ nor should relatives weep or make mournful wailings near the dead body;⁵ [let the family] perform virtuous deeds as far as possible.⁶

In other ways, too, this Great Doctrine of the Bardo Thödol, as well as any other religious texts, may be expounded [to the dead or dying]. If this [Doctrine] be joined to the end of *The Guide*¹ and recited [along with The Guide] it becometh very efficacious. In yet other ways it should be recited as often as possible.² The words and meanings should be committed to memory [by every one]; and, when death is inevitable and the death—symptoms are recognized,—strength permitting—one should recite it oneself, and reflect upon the meanings. If strength doth not permit, then a friend should read the Book and impress it vividly. There is no doubt as to its liberating.

The Doctrine is one which liberateth by being seen, without need of meditation or of sādhanā ;³ this Profound Teaching liberateth by being heard or by being seen. This Profound Teaching liberateth those of great evil karma through the Secret Pathway. One should not forget its meaning and the words, even though pursued by seven mastiffs.⁴

By this Select Teaching, one obtaineth Buddhahood at the moment of death. Were the Buddhas of the Three Times [the Past, the Present, and the Future] to seek, They could not find any doctrine transcending this.

Thus is completed the Profound Heart—Drops of the Bardo Doctrine, called The Bardo Thödol which liberateth embodied beings.

[Here endeth the Tibetan Book of the Dead]

[THE APPENDIX]

[In our Manuscript (but not in the Block—Print), directly following the text of the Bardo Thödol, there are thirteen folios of rituals and prayers (lit, 'paths of good wishes'), which all professional readers of the Bardo Th'ödol must know, usually from memory, and apply as needed and they are here rendered into English as follows:]

[I: THE INVOCATION OF THE BUDDHAS AND BODHISATTVAS]

[Instructions to the Officiant] : The invoking of the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas for assistance, when [any one is] dying, is [thus] :

Offer up to the Trinity whatever actual offerings can be offered [by the dying person, or by his family], together with mentally—created offerings; and, holding in the hand sweet—smelling incense, repeat, with great fervency, the following :

O ye Buddhas and Bodhisattvas, abiding in the Ten Directions,² endowed with great compassion, endowed with foreknowledge, endowed with the divine eye, endowed with love, affording protection to sentient beings, condescend through the power of your great compassion to come hither; condescend to accept these offerings actually laid out and mentally created.

O ye Compassionate Ones, ye possess the wisdom of understanding, the love of compassion, the power of [doing] divinedeeds and of protecting, in incomprehensible measure. Ye Compassionate Ones, (such—and—such a person) is passing from this world to the world beyond. He is leaving this world. He is taking a great leap. No friends [hath he]. Misery is great. [He *^s without] defenders, without protectors, without forces and kinsmen. The light of this world hath set. He goeth to another place. He entereth thick darkness. He falleth down a steep precipice. He entereth into a jungle solitude. He is pursued by Karmic Forces. He goeth into the Vast Silence. He is borne away by the Great Ocean. He is wafted on the Wind of Karma, He goeth in the direction where stability existeth not. He is caught by the Great Conflict. He is obsessed by the Great Afflicting Spirit. He is awed and terrified by the Messengers of the Lord of Death. Existing Karma putteth him into repeated existence. No strength hath he. He hath come upon a time when he hath to go alone.

O ye Compassionate Ones, defend (so—and—so) who is defenceless. Protect him who is unprotected. Be his forces and his kinsmen. Protect [him] from the great gloom of the Bardo. Turn him from the red [or storm] wind of Karma. Turn him from the great awe and terror of the Lords of Death. Save him from the long narrow passage—way of the Bardo.

O ye Compassionate Ones, let not the force of your compassion be weak; but aid him. Let him not go into misery [or the miserable states of existence]. Forget not your ancient vows; and let not the force of your compassion be weak.

O ye Buddhas and Bodhisattvas, let not the might of the method of your compassion be weak towards this one. Catch hold of him with [the hook of] your grace.¹ Let not the sentient being fall under the power of evil karma.

O ye Trinity, protect him from the miseries of the Bardo.²

Saying this with great humility and faith, let thyself and [all] others [present] repeat it thrice

[II:] ‘THE PATH OF GOOD WISHES FOR SAVING FROM THE DANGEROUS NARROW PASSAGEWAY OF THE BARDO’ is [as follows]:

[I]

O ye Conquerors and your Sons, abiding in the Ten Directions,

O ye ocean—like Congregation of the All—Good Conquerors, the Peaceful and the Wrathful,

O ye Gurus and Devas, and ye Dākinis, the Faithful Ones, Harken now out of [your] great love and compassion: Obeisance,

O ye assemblage of Gurus and Dākinis, Out of your great love, lead us along the Path.

[2]

When, through illusion, I and others are wandering in the Sangsāra,

Along the bright light—path of undistracted listening, reflection, and meditation,

May the Gurus of the Inspired Line lead us,

May the bands of Mothers be our rear—guard,

May we be saved from the fearful narrow passage—way of
the Bardo,

May we be placed in the state of the perfect Buddhahood.

[3]

When, through violent anger, [we are] wandering in the Sangsāra,

Along the bright light—path of the Mirror—like Wisdom,

May the Bhagavān Vajra—Sattva lead us,

May the Mother Māmaki be our rear—guard,

May we be saved from the fearful narrow passage—way of
the Bardo,

May we be placed in the state of the perfect Buddhahood.

When, through intense pride, [we are] wandering in the Sangsāra,

Along the bright light—path of the Wisdom of Equality,

May the Bhagavān Ratna—Sambhava lead us,

May the Mother, She—of—the—Buddha—Eye, be our rear
—guard,

May we be saved from the fearful narrow passage—way of
the Bardo,

May we be placed in the state of the perfect Buddhahood.

[5]

When, through great attachment, [we are] wandering in the Sangsāra,

Along the bright light—path of the Discriminating Wisdom,

May the Bhagavān Amitābha lead us,

May the Mother, [She]—of—White—Raiment, be our rear—guard,

May we be saved from the fearful narrow passage—way of the Bardo,

May we be placed in the state of the perfect Buddhahood.

[6]

When, through intense jealousy, [we are] wandering in the Sangsāra,

Along the bright light—path of the All—Performing Wisdom,

May the Bhagavān Amogha—Siddhi lead us,

May the Mother, the Faithful Tāra, be our rear—guard,

May we be saved from the fearful narrow passage—way of the Bardo,

May we be placed in the state of the perfect Buddhahood.

[7]

When, through intense stupidity, [we are] wandering in the Sangsāra,

Along the bright light—path of the Wisdom of Reality,

May the Bhagavān Vairochana lead us,

May the Mother of Great Space be our rear—guard,

May we be saved from the fearful narrow passage—way of
the Bardo,

May we be placed in the state of the perfect Buddhahood.

[8]

When, through intense illusion, [we are] wandering in the Sangsarci)

Along the bright light—path of the abandonment of hallucinatory fear, awe, and terror,

May the bands of the Bhagavāns of the Wrathful Ones lead us,

May the bands of the Wrathful Goddesses Rich—in—Space be our rear—guard,

May we be saved from the fearful narrow passage—way of the Bardos

May we be placed in the state of the perfect Buddhahood.

[9]

When, through intense propensities, [we are] wandering in the Sangsāra,

Along the bright light—path of the Simultaneously—born
Wisdom,

May the heroic Knowledge—Holders lead us,

May the bands of the Mothers, the Dākinis, be our rear—guard,

May we be saved from the fearful narrow passage—way of the Bardo,

May we be placed in the state of the perfect Buddhahood.

[10]

May the ethereal elements not rise up as enemies;

May it come that we shall see the Realm of the Blue Buddha.

May the watery elements not rise up as enemies;

May it come that we shall see the Realm of the White Buddha.

May the earthy elements not rise up as enemies;

May it come that we shall see the Realm of the Yellow Buddha.

May the fiery elements not rise up as enemies;

May it come that we shall see the Realm of the Red Buddha.

May the airy elements not rise up as enemies;

May it come that we shall see the Realm of the Green Buddha.¹

May the elements of the rainbow colours not rise up as enemies;

May it come that all the Realms of the Buddhas will be seen.

May it come that all the Sounds [in the Bardo] will be known as one's own sounds;

May it come that all the Radiances will be known as one's own radiances;

May it come that the Tri—Kāya will be realized in the Bardo,

[III:] Here beginneth

‘THE ROOT VERSES OF THE SIX BARDOS’:

[1]

O now, when the Birthplace Bardo upon me is dawning! Abandoning idleness—there being no idleness in [a devotee's] life—

Entering into the Reality undistractedly, listening, reflecting, and meditating,

Carrying on to the Path [knowledge of the true nature of] appearances and of mind, may the Tri—Kāya be realized:

Once that the human form hath been attained,

May there be no time [or opportunity] in which to idle it [or human life] away.

[2]

O now, when the Dream Bardo upon me is dawning!

Abandoning the inordinate corpse—like sleeping of the sleep of stupidity,

May the consciousness undistractedly be kept in its natural state;

Grasping the [true nature of] dreams, [may I] train [myself] in the Clear Light of Miraculous Transformation:

Acting not like the brutes in slothfulness,

May the blending of the practising of the sleep [state] and actual [or waking] experience be highly valued [by me].¹

[3]

O now, when the Dhyāna Bardo upon me is dawning!

Abandoning the whole mass of distractions and illusions,

May [the mind] be kept in the mood of endless undistracted Samādhiy

May firmness both in the visualizing and in the perfected [stages] be obtained :

At this time, when meditating one—pointedly, with [all other] actions put aside,

May I not fall under the power of misleading, stupefying passions.

[4]

O now, when the Bardo of the Moment of Death upon me is dawning!

Abandoning attraction and craving, and weakness for all [worldly things],

May I be undistracted in the space of the bright [enlightening] teachings,²

May I [be able to] transfuse myself into the heavenly space of the Unborn:

The hour hath come to part with this body composed of flesh and blood;

May I know the body to be impermanent and illusory.

[5]

O now, when the Bardo of the Reality upon me is dawning,
Abandoning all awe, fear, and terror of all [phenomena],

May I recognize whatever appeareth as being mine own thought—forms,

May I know them to be apparitions in the Intermediate State;

[It hath been said], ‘There arriveth a time when the chief turning—point is reached;

Fear not the bands of the Peaceful and Wrathful, Who are thine own thought—forms’.

[6]

O now, when the Bardo of [taking] Rebirth upon me is dawning!

One—pointedly holding fast to a single wish,

[May I be able to] continue the course of good deeds through repeated efforts,¹

May the womb—door be closed and the revulsion recollected: The hour hath come when energy and pure love are needed; [May I] cast off jealousy and meditate upon the Guru, the Father—Mother.

[7]

[’ O] procrastinating one, who thinketh not of the coming of death,

Devoting thyself to the useless doings of this life,

Improvident art thou in dissipating thy great opportunity;

Mistaken, indeed, will thy purpose be now if thou returnest empty—handed [from this life]:

Since the Holy Dharma is known to be thy true need, Wilt thou not devote [thyself] to the Holy Dharma even now?’

[EPILOGUE]

Thus say the Great Adepts² in devotion.

If the chosen teaching of the guru be not borne in mind, Wilt thou not [O shiskya] be acting even as a traitor to thyself?

It is of great importance that these Root Words be known.

[IV:] Here beginneth

‘THE PATH OF GOOD WISHES WHICH PRO—TECTETH FROM FEAR IN THE BARDO’:

[I]

When the cast [of the dice] of my life hath become exhausted,

The relatives in this world avail me not;

When I wander alone by myself in the Bardo,

[O] ye Conquerors, Peaceful and Wrathful, exercising the power of your compassion,

Let it come that the Gloom of Ignorance be dispelled.

[2]

When wandering alone, parted from loving friends,

When the shapes of mine empty thought—forms dawn upon me here,

[May the] Buddhas, exerting the power of their divine compassion,

Cause it to come that there be neither awe nor terror in the Bardo.

[3]

When the bright radiances of the Five Wisdoms shine upon me now,

Let it come that I, neither awed nor terrified, may recognize them to be of myself;

When the apparitions of the Peaceful and Wrathful forms are dawning upon me here,

Let it come that I, obtaining the assurance of fearlessness, may recognize the Bardo.

[4]

When experiencing miseries, because of the force of evil karma,

Let it come that the Conquerors, the Peaceful and Wrathful, may dispel the miseries;

When the self—existing Sound of Reality reverberates [like] a thousand thunders,

Let it come that they be transmuted into the sounds of the Mahāyāna Doctrines.¹

[5]

When [I am] unprotected, [and] karmic influences have to be followed here,

I beseech the Conquerors, the Peaceful and the Wrathful, to protect me;

When suffering miseries, because of the karmic influence of propensities,

Let it come that the blissful Samadhi of the Clear Light may dawn [upon me].

[6]

When assuming supernormal rebirth in the Sidpa Bardo,

Let it come that the perverting revelations of Mara occur not therein;

When I arrive wheresoever I wish to,

Let it come that I experience not the illusory fright and awe from evil karma.

[7]

When the roarings of savage beasts are uttered,

Let it come that they be changed into the sacred sounds of the Six Syllables;²

When pursued by snow, rain, wind, and darkness,

Let it come that I see with the celestial eyes of bright Wisdom.

[8]

Let it come that all sentient beings of the same harmonious order in the Bardo,

Without jealousy [towards one another],³ obtain birth on the higher planes;

When [destined to] suffering from intense miseries of hunger and thirst,

Let it come that I experience not the pangs of hunger and thirst, heat and cold.¹

[9]

When I behold the future parents in union,

Let it come that I behold them as the [Divine] Pair, the Conquerors, the Peaceful and the Wrathful Father and Mother;

Obtaining the power of being born anywhere, for the good of others,

Let it come that I obtain the perfect body, adorned with the signs and the graces.⁸

[10]

Obtaining for myself the body of a male [which is] the better,

Let it come that I liberate all who see or hear me;

Allowing not the evil kanna to follow me,

Let it come that whatever merits [be mine] follow me and be multiplied.

[11]

Wherever I be born, there and then,

Let it come that I meet the Conquerors, the Peaceful and the Wrathful Deities;

Being able to walk and to talk as soon as [I am] born,³

Let it come that I obtain the non—forgetting intellect and remember my past life⁴ [or lives].

[12]

In all the various lores, great, small, and intermediate,

Let it come that I be able to obtain mastery merely upon hearing, reflecting, and seeing;

In whatever place I be born, let it be auspicious;

Let it come that all sentient beings be endowed with happiness.

[13]

Ye Conquerors, Peaceful and Wrathful, in likeness to your bodies,

[Number of your] followers, duration of your life—period, limit of your realms,

And [in likeness to the] goodness of your divine name,

Let it come that I, and others, equal your very selves in all these.

[14]

By the divine grace of the innumerable All—Good Peaceful and Wrathful [Ones],

And by the gift—waves of the wholly pure Reality,

[And] by the gift—waves of the one—pointed devotion of the mystic devotees,

Let it come that whatsoever be wished for be fulfilled here and now.

‘The Path of Good Wishes Affording Protection from Fears in the Bardo’ is finished.

[V: THE COLOPHON]

[The Manuscript concludes with the following seven verses by the lāma or scribe who compiled it, but he—faithful to the old lāmaic teaching that the human personality should be self—abased and the Scriptures alone exalted before the gaze of sentient creatures—has not recorded his name:]

Through the perfectly pure intention of mine

In the making of this, through the root of the merits thereof,

[May] those protectorless sentient beings, Mothers, [Be] placed in the State of the Buddha.¹

Let the radiant glory of auspiciousness come to illuminate the world,²

Let this Book be auspicious;³

Let virtue and goodness be perfected in every way.

[Here endeth the Manuscript of the Bardo Thodol.]

¹ In dedicating the whole of the spiritual merit, derived from the task of transcribing our copy of the Bardo Thödol, to mothers, irrespective of race or religion, to the end that they may be helped to attain Buddhahood, the scribe testifies to the position of respect and honour which the democracy of Buddhism has always assigned to woman.

² Lit. 'JambudvTpa', the proper Sanskrit name given to the realm of human beings.

³ The text of this verse is Māngatan: dGeho (pron. Gewo) the Sanskrit and the Tibetan term (each meaning 'Let it [i.e. this Book] be auspicious'), in apposition, suggesting that the scribe possessed at least a limited knowledge of Sanskrit.

‘Fill up, Punnā, the orb of holy life,
E'en as on fifteenth day the full—orb'd moon.
Fill full the perfect knowledge of the Path,
And scatter all the gloom of ignorance.’—

Punnā, a Bhikkhunī.
Psalms of the Early Buddhists, I. iii
(Mrs. Rhys Davids' Translation).

ADDENDA

These Addenda consist of seven sections, complementary to our Introduction and Commentary, concerning (1) Yoga, (2) Tantricism, (3) Mantras, or Words of Power, (4) the Guru and Shiskya (or Chela) and Initiations, (5) Reality, (6) Northern and Southern Buddhism and Christianity, and (7) the Medieval Christian Judgement.

I. YOGA

The word Yoga (frequently appearing in our annotations to the Bardo Thödol text), derived from the Sanskrit root yuj meaning ‘to join’, closely allied with the English verb to yoke implies a joining or yoking of the lower human nature to the higher or divine nature in such manner as to allow the higher to direct the lower; and this condition—essential to the successful application of the Bardo doctrines—is to be brought about by control of the mental process. So long as the field of the mind is occupied by such thought—forms and thought—processes as arise from the false concept, universally dominating mankind, that phenomena and phenomenal appearances are real, a state of mental obscuration called ignorance, which prevents true knowledge, exists. It is only when all obscuring and erroneous concepts are totally inhibited and the field of the mind is swept clean of them that the primordial or unmodified condition of mind, which is ever devoid of these thought—formations and thought—processes arising from ignorance, is realizable; and, in its realization, there dawns Illumination, symbolized in the Bardo Thödol as the Primal Clear Light of the Dharma—Kāya.

A mirror covered with a thick deposit of dust, or a crystal vase filled with muddied water, symbolize the mind of the normal human being darkened with the nescience arising from heresies and false knowledge. Yoga is a scientific method of removing the dust from the mirror and the earthy particles from the water. It is only when the mind is thus made clear and limpid that it can reflect the Light of Reality and man can come to know himself. Māyā, or Illusion, is the Veil of Isis hiding from man the Unsullied and Unsulliable Reality; the piercing of this Veil and the seeing of that which it hides is accomplished through methods as definite and certain in psychical results as those employed in a European or American chemical laboratory are in physical results. As gold can be separated from impurities by methods of chemistry, so can Truth be divorced from Error by methods of Yoga.

Like the root teachings of Buddhism, the root teachings of the Bardo Thödol are incapable of being practically applied without Right Knowledge; Right Knowledge to be at all effective in a devotee's life should not depend merely upon belief or theory, but upon realization ; and realization of Right Knowledge is impossible without such mind control as Yoga implies. That this is so, the canonical scriptures of all schools of Buddhism confirm.¹

It is not our purpose to discuss here the intricacies of the various aspects and schools of Yoga ; for, though technical terms and some of the purely philosophical or theoretical parts of the Hindu, Buddhist, and other systems of the science of mind—control often differ widely, we are convinced, after much research carried on while living among yogis of various schools, that the goal for all yogis is, in the last analysis of esotericism, identical, namely, emancipation from the thralldom of sangsārt(C) or phenomenal, existence, the Hindus calling it Mukti and the Buddhists Nirvana?²

Intellectual understanding of much of the Bardo Th'ódol is, therefore, obviously dependent upon at least some elementary explanation of Yoga, such as we have herein given. The Clear Light, so often referred to in our text—to take but one of the outstanding yogic doctrines—is best interpreted from the standpoint of the devotee of Yoga, though for all mankind alike it dawns at the all—determining moment of death. As such, the Clear Light symbolizes the visual condition in which one finds oneself at the moment of death and afterwards in the Intermediate State. If the vision be unclouded by karntic propensities, which are the source of all phenomena and apparitions—appearances in the Bardo, the deceased sees Reality as the Primordial Clear Light, and, if he so wills, can renounce the Sangsāra and pass into Nirvana, beyond the Circle of Death and Rebirth.

Such clarity of spiritual insight is, of course, extremely rare, being the fruit of innumerable lifetimes of right living; nevertheless, the aim of the Bardo Thödol teachings is to attempt to place every one, when dying or deceased, in the Path leading to its realization. Unless, through the practice of mental—concentration, complete control over the thinking process be achieved, so as to arrive at Right Knowledge ere death, in virtue of having experienced Illumination (i.e. recognition of the Clear Light in an ecstatic condition while still in the human body), the lāmas maintain that comprehension of the nature of the Clear Light is quite impossible for the unilluminated.

II. TANTRICISM¹

The Bardo Thödol being itself a work more or less Tantric,² and consequently largely based upon the Yōga Philosophy, some general acquaintance with Tantricism, as with Yōga, is desirable for all readers of this book. So we record here—in mere outline, and, therefore, more often than not undetailed and incomplete—the following complementary matter concerning Tantricism.

In the preliminary instructions, the Bardo Th'ödol makes reference to the vital—force or vital—airs, which, following the TāntraS) may be described as follows:

The Vital—Force (Skt. Prānā).— The human principle of consciousness, the Knower, clothes itself, when incarnate, in five sheaths (Skt. Kos/ia), which are: (1) the physical—sheath (Anna—tnaya—kosha) ; (2) the vital—sheath (Pr ana—may a—kos/ia) ; (3) the sheath in which resides the ordinary human consciousness (Mano—tnaya—kos/ci) ; (4) that of the subconsciousness (Vijnāna—maya—koska) ; and (5) that of the all—transcending blissful consciousness of Reality (ānanda—maya—kosha).

In the vital—sheath resides the vital—force (Skt.prāna) divided into ten vital—airs (vāyu, derived from the root va, ‘to breathe’ or ‘to blow’ refers to the motive power of prāna). As the daemons of Plato’s occultism are said to control the operations of the Cosmic Body, so these vayu, composed of negative prāna, control the operations of the human body. Five are fundamental: (1) the prāna, controlling inspiration; (2) the udāna, controlling the ascending vital—force (or vital—air); (3) the apāna, controlling the downward vital—force, which expels wind, excrement, urine, and semen; (4) the samana, as the collective force of the vāyu kindles the fire of the body whereby food is digested and then distributed by the blood; and (5) the vyāna controlling division and diffusion in all metabolic processes. The five minor airs are the Naga, kūrntna krikara, deva—datta, and dhananjaya, which produce, respectively, hiccuping, opening and closing of the eyes, assistance to digestion, yawning, and distension.

The Psychic Nerves or Channels (Skt. Nādt).— There are next mentioned in our text the Psychic Nerves. Sanskrit works on Yoga say that there are fourteen principal nādt and hundreds of thousands of minor nādt in the human body, just as Western physiologists say that there are so many chief nerves and minor nerves. But the nādt of the East and the nerves of the West, although literally the same in name, are not synonymous. The nādt are invisible channels for the flow of psychic forces whose conducting agents are the vital—airs (vāyu).

Of the fourteen principal nādt, there are three which are of fundamental importance. These are, to follow our text, the median—nerve (Skt. sushumnā—nādi the left nerve (tdā—nādt), and the right nerve (pingalā—nādi). The sushūmnā—nādl is the chief or median—nerve, situated in the hollow of the spinal column (Skt. Brāhma—danda), the Mt. Meru of the human body, man being regarded as the microcosm of the macrocosm. The idā—nādi, to the left, and the pingalā—nādt, to the right, coil round it as the two serpents coil round the caduceus carried by the messenger—god Hermes. It is believed that this ancient herald’s wand symbolizes the sufhumnā—nādi, and the twining serpents the idā—nādi and the pingalā—nādi. If so, we see again how the esoteric symbol—code of the West corresponds to that of the East.

The Psychic—Nerve Centres (Skt. Chakra). —The sushumnā—nādi forms the great highway for the passage of the psychic forces of the human body. These forces are concentrated in centres, or chakra, like dynamos, ranged along the sushumnā—nādi and interconnected by it, wherein are stored the vital—force or vital—fluid upon which all psycho—physical processes ultimately depend. Of these, six are of fundamental importance. The first is known as the Root—support (Mulādhārā) of the sushumnā—nādi situated in the perineum; and in the Mfdādkārā is the secret Fountain of Vital—Force, presided over by the Goddess Kundalinu. Next above, lies the second chakra, or lotus, called the Svādhiskthāna, which is the centre of the sex—organs. The navel nerve—centre is above, and called in Sanskrit Mani—pūra—chakra. The next is the heart nerve—centre, the Anāhata—chakra. In the throat is located the fifth, called the Viskuddka—chakra. In the ājñā—chakra, which is the sixth, situated between the eyebrows, as depicted by the ‘third eye’ on images of the Buddha and of Hindu deities, the three chief psychic nerves (nādz) suskumnā, ida, and pīngala, come together and then separate. Above all, in the causal region of psychic man, as the sun of the body, sending its rays downwards over the human—body cosmos, is the Supreme or Seventh Chakra, the thousand—petalled lotus (or chakra) called Sahasrāra Padma through it the sushumnā—nādi has its exit, the Aperture of Brāhma (Skt. Brahma—randhra) referred to in our text, through which the consciousness—principle normally goes out from the body at death.

The initial aim of the practitioner of Yoga is to awaken what in the Tantras is called the Serpent Power, personified as the Goddess Kundalin. It is in the Mulādhārā—chakra, at the base of the spinal column, containing the root of the sushumnā—nādi, that this mighty occult power lies coiled, like a serpent asleep. Once the Serpent Power is aroused into activity, it is made to penetrate, one by one, the psychic—nerve centres, until, rising like mercury in a magic tube, it reaches the thousand—petalled lotus in the brain—centre. Spreading out in a fountain—like crest, it falls thence as a shower of heavenly ambrosia to feed all parts of the psychic body. Thus becoming filled with supreme spiritual power, the yogi experiences Illumination.

Mandalas. —Of the Psychic—Centres, or Chakra, the Bardo

Tködol is concerned chiefly with three: (1) the Heart—centre (Anāhata—chakra)\ (4%) the Throat—centre (Vishuddha—chakra) and (3) the Brain—centre (Sahasrāra Padma). Of these, two are of chief importance: the Brain—centre, sometimes called the Northern Centre, and the Heart—centre, or Southern Centre. These two constitute the two poles of the human organism. They are said to be the first centres to form in the embryo, and the terrestrial prāna derived from the central prānic reservoir in the sun of our planetary system, is said to direct their formation.

Related to these three principal chakra, there are three chief māndalas or mystic groupings of deities divided into fourteen subsidiary māndalas corresponding to the first Fourteen (7 + 7) Days of the Bardo as described in our text.

The first of these three chief māndalas contains 4% deities, distributed in six subordinate māndalas corresponding to the first Six Days of the Chönyid Bardo ; and they emanate from the Heart—centre. The second māndala contains 10 principal deities, which dawn on the Seventh Day; and these emanate from the Throat—centre. The third māndala contains 58 principal deities, distributed in seven subordinate māndalas corresponding to the last Seven Days of the Chönyid Bardo and emanating from the Brain—centre. The first 4% and the last 58 comprise the Great Māndala of the 100 superior deities, the 4% being called peaceful and the 58 wrathful deities. The other 10 deities, related to the Throat—centre, which dawn intermediately between the 4% of the Heart—centre and the 58 of the Brain—centre, are classed with the 4% peaceful deities. Thus, when united in the Greater Māngala of the whole of the Chönyid Bardo, there are no principal deities.

It will be observed, too, that there is definite orientation in all the māndalas.

The Five Dhyāni Buddhas with their *shaktis*¹ are the chief deities dawning on the first Five Days. On the First Day, Vairochana and his shakti alone dawn. Then on each of the four succeeding days, along with one of the remaining four of the Dhyāni Buddhas and the shakti there dawn two Bodhisattvas and their shaktis. Then, on the Sixth Day, all of these deities, dawning in one māndala, are joined by 16 additional deities: 8 Door—keepers, the 6 Buddhas of the Six Lokas, and the ādi—Buddha and shakti ; and all these deities together compose the 42 deities of the Heart—centre.

Then, after the dawning of the 10 Knowledge—Holding Deities (called, in the Obeisances, p. 85, the Lotus Deities) of the Throat—centre, on the intervening Seventh Day, there dawn during the remaining Seven Days the 58 deities of the Brain—centre, as follows: on each of the first five days, or from the Eighth to the Twelfth Day, one of the Herukas with his shakti in all 10 deities; on the Thirteenth Day, the 8 Kerima and the 8 Htamenma; on the Fourteenth Day, 4 Door—keepers and the 28 animal—headed Deities. Behind the symbolism of deities and māṇḍalas and psychic—centres there lies the rational explanation, namely, that each deity, as it dawns from its appropriate psychic—centre, represents the coming into after—death karmic activity of some corresponding impulse or passion of the complex consciousness. As though in an initiatory mystery—play, the actors for each day of the Bardo come on the mind—stage of the deceased, who is their sole spectator; and their director is Karma. The higher or more divine elements of the consciousness—principle of the deceased dawn first in the full glory of the primal Clear Light; and then, in ever diminishing glory, the visions grow less and less happy—the Peaceful Deities of the Heart—centre, and then of the Throat—centre, merge into the Wrathful Deities of the Brain—centre. Finally, as the purely human and brutish propensities, personified, in the fiercest of the Wrathful Deities,¹ as horror—producing and threatening spectral hallucinations, come into the field of mental vision, the percipient flees in dismay from them—his own thought—forms—to the refuge of the womb, thereby making himself to be the plaything of Māyā and the slave of Ignorance. In other words, in a manner similar to that in which the earth—plane body grows to maturity and then withers and after its death disintegrates, the after—death body, called the mental—body, grows from the heavenly days of its Bardo childhood to the less idealist days of its Bardo maturity, then fades and dies in the Intermediate State, as the Knower, abandoning it, is reborn.

Some clue to the separable elements of consciousness as they manifest themselves in the Intermediate State is gained from the significance of the Tantric divisions into petals of the lotuses, or chakras. For example, the Heart—centre Lotus, or Anāhata—chakra is described as a red—coloured lotus of twelve petals, each petal representing one of the chief elements of personality (yritti) as follows: (1) hope (āshā) ; (2) care or anxiety (chiutā) ; (3) endeavour (cheshta) ; (4) feeling of mineness (mamatā) ; (5) arrogance or hypocrisy (dambhd) ; (6) languor (vikalata) ; (7) conceit (ahangkāra) ; (8) discrimination (viveka) (9) covetousness (Mata); (10) duplicity (kapa—fatā); (11) indecision (vitarfca) ; (12) regret (anutāpā).

The Throat—centre Lotus, or Vishuddka—c/iakra also called Bhāratlsthāna, consists of sixteen petals. The first seven symbolize the seven Sanskrit musical notes. The eighth symbolizes the ‘venom’ of mortality. The next seven represent the seven seed mantras and the sixteenth is the symbol for the nectar of immortality (atnrita).

To each of the thousand petals of the Brain—centre Lotus variously coloured letters of the Sanskrit or Tibetan alphabet, and other symbols, are esoterically assigned ; and this chaira is said to contain in potential state all that exists in the other chairas (of which it is the originator) or in the universe.

Each of the Dhyānī Buddhas, likewise, as elsewhere explained from a different view—point, symbolizes definite spiritual attributes of the cosmos. Thus, Vairochana is appealed to by the Tantrics of Northern Buddhism as the universal force producing or giving form to everything both physical and spiritual; Vajra—Sattva (as the reflex of Akshobhya) is the universal force invoked for neutralizing by merit evil iarma; Ratna—Sambhava, for the reproduction of all things desired; Amitābha, for long life and wisdom; Amogha—Siddhi, for success in arts and crafts. In Vajra—Sattva, in his purely esoteric aspect, all the other Peaceful and Wrathful Deities of the Māndala of the Bardo Thödol are said to merge or be contained.

III. MANTRAS, OR WORDS OF POWER

A clue to the power of mantras, as referred to throughout the Bardo Thödol, lies in the ancient Greek theory of music; namely, that, if the key—note of any particular body or substance be known, by its use the particular body or substance can be disintegrated. Scientifically, the whole problem may be understood through understanding the law of vibration. Each organism exhibits its own vibratory rate, and so does every inanimate object from the grain of sand to the mountain and even to each planet and sun. When this røte of vibration is known, the organism or form can, by occult use of it, be disintegrated.

For the adept in occultism, to know the mantra of any deity is to know how to set up psychic or gift—wave communication similar to, but transcending, wireless or telepathic communication with that deity. For example, if the adept be of the left—hand path, that is to say, a black magician, he can, by mantras call up and command elementals and inferior orders of spiritual beings, because to each belongs a particular rate of vibration, and this being known and formulated as sound in a mantra gives the magician power even to annihilate by dissolution the particular elemental or spirit to whom it belongs. As a highwayman at the point of a gun compels a traveller to give up money, so a black magician with a mantra compels a spirit to act as he wills.

On account of this supreme power of sound, when formulated in mantras corresponding to the particular rate of vibration of spiritual beings and of spiritual and physical forces, the mantras are jealously guarded. And, for the purpose of maintaining this guardianship, lines oi gurus (i.e. religious teachers) are established in whose keeping the words of power are placed. Candidates for initiation into this Brotherhood of Guardians of the Mysteries must necessarily be well tested before the Treasures can be entrusted to them, and they themselves* in turn, be made Guardians.

Unto the shishya after he has been well tested, the mantra which confers power over the sleeping Goddess KundalinI is transmitted; and when he utters it the Goddess awakens and comes to him to be commanded. Then is the need of the guru great; for the awakened Goddess can destroy as well as save—according as the mantra is wisely or unwisely used.

As the outer air vibrates to gross sounds, the inner vital—airs (prāna vāyu) are set in motion and utilized by the use of the sounds of mantras : the Goddess first catches up the subtle occult sound, and, in tones of divine music, she causes it to ascend from her throne in the Root—Support Psychic—Centre to one after another of the Centres above, until its music fills the Lotus of a Thousand Petals and is there heard and responded to by the Supreme Guru,

The visualization of a deity, as frequently directed in our text, is often but another way of thinking of the essential characteristics of that deity. A like yogic effect comes from visualizing or else audibly pronouncing the mantra corresponding to that deity; for, by speaking forth as sound the mantra of any deity, that deity is made to appear.

Unless the mantras are properly intoned they are without effect; and when printed and seen by the eye of the uninitiated they appear utterly meaningless—and so they are without the guidance of the human guru.

Furthermore, the correct pronunciation of the mantra of a deity depends upon bodily purity as well as upon knowledge of its proper intonation. Therefore it is necessary for the devotee first to purify, by purificatory mantras, the mouth, the tongue, and then the mantra itself, by a process called giving life to or awakening the sleeping power of the mantra.

The occult ability to employ a mantra properly confers supernatural powers called Siddhi,¹ and these can be used, according to the character of the adept, either as white magic for good ends or as black magic for evil ends: the right— and left—hand paths being the same up to this point of practical application of the fruits obtained through psychic development. One path leads upward to Emancipation, the other downward to Enslavement.

IV. THE GURU AND SHISHYA (OR CHELA) AND INITIATIONS

Very frequently the Bardo Thödol directs the dying or the deceased to concentrate mentally upon, or to visualize, his tutelary deity or else his spiritual guru, and, at other times, to recollect the teachings conveyed to him by his human guru, more especially at the time of the mystic initiation. Yogis and Tantrics ordinarily comment upon such ritualistic directions by saying that there exist three lines of gurus to whom reverence and worship are to be paid. The first and highest is purely superhuman, called in Sanskrit divyangha, meaning ‘heavenly (or “divine”) line’; the second is of the most highly developed human beings, possessed of supernormal or siddhic powers, and hence called siddhaugha; the third is of ordinary religious teachers and hence called mānavaugha, ‘human line’.¹

Women as well as men, if qualified, may be gurus. The shishya is, as a rule, put on probation for one year before receiving the first initiation. If at the end of that time he proves to be an unworthy receptacle for the higher teachings, he is rejected. Otherwise, he is taken in hand by the guru and carefully prepared for psychical development. A shishya when on probation is merely commanded to perform such and such exercises as are deemed suitable to his or her particular needs. Then, when the probation ends, the shishya is told by the guru the why of the exercises, and the final results which are certain to come from the exercises when successfully carried out. Ordinarily, once a guru is chosen, the shishya has no right to disobey the guru, or to take another guru until it is proven that the first guru can guide the shishya no further. If the shishya develops rapidly, because of good karma, and arrives at a stage of development equal to that of the guru, the guru, if unable to guide the shishya further, will probably himself direct the shishya to a more advanced guru.

For initiating a shishya, the guru must first prepare himself, usually during a course of special ritual exercises occupying several days, whereby the guru, by invoking the gift—waves of the divine line of gurus, sets up direct communication with the spiritual plane on which the divine gurus exist. If the human guru be possessed of siddhic powers, this communion is believed to be as real as wireless or telepathic communication between two human beings on the earth—plane.

The actual initiation, which follows, consists of giving to the shishya the secret mantra, or Word of Power, whereby at—one—ment is brought about between the shishya as the new member of the secret brotherhood, and the Supreme Guru who stands to all gurus and shishyas under him as the Divine Father. The vital—force, or vital—airs (prāna—vāyii) serve as a psycho—physical link uniting the human with the divine; and the vital—force, having been centred in the Seventh Psychic—Centre, or Thousand—petalled Lotus, by exercise of the awakened Serpent—Power, through that Centre, as through a wireless receiving station, are received the spiritual gift—waves of the Supreme Guru. Thus is the divine grace received into the human organism and made to glow, as electricity is made to glow when conducted to the vacuum of an electric bulb; and the true initiation is thereby conferred and the shishya Illuminated.

In the occult language of the Indian and Tibetan Mysteries, the Supreme Guru sits enthroned in the pericarp of the Thousand—petalled Lotus. Thither, by the power of the Serpent Power of the awakened Goddess Kuncjalini!, the shiksha, guided by the human guru, is led, and bows down at the feet of the Divine Father, and receive the blessing and the benediction. The Veil of Māyā has been lifted, and the Clear Light shines into the heart of the shishya unobstructedly. As one Lamp is lit by the Flame of another Lamp, so the Divine Power is communicated from the Divine Father, the Supreme Guru to the newly—born one, the human shishya.

The secret mantra conferred at the initiation, like the Egyptian Word of Power, is the Password necessary for a conscious passing from the embodied state into the disembodied state. If the initiate is sufficiently developed spiritually before the time comes for the giving up of the gross physical body at death, and can at the moment of quitting the earth—plane remember the mystic mantra, or Word of Power, the change will take place without loss of consciousness; nor will the shishya of full development suffer any break in the continuity of consciousness from incarnation to incarnation.

V. REALITY

In denying the soul hypothesis, Buddhism of all Schools maintains that personal immortality is impossible, because all personal existence is but a mere flux of instability and continual change karmically dependent upon the false concept that phenomena, or phenomenal appearances, or phenomenal states and beings, are real. In other words, Buddhism holds that individualized mind or consciousness cannot realize Reality.

The essence of the Bardo Thödol teachings is, likewise, that so long as the mind is human, so long as it is individualized, so long as it regards itself as separate and apart from all other minds, it is but the plaything of Māyā> of Ignorance, which causes it to look upon the hallucinatory panorama of existences within the Sangsāra as real, and thence leads it to lose itself in the Quagmire of Phenomena.

Followers of the Semitic Faiths are hereditarily so completely dominated by the theory of soul and of personal immortality after death, in a phenomenal paradise or hell, that in their view there can be no alternative; and to them the Buddhist denial of the theory erroneously appears to imply a doctrine of the absolute negation of being.

The realization of Reality, according to the Bardo Thödol, is wholly dependent upon expurgating from the mind all error, all false belief, and arriving at a state in which Māyā no longer controls. Once the mind becomes freed from all karmic obscurations, from the supreme heresy that phenomenal appearances—in heavens, hells, or worlds—are real, then there dawns Right Knowledge; all forms merge into that which is non—form, all phenomena into that which is beyond phenomena, all Ignorance is dissipated by the Light of Truth, personality ceases, individualized being and sorrow are at an end, mind and matter are known to be identical, the mundane consciousness becomes the supramundane, and, one with the Dharma—Kāya> the pilgrim reaches the Goal.

The great Patriarch Ashvaghosha, who set down in writing during the first century A.D.¹ the essential teachings of Mahāyāna Buddhism as at first handed down orally by initiates direct from the time of the Buddha, has otherwise stated the doctrines touching Reality as follows, in his remarkable treatise called The Awakening of Faith:¹

Of Ignorance: ‘The True Reality is originally only one, but the degrees of ignorance are infinite; therefore the natures of men differ in character accordingly. There are unruly thoughts more numerous than the sands of the Ganges, some arising from ignorant conceptions and others arising from ignorance of senses and desires. Thus all kinds of wild thoughts arise from ignorance and have first and last infinite differences which Ju Lai [i. e. the Tathāgata] alone knows.’²

‘As from the True Reality man knows that there is no objective world, then the various means of following and obeying this True Reality arise spontaneously [i.e. without thought and without action], and, when influenced by this power for a long time, ignorance disappears. As ignorance disappears, then false ideas cease to arise. As these false ideas do not arise, the former objective world also ends. As the forces cease to exist, then the false powers of the finite mind cease to exist, and this is called Nirvana, when the natural forces of the True Reality alone work.’³

Of Pphenomena : * All phenomena are originally in the mind and have really no outward form; therefore, as there is no form, it is an error to think that anything is there. All phenomena merely arise from false notions in the mind. If the mind is independent of these false ideas, then all phenomena disappear. . . .’¹

¹ Therefore the phenomena of the three worlds [of desire, of form, and of non—form] are mind—made. Without mind, then, there is practically no objective existence. Thus all existence arises from imperfect notions in our mind. All differences are differences of the mind. But the mind cannot see itself, for it has no form. We should know that all phenomena are created by the imperfect notions in the finite mind; therefore all existence is like a reflection in a mirror, without substance, only a phantom of the mind. When the finite mind acts, then all kinds of things arise; when the finite mind ceases to act, then all kinds of things cease.’²

Of Space:1 ‘Men are to understand that space is nothing. It has no existence and is not a reality. It is a term in opposition to reality. We only say this or that is visible in order that we might distinguish between things.’¹

Of Mind and Matter: ‘Mind and matter are eternally the same. As the essence of matter is wisdom, the essence of matter is without form and is called the embodiment of wisdom. As the manifested essence of wisdom is matter, it is called the all—pervading embodiment of wisdom. The unmanifested matter is without magnitude ; according to the will it can show itself throughout all the universe as the immeasurable Pnsas [i. e. intelligent devout men, or Bodhisattvas], immeasurable inspired spirits, immeasurable glories, all different without magnitude and without interference with one another, This is what ordinary senses cannot comprehend, as it is the work of Absolute Reality. . . .’²

‘According to the Absolute Reality there is no distinction between mind and matter; it is on account of the defilement of the finite in the round of life and death that these distinctions appear. . . .’¹

‘As to the defilements of the world, they are all false; they have no reality behind them. . . .’

‘Finally, to leave false concepts, one should know that purity and defilement are both relative terms, and have no independent existence. Although all things from eternity are neither mind nor matter, neither infinite wisdom nor finite knowledge, neither existing nor non—existing, but are after all inexpressible, we nevertheless use words, yet should know that the Buddha’s skilful use of words to lead men aright lay in this—to get men to cease conjecturing and to return to the Absolute Reality, for the best human thought of all things is only temporary and is not Truth Absolute.’³

Of the Nature of the Primordial Mind: * The mind from the beginning is of a pure nature, but since there is the finite aspect of it which is sullied by finite views, there is the sullied aspect of it. Although there is this defilement, yet the original pure nature is eternally unchanged. This mystery the Enlightened One alone understands.’⁴

‘If there were no True Real Nature of the mind, then all existence would not exist; there would be nothing to show it. If the True Real Nature of the mind remains, then finite mind continues. Only when the madness of finite mind ceases will the finite mind cease. It is not the wisdom of the True Reality that ceases.’¹

‘Just as a man having lost his way calls the east west, although the east and west have not really changed, so is mankind lost in ignorance, calling the mind of the universe his thoughts ! But the Mind is what it ever was, all unchanged by men's thought. When men consider and realize that the Absolute Mind has no need of thoughts like men's, they will be following the right way to reach the Boundless.²

Of the Nature of the Absolute: 'It is neither that which had an origin some time, nor that which will end at some time; it is really eternal. In its nature it is always full of all possibilities, and is described as of great light and wisdom, giving light to all things, real and knowing. Its true nature is that of a pure mind, eternally joyful, the true being of things, pure, quiet, unchanged; therefore free, with fullness of virtues and Bodhic attributes more numerous than the sands of the Ganges, divine, unending, unchanged and unspeakable

*As the nature behind all experience has no beginning, so it has no end—this is the true Nirvana. . . ."

'Behind all existence there is naturally the Supreme Nirvana [or Supreme Rest].³

Thus does Ashvaghosha bear witness to the soundness of the supreme philosophy of the Mahāyāna School underlying the Bardo Thwdol and, as an independent commentator, confirms our own interpretations.

VI. NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN BUDDHISM AND CHRISTIANITY

Very much matter might also be incorporated herein to show the differences which exist between the two great Schools of Buddhism, the Northern and the Southern School, sometimes known as the Mahayana (meaning the 'Greater Path') and the Hinayana (meaning the 'Lesser Path'—a rather belittling name never used by Southern Buddhists of themselves).¹

Northern Buddhism is chiefly distinguished by its hierarchical and more highly organized priesthood, its emphasis upon rituals, its elaborate doctrine of divine emanations, its Christian—like worship and masses, its Tantricism, its Dhyāni Buddhas, Bodhisattvas and extensive pantheon, its belief in a Primordial Buddha, its greater insistence on Yoga, its subtle philosophy, and its transcendental teachings concerning the Tri—Kāya.

In Southern Buddhism, on the contrary, there is a very loosely organized priesthood with no recognized heads like the Dalai LāMa, who is the God—King, and the Tashi LāMa, who is the Higher Spiritual Head of Lāmaism. There are no recognized rituals comparable to the rituals of the Northern School, little or nothing clearly Tantric, and no worship of Dhyāni Buddhas or of a Primordial Buddha, but a limited belief in devas and demons. The only Bodhisattva appealed to and imaged in temples is the coming Buddha, Maitreya. Although theoretically Yoga is insisted upon, it appears to have been but little practised among Southern Buddhists since the times of Buddhagosa and his immediate successors, when Buddhist Ceylon is said to have been famous— as Buddhist Tibet is now—for its great saints, or *yogis That there exists a transcendental Buddhism, based chiefly upon Tantric teachings and applied Yoga, such as” the lāmas claim to possess through oral transmission direct from the time of the Buddha, Southern Buddhism denies, for it holds that the Buddha taught no higher or other doctrines than those recorded in the Tri—Pitaka or Pali Canon. Similarly, the doctrine of the Esoteric Trinity, or Tri—Kāya Southern Buddhism does not propound, although there are clear references to the Dharma—Kāya in the Aggañña SiUtānta of the Digha Nikāya, wherein the Buddha speaks of the Dharma—Kāya to a Brahmin priest named Vasetta (Skt. Vashishtha); and the Sinhalese work known as the Dharma—Pradipikā contains elaborated expositions of Rūpa—Kāya and Dharma—Kāya }

The hypothesis of Christian apologists that Northern Buddhism in its differentiation from Southern Buddhism was primarily affected by early Christian missionaries seems to be disproved—in so far as really fundamental doctrines are concerned—by the far—reaching fact (but recently made known to Western scholars through the recovery of some of the writings of the greatest of the Fathers of the Northern Buddhist Church, namely, the Patriarch Ashvagosha) that Northern Buddhism was fundamentally the same in the first century A. D. as it is now and was prior to the Christian era. If there were Christian influences, as claimed, brought in by the Nestorians, or St. Thomas, or later missionaries, it appears that they could only have been superficial at most.² In our own view—which is, of course, merely hypothetical, seeing how little is at present known of the interdependent influences of Hinduism, Buddhism, and other Oriental religions and Christianity—it is Christianity which probably has been shaped, not only in its pre-Christian symbolology and in its rituals, but in its beliefs, by the Faiths preceding it, and out of which it evolved. For example, Christian monasticism, as best studied in the first centuries of the Christian era in Egypt, with its yoga—likz practices, has had, apparently, direct relationship with the more ancient monastic systems such as those of Hinduism, Buddhism, Jainism, and Taoism. The two great doctrines of Christianity, namely, those of the Trinity and of the Incarnation, are not, as formerly believed, unique; not only did both develop in pre-Christian times in India, but were principal doctrines in the Osirian Faith of Egypt at least six thousand years ago. The primitive Christian Gnostic Church, as the exponent of an esoteric Christianity,¹ was also in general accord with the old Oriental teachings touching Rebirth and Kartna—which the later or exoteric Christian Church eventually repudiated, the Second Council of Constantinople, in A.D. 553, decreeing that * Whosoever shall support the mythical doctrine of the pre-existence of the soul and the consequent wonderful opinion of its return, let him be anathema \ The Sermon on the Mount itself, as a study of the pre-Christian Pali Canon indicates, might very well be regarded, as many Buddhist scholars do regard it, as a Christian restating of doctrines which the Buddha, too, formulated as an inheritance from prehistoric Buddhas,¹ It is chiefly the doctrines of the modern Christian Churches that pride themselves in having no esoteric teachings, and not those of primitive, or Gnostic, Christianity, that did propound an elaborate esotericism, which differ widely from the doctrines of Buddhism and other Oriental religions ; and among these doctrines the more outstanding are: (1) the doctrine of the one life on earth to be followed by a never-ending paradise or else an eternal hell; (2) of the forgiveness of sins through the blood sacrifice of a Saviour; and (3) of the uniqueness of the Divine Incarnation as exemplified in the Founder of Christianity.

For the student of the West, whose outlook has been more or less affected by this theology of Church—council Christianity, rather than by primitive, or Gnostic, Christianity, there is need to realize exactly how Buddhism differs in fundamentals from modern Christianity,

Thus, unlike modern, or Church—council, Christianity which teaches dependence upon an outside power or Saviour, Buddhism teaches dependence on self—exertion alone if one is to gain salvation. In practice, and to a limited degree in theory, this fundamental doctrine of self—dependence is modified in Lāmaism—as illustrated in the Bardo Thödol — and direct appeal is made by the devotee to the Dhyāni Buddhas and tutelary deities, very much as to Jesus and saints and angels by Christians. Similarly, Northern Buddhism and Church—council Christianity, unlike Southern Buddhism, have their masses and their eucharistical ceremonies.

Secondly, as pointed out above, Church—council Christianity condemns the doctrines of Rebirth and Karma (which primitive, or Gnostic, Christianity upheld), and Buddhism champions them.

Thirdly, the two Faiths hold divergent views concerning the existence or non—existence of a Supreme Deity. ‘The Fatherhood of God’ as a personal and anthropomorphic deity is the corner—stone of Christian Theology, but in Buddhism— although the Buddha neither denied nor affirmed the existence of a Supreme Deity—it has no place, because, as the Buddha maintained, neither believing nor not believing in a Supreme God, but self—exertion in right—doing, is essential to comprehending the true nature of life.

The Buddha * argued not that Ishvara was cause, nor did He advocate some cause heretical, nor yet again did He affirm there was no cause for the beginning of the world ‘. He argued: ‘If the world was made by Ishvara deva., . . there should be no such thing as sorrow or calamity, nor doing wrong nor doing right; for all, both pure and impure deeds, these must come from Ishvara deva. . . . Again, if Ishvara be the maker, all living things should silently submit, patient beneath the maker’s power, and then what use to practise virtue ? ‘Twere equal, then, the doing right or wrong, . . . Thus, you see, the thought of Ishvara is overthrown in this discussion (shāstra)¹

Although the Great Teacher has set aside, as being non—essential to mankind's spiritual enlightenment, the belief and the non—belief in a Supreme Deity—more especially in an anthropomorphic Supreme Deity—He has, however, made the corner—stone of Buddhism (as it is of Hinduism) the belief in a Supreme Power or Universal Law, called the Law of Cause and Effect by the Science of the West and, by the Science of the East, Karma. 'What ye sow, that shall ye reap \ saith the Buddha; even as St. Paul wrote long afterward, 'Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap'.

Again, as elsewhere stated, Buddhism denies that there can be a permanent, unchanging, personal entity such as Christian Theology calls 'soul'. It also denies the possibility of reaching a state of eternal felicity within the Sangsāra (i. e. the universe of phenomena); for Reality, or Nirvana, is for all Schools of Buddhism non—sangsāric. being beyond all heavens, hells, and worlds, in a state only capable of being understood through personal realization of it.

The Buddha has, therefore, not taught of any Father in Heaven, nor of any Only Begotten Son, nor of any method of salvation for mankind save that won by self—exertion leading to Right Knowledge. He, as all Buddhists believe, found the way as a result of innumerable lifetimes of spiritual evolution, and became the Fully Awakened, the Enlightened One, exhausting completely the Sangsāra of Impermanency and of Sorrow. Through His own exertions alone He reached the Goal of all existence—Supramundancness. Buddhists venerate Him, not as Christians do a Saviour, but as a Guide, in whose footsteps each must tread if Truth is to be realized and Salvation attained.

Although, as in the Bardo Thödol there are prayers addressed to higher than human powers, and although all Buddhists pay what is really a sort of worship to the Buddha, the doctrine of Right Knowledge through self—development is never quite lost sight of; there is never that almost complete dependence upon outside forces which Christianity inculcates, nor is there anywhere a parallel to the Christian belief in the forgiveness of sins through repentance, or faith in a Saviour, or through vicarious atonement. Some of the rituals of Northern Buddhism may seem to suggest a Christianlike theory of the forgiveness or absolution of sins, which, more than any other subsidiary doctrine peculiar to Northern Buddhism, may possibly yet be shown to have been shaped— if any of the Mahāyāna doctrines have been—by Christianity. But in their last analysis these rituals really imply,—setting aside any possible transformation due to Christianity,—as the whole of Southern Buddhism more clearly teaches, that it is only merit, or an equal amount of good kamma which can neutralize the same amount of evil karma as, in physics, two equally balanced opposing forces neutralize one another.

But as in all religions, so in Buddhism, there is apt to be very wide divergency between original teachings and actual doctrines and practices; and, accordingly, the Dardo Th'ódol as a ritual treatise is no exception. Nevertheless, underneath the symbolism of the Bardo Thödol there are to be discovered, by those that have eyes to see, the essential teachings of Northern Buddhism, sometimes called, in contrast with Southern Buddhism, the Higher Buddhism.

VII. THE MEDIEVAL CHRISTIAN JUDGEMENT.

In connexion with the difficult problem of origins, referred to in that part of our Introduction concerning the Judgement (pp. 35—9), and of the probable influences of Buddhism and other Oriental Faiths, including the Osirian Faith, on Christianity, it is interesting to compare with the Bardo Thödol version of the Judgement (pp. 165—9) the similar version in the medieval treatise entitled The Lamentation of the Dying Creature (date uncertain, but probably of 14th to 15th cent.) contained in the British Museum MS. Harl. 1706 (fol. 96), Comper's ed. (pp. 137—68):

'The Dying Creature enset with Sicknes incurable sorrowfully Complaineth him thus : “ Alas that ever I sinned in my life. To me is come this day the dreadfullest tidings that ever I heard. Here hath been with me a sergeant of arms whose name is Cruelty, from the King of all Kings, Lord of all Lords, and Judge of all Judges; laying on me the mace of His office, saying unto me: ‘I arrest thee and warn thee to make ready. . . . The Judge that shall sit upon thee, He will not be partial, nor He will not be corrupt with goods, but He will minister to thee justice and equity. ...”

‘The Lamentation of the Dying Creature: “Alas! alas! Excuse me I can not, and whom I might desire to speak for me I wot (i. e. know) not. The day and time is so dreadful; the Judge is so rightful; mine enemies be so evil; my kin, my neighbours, my friends, my servants, be not favourable to me; and I wot well they shall not be heard there.”

’ The Complaint of the Dying Creature to the Good Angel: “O my Good Angel, to whom our Lord took me to keep, where be thee now? Me thinketh ye should be here, and answer for me; for the dread of death distroubleth me, so that I cannot answer for myself. Here is my bad angel ready, and is one of my chief accusers, with legions of fiends with him. I have no creature to answer for me. Alas it is an heavy case!”

¹ The Answer of the Good Angel to the Dying Creature: “ As to your bad deeds, I was never consenting. I saw your natural inclination more disposed to be ruled by your bad angel than by me. Howbeit, ye cannot excuse you, but when ye were purposed to do anything that was contrary to the commandments of God I failed not to remember (i.e. remind) you that it was not well; and counselled thee to flee the place of peril, and the company that should stir or move you thereto. Can ye say nay thereto ? How can you think that I should answer for you ? “

Though the Dying Creature appeals for assistance to Reason, to Dread, to Conscience, and to the Five Wits—very much after the manner of Everyman, probably the best known of the medieval Christian mystery plays (which seem to be the outcome of the spread of Orientalism into Europe)—none can succour him. Thence, in his final appeal to the Virgin, through Faith, Hope, and Charity as mediators, and in the Virgin’s resulting appeal to the Son, there is introduced the Christian doctrine of the forgiveness of sins, in opposition to the doctrine of karma as expounded by the Bardo Tködol. Such introduction suggests that this curious Christian version of the Judgement may possibly have had a pre—Christian and non—Jewish Oriental source, wherein the doctrine oí karma (and the correlated doctrine of rebirth) remained unmodified by the European medievalism which shaped The Lamentation of the Dying Creature

(see p. 3²). The ancient doctrine of karma (to which the primitive, or Gnostic, Christians adhered, ere Church—council Christianity took shape), being taught in the following answers to the Dying Creature, gives some plausibility, even from internal evidence, to this purely tentative view:

Conscience: ‘Ye must sorrowfully and meekly suffer the judgements that ye have deserved.’

The Five Wits: ‘Therefore of your necessity your defaults must be laid upon you. . . . Wherefore of right the peril must be yours.’

Also compare the similar account of the Judgement in the Orologium Sapientis (14th cent.), chap. V, in Douce MS. 322 (fol. 20), Comper’s ed., from which the following passage (p. 118) is taken:

‘O thou most righteous Doomsman, how strait and hard be thy dooms; charging [i. e. accusing] and hard deeming me, wretched, in those things the which few folk charge or dread, forasmuch as they seem small and little. O the dreadful sight of the righteous Justice, that is now present to me by dread, and suddenly to come in deed.’

Reference might also be made to the wall—painting of the Judgement in Chaldon Church, Surrey, England, dating from about A.D. 1200 and discovered in 1870, which parallels in a very striking manner our Tibetan painting of the Judgement.¹ Thus, in both paintings there is the judging of the dead in an intermediate or bardo state, the heaven—world being above and the hell—world below. In the Chaldon Christianized version, St. Michael, in place of Shinje, holds the scales; instead of karmic actions, souls are being weighed; the Six Karmic Pathways leading to the Six Lokas have become a single ladder leading to a single heaven; at the top of the ladder, in place of the Six Buddhas of the Six Lokas, there is the Christ waiting to welcome the righteous, the sun being shown on His right hand and the moon on His left—as though He were a Buddha. In the Hell—world, in both versions, there is the cauldron in which evil—doers are being cooked under the supervision of demons; and, in the Christianized version, the ‘Hill of Spikes’ of the Buddhist version is represented by a ‘Bridge of Spikes’, which the condemned souls are compelled to traverse.

All such parallels as these tend to strengthen our opinion that the greater part of the symbolism nowadays regarded as being peculiarly Christian or Jewish seems to be due to adaptations from Egyptian and Eastern religions. They suggest, too, that the thought—forms and thought—processes of Orient and of Occident are, fundamentally, much alike—that, despite differences of race and creed and of physical and social environment, the nations of mankind are, and have been since time immemorial, mentally and spiritually one.

AFTERWORD

The Long Life of The Tibetan Book of the Dead

Donald S. Lopez, Jr.

In his 1915 essay “Thoughts for the Times on War and Death,” Sigmund Freud wrote, “It is indeed impossible to imagine our own death; and whenever we attempt to do so we can perceive that we are in fact still present as spectators.”¹ Four years later, the American Theosophist Walter Evans—Wentz, traveling in the Himalayas on funds from his real estate investments in Florida, chanced upon a Tibetan text and asked the English teacher of the Maharaja’s Boys School in Gangtok, Sikkim to translate it for him. The text, one of many known by the title Bar do thos grol (Liberation in the Intermediate State through Hearing), was what Tibetans call a “treasure,” a work composed by the great tantric master Padmasambhava in the eighth century and buried—sometimes in a cave, sometimes in a lake, sometimes in a pillar, sometimes in the heart of a disciple yet unborn—to await discovery when the time was ripe for its teachings to be revealed to the world. Padmasambhava’s book, buried in the eighth century, had been unearthed in the fourteenth century. Evans—Wentz discovered that Tibetan text in the twentieth century and, burying it under prefaces, commentaries, introductions, and annotations, named it The Tibetan Book of the Dead. Since its publication in 1927 the book has been discovered by millions of readers in the West who have used it to do what Freud thought impossible: imagine their own deaths.

The Tibetan Book of the Dead would pass through numerous editions and printings over the course of the century (and now into the next), finding a new audience, both popular and scholarly, in each generation, its appeal deriving from the irresistible combination of two domains of enduring fascination, Tibet and death. At the time of the publication of The Tibetan Book of the Dead, Tibet, still a remote land across the high Himalayas, was regarded by many as a place where esoteric wisdom, long since lost elsewhere, had been preserved. Bounded on the south by the highest mountains in the world, at a time when mountains signified a cold and pristine purity, Tibet was imagined as a domain of lost wisdom. Tibet's geographical inaccessibility was not the only reason for this view. Of perhaps equal importance was the fact that Tibet never came under European control, and as a result, many of the European fantasies about India and China, dispelled from these lands by colonialism, made their way across the mountains and became sited in an idealized Tibet. For Evans—Wentz and the Theosophists, Tibet was the domain of the Mahatmas, keepers of the secrets of Atlantis. Evans—Wentz never entered Tibet, which in 1919 was largely inaccessible to Westerners. He remained instead on the borderlands, left to imagine what lay beyond the snowy range.

Even greater than the lure of Tibet is the eternal fascination with death. When Freud asserted that it is impossible to imagine one's own death, he referred to the cessation of mental functions. But in the Buddhism of Tibet, consciousness never ceases, but passes through birth, death, the intermediate state or bardo (a Tibetan term that, as a result of Evans—Wentz's book, has found its way into Webster's Third New International Dictionary), and rebirth, until the achievement of buddhahood. Much of the appeal of The Tibetan Book of the Dead can be attributed to the fact that it was the first work to offer an extended discussion of the Buddhist doctrine of death and rebirth to a large audience in the West, a doctrine elaborated in the Tibetan text by detailed descriptions of visions of peaceful and wrathful deities that appear in the nether world between death and birth. This vision of the afterlife found a ready audience during a different intermediate state, the period between the world wars. The late nineteenth century had been the heyday of spiritualism, where mediums claimed to contact the spirits of the departed. Spiritualism experienced a revival after the First World War, when so many sought to know the fate of their lost fathers, sons, brothers, and husbands. An ancient Tibetan text that described the post—mortem state in such precise and elaborate detail, and which explained that death was not an end but a beginning, that death was, indeed, an opportunity for enlightenment, provided both fascination and comfort.

Evans—Wentz would go on to edit three more Tibetan books, but none would rival the popularity of the first. He died in 1965, just as The Tibetan Book of the Dead was reborn for a new generation of readers. Almost four decades after its publication, The Tibetan Book of the Dead remained one of few Tibetan texts available in English translation. It was used widely in college classrooms, with excerpts from it and the other volumes of the tetralogy often anthologized in collections of Buddhist scriptures and Asian texts. Along with the Bhagavad Gita and the Tao Te Ching it entered the canon of classics of Oriental mysticism for readers once again seeking the wisdom of the East.

In 1964, Timothy Leary, Richard Alpert, and Ralph Metzner published The Psychedelic Experience, a book remembered, if at all, for the line “Turn off your mind, relax, float downstream” used by the Beatles in the song “Tomorrow Never Knows” on Revolver. The book transforms Evans—Wentz’s classic into an LSD manual, describing not death, the intermediate state, and rebirth, but the various hallucinations encountered in what used to be called an acid trip. In their introduction, the authors pay homage to Evans—Wentz: “W. Y. Evans—Wentz is a great scholar who devoted his mature years to the role of bridge and shuttle between Tibet and the west: like an RNA molecule activating the latter with the coded message of the former. No greater tribute could be paid to the work of this academic liberator than to base our psychedelic manual upon his insights....”²

Like Evans—Wentz, Leary, Alpert, and Metzner felt that the West was now prepared to receive the wisdom of the East. They wrote:

The present moment in human history (as LāMa Govinda points out) is critical. Now, for the first time, we possess the means of providing the enlightenment to any prepared volunteer. (The enlightenment always comes, we remember, in the form of a new energy process, a physical, neurological event.) For these reasons we have prepared this psychedelic version of The Tibetan Book of the Dead. The secret is released once again, in a new dialect, and we sit back quietly to observe whether man is ready to move ahead and to make use of the new tools provided by modern science.³

It was the conviction of Leary and Alpert, at least in the early years of their work with LSD, that the experiences of the mystics and yogins of the world's religions were ultimately identical because they are insights into fundamental and eternal truths of the universe, truths that are now or will soon be confirmed by Western science, but which were fully known to the enlightened sages of the past. "Indeed, eastern philosophic theories dating back four thousand years adapt readily to the most recent discoveries of nuclear physics, biochemistry, genetics, and astronomy."⁴ They believed, furthermore, that those same experiences could be induced through the use of hallucinogenic drugs.

What the authors fail to acknowledge, however, is that their apparently clinical reading of the psychedelic experience is itself a richly theological interpretation, a theology that is founded, like that of Evans—Wentz, on the conviction that there is an ancient brotherhood of mystics who, throughout history and across cultures, have shared in a single gnosis. What Leary, Metzner, and Alpert add to Evans—Wentz is the conviction that the harmony of science and religion that Evans—Wentz could only prophesy had by 1964 come true, and was accessible to all through the use of LSD. They assume that there is a deep structure to human consciousness that has remained the same across time and place.

But the fundamental assumption supporting the view that there is a structural similarity between the results of Buddhist meditation and of drug use is that Buddhism is compatible with science, that the Buddha knew long ago what scientists are only now beginning to discover, that Buddhist meditators had gained access to the deepest levels of consciousness long before scientists invented chemical agents that produced such states. This assumption would reappear in future incarnations of The Tibetan Book of the Dead.

In 1959, the Dalai LāMa escaped to India after the invasion and occupation of Tibet by the People's Liberation Army of China. He was soon followed into exile by tens of thousands of Tibetans who took up residence first in India and Nepal, and later in Europe and North America. In the forty years that had passed since Evans—Wentz encountered the Bar do thos grol, the West's fascination with Tibet had not waned. The invasion of Tibet by the People's Liberation Army in 1950 was represented (and in many cases, continues to be represented) as an undifferentiated mass of godless communists overwhelming a peaceful land devoted only to ethereal pursuits, the victims of the invasion including not only the hundreds of thousands of slaughtered Tibetans but the sometimes more lamented Buddhist dharma as well. Tibet is seen as the embodiment of the powers of the spiritual and the ancient; China is the embodiment of the powers of the materialist and the modern. Tibetans are superhuman, Chinese are subhuman. In this logic of oppositions, China must be debased in order for Tibet to be exalted; in order for there to be an enlightened Orient, there must be a benighted Orient, in order for there to be the angelic, there must be the demonic.

With the Tibetan diaspora that began in 1959, Tibetan Buddhist culture has been portrayed as if it were itself another artifact of Shangri—La, as an entity existing outside of time and history, set in its own eternal classical age in a lofty Himalayan keep. With the Chinese takeover of Tibet, this timeless culture has been placed in profound jeopardy; it is as if exposure to time would cause the contents of that culture to wither and turn to dust, like the bodies of those who dare leave Shangri—La. There is something apocalyptic about it, as if the Tibetans, long conservators of a timeless wisdom in a timeless realm, have been brutally thrust from their snowy sanctuary into history, where time is coming to an end and with it, their wisdom. The same urgency that Evans—Wentz felt concerning the West's need for the Wisdom of the East has now been localized in the plight of Tibet.

In the popular imagination of the increasing number of Western adherents of Tibetan Buddhism, "traditional Tibet" has come to stand not only as a domain of lost wisdom as it was for Evans—Wentz, but as something from which they derive strength and identity, representing what we someday can be, an ideal to which we can aspire, an ideal that once existed on the planet in high Tibet, a land free from strife ruled by a benevolent Dalai LāMa, his people devoted to the dharma and the preservation of the environment and the rights of women. The Tibetan Book of the Dead was regarded as one of the supreme teachings of this ancient tradition, one that had been preserved from destruction.

Tibetan lāmas arriving in the West found The Tibetan Book of the Dead awaiting them. Indeed, although the text translated by Kazi Dawa Samdup is important for both Nyingma and Kagyu sects of Tibetan Buddhism, Evans—Wentz’s book achieved far wider fame in English than the original text had in Tibetan. The Tibetan teacher Chögyam Trungpa, himself an incarnate lāma of the Kagyu sect, felt that Evans—Wentz’s rendering had sufficient problems in translation and style to warrant a new translation, published in 1975 by Shambhala (with Francesca Fremantle). The influence of Evans—Wentz’s work remained, however, and Fremantle and Trungpa also entitled their book The Tibetan Book of the Dead. It was published in The Clear Light series, a series dedicated to Evans—Wentz.

Unlike previous and subsequent translations, Trungpa and Fremantle’s commentary did not equal or surpass in length the actual translation of the Tibetan text. Trungpa provides a relatively brief, twenty—nine page commentary devoted largely to how to recognize while living the visions (which he calls “projections”) described in the Bar do thos grol, with much emphasis on overcoming duality. It is a highly psychologized reading, with much talk of neurosis, paranoia, and unconscious tendencies. Fremantle explains, in terms reminiscent of Leary et al., that, “It is noticeable that several of the words which best express the teachings of Buddhism are part of the language of contemporary psychology, for the attitudes of certain schools of Western psychology often come closer to Buddhism than do those of Western philosophy or religion.... Concepts such as conditioning, neurotic patterns of thought, and unconscious influences, seem more appropriate in this book than conventional religious terms.”⁵ The Tibetan Book of the Dead had gone from being a Theosophical text to a psychedelic guide to a treatise on depth psychology.

Despite the improvements provided in the new translation, the old book of the dead continued to live on and found yet another audience as a new fascination with death swept the United States. In 1969, Elisabeth Kübler—Ross published the best—selling On Death and Dying, a handbook for the dying and their loved ones. This was the first of many books that she would produce on the subject. In her 1975 book, Death: The Final Stage of Growth, she paid a rather hyperbolic tribute to Evans—Wentz’s book, “the various Buddhist teachings concerning death and the most efficacious way of ‘living toward death’ are presented in a most imaginative manner in the book which is currently purchased by more people in the western world than any other work, with the possible exception of the Bible, namely, The Tibetan Book of the Dead.”⁶ She goes on to briefly summarize its teachings on the bardo.

In the following year, Stackpole Books of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, published a small book by the parapsychologist Raymond Moody, entitled Life After Life: The Investigation of a Phenomenon — Survival of Bodily Death. Moody’s book, an unexpected bestseller that went on to spawn a genre, detailed what have come to be known as “near—death experiences.” It recounts the experiences of persons medically considered to be near or at the point of death, yet who have revived to describe such things as floating above their body, moving through a dark tunnel toward a bright light, and encountering beings of light, sometimes recognized by Christians as Jesus. In a chapter entitled “Parallels,” Moody accepts Evans—Wentz’s view that the Bar do thos grol was “compiled from the teachings of sages over many centuries in prehistoric Tibet and passed down through these early generations through word of mouth.” After providing a brief summary of the bardo experiences, Moody concludes, “In short, even though the Tibetan Book of the Dead includes many later stages of death which none of my subjects have gone so far as to experience, it is quite obvious that there is a striking similarity between the account in this ancient manuscript and the events which have been related to me by twentieth—century Americans.”⁷ Also during the 1970s, Richard Alpert, by now known as Ram Dass and no longer an apostle of LSD, founded the Living/Dying Project in San Francisco, in which the dying were read passages adapted from The Tibetan Book of the Dead. Since then it has been widely prescribed in hospices for patients suffering from cancer and AIDS.

In 1992, another best-selling book of the dead was published, this time under the name of Sogyal Rinpoche, a Tibetan lāma living in Britain. Evans—Wentz is mentioned only once, in a disparaging comment about his concoction of the title The Tibetan Book of the Dead. Yet Sogyal Rinpoche saw fit to simply modify that misleading title, calling his work, The Tibetan Book of Living and Dying, described on the dust jacket as “a spiritual masterpiece” that “brings together the ancient wisdom of Tibet with modern research on death and dying and the nature of the universe,” an agenda not so different from that of Evans—Wentz a half-century before. Sogyal intends the book as “the quintessence of the heart advice of all my masters, to be a new Tibetan Book of the Dead and a Tibetan Book of Life.”,⁸ In the Preface to the Second Edition, Evans—Wentz had expressed his hope that with the aid of his book, “the Occident might reformulate and practise an Art of Dying, and, also, an Art of Living” (p. xvii). To date, The Tibetan Book of Living and Dying has sold over one million copies worldwide.

Like Evans—Wentz’s book, The Tibetan Book of Living and Dying includes much from genres of literature not included in the standard corpus of Tibetan Buddhist teachings. There are approving citations from the works of Elisabeth Kübler—Ross on death and dying, Ian Stevenson on cases suggestive of reincarnation, and Raymond Moody on the near—death experience. Accounts of the deaths of ordinary people are interwoven with scenes of the passing of great masters, illustrated by quotations from Milarepa, Padmasambhava, and the current Dalai LāMa. But Sogyal’s points are also supported by citations of other masters. Just as Evans—Wentz invoked Pythagoras, Plato, and Plotinus, Sogyal offers quotations from Montaigne, Blake, Rilke, Henry Ford, Voltaire, Origen, Shelley, Mozart, Balzac, Einstein, Rumi, Wordsworth, and the Venerable Bede. Taken together, they provide a cosmopolitan eclecticism to SogyaPs message, as if what the book presents is not a Tibetan Buddhist tradition but a universal message, a perennial philosophy, that has always been known by those who know, a secret brotherhood, not unlike Madame Blavatsky’s Ma—hatmas. Indeed, the fact that the versions of Evans—Wentz and Sogyal are by far the most popular may derive from the fact that they most successfully homogenize the Tibetan text into an ahis—torical and universal wisdom. (The Tibetan text is so thoroughly appropriated in Sogyal's book that its translation need not be included.) The books also share a similar genesis, resulting from the collaboration of a Tibetan and a Western devotee; Sogyal was assisted by Patrick Gaffhey and Andrew Harvey. In this case, however, the name on the cover of the book is that of the Tibetan.

The most recent translation is one, according to the title page, "Composed by Padma Sambhava, Discovered by Karma Lingpa, Translated by Robert A. F. Thurman." It was published in 1994 as part of the Bantam Wisdom Edition series, which also included translations of the Tao Te Ching, the Bhagavad—Gita, the I Ching, The Book of Five Rings (a book on swordsmanship by the seventeenth—century samurai Musashi Miyamoto), a book of "mystical poetry" by Rumi, and a book on unlocking the Zen koan. The placement of The Tibetan Book of the Dead among these world spiritual classics simply certified what had already long been the case: the book created by Evans—Wentz so long ago had taken on a life of its own.

In his introduction, Thurman also notes Evans—Wentz's misnomer, but calls his translation The Tibetan Book of the Dead. And like the Evans—Wentz version, about half of Thurman's work is taken up with his own commentary and glossary. Part of that commentary is taken up by Thurman's interpretation of the Bar do thos grol, a Nyingma text, in light of the tantric theory of the great Geluk master, Tsong kha pa (1357—1419). But much of Thurman's introduction is reminiscent of Evans—Wentz. For Thurman, Tibet was a unique civilization. While the West has devoted itself to the investigation and conquest of the material world and outer space, Tibet was an inwardly directed society that produced generations of mystical adepts who studied spiritual technologies and became "inner world adventurers of the highest daring" (he calls them "psychonauts") who "personally voyaged to the furthest frontiers of that universe which their society deemed vital to explore: the inner frontiers of consciousness itself, in all its transformations of life and beyond death."⁹ As a product of this society, The Tibetan Book of the Dead is not a Buddhist approach to death and dying but a scientific description of the death process, derived from the research of psychonauts. The Tibetan views on death are no more or less religious than modern Western views on the structure of the solar system.¹⁰ In the preface to the third edition, Evans—Wentz had written that the book “reveals to the people of the Occident a science of death and rebirth such as only the peoples of the Orient have heretofore known” (p. vii).

In the 1990 film Jacobs Ladder, a Vietnam veteran experiences disturbing hallucinations, and the viewer, like the protagonist, is unable to distinguish reality from illusion. At the end, it is revealed that the entire film has been the visions of an American soldier in Vietnam as he dies on the operating table. He is finally led into a light by a child. The director Adrian Lyne explained in interviews that the film had been inspired by The Tibetan Book of the Dead. Today, in addition to these and other translations, one can purchase an audio cassette of The Tibetan Book of the Dead, read by Richard Gere; a video dramatization of The Tibetan Book of the Dead, including film footage from Ladakh and an animated depiction of the bardo, narrated by Leonard Cohen; The Illustrated Tibetan Book of the Dead; and The Tibetan Book of the Dead for Reading Aloud adapted by the playwright Jean—Claude van Italic. The various audio, video, illustrated, cinematic, and reading aloud versions indicate that The Tibetan Book of the Dead has come to be used in the West as it was used in Tibet, as a text to read to the dead and dying to guide them on their journey.

Each of the various forms that The Tibetan Book of the Dead has assumed over the decades owes a debt, whether or not it is acknowledged, to Evans—Wentz and his pioneering work. Beyond this, each of the previous reincarnations of The Tibetan Book of the Dead, beginning with that of Evans—Wentz, share a strange kinship. In each case, the text is always read away from itself, always pointing at something else, at a meaning that required sufficient elaboration that the translation of the Tibetan text was (except in the case of Fremantle and Trungpa) dwarfed by various introductions and commentaries; in the case of the renditions of Leary and Sogyal, the Tibetan text was sufficiently superfluous that it need not be included at all. The book is read as a code to be deciphered against another text that is somehow more authentic, or, at least, more timely. For Evans—Wentz, the ur—text is Madame Blavatsky's The Secret Doctrine, itself her decoding of The Stanzas of Dzyan in the secret Senzar language. For Leary, Alpert, and Metzner, the text was the script of the paradigmatic acid trip, for Trungpa, the tenets of depth psychology provided the vocabulary. For Sogyal, the rhetoric of self—help in the New Age was the template, for Thurman, the Nyingma text was forced into a Geluk mold. For each, The Tibetan Book of the Dead must be read against something else in order for its true meaning to be revealed, in order for it to provide liberation from the author's version of samsāra, the cycle of rebirth.

In a footnote to his introduction (page 1), Evans—Wentz writes that he and Kazi Dawa Samdup felt, “that without such safeguarding as this Introduction is intended to afford, the Bardo Thö—dol translation would be peculiarly liable to misinterpretation and consequent misuse....” They could have little idea of the myriad ways in which their collaboration would be read. Removing the Bar do thos grol from the moorings of language and culture, of time and place, Evans—Wentz transformed it into The Tibetan Book of the Dead and set it afloat in space, touching down at various moments in various cultures over the course of the past century, providing in each case an occasion to imagine what it might mean to be dead. If Freud was correct that it is in fact impossible to imagine one's own death, then Evans—Wentz had no need to fear misinterpretation and misuse, for with death there can only be interpretation and use.

SUGGESTED READINGS

Blavatsky, Helena Petrovna. The Secret Doctrine. Los Angeles: The Theosophy Company, 1947.

Blezer, Henk. Kar glin Zi khro: A Tantric Buddhist Concept. Leiden: Research School CNWS, Leiden University, 1997.

David—Neel, Alexandra. Magic and Mystery in Tibet. New York: Dover Publications, 1971.

Dudjom Rinpoche. The Nyingma School of Tibetan Buddhism: Its Fundamentals and History. Boston: Wisdom Publications, 1991.

Fremantle, Francesca and Chögyam Trungpa. The Tibetan Book of the Dead. Boulder: Shambhala, 1975.

Germano, David. "Dying, Death, and Other Opportunities." In Religions of Tibet in Practice ed.

Donald S. Lopez, Jr., 458—93. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press, 1997.

Johnson, K. Paul. The Masters Revealed: Madame Blavatsky and the Myth of the Great White Lodge. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1994.

Karmay, Samten G. The Great Perfection (rDzogs Chen): A Philosophical and Meditative Teaching of Tibetan Buddhism. Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1988.

Kübler—Ross, Elisabeth. Death: The Final Stage of Growth. New York: Touchstone Books, 1986.

Kvaerne, Per. Tibetan Bon Religion: A Death Ritual of the Tibetan

Bonpos. Iconography of Religions 12.13. Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1985.

Lati Rinbochay and Jeffrey Hopkins. Death Intermediate State, and Rebirth in Tibetan Buddhism. Ithaca: Snow Lion Publications, 1985.

Lauf, Detlef Ingo. Secret Doctrines of the Tibetan Books of the Dead. Boulder: Shambhala, 1977.

Leary, Timothy, Ralph Metzner, and Richard Alpert. The Psychedelic Experience: A Manual Based on the Tibetan Book of the Dead. New Hyde Park, N.Y.: University Books, 1964.

Lodo, LāMa. Bardo Teachings. Ithaca: Snow Lion Publications, 1987.

Lopez, Donald S., Jr. "A Prayer for Deliverance from Rebirth." In Religions of Tibet in Practice ed. Donald S. Lopez, Jr., 442—57. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press, 1997.

Lopez, Donald S., Jr. Prisoners of Shangri—La: Tibetan Buddhism and the West. Chicago: The University of Chicago Press, 1998.

Meade, Marion. Madame Blavatsky, The Woman Behind the Myth. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1980.

Moody, Raymond. Life After Life: The investigation of a phenomenon — survival of bodily death. Harrisburg, Penn.: Stackpole Books, 1976.

Mullin, Glenn. Death and Dying: The Tibetan Tradition. Ithaca: Snow Lion Publications, 1986.

Orofino, Giacomella. Sacred Teachings on Death and Liberation. Dorset, U.K.: Prism Press, 1990.

Patrul Rinpoche. Words of My Perfect Teacher. San Francisco: HarperCollins, 1994.

Prothero, Stephen R. The White Buddhist: The Asian Odyssey of Henry Steel Olcott. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1996.

Reynolds, John Myrdhin. Self—Liberation Through Seeing with Naked Awareness. Barrytown, N.Y.: Station Hill Press, 1989.

Sinnett, Alfred Percy. Esoteric Buddhism. London: Chapman and Hall, Ltd., 1885.

Sogyal Rinpoche. The Tibetan Book of Living and Dying. San Francisco: HarperSanFrancisco, 1992.

Thurman, Robert A. F. The Tibetan Book of the Dead. New York: Bantam Books, 1994.

Tulku Thondup Rinpoche. Hidden Teachings of Tibet: An Explanation of the Terma Tradition of the Nyingma School of Buddhism. London: Wisdom Publications, 1986.

Ken Winkler. Pilgrim of the Clear Light. Berkeley, Calif.: Dawn—fire Books, 1982.

Ken Winkler. A Thousand Journeys; The Biography of LāMa Ana—garika Govinda. Longmead, U.K.: Element Books, 1990.

INDEX

Black—type figures indicate the chief references, most of which may be used as a Glossary.

Abkidhamma, 167¹.

Adi (Primordial) Buddha, xxx, 9ⁿ, 11²—13, 16, 111², 218, 231, 232

Adi—Kāya, 167⁴.

Aeschylus, 167¹.

Aesop's Fables, 3, 3¹, 57.

Agamemnon, 50, 51.

AggaMa Sūttānta, 233.

Aggregate: see Skandha.

— Bodhic Wisdom, of, 16.

— Body, of, 16, 72ⁿ, 109¹, 192⁴

— Consciousness, of, 9ⁿ, 15, 106ⁿ, 109¹, 192⁴.

— Feelings, of, 9ⁿ, 16, 114, 192⁴.

— Matter, of, 9, 9ⁿ, 15, 106.

— Touch (or Sensation), of, 9ⁿ, 16, 111, 192⁴.

— Volition, of, 9ⁿ, 16, 111, 192⁴.

AinSoph, 6².

Ajartf å Cave, 38, 56.

Ajax, 50, 51.

Akāsha(Ether), 9, 16, 63, 174⁴, 179.

Akasha—Garbha, 111².

Akshobhya, 9¹, 16, 108¹, 126¹, 220.

Aloke (Aloka), 113⁵.

Amitābha, xxviii, xxix, xxxix, xlviii, lxxii, 9ⁿ, 13, 16—18, 20, 28, 32, 55, 70, 96, 113¹, 114—15, 120, 123, 140, 189², 200, 202¹, 220.

— State, 96⁴.

Amogha–Siddhi, xxviii, xlviii, 9ⁿ, 16—17, 32, 55, 70, 115¹, 116—18, 120, 141, 200, 202¹, 220.

Amrita–Dhāra, 120⁵.

Animism, Ivii.

Antdrabhdva, Ixvi, lxxxii.

Anthropology, 1¹, 59.

Apollo, 113⁴.

Apparitions, lxxiii, 32, 98, 101 ff., 103, 104, 162, 204: see Hallucinations.

— Psychology of, 132¹, 168, 181, 213.

Apuleius, xiii¹, xli. ‘Archetypes’, xlv, xlv, xlv. li.

Arhani (Pali: Arahant), 41, 54, 160¹.

Ars Moriendi (Craft of Dying), xiii—xvii, Ixvi, 3², 88^{2—2}, 93², 95¹, 99¹, 107², 134², 151², 172², 198².

Arthurian Legend, 54.

Asañga, 212¹.

Ashvaghosha, 11², 154, 225—33, 236¹.

Asoka, Edicts of, 170ⁿ.

— Missionaries of, 14.

Astrology, 19, 27, 75, 87¹, 193ⁿ, 214ⁿ.

Asura (Titan), 17, 24, 63, 117², 121, 150ⁿ: see Light–Path, and Lokas.

— Birth, 156, 185.

— Existence, 121², 194¹.

Atalanta, 50, 51.

Atharva–Veda, 46ⁿ.

Atfeha, 135², 234ⁿ.

Atmd, lxviii, lxxii, lxxxiii, 189¹.

Avalokiteshvara, xxxiv, 23², 99¹, 113², 116², 120², 134², 149¹: see Chenraiee.

Avatamsaka Sutra, lxxiii—lxxiv.

Awakening of Faith, The, ii², 154, 225¹—31.

Bardo, xvi, xxxiii¹, lxi, lxii, Ixvi, lxxvi—lxxvii, 28¹, 38: see Bardo Thödol, Judgement, and Rebirth.

— Astral Light, 161².

— Birth, 156².

— Birth—Place, 102¹, 202.

— Body, xlvii, 16, 30, 31, 87¹, 92⁴, 100¹, 103³, 104, 126², 148, 155ff., 161², 166², 177, 187, 195, 219.

— Chikhai, xxxvi, xli, xlix, Ixvi, Ixxiv, 89—100, 102⁴, 151, 203.

— Chönyid, ix, xxxvi, xli, xlii, xliii, xlvi, xlvii—xlviii, xlix, Ixvi, Ixxiv, 20, 29, 71, 89¹, 101—51, 102⁵, 135², 152⁴, 193, 203, 217.

— Consciousness, 182: see Consciousness.

— Cult, 37¹.

— Dawning of, 90, 202—4.

— Dhyána, 102², 203.

— Dream—State, 102², 202.

— Dream—World, 17, 34, 66, 187¹.

— Dwellers in, 187¹.

— Ending of, 30, 34, 188ⁿ.

— Existence (or, realm), xxxv, xxxviii, xlix.

— Food in, 164.

— Forty—Nine Days of, xxvii, 6—7, 20, 30, 44, 48, 104, 161, 183.

— Friends in, 164.

— Intellect in, 172, 195.

— Liberation from, 118, 126, 135²; see Liberation.

— Plato and, 36, 49—53: see Plato.

— Prayers, 71, 88, 192, 197—208, 237.

— Psychology, 31—5, 66, 140¹, 195.

— Recognition of, 89², 90², 97, 99, 99⁴, 101, 103—5, 112, 118—19, 124—6, 131—3, 135², 137—41, 146—9, 151, 155—8, 165, 168, 173, 181, 193—4.

— Sidpa, viii, ix, xxxvi, xli, xlii, xlv—xlvi, Ixvi, 20, 29, 49, 55, 72ⁿ, 89¹ 102⁶, 135—6ⁿ, 151, 153—93, 193, 204, 206.

— Six States of, lxi, 102, 202—4.

— Sute, xvi, xlii, 7, 38—30, 38, 59, 66, 91ff., 100², 105¹, 125¹, 130², 158 ff., 164², 187¹, 195, 240.

— Supernormal Powers in, 158 ff.

Bardo Thödol, vii, xvi, xxxv ff, liii ff., Ivii, lix ff., 2, 33, 152, 196:
see Bardo.

— Appendix, The, 196—208.

— Block—Print, 69, 71, 73, 106¹, 108², 109¹, 118¹ 124², 142², 144¹, 145¹⁻², 146¹, 152^{1,4}, 153¹.

Bardo Thödol, Colophon 209.

— Corruptions of, 58, 77, 156¹, 174¹, 179¹, 192²

— Deities, 36¹.

— Discipleship and, lxii.

— Divisions of, 85, 153¹.

— Doctrine, 41, 136, 194—6, 211.

— Illustrations, xxvii—xxxiv, 70—1.

— Instructions of, set Teachings, below.

— Jung's Commentary on, xxxv—lii.

— Manuscript, 68—73, 106², 124², 152⁴, 153¹, 174¹, 184².

— Origin of, 35—6, 54—5, 73—8, 196⁴, 233²

— Padma Sambhava and, 13: see Padma Sam bhava.

— Plato and, 36, 49—53: see Plato.

— Psychology, 31—5, 193—6.

— Purpose of, xlix ff.

— Reading of, 19, 20, 87 ff., 135, 151, 183, 195—6.

— Rebirth Symbols, 49 ff.: see Rebirth.

— Ritual, 75.

— Root Verses of, lx.

— Science and, 8—9, 41, 66, 77.

— Symbolism, 2—6: see Esotericism.

— Tantricism, 213—20.

— Teachings, xiv, xix, xl ff., 1, Ix, lxx ff., 10—17, 32—5, 66—8, 89², 132, 151—2, 164², 176, 180, 182—3, 186, 188, 190, 194—6, 212—13, 222, 225, 235, 238.

- Texts and Versions, 71—2.
- Translating and Editing, 1, 78—81.
- Yoga and, 211—14ⁿ: see Yoga.

Bell, Sir Charles, xxi.

Bhagavad-Gitā, The, vii, xi, xviii.

Bhagavān, 105⁴, 119², 149, 201.

Bkikhhuni, 210.

Bhutan, 80, 188ⁿ, 218ⁿ.

Bhatashuddki rite, lxxiv. Birth, death and, vii, lx—lxi.

- Four Kinds of, 178, 182.

- Supernormal, 156¹, 178, 188—90, 206.

Birth—trauma, xli, xlii.

Blavatsky, H. P., 7¹.

Bodki (or Bodhic), 10, 11, 17, 52, 96⁴, 116, 123¹, 230.

Bodkisattfas, xxvii, lxxiv, lxxvi, 14, 54², 67, 76, 108, 111, 113, 116, 121ⁿ, 122, 134², 160¹, 183, 191—2, 218, 228, 232.

- Invocation of, 71¹, 155, 197—8.

Body, Nine Apertures of, lxx.

Bön, 23, 36¹, 74—5, 140¹.

Bönism and the Bönpos, lv ff.

Book of Dead, 1—2, 22, 36, 77. See also Bardo Thödol

- Egyptian, xiv, xvi, xxxv, xxxvi—xxxvii, lxvi, 2, 22, 35, 77, 87¹, 136¹, 148¹.

Brahma, 62

Brahman, 6², 11¹.

Brāhmana, Tattiriya, 46ⁿ.

Vagga, 40, 158².

Brākmarandkra, lxix, lxx, lxxi, 18, 87², 92¹, 98¹, 158¹, 215—16

Brāhmins, 48¹¹, 170^a, 191¹, 233

Buddha, vii, lvii, 54, 105⁴, 106⁴, 119², 125¹, 168¹.

- Birth of, 53, 191¹, 207³.

- Body of, xlvi, 10, 207².

- Bone—Reliques of, 163².

- Christ as, 240.
- Consciousness, 189¹.
- Death of, 191¹.
- Eyes of, 160¹, 216.
- Invocation of, 71¹, 155, 183, 192.
- Lives of, 54.
- Mind of, 96.
- Pre-existence and, 40—1, 182².
- Realization of, 97ⁿ.
- Realm of, 107², 201—2.
- Seeing the, 97ⁿ.
- St. Jehoshaphat as, 3ⁿ.
- Teachings of, 17, 38—42, 67—8, 233, 235—7.
- Words of, 171.
- Worship of, 237.
- Yoga and, 158².

Buddhaghosa, 41, 41², 232.

Buddhahood, lxxii, lxxvi, 10, 15, 30, 58, 94, 95², 96, 96², 97¹, 107, 110, 112, 115, 118—19, 123—4, 126ⁿ, 132—3ⁿ, 136, 138—41, 150, 188—9, 195², 199, 200—1: see liberation, and Nirvana.

- Path to, 55, 89², 124¹, 126.
- State of, 124¹, 149.
- Winning of, 89², 114, 126, 135², 136, 146—8.

Buddkakarita, 236¹.

Buddhism, xxxvii, liv, lv, et passim.

- Christianity, and, 14, 232—41.
- Esoteric, 4—5, 233—5.
- Flesh-Eating and, 169⁴, 195⁴.
- Northern, 232—8.
- Persecution and, liv.
- Reality and, 224—32.
- Schools of, liv, lvi.
- Soul and, 86ⁿ, 224—5.

- Southern, 232—8.
- Tantric, 72, 74, 150ⁿ
- Tibetan, liv, lxiii¹, 74, 150^a.
- Woman and, 209¹.
- Yoga and, 212: see Yoga.

Budh–Gayā, 158⁴.

Chag–na–Dorje, 116⁴: see Vajra–Pāṇi.

Chakra, 216, 219—20.

Chakravartin, 10.

Chenraze, xxviii, xxx, xxxiv, 99^{2, 2}, 113², 134², 149¹, 150¹, 168²—⁴: see Avālokiteshvara.

Christianity, Buddhism and, xlix—l, Ixvii, lxxi, 4ⁿ, 14, 127³, 139¹, 232—41.

- Church–Council, 235.
- Esoteric, 234—5.
- Flesh–Eating and, 170ⁿ.
- Heaven and, 184⁴.
- Hell–World and, 179¹, 185².
- Karma and, 239.
- Monasticism and, 234.
- Origen and, 234¹.
- Rebirth and, 234.
- Trinity and, 14.

Christianity, Yoga and, 234.

Chistes, 32.

Chromatism, Mystical, xxviii ff.

Collective Unconscious, The. See Unconscious.

Consciousness, lxxii, 11, 174, 183², 189¹, 225, 229².

- Bardo, in, 182.
- Birth, lxxxi.
- Bodhic, 16.
- Content of, 29, 32—3, 117¹, 166², 167¹, 187¹.
- Continuity of, 30.
- Death, at, Ixxiv, lxxxi el passim, 87², 98², 100², 216.

— Principle, 7, 18—19, 29, 44, 56, 58—9, 86ⁿ, 87², 92, 97¹, 98, 109¹, 125², 151, 158¹, 162², 182¹, 187¹, 188, 214, 216, 219.

— Restoration of, 23.

— States, lxvi, 30, 90¹, 96^{1,2}, 98², 174, 179, 182, 189¹, 202, 214, 225.

— Transference, 85—7, 91, 178², 188—90, 193, 203.

Coomaraswami, A. K., Hinduism and Buddhism, lxiii¹.

Cosmography, 61—6, 146³, 184.

Daemons (Demons), 19, 27, 32, 36, 74, 128³, 162, 164³, 166¹, 186, 187¹, 232, 240.

Dākini (Fairy), 32, 122¹, 127¹, 128², 130, 199, 201.

Death, Art of, xiii—xvii, lxvi, 133, 224: see Bardo, Daemons, Dharma—Raja, and Yama—Raja.

— Astrology of, 19, 27, 87¹, 193ⁿ.

— Cause of, 27, 84.

— Ceremonies, 18—28, 169, 183, 195².

— Cults, 1, 26.

— Demons, 27.

— Effigy, xxvii, 19, 20—3.

— Feasts, 24^a.

— Guide—books for, lxvi.

— Horoscope, 19, 27.

— Imagination and, lxxv—Ixxvi.

— King of, 38, 169¹.

— Lords of, 32, 98, 147—8, 166—71, 169, 198.

— Messengers of, 38—9, 84, 198.

— Phenomena, 133—5, 164 ff.

— Process, 18, 92⁴, 100², 158¹, 162², 216.

— Rite of, xiv ff.

— Science of, lxv—lxxxiv.

— Symptoms, 72ⁿ, 86, 88—9, 93^a, 196.

Deities (or gods, divinities), xxvii, xxviii—xxx, xxxi, xxxvi, xlvi, Iv, lvi, lvii, lxxvii et passim.

Deva(God), 17, 24, 30¹, 107, 150ⁿ, 160ⁿ, 199, 218ⁿ, 232: see Light —Path, and Lokas.

— Birth, 30¹, 156, 160, 184, 190².

— Existence, 194¹.

— Eyes, 160¹.

Devadūta Silttam, 38.

Devadūta Vagga, 38.

Devas, xxix.

Devalas, 122². See Deities.

Dharma, xxxiii, lv, lviii, 14, 171, 204.

Dharma—Oiakra, xxxiii.

Dharma—Dhātu, xlviii, lxxvi, 15, 95², 105², 230ⁿ, 231¹.

— Wisdom, 15, 106—7, 122.

Dharma—Kdya, xxxv¹, xxxix, xlv, xlviii, lxxvi¹, lxxvii, 10, 11, 12, 13, 15—16, 32, 55, 82, 89, 92, 95², 97, 98¹, 121⁴, 135, 146, 167, 167⁴, 174, 225, 228², 231¹, 233: see Void.

— Clear Light, 94, 146², 211.

— State of, 96, 96², 103², 146^{2—2}.

Dharma Mātri Putra, 100³.

Dhaniipāla, 121ⁿ, 128.

Dliarma—Pradlpikā, 233.

Dharma—Rāja, xxx—xxxi, 35. 36—7, 121³, 147².

Dharma Samgraha, 108³.

Dhupema (Dhüpa), 111⁴.

Dhyāna, 90², 92, 100³, 102², 119¹, 160, 160², 186, 203.

Dhyāni Buddhas, xxvii, li, lxxvii, 8¹, 11, 13, 15—17, 105⁴, 118, 120, 130, 217—18, 232, 235.

— Symbolism of, 55, 220.

Diamond (or Immutable) Sūtra, 1, 97ⁿ.

Dibpanamse! (DIpani), 116⁵.

Dölma, 116^a: see Tāra.

Door—Keepers, xxvii, xxviii, xxx, 120, 143—4, 218; see Yoginls.

Dorje (Skt. Vajra), xxviii, xxxiii, 10, 63, 108², 116¹, opp. 137, 137

- 8, 142—5².
 Dorje—Chang, xxxii.
 Dream World, Bardo and, 33—4, 66, 102, 125², 181, 202.
 — State, Bardo and, 187¹, 203¹.
 Druids, 3, 60.
 Ecstasy, 35, 90², 97—8², 102, 119¹, 213.
 Ego, The, xlvii.
 Elementáís, 221.
 Elements, The Five, 8—10, 150², 192⁴, 201—2.
 — The Four, 27, 119.
 Emerson on Karma, 2.
 Empedocles, 53.
 Epeius, 50, 52.
 Esoteric Doctrines, 133—4: see Esotericism
 Esotericism (or Occultism), xxxii—xxxiii, I¹, 2—17, 36¹, 43, 45¹, 62 —6, 85⁴, 86², 105^{2,4}, 108¹, 126¹, 127³, 128², 129ⁿ, 132², 140¹, 142⁸, 146^{4—5}, 157¹, 166², 179¹, 215, 218, 219 ff., 234¹, 235.
 — Rebirth and, 40 ff., 157¹, 179¹, 185¹, 192¹.
 — Yoga and, 212, 233.
 Essenes, 14.
Etaddagga Vagga, 189¹.
 Eumenides, 167¹.
 Fairies, 73¹, 87², 127², 128², 164³, 181¹
 Four Great Ones, The, xlviii.
 France, Anatole, xxxviii.
 Freemasonry, 4, 127⁴, 169¹.
 Freud, Sigmund, viii. See also Psychoanalysis.
 Furies, 166, 167¹, 185—6, 188.
Gaudharva, Ixxxii, 87³, 181¹.
 Gandhema (Gandha), 116².
Garufa, 137².
Garufa Purdna, lxvi, lxx.
 Gelugpa, Ivi—lvii, 29, 72, 167², 233².

- Genius, Evil, 166¹, 239.
 — Good, 165², 238—9.
- Ghirdhima (Gitā), 113⁵.
- Ghosh, Sj. Ātal Bihari, xx.
- Gnosticism, 4, 185ⁿ, 234—5, 239
- Gökarmo, 70, 113².
- Grace—Waves, 109², 191, 208, 224.
- Guide, The*, 85, 89, 196.
- Guru*, xxviii, xxxii, lxx, 5, 13, 14, 67, 79, 80, 85⁴, 87, 89², 90 ff., 99⁴, 124—5, 149, 163, 169, 178¹, 199, 218ⁿ, 221—4.
 — Divine, 161¹, 214ⁿ, 222.
 — Norbu, 80.
 — Shishya and, 204, 221—4
- Hades Legend, 46ⁿ.
- Hallucinations, 17, 20—31, 33, 35, 58, 66, 98, 156: see Apparitions.
 — Karrmc, 101 ff., 140¹, 156, 164², 175, 185 ff., 187¹.
 — Psychology of, 31—5, 58, 66, 117¹, 140¹, 146—8, 167, 181, 187¹, 219, 225.
- Harpies, 116².
- Hathayoga*, lxv.
- Hayagriva, 120⁴, 186, 188.
- Heaven—World, Origin of, 184⁴.
- Hell—World, xxxii, xxxiii¹, lxxix, 24, 30, 34, 109, 169⁴: see Light—Patli, and Lokas.
 — Birth in, 156, 170, 185.
 — Christianity and, 185², 240.
 — Existence in, 194¹, 207¹.
- Hermes, 215.
- Hermetic Writings, 7.
- Herodotus, 45, 50.
- Heroes, 128, 130, 134.
- Heruka Deities, xxvii, xxix, 13, 70, 137—9, 144, 146, 186, 218.
- Hinayāna, 232.

- Hinduism, Ixxviii, lxxxiii;
 Higher, 6, 46.
Hitopadesha, 3², 249.
Homa, 28.
Hpho—bo, 18, 20.
 Htamenma, 71, 140 ff., 140¹, 218.
 Illumination, 89², 213, 217, 224: see Ecstasy.
 Indra, xxxiii, 62, 108¹, 121¹, 144.
 Initiation, xl ff., xlix, 3, 5, 7¹, 13, 17, 37¹, 40, 45¹, 50, 53, 62, 133, 136, 142², 169¹, 177, 218ⁿ, 219, 221—4.
 Ishvara, 231¹, 236.
 Ishvari, 140¹.
 Jai nism, 234.
 Jampal, 113⁴: see Mañ-jushri.
Japa, lxvii.
Játaka, The, 3², 54.
Jeisün Kahbum, 82.
 Judgement, After-Death, xxx—xxxiii, 35—9, 148¹, 165—9: see Dharma—Rāja, and Yama—Rāja.
 — Christian, 238—41.
 — Platonic, 49.
 Jung, Dr. C. G., vii, viii—ix.
 — Psychological Commentary by, vii, viii, xxxv—lii.
 Jupiter, xxxiii, 108¹.
Ka, 22, 23.
Kalatna SüUa, 41.
Kandaraka Sultania, 41².
 Kargyütpa, 6¹, 68, 72, 79, 135², 233².
Karma, xli, xlii, xliii, xlvi, li, Ixxviii, Ixxix, lxxxi, lxxxii, lxxxiii, 61, 89²
 — Absolving of, 171, 237.
 — Christianity and, 234—5, 239.
 — Continuity of, 135, 176¹—7, 194, 204¹.

- Illusions of, xxxvi, xliii, xlvi, xlviii, 101 ff., 162², 175, 185 ff.
- James, William, on, 61¹.
- Land, 73, 77.
- Law of, 2, 43, 47¹, 63, 236.
- Lords of, 58.
- Making of, 112.
- Mirror of, xxxi, 36, 166.
- Pathways of, xxxi.
- Power of, 100, 106, 109, 126, 131, 149, 155—6 ff., 159, 161, 171, 173—5, 188, 191, 198, 205—6.
- Propensities of, 58, 86ⁿ, 97¹, 117¹, 133ⁿ, 140¹, 148, 150, 157, 164¹, 173, 176², 191, 206, 213.
- Psychic Heredity and, xliii.
- Karma*, Records of, 49, 148¹.
- Wind of, 161, 198.
- Workings of, 29—34, 38—9, 43, 48ⁿ, 57—8, 67, 94¹, 97¹, 98², 126², 155, 159², 163, 165, 169^{2—4}, 183, 219, 237.
- Karmic Deities*, 140—1.
- Katha Upanishad*, 46ⁿ.
- Kazi Dawa—Samdup, Lama, xxi, Ixiii, Ixxxii—lxxxiv et passim.
- Kerima, 71, 140 ff., 140¹, 142¹, 218.
- Kesar Saga*, 148¹.
- Knowledge—Holding Deities, xxix—xxx, 70, 126—311¹, 134, Opp. 136, 201, 218.
- Kosba*, 214.
- Krotishaurima, 137²—40.
- Kshitigarbha, 108⁴.
- Kurujjalini, 216, 221, 224.
- Kwanyin, 113².
- Lama*, Astrologer, 19.
- Confessor, 23.
- Dalai, 26, 113², 187¹, 232.
- Funereal, 20.

— Kazi Dawa-Samdup, xxi, lxiii, lxxxiii—lxxxiv, 1¹, 3, 7¹, 11² —14, 44, 78—81, 82, 85², 86¹⁻², 91², 116², 119¹, 212², 218ⁿ.

— Oracular, 187¹.

— Táshi, 26, 113², 232.

Lâmaism, Heads of, 232.

— Music of, 129ⁿ.

— Origin of, 74—5.

— Protectors of, 134².

Lamentations, 18, 87, 195².

Lang-gochan, xxxi.

Lanisacharacters, xxiv.

Lasema (Läsyä), 108⁴.

La Vallée Poussin, De, lxxx, lxxxii.

Lechas, 188ⁿ.

Liberation, xvi, lix—lx, lxxi, lxxiii, lxxvii, 9, 11¹, 17, 67, 71¹, 72ⁿ, 86², 90, 97¹, 100, 101, 118, 131—2, 137—41, 151, 155, 157, 168, 189, 193¹: see Bud-dhahood, and Nirvana.

Liberation, Bardo, from, 30, 165, 182—3, 193—5¹, 196, 213.

— Faith, by, 126, 134, 135¹, 152.

— Paths to, 15, 89², 105², 107, 109, 112, 114, 117, 122², 124¹, 126, 135¹, 136, 150ⁿ, 193, 196, 222.

— Recognition by, 119, 126, 131—2, 137—8, 141, 148, 151, 158, 168, 173, 193, 194.

Light—Path, 125, 150ⁿ: see Lokas, and Wisdoms.

— Asura (green), 117, 124, 150ⁿ, 173.

— Brute (blue), 124, 126, 129, 130, 150ⁿ, 174.

— Deva (white), 106—7, 124, 150ⁿ, 173, 192.

— Dharma—Dhdtu (blue), 106.

— Hell (smoke—coloured), 109, 124, 150ⁿ, 174.

— Human (yellow), 111, 112, 124, 150ⁿ, 173, 192.

— Preia (red), 113, 114, 124, 150ⁿ, 174.

— Purified Propensities (vari—coloured), 127.

Lokas (Worlds), xxix, xxxi—xxxii, lxxii, lxxiii, lxxvii—lxxviii, 17, 24, 38, 107, 118, 125—6, 136ⁿ, 160ⁿ, 157, 179, 240: see Asura, Deva, Hell, World, Light—Path, and Preta.

— Brute, xxix, 24, 130.

— Buddhos of, 121, 124², 218.

— ‘Poisons’ of, lxxvii, lxxviii, 125².

— Six, lxxvii—lxxviii.

Lonaphala Vagga, 40, 189¹.

Lotus Deities, 85², 139, 218.

Magic, 172¹, 187¹, 221—2.

Mahā-Kāla, 147¹.

Mahd—Mudrd, 135².

Mahd—Parinibbāna Sūt—tanta, 5.

Mahdydna, xx, xxxvi, lxvi, lxxi, 10, 206, 212¹, 213², 225, 232, 237.

Mahlaima (Māla), 111⁴.

Maitreya, 108⁵, 190², 212¹, 232.

Makara, 142⁴, 144.

Māmaki, 70, 108², 110, 199: see Tara.

Manas, 9ⁿ.

Manéala, xxvii, xxviii—xxix, xlvi, 28, 70, 71, opp. 118, 121ⁿ—2², 124¹, 126—8, 138, opp. 136, 217ff.

Mañjushri (Mañjughosha), xxviii, 113⁴, 121⁴, 134², 167².

Manirás, xxxiv, lvi, lxxviii—lxxix, lxxix¹, 129, 134². 136¹, 149¹, 151, opp. 167, 171, 206¹, 220—4.

Mantra—Ydna, 13, 132, 134, 136ⁿ, 151, 206¹

Manu, 10¹, 47¹.

Mara, xxix, 15, 62, 147, 194, 206.

Marett, Dr. R. R., xx.

Marpa, 79, 135², 234ⁿ.

Mālrís, 63, 116^{2—7}, 201, 218ⁿ.

Mdyd, lxxii, lxxiv, 6², 188, 212, 219, 224, 225.

Mdyd—Rüpa, 100¹.

- Medical Buddhas, 24.
 Memory, liii, 183.
 —Past Lives, of, 40—1, 189¹, 207⁴.
 — Records, 9, 60, 189¹.
 Mem, Mt., 62, 63—5, 146⁵, 147, 158—9, 215.
 Milarepa, xv, lxxix¹, 79, 82, 135².
 Mithras, 37¹.
Moksha, 11¹
 Monasticism, 234.
Mudra 71, 127⁴.
Mukti, 222.
 Mysteries, Antiquity, of, 45¹: see Initiation.
 — Buddhist, 7.
 — Celtic, 3, 37¹.
 — Egyptian, 36¹, 43, 45¹, 122¹.
 — Greek, 3, 9, 43, 45¹, 50, 51, 53, 122¹.
 — Indian, 224.
 — Tibetan, 3², 36¹, 221, 224.
Nddl, 90², 215—16.
 Nālanda, 2, 74.
 Naropa, 135².
 Nepal, 74.
 Nestorians, 233.
Niddnas, lxxvii, 56.
 Nidhema (Naivedya), 116⁷
Nikdya, Angultara, 38—41, 84, 158², 189¹.
 — Dlgha, 5, 207⁴, 233.
 — Majjhima, 38, 41².
 Ningmapa, 72, 233².
Nirmdna—Kdya, lxxvi, lxxvii, 10—12, 13, 58, 135, 136ⁿ, 168.
Nirvdya, xxxiii¹, lxv, lxxvii, lxxii, 6², 11, 15, 30, 35, 46, 62, 67—8, 97¹, 106⁴, 107, 114¹, 125¹, 157², 184⁴, 212, 226, 227ⁿ, 231^{2—3}, 236:

see Buddha-hood, and Liberation.

— Realization of, 130¹, 132¹, 192⁴, 213, 229².

Occultism: see Esotericism.

Odysseus, 50, 51.

Og-tin, 62, 107².

Oracle-Temples, lvi.

Origen, 234¹.

Orpheus, 49, 51.

Osirian Faith, 234, 238.

Osiris, 22, 35—6, 45¹.

Padma Sambhava, xxviii, liv, lv, 13, 23, 33, 65, 72—7, 79, 85, 135², 150ⁿ, 190¹, 233².

Panchatantra, 3².

Parsee Funeral, 25, 27.

Peaceful Deities, xxvii, xxviii—xxix, lxxviii, 13, 23¹, 31, 85, 103—4 ff., opp. 118, 124¹, 126¹, 131, 135, 146—0, 156, 193—4, 199, 204—8, 217, 219, 220.

Philosophy, Eastern and Western, compared, xxxvii ff.

Pho-wa, xiii¹, xix, 85².

Pindar, 53.

Pistis Sophia, 234¹.

Plato, 36—7, 49 ff., 77, 178⁴—9¹, 188².

Pluto, 35.

Potaliya Sultanía, 41².

Prajñd—Páramitd, lxxii, 113⁴, 121⁴.

Prdna, lxix, 214 ff.

Pre-existence, Memory of 9: see Rebirth.

Preta (Unhappy Ghost) Ixvi, lxxv, 114¹, 121, 124, 150ⁿ, 170: see Lokas.

— Birth, 157, 185.

— Existence, 194¹, 207¹.

— Origin of, 186—7.

— Rite of Pretd—Shdddha, lxxv.

Proserpine Lore, 37.

- Psalms of the Early Buddhists*, xxii, 210.
- Psyche, xliii, xliv, Ixviii.
 — metaphysics and, xxxvii+—xxxviii. See also Soul.
- Psychical Research, 77, 187¹.
- Psychoanalysis, Freudian, viii—x, xli ff., ixxx.
- Plah—hotep*, Precepts of, 110ⁿ.
- Püjd*, lv.
- Punarutpatti*, Ixxx.
- Purdna*, Ixx.
- Purgatory (Limbo), lxvii, 34, 37, 39.
 —Origin of, 37¹.
- Puma*, lxxii.
- Pushpema (Pushpä), 108⁴.
- Pythagoras, 3, 53.
- Ra, 109².
- Rdksfiasa*, 32, 65, 128², 144—5, 162, 186.
- Ratna Deities, 138—9.
- Ratna—Sambhava, xlvi, 9ⁿ, 16—17, 32, 55, 70, 108², 110¹⁻¹², 120, 123, 139, 146, 200, 202¹, 220.
- Reality, xlvi, 1, 68, 224—32.
- Rebirth, vii, x, li, Ixi¹, Ixvi, lxxix, Ixxx.
 — Anthropology and, 59.
 — Bardo, xlv et passim, 30, 102, 153—93, 204.
 — Bön, 74.
 — Cause of, 39.
 — Celtic, 37, 60.
 — Christianity and, 37, 234¹⁻⁵, 239.
 — Continents, 184, 190.
 — Doctrine, 39—61.
 — Ending of, 149¹.
 — Esotericism of, 40, 41—9
 — Greek, 49 ff., 53.
 — Herodotus and, 45.
 — Huxley and, 60—1.

- Interpretation of, 39—41ff., 185¹.
 - Jewish, 37.
 - Karma and, 198: see Karma.
 - Ldmas and, 40.
 - Memory, 40—1², 182², 189¹.
 - Origen and, 234¹.
 - Platonic, 49—53, 178⁸, 179¹, 188².
 - Process of, 34, 40, 45, 50, 67, 86², 92⁴, 97⁴, 98², 114¹, 132¹, 165, 170, 172, 175 ff., 179, 190ff., 219, 224.
 - Rig-Veda on, 45¹
 - Science and, 41, 60—1.
 - Sex at, xli, 179—80, 206².
 - States of, 40, 150ⁿ, 208ⁿ: see Lokas.
 - Symbolism of, 49 ff., 162², 165², 178⁶, 179¹, 185¹: see Esotericism.
 - Transmigration and, 42ff., 59, 126³, 178⁴, 179¹, 185¹, 192¹.
 - Visions, 157 ff., 169 ff., 173 ff., 183 ff., 188ⁿ.
 - Yoga of, 30, 41.
- Re—incarnation, xiii, xxxvi, xliii, liii, lxvii, lxxx, ixixi—lxxxii, lxxxiii, lxix. See also Rebirth.
- Resurrection and, lxxvii.
- Rig-Veda*, on Rebirth, 45¹.
- Rig-zitt*, 73, 77, 127¹.
- Ruh*, lxxviii.
- Rüpa-Kāya*, 233.
- Saddharma—Pandarika*, 4.
- Sādhand*, 196².
- Sahasrāra—Padnia*, 216—17, 221, 224.
- Salamanders, 8.
- Samādhi*, xv, xvii, 102², 123², 124, 159, 163¹, 167, 173, 174², 186, 203, 206: see Dhydna, and Yoga.
- Samanta—Būhadra, xxvii, xxx, 12, 16, 32, 62, 95², 111², 121, 121⁴, 202¹: see Ādi—Buddha.

— Prayer, 11².

— State, 96², 96⁴.

Sambhogha—Kāya, lxxvi, lxxvii, 10, 11—13, 15, 107—81, 110, 112, 115, 118—19, 124, 135³, 138, 150, 167, 188.

Samgīli Sūta, 207⁴.

Sanglia, 5, 14, 171.

Sangsāra, xxix, xxxiii, lkv, lxxvii, lxxii, lxxviii, lxxx, 2, 6², 8, 11—12, 15, 103¹, 146, 180—1, 189—90, 225, 236: see Lokas.

— Emancipation from, 9, 67, 125, 135²; see Liberation, and Nirvṛtia.

— Line of, lxxvii.

— Projections of, xxix.

— Renunciation of, 127², 142², 213.

— Worlds of, 24.

Sangskāra, lxxiv, lxxxiii.

Sangyay—Chanma, 70, 111

Sa—tschha, 24.

Science, Western, Oriental ideas and, viii—x, xvi—xvii, xix.

Semitic Faiths and Soul, 225.

Shakti, xxvii, xxviii, xxix, XXX, 6², 32, 70, 120^{6—9}, 121⁴, 178¹, 213¹, 214ⁿ, 217^{1—18}.

Shangkarāchāryya, lxxiii.

Shape—Shifting, 159¹, 186.

Shigatze, 26.

Shikhd, lxx.

Shinje, lxxxi, 35—7, 240.

Shishya (Chela), xxviii, 67, 222—4.

Shiva, 120⁸, 214n.

Shanyatd, 11^a: see Void.

Siddhi, lxix, 128², 191², 204², 222^{1—3}.

Sikkim, 20, 22, 27—8, 37, 55, 71—2, 79, 80, 187¹.

—Maharaja of, 80.

- Six Doctrines, The*, 162², 164³.
- Skandha*, lxviii, lxxvii, lxxx, 189¹, 192⁴, 231².
- Vijñāna, 106², 182¹, 214.
- Socrates, 53, 66.
- Soul, The, xxx¹, xxxviii ff., lxxxii.
- Soul—Complex, lxviii, lxxvii, lxxix.
- Spiritism, 166^a, 187¹.
- Spirits, 32, 186, 187¹.
- Spyang-pii*, 20—4.
- Srong-Tsan-Gampo, 74.
- Stūpa*, 24, 163².
- Sub-Consciousness, 9, 40, 41², 60, 117¹, 189¹, 192⁴, 314.
- Sugata*, 125¹: see Buddha.
- Sukhāvati, 28.
- Swedenborg, xlv, lxxv.
- Symbolism: see Esoterictism.
- Tadhot*, 72^{7.10}, 136¹, 152², 192⁴.
- Tantra*, xx, lvi, lxxi, lxxvii, lxxviii, 93, 146⁵⁻⁷, 152², 156, 180, 213¹
⁻², 216, 219, 222.
- Demchok, 122².
- of the Great Liberation, 100⁴.
- Raja, lxix.
- Shrichakra—sambhāra, So.
- Tantricism, 29¹, 75—6, 78, 85⁴, 127¹, 146², 213—20, 232—3.
- Abuse of, 218ⁿ.
- Tibetan, 74.
- Taoism, 33, 234.
- Tāpas*, lxvii.
- Tārā (Dölma), 70, 108, 118, 200.
- Tathāgata, 54, 106⁴, 152¹, 226, 229².
- Taltvas lxxiv, 229².
- Telepathy, 223.
- Terma*s (Scriptures), liv—lv, lviii.

- Terton*, liv, 73, 75—7, 150ⁿ
Thamyras, 50, 51.
Tkeraváda, xxi, 5, 61, 10, 10, 35, 54¹
Thersites, 52.
Thi–Srong–Detsan, 74.
Thomas, Dr. F. W., xx.
Thoth, 36.
Thought–Forms, 17, 29–32, 34, 103⁴, 123², 125², 148, 156, 187¹, 205, 211, 219, 227.
 — Body of, 101, 104¹, 126².
 — Recognition of, 104, 126², 141, 143—4, 146—7, 204
Ti–Piiaka{Skt. TriPitakal 5, 30¹, 160², 233.
Totemism, 36¹, 140¹.
Transmigration: see Rebirth.
Tri–Kāya, 10, 12ⁿ—14, 147, 202, 232—3.
Trinity, Buddhist, 13—14, 87¹, 88, 103², 148, 155, 163, 165, 170, 192, 197—8.
 — Christian, 14, 234.
Tri–Ratna, xxix.
Tsi–pa, 19.
Tsoñ Khapa, xxviii, 233².
Tushita Heavens, 53, 190^{2–3}.
Tutelary Deity, 99¹.
Udāna, 68¹.
Unconscious, The, xxxv¹, xlv.
 — dominants of, xlv, xlvii.
Upanishads, xii, 46ⁿ.
Vairochana, xxvii, xxviii, xlviii, lxxvii, 9, 15—17, 32, 46ⁿ, 55, 70, 105^{4–7}, 119, 137, 200, 202¹, 218, 220.
Vajra Deities, 138.
Vajra–Dhara, 13, 108¹.
Vajra–Pāni (Chakdor), xxviii, 116⁴, 134², 186, 189⁴.
Vajra–Sattva, xlviii, ixvii, 9ⁿ, 15, 16, 32, 55, 70, 106², 108¹–10, 120, 123—4, 126, 138, 199, 202¹, 220.

Vajra–Yāna, 13.

Vampire, 26.

Vdyu, lxix.

Vāyudhārana, lxix.

Vedānta, lxxiii, 46.

Vijaya, 120².

Vinaya–Pitaka (or Dulva), 53.

Vissudhi Magga, 41².

Vital–Airs (Prdrut–Vaytt), 214, 221, 224.

Vital Force (Prāna), 90 ff., 98², 162², 214—16, 224.

Void (Shānyatā), The, lxxviii, lxxii, lxxiii, lxxvi, 10, 11², 15, 95², 96⁴, 119¹, 126¹, 146^{2–3}, 167, 174, 182, 188.

—Clear Light of, lxxi, lxxiii, lxxiv, 29, 32, 89, 90 ff., 97¹—8^{1,3}, 135, 141, 150—1, 174, 176, 182, 193, 203, 206, 211, 213, 219, 224.

Voidness, The, xxxix, li.

Wangchugma, 140 ff., 140¹.

Wheel of Life, lvi, 17, 37—8, 55—6, 97¹, 131.

— of the Law, xxxiii, 106, opp. 119.

Wisdom, All–Discriminating, xvi, 16, 114—15, 119¹, 123, 200.

— All–Performing, 16, 116—19¹, 200.

— Dhartna–Dhdtu, 15, 106—7, 122.

— Equality, of, 16, 111—12, 119¹, 123, 200.

— Four aspects of, xlvii.

— Mirror–Like, 15—16, 109—10, 119¹, 123, 199.

— Perfected Actions, of, 9, 123.

— Reality, of, 200.

— Simultaneously – Born, 129—30, 201.

Wisdoms, The, 10—11, 15—16, 119¹, 125, 205.

— Four, xlvii, 119¹, 122, 125—6.

Woodroffe, Sir John, xx, lxxv—lxxxiv.

World, the, and its ‘given–ness’, xl.

Wrathful Deities, xxvii, xxix—xxx, xxxvi, lxxviii, 13, 23¹, 31, 85, 103, 124¹, 126¹, 131—49, opp. 136, 156, 193—4, 199, 201, 204—8, 217, 219¹, 220.

Yamántaka, 120^{2.7}, 167².

Vama-Rāja, 35, 37, 39, 46ⁿ, 47¹, 147², 167¹.

Yantras, 192⁴.

Yoga, x, lxx, lxxi, lxxviii, lxxix, 2, 10, 30, 33, 40—2, 58, 67, 74—5, 79, 86², 89², 92⁴, 97¹, 99⁴, 132¹, 135¹, 157², 182², 196⁴, 211—14ⁿ, 232: see Dhyána, Ecstasy, Illumination, and Samádhú

— Buddha and, 5, 158².

— Christian, 234.

— Dream-State, 203¹.

— Egyptian, 110ⁿ

— Indian, 9, 135².

— Laya or Kuttalini, xlvi, lxxiv¹, 221.

— Mantra, 150ⁿ, 221.

— Mudrá, 127⁴.

Yoga, Patañjali on, 157².

— Rebirth, 41.

— Samddhi, 123², 163¹.

— Serpent-Power, lxxviii, 216.

—Tantric, 120⁵, 146², 213—20, 233.

—Tibetan, 9, 135², 150ⁿ, 162², 192⁴, 212².

Yogd-cdrya, 212¹, 213¹.

Yoiavdshitha, 56².

Yogins, xxvii, xxx, 144—6.

Yogis, xxix.

Zanom 133ⁿ.

Zeus, 51.

Death, that must come, cometh nobly when we give Our wealth, and life, and all, to make men live. The Book of Good Counsels, from the Hitopadesha (Sir Edwin Arnold's Translation)

¹ Alexandra David—Neel, Magic and Mystery in Tibet (New York: Dover Publications, 1971), pp. 15, 17, 19.

² Ken Winkler, Pilgrim of the Clear Light (Berkeley, Calif.: Dawnfire Books, 1982), p. 44. The other biographical information on Evans—Wentz here is drawn from Winkler's book. A useful summary is provided by John Myrdhin Reynolds in Self—Liberation Through Seeing with Naked Awareness (Barrytown, N.Y.: Station Hill Press, 1989), pp. 71—78.

³ For a detailed discussion of Jung's commentary and Govinda's foreword, see Donald S. Lopez, Jr., Prisoners of Shangri-La: Tibetan Buddhism and the West (Chicago: The University of Chicago Press, 1998), pp. 57—63.

⁴ See David Germano, "Dying, Death, and Other Opportunities," in Religions of Tibet in Practice, ed. Donald S. Lopez, Jr. (Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press, 1997), pp. 458—493.

⁵This summary is drawn from Marion Meade's biography, Madame Blavatsky, The Woman Behind the Myth (New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1980), pp. 413—417.

⁶H. P. Blavatsky, The Secret Doctrine (Los Angeles: The Theosophy Company, 1947), vol. ii, p. 743. This is a facsimile of the original 1888 edition.

⁷*Ibid.*, ii, 303.

⁸Ibid., ii, 196 footnote.

⁹Ibid., ii, 168.

¹Of this pre—mortem experiencing of death, presumably while out of the body, Apuleius states, in his Metamorphoses (XI, 23): ‘I drew nigh to the confines of death. I trod the threshold of Proserpine [in the realm of the dead]. I was borne through all the elements, and I returned to Earth again.’ Cf. translation by H. E. Butler (Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1910).

The art of going out from the body, or of transferring the consciousness from the earth—plane to the after—death plane, or to any other plane, is still practised, in Tibet, where it is known as Pho—wa. See W. Y. Evans—Wentz, Tibetan Yoga and Secret Doctrines (Oxford University Press, London, 1935), pages 169—70, 246—76.

¹ See W. Y. Evans—Wentz, Tibet's Great Yogi Milarepa (Oxford University Press, London, 1928), pages 244—304.

1Cf. 5/. John, I, 9.

2Cf. H. M. Tirard, The Book of the Dead (London, 1910), pages 4S—9.

¹ It should be noted that each of the dead possesses a body suited to the paradise realm or hell—world in which karma brings about birth ; and that when any of the after—human—death states of existence ends there is again a death process and a casting off of a body (cf. pp. 155—8, and Book II passim). The Bardo is the intermediate state whence one may be reborn in this world in a human body, or in the ghost—world in a ghost body, or in one of the paradise realms, such as the deva—loka, in a god body, or in the asura—loka in an asura body, or in one of the hells in a body capable of enduring suffering and incapable of dying there until the purgation is complete. Following death in a hell, or in any other of the after—human—death states, the normal process is to be reborn on earth as a human being. The True Goal, as the Bardo Thödol repeatedly explains, is beyond all states of embodiment, beyond all hells, worlds, and heavens, beyond the Sangsåra , beyond Nature; it is called Nirvana (Tib. Myang—hdas). See Addenda, V, pp. 394—33.

¹ To one of Dr. Jung's most successful disciples, Dr. James Kirsch, Analytical Psychologist, of Los Angeles, California, who has discussed this Psychological Commentary with Dr. Jung in Zurich and aided in its English translation, the Editor is indebted for the important prefatory admonition which follows, addressed to the Oriental reader:—

‘This book addresses itself, primarily, to the Occidental reader, and attempts to describe important Oriental experiences and conceptions in Occidental terms. Dr. Jung seeks to facilitate this difficult undertaking by his Psychological Commentary. It is, therefore, unavoidable that, in so doing, he employs terms which are familiar to the Occidental mind but which are, in some instances, objectionable to the Oriental mind.

‘One such objectionable term is "soul". According to Buddhistic belief, the "soul" is ephemeral, is an illusion, and, therefore, has no real existence. The Germanic word "Seele", as employed in the original German version of this Psychological Commentary, is not synonymous with the English word "Soul", although commonly so translated. "Seele" is an ancient word, sanctioned by Germanic tradition and used, by outstanding German mystics like Eckhart and great German poets like Goethe, to signify the Ultimate Reality, symbolized in feminine, or shakti, aspect. Herein, Dr. Jung uses it poetically with reference to the "Psyche", as the Collective Psyche. In psychological language it represents the Collective Unconscious, as being the matrix of everything. It is the womb of everything, even of the Dharma—Kaya; it is the Dharma—Käya itself.

‘Accordingly, Oriental readers are invited to put aside, for the time being, their understanding of "soul" and to accept Dr. Jung's use of the word, in order to be able to follow him with an open mind into the depths where he seeks to build a bridge from the Shore of the Orient to the Shore of the Occident, and to tell of the various paths leading to the Great Liberation, the Una Salus.’

¹This paragraph makes apparent the interpretative importance of the annotation set forth above, page xxxv, concerning the difference in meaning of the term ‘soul ‘of the English rendering and of the term ‘Seele ’ of the original German; and, at this point, readers would benefit by re—reading the annotation.

1Cf. Dr. George Roerich, Introduction of Buddhism into Tibet, in Stepping Stones (Kalimpong, 1951), Vol. II., No. 5, p. 135.

¹Lama Kazi Dawa—Samdup has here ‘Birthplace Bardo ’. Apparently his manuscript has ‘skyes—gnas’ instead of ‘skyes—nas’ which is found in the block—print. The latter means, literally, ‘having been born ’, that is, having been born into the state men call life. ‘Skyes—gnas ’ refers to the womb, the ‘place ‘(gnas) of birth; and this is the subject of the sixth verse, dealing with the bardo of rebirth, which, therefore, cannot be meant here, for otherwise there would be only five bardos instead of six.

¹*Cf.* Ananda K. Coomaraswami, Hinduism and Buddhism (Philosophical Library, New York, n.d.), p. 49; and Marco Pallis, Peaks and Lamas (Cassell & Co., London, 1946), pp. 79—81. The latter is probably the best and most readable introduction to Tibetan Buddhism which so far has been written.

¹*Ci. Dhammapdda*, xxiv, 21.

¹ As to the title of this Foreword, 'The Science of Death \ sec Thanaiohgy, by Dr. Roswell Parks, in Tlu Journal of the American Medical Association April 27, 1912.

¹ Cf. Taniramja, ch. XXVII VV. 83—100, dealing with signs of approaching death, Taurik Taxis, edited by Arthur Avalon, vol. xii.

¹ Cf. Tantrik Texts, vol. vii, p. 23, the Buddhist Shrlihakra—sambhāra Tānt ra.

¹ Cf. A. Avalon's Tantrik Texts, vol. viii, p. a.

² That such a review of earth—life is experienced by the dying has been frequently attested by persons who had begun to die, as, for example, in drowning, and then been resuscitated.—W. Y. E—W.

¹ See Tan ink Texts, vol. vii, p. 33.

¹ Cf. Yogavāshishtha, CLX, V. 41.

¹ De Coclo, cd. 1868, 493—7.

² The editor has heard of a European planter who, having died in the jungles of the Malabar country of South—west India, was buried there by the people. Some years afterwards, a friend of the planter found the grave carefully fenced in and covered with empty whisky and beer bottles. At a loss to understand such an unusual sight, he asked for an explanation, and was told that the dead sahib's ghost had caused much trouble and that no way had been discovered to lay the ghost until an old witch—doctor declared that the ghost craved whisky and beer, to which it had long been habituated when in the flesh and which was the real cause of its separation from the fleshly body. The people, although religiously opposed to intoxicants, began purchasing bottled whisky and beer of the same brands which the sahib was well known to have used, and, with a regular ritual for the dead, began sacrificing them to the ghost by pouring them out upon the grave. Finding that this kept the ghost quiet they kept up the practice in self—defence.—W. Y. F—W.

¹ Just as the Tibetans took over Tantricistn from India, so, as the well-known Tibetan Biography of Jetsin Milarepa (Tibet's most famous Yogf and Saint), for example, makes clear, they appear also to have derived various systems of Yoga from India, including Laya or Kuiuiialini Yoga, While it is undoubtedly true that many Mantras likewise derived from India have grown hopelessly corrupt in the Tibetan language itself, the practice of Laya or Kwufalinl Yoga by Tibetans seems to have been kept fairly pure, largely through oral transmission from guru to guru rather than through written records, except for Tibetan zed terminologies and methods of application. Certain Tibetan treatises on Yoga which the editor possesses, both in the original and in English translation, suggest this. —W. Y. E—W.

¹ As plants, aquatic animals, reptiles, birds, quadrupeds, simian forms, and man. Sec Brihad Vishnu Parana.

¹ This Introduction is—for the most part—based upon and suggested by explanatory notes which the late Lama Kazi Dawa—Samdup, the translator of the Bardo Thödol, dictated to the editor while the translation was taking shape, in Gangtok, Sikkim. The Lama was of opinion that his English rendering of the Bardo Thödol ought not to be published without his exegetical comments on the more abstruse and figurative parts of the text. This, he thought, would not only help to justify his translation, but, moreover, would accord with the wishes of his late guru (see p. 80) with respect to all translations into a European tongue of works expository of the esoteric lore of the Great Perfectionist School into which that guru had initiated him. To this end, the translator's exegesis, based upon that of the translator's guru, was transmitted to the editor and recorded by the editor herein. The editor's task is to correlate and systematize and sometimes to expand the notes thus dictated, by incorporating such congenial matter, from widely separated sources, as in his judgement tends to make the exegesis more intelligible to the Occidental, for whom this part of the book is chiefly intended.

The translator felt, too, that, without such safeguarding as this Introduction is intended to afford, the Bardo Thödol translation would be peculiarly liable to misinterpretation and consequent misuse, more especially by those who are inclined to be, for one reason or another, inimical to Buddhistic doctrines, or to the doctrines of his particular Sect of Northern Buddhism. He also realized how such an Introduction as is here presented might itself be subject to adverse criticism, perhaps on the ground that it appears to be the outcome of a philosophical eclecticism. However this may be, the editor can do no more than state fcere, as he has stated in other words in the Preface, that his aim, both herein and in the closely related annotations to the text itself, has been to present the psychology and the teachings peculiar to and related to the Bardo Thödol as he has been taught them by qualified initiated exponents of them, who alone have the unquestioned right to explain them.

If it should be said by critics that the editor has expounded the Bardo Thödol doctrines from the standpoint of the Northern Buddhist who believes in them rather than from the standpoint of the Christian who perhaps would disbelieve at least some of them, the editor has no apology to offer; for he holds that there is no sound reason adducible why he should expound them in any other manner. Anthropology is concerned with things as they are ; and the hope of all sincere researchers into comparative religion devoid of any religious bias ought always to be to accumulate such scientific data as will some day enable future generations of mankind to discover Truth itself—that Universal Truth in which all religions and all sects of all religions may ultimately recognize the Essence of Religion and the Catholicity of Faith.

¹ Mr. Talbot Mundy, in his interesting Tibetan romance Om, in making reference to this title, The Tibetan Book of the Dead, has taken it to be a very free translation of Bardo Thödol. It should not, however, so be taken ; it has been adopted because it seems to be the most appropriate short title for conveying to the English reader the true character of the book as a whole.

¹L. A. Waddell, The Buddhism of Tibet or Lāmatsm (London, 1895), p. 17.

²There is some sound evidence for supposing that one source of the moral philosophy underlying certain of the Aesop's Fables and, also, by way of comparison, of the Indian Panchatantra and Hitopadesha) may yet be shown to have been such primitive Oriental folk—tales about animals and animal symbols as scholars now think helped to shape the Jātaka Tales concerning the various births of the Buddha (cf. The Jātaka, ed. by E. B. Cowell, Cambridge, 1895—1907). Similarly, the Christian mystery plays contain symbolism so much akin to that found in mystery plays still flourishing under ecclesiastical patronage throughout Tibet and the neighbouring territories of Northern Buddhism as to point to another stream of Orientalism having come into Europe (cf. Three Tibetan Mysteries, ed. by H. I. Woolf, London, n.d.). The apparent Romanist canonization of the Buddha, under the medieval character of St. Jehoshaphat, is an additional instance of how things Eastern seem to have become things Western (cf. Baraldm and Ytwáséf ed. by E. A. W. Budge, Cambridge, 1923). Furthermore, the once very popular medieval work De Arte Moriendi (cf. The Book of the Craft of Dying, ed. by F. M. M. Comper, London, 1917), of which there are many versions and variants in Latin, English, French, and other European languages, seems to suggest a still further infiltration of Oriental ideas, concerning death and existence after death, such as underlie both the Tibetan Bardo Thödol and the Egyptian Book of the Dead; and, in order to show this, a few of the most striking passages, found in the De Arte Moriendi cycle, which parallel textually certain parts of the Bardo Tfiödoi, have been added in foot—notes to the Bardo Thödol translation from Mr. Comper's excellent edition in The Book of the Craft of Dying.

Buddhist and Christian Gospels (Philadelphia, 1908), a pioneer study of the remarkable parallelism which exists between the texts of the New Testament and the texts of the Buddhist Canon, by Mr. A. J. Edmunds, suggests, likewise, that one of the most promising fields of research, as yet almost virgin, lies in a study of just such correspondences between Eastern and Western thought and literature as is suggested in this note.

¹ It is probably unnecessary for the editor to remind his friends who profess the Theravāda Buddhism of the Southern School that, in preparing this Introduction, his aim has necessarily been to present Buddhism chiefly from the standpoint of the Northern Buddhism of the Kargyutpa Sect (see page 79), by which the Bardo Thödol is accepted as a sacred book and to which the translator belonged. Although the Southern Buddhist may not agree with the Bardo Thödol teachings in their entirety, he will, nevertheless, be very apt to find them, in most essentials, based upon doctrines common to all Schools and Sects of Buddhism ; and he may even find those of them with which he disagrees interesting and possibly provocative of a reconsideration of certain of his own antagonistic beliefs.

² Māyā, the Sanskrit equivalent of the Tibetan Gyüma (Sgyütna), means a magical or illusory show, with direct reference to the phenomena of Nature. In a higher sense, in Brāhmanism, it refers to the Shakti of Brahman (the Supreme Spirit, the Ain Soph of Judaism).

³ The Sanskrit term Sangsāra (or Samsāra), Tibetan Khorva (Hkhorva), refers to the phenomenal universe itself, its antithesis being Nirvana (Tib. Myang—hdas) , which is beyond phenomena (cf. pp. 67—8).

¹ As regards the esoteric meaning of the Forty—nine Days of the Bardo, compare H. P. Blavatsky, The Secret Doctrine (London, 1888), i. 238, 411; ii. 617, 627—8. The late Lama Kazi Dawa—Samdup was of opinion that, despite the adverse criticisms directed against H. P. Blavatsky's works, there is adequate internal evidence in them of their author's intimate acquaintance with the higher lamás tic teachings, into which she claimed to have been initiated.

¹ It is held, too, that whereas from the Five Dhyānl Buddhas, as in our text, emanate the five elements—ether, or aggregate of matter (Vairochana), air, or aggregate of volition (Amogha—Siddhi), fire, or aggregate of feelings (Amitābha), water, or aggregate of consciousness (Vajra—Sattva, esoterically as a reflex of Akshobhya), and earth, or aggregate of touch (Ratna—Sambhava)—from the Ādi—Buddha (from whom, according to the Ādi—Buddha School, the Five Dhyānl Buddhas themselves emanate) emanates the sixth element, which is mind (manas). Vajra—Sattva, as an esoteric deity, sometimes occupies (as does Vairochana)—according to the School and ritual—the place of the Ādi—Buddha, and is then synonymous with him.

¹ Manu, in The Laws (xii. 10—11), says: ' He, whose firm understanding obtains a command over his words, a command over his thoughts, and a command over his whole body, may justly be called a Triple—Commander.

'The man who exerts this triple self—command with respect to all animated creatures, wholly subduing both lust and wrath, shall by those means attain Beatitude.'—(Cf. trans, by Sir William Jones.)

¹ Sj. Atal Bihari Ghosh (see our Preface, p. x) has added here the following comment: ‘The word Dharma is derived from the verb—root Dhri, meaning ‘to Support’ or ‘to Uphold’. Dharnta is that which upholds or supports the Universe, as also the individual. Dharnta is in mankind Right Conduct, the result of True Knowledge. Truth according to Brahmanism is the Brahman, is Liberation—Moksha, Nirvana. Satnhhoga is the Life of Enjoyment. Nirmāna is the Process of Building. In the Brahmanic scheme, Dharnta is the first thing needed. Then comes Ariha (i.e. Wealth, or Possessions), which corresponds with Nirmāna. After this comes Sambhoga; and the last is Moksha, or Liberation.’

² ‘Whatever is visible and invisible, whether Sangsāra or Nirvana, is at base one [that is, Shūnyatā], with two Paths [Avidyā, Ignorance, and Vidyā, Knowledge] and two ends [Sangsāra and Nirvana].⁹ . . . ‘The Foundation of all is uncreated and independent, uncompounded and beyond mind and speech. Of It neither the word Nirvana nor Sangsāra may be said’—The Good Wishes of the Adi—Buddha, i—a (cf. the late Lama Kazi Dawa—Samdup’s translation, Tantrik Texts, vol. vii, London, 1919). The Shūnyatā, the Void, synonymous with the Dharma—Kāya, is thus beyond all mental concepts, beyond the finite mind with all its imaginings and use of such ultimate terms of the dualistic world as Nirvana and Sangsāra.

³ Cf. Waddell, op. cit., pp. 127, 347. Ashvaghosha, the great philosopher of Mahāyāna Buddhism (see pp. 225—6), has explained the Tri—Kāya Doctrine in The Awakening of Faith, translation by T. Suzuki (Chicago, 1900, pp. 99—103), as follows:

‘Because All Tathāgatas are the Dharmakāya itself, are the highest truth (pammārthasatya) itself, and have nothing to do with conditionality (samvritti—satyd) and compulsory actions; whereas the seeing, hearing, &c. [i.e. the particularizing senses], of the sentient being diversify [on its own account] the activity of the Tathāgatas.

‘Now this activity [in another word, the Dharmakāya] has a twofold aspect. The first one depends on the phenomena—particularizing consciousness, by means of which the activity is conceived by the minds of common people (prithagjana), Crāvakas, and Pratyekabuddhas. This aspect is called the Body of Transformation (Nirmānakāya).

‘But as the beings of this class do not know that the Body of Transformation is merely the shadow [or reflection] of their own evolving—consciousness (pravritti—vijñāna)) they imagine that it comes from some external sources, and so they give it a corporeal limitation. But the Body of Transformation [or what amounts to the same thing, the Dharmakāya] has nothing to do with limitation and measurement.

‘The second aspect [of the Dharmakāya] depends on the activity—consciousness (kāma—vijñāna) by means of which the activity is conceived by the minds of Bodhisattvas while passing from their first aspiration (cittotpāda) stage up to the height of Bodhisattvahood. This is called the Body of Bliss (Santbhogakāya). . . . ²).

¹d. A. Avalon, Tantrik Texts, vii (London and Calcutta, X919), pp. 36 n., 41 n.

¹ Cf. V. A. Smith, Early History of India (Oxford, 1914), p. 184.

¹ Our reproduction, made by special permission given to the editor by Dr. L. A. Waddell, is from pi. xxi, G a Met let r of Sikkim, edited by H. H. Risley (Calcutta, 1894), section on Lamaism in Sikkim by L. A. Waddell.

¹‘Of the hundred superior deities, forty—two are supposed to be mildi and fifty—eight of an angry nature.’—L. A. Waddell.

²‘An aboriginal or Chinese deity now identified with Avalokiia, with whom he has much in common.’—L. A. Waddell.

³ Our translation is based upon that made by Dr. Waddell; cf. Gazetteer of Sikkim, pp. 387—8.

¹ Cf. Waddell, Gazetteer of Sikkim, p. 388.

² 'In Ceylon, death—feasts are given, to the Bhikkhus, seven days, one month, and one year after the death. These feasts are given " in the name of" the dead, to whom also the merit is offered. This, under certain circumstances, helps the dead to attain higher rebirth/—Cassius A. Pereira.

³ Cf. Waddell, Gazetteer of Sikkim, pp. 391 and 383.

¹ Cf. Waddell, Gazetteer of Sikkim, pp. 391 and 383.

¹ Cf. Ekai Kawaguchi, Three Years in Tibet (Madras, 1909), p. 394.

¹ The men who perform this part of the bunai belong to a special caste, and, being regarded as unclean, are ordinarily shunned by other Tibetans.

¹ Bar—do literally means ‘between (Bar) two (do)’, i.e. ‘between two [states]’—the state between death and rebirth—and, therefore, ‘Intermediate’ or ‘Transitional [State]’. The translator, in certain instances, favoured ‘Uncertain [State]’ as its English rendering. It might also be rendered as ‘Twilight [State]’.

¹ Some of the more learned lāmas —chiefly of the Gelugpa, or Yellow—Hat Sect—believe that the highly symbolic visions of the one hundred and ten principal deities of the Chönyid Bardo are seen only by devotees of some spiritual advancement who have studied Tantricism; and that the ordinary person when deceased will have visions more like those described in the Sidpa Bardo.

¹ ‘This is borne out in the Paḷi Ti—Pitaka, which records several instances of high deva rebirth immediately after death on the human plane.’—Cassius A. Pereira.

1.)

2 The student is here referred to Section VII of our Addenda (pp. 238—41), concerning the Christianized version of the Judgement contained in the curious medieval treatise entitled The Lamentation of the Dying Creature.

¹ In my Fairy—Faith in Celtic Countries (Oxford, 1911), Chapter X, I have suggested how very probable it is that the purgatorial lore which centred about the cavern for mystic pagan initiations formerly existing on an island in Loch Derg, Ireland, at what is now the famous place of Catholic pilgrimage called St. Patrick's Purgatory, gave rise to the doctrine of Purgatory in the Roman Church. The original purgatorial cavern was demolished, by order of the English Government in Ireland, to destroy, as was said, pagan superstition. Furthermore, the subterranean places of worship and initiation, dedicated to the Sun—God Mithras, still preserved as ancient remains throughout the Southern European countries, bear such close resemblance to the original Irish Purgatory— as to other underground places of initiation in Celtic countries like New Grange in Ireland and Gavrinis in Brittany—as to indicate a common prehistoric origin, essentially religious and connected with a cult of the Bardo—woñá and its inhabitants.

² Cf. The Gazetteer of Sikkim, ed. by H. H. Risley, p. 269.

¹ Cf. translation by E. R. J. Gooneratne, Anguttara NiKāya, Eka Duka and Tika Nipāta (Galle, Ceylon, 1913), pp. 160—5.

¹William James, Varieties of Religious Experiences (New York, 1902), p. 483.

²734 Passages parallel to these are contained in the Kandarā ka S fā tanta and Potaliya Sūttanta of the Majjhima Nikāya (see translations by Bhikkhus Narada and Mahinda in The Blessing, Colombo, Ceylon, Jan. and Feb., 1925, vol. i, nos 1 and 2). Buddhaghosa, in his Vissudhi Magga (i.e. 'Path of Purity'), gives in more detail similar yogic methods for recovering (from the subconsciousness) memories of past births.

¹ Cf. Herodotus, ii. 123; Lucretius, De Return Natura, iii. 843—61. In common with ancient historians and philosophers, Herodotus (ii. 171) refuses to divulge, in a literal manner, the higher or esoteric teachings of the Mysteries of Antiquity:

‘On this lake [within the sacred precinct of the temple at Sais] the Egyptians perform by night the representation of his adventures [i.e. the symbolic adventures touching the birth, life, death, and regeneration of Osiris—’ whose name’, writes Herodotus, *I consider it impious to divulge’], which they call Mysteries. On these matters, however, though accurately acquainted with the particulars of them, I must [as an initiate] observe a discreet silence. So, too, with regard to the Mysteries of Demeter [celebrated at Eleusis, in Greece], which the Greeks term "The Thesmophoria", I know them [asan initiate], but I shall not mention them, except so far as may be done without impiety [or done lawfully].’

It has now been proven by archaeological and other research that the Mysteries consisted of symbolic dramatic performances open only to initiates and neophytes fit for initiation, illustrating the universally diffused esoteric teachings concerning death and resurrection (i.e. rebirth); and that the doctrine of transmigration of the human soul into animal bodies—if depicted at all—was not intended to be taken (as it has been taken by the uninitiated literally, but symbolically as in Plato’s Republic, detailed reference to which follows herein. Cf. Herodotus, ii. 122.)

Herodotus in the last—mentioned passage gives a symbolic account of the descent into Hades and the return to the human world of King Rhampsinitus, in whose honour the priests of Egypt therefore instituted what was probably— when rationally interpreted—a rebirth festival. The most ancient recorded parallel now known exists in the Rig Vada Manjala x, Sukta 135), wherein, as Sayana in his Commentary in the Atharva Veda (xix) seems to explain, the boy mentioned is the same as the boy Nachiketas of the [Taittiriya] Brahmana, who went to the realm of Yama, the King of the Dead, in Yama—Loka, and then returned to the realm of men. That this primeval Hades legend was interpreted esoterically as teaching a rebirth doctrine is confirmed by the ancient Katha Upanishad, the story of Nachiketas being used therein as a literary vehicle to convey the highest Vedāntic teachings concerning birth, life, and death. (Cf. Katha Upanishad, ii. 5 ; iii. 8, 15; iv. 10—11; vi. 18.)

Preserved in an Old Javanese MS. of the fourteenth century is a very similar Hades legend in which the Yaksha Kunjarakarna is commanded by the Lord Vairöchana 'to go to Yama's kingdom to see what is prepared for all evil—doers'. Peculiar interest attaches to this version, because it records a doctrine—akin to that referred to by the Greek and Roman writers—of thousand—year periods of transmigration into plants, animals, and defective human beings, prior to rebirth in a human body free from karmic blemishes. It mentions, too, that from Yama's kingdom Pürnavijaya was recalled to human life. (Cf. The Legend of Kunjarakarna, translated from the Dutch of Prof. Kern by Miss L. A. Thomas, in the Indian Antiquary, Bombay, 1903, vol. xxxii, pp. 111—97.)

¹ Examination of The Laws of Manu, the authority of which is unquestioned by orthodox Hindus, seems to confirm the esoteric interpretation, following the translation by Sir William Jones as revised by G. C. Haughton (in Institutes of Hindu Law or the Ordinances of Menu, London, 1825), and that by G. Bühler (in The Sacred Books of the East, vol. xxv, Oxford, 1886).

Manu at first sets forth the fundamental laws that ‘Action, which springs from the mind, from speech, and from the body, produces either good or evil results ; by action are caused the [various] conditions of man, the highest, the middling, and the lowest’; and that ‘[A man] obtains [the results of] a good or evil mental [act] in his mind, [that of] a verbal [act] in his speech, [that of] a bodily [act] in his body’. (Bühler’s trans., xii. 3, 8.)

Manu then proceeds to expound how man is not a simple but a complex being:

‘That substance, which gives a power of motion to the body, the wise call kshetraja [i. e. ‘the knower of the field’—Bühler’s trans.], or jvānman, the vital spirit; and that body, which thence derives active functions, they name bhūtaiman, or composed of elements :

‘Another internal spirit, called ma hat, or the great soul, attends the birth of all creatures embodied, and thence in all mortal forms is conveyed a perception either pleasing or painful.

‘These two, the vital spirit and reasonable soul, are closely united with Jive elements, but connected with the supreme spirit, or divine essence, which pervades all beings high and low.’ (Jones’s trans., xii. 12—14.)

From what follows, Manu apparently implies that it is this ‘vital spirit’, or animal soul, which alone is capable of transmigrating into sub—human forms, and not ‘the reasonable soul , or super—animal principle:

‘When the vital soul has gathered the fruit of sins, which arise from a love of sensual [i. e. animal or brutish] pleasure, but must produce misery, and, when its taint has thus been removed, it approaches again those two most effulgent essences, the intellectual soul and the divine spirit :

‘They two, closely conjoined, examine without remission the virtues and vices of that sensitive [or animal] soul, according to its union with which it acquires pleasure or pain in the present and future worlds.

If the vital spirit had practised virtue for the most part, and vice in a small degree, it enjoys delight in celestial abodes, clothed with a body formed of pure elementary [i. e. ethereal] particles;

‘But, if it had generally been addicted to vice, and seldom attended to virtue, then shall it be deserted by those pure elements, and, having a coarser body of sensible nerves, it feels the pains to which Yama shall doom it:

‘Having endured those torments according to the sentence of Yama, and its taint being almost removed, it again reaches those five pure elements in the order of their natural distribution.’ (Jones’s trans., xii. 18—29.)

After further exposition of the science of rebirth in its esoteric or rational aspect, Manu arrives at the following: summary:

‘Thus, by indulging the sensual i.e. animal or brutish] appetites, and by neglecting the performance of duties, the basest of men, ignorant of sacred expiations, assume [in their vital spirit form, but not in their reasonable soul form] the basest forms.

‘What particular bodies the vital spirit enters in this world, and in consequence of what sins here committed, now hear at large and in order.’ (Jones’s trans., xii. 52—3.)

Manu evidently exerts himself apart from the main subject of his treatise, as the whole of The Laws suggests, to invest with legal and divine sanction the dogma that the person of a Brahmin is peculiarly sacred and inviolable, and so gives prominence to the sin of slaying a Brahmin by mentioning it first; then to the sin of a priest drinking spirituous liquor, and then to the sin of stealing the gold of a piicst. In all such instances, as in all which follow them, the implication is, as we have above observed, that the ‘vital spirit’, or animal soul, separated from the two higher elements of man’s complex constitution, which are ‘the reasonable soul’ and ‘the divine essence’, suffers the penalty of migrating in sub—human creatures:

‘The slayer of a Brahmen [i.e. the vital spirit, or the irrational animal soul, of a Brähmen—slayer) must enter, according to the circumstances of the crime the body of a dog, a boar, an ass, a camel, a bull, a goat, a sheep, a stag, a bird, a Chandälii) or a Pnccasa’ ; and so on for other crimes (Jones’s trans., xii. 55—7).

In this connexion, it is interesting to observe a few of the correspondences between cause and effect which other of The Laws suggest. Thus, if a man steal precious things he ‘shall be born in the tribe of goldsmiths [considered to be of very low caste], or among birds called hemacdras, or gold—makers. If a man steal grain in the husk, he shall be born a rat; if a yellow mixed metal, a gander [which is of like mixed colour”]; if water, R PLAVA, or diver. ... If he steal flesh—meat, a vulture ; ... if oil, a bint la, or oil—drinking beetle ; . . . if exquisite perfumes, a musk—rat’. (Jones’s trans., xii. 61—5.)

Understanding Manu in the sense which this note aims to set forth, the esotericists disallow such popular and literal interpretation of Manu’s Laws as the Brahmins in their own Brahmin interests promulgate—according to the esotericists—among the common people concerning the doctrines of rebirth and karma.

The student should observe that the italicized non—Sanskrit words in the passages quoted in this note from the translation by Sir William Jones mark his interpolations from commentaries on Manu, especially from the Gloss of Culluca, and that the bracketed words indicate our own interpolations. Because the italicized interpolations tend to bring out the more obscure meanings of the passages cited, preference has been given to the Jones translation, although that by Böhler, which is more literal and therefore more technical, is, in all essentials, substantially the same.

1 Cf. B. Jowett, Dialogues of Plato (Oxford, '189a), iii. 336—7 : Republic, x. 014—20.

2 Inscr. gt. Skil. et Ital. 641; cf. Waddell. The Buddhism of Tibet, p. 109'.

¹Theravādists, on the contrary, believe that the Jataka dates from the Buddha's lifetime, and that its verses, but not its prose, are His very words.

²Here, again, in opposition to this view, the Southern Buddhists maintain that the Jātaka, in its verses, is the most transcendental part of the Sūta Pitika, and is designed for study by Bodhisattvas rather than for the common people.

¹ See Gazetteer of Sikkim, ed. by H. H. Risley, p. 266.

¹ See Gautteer ofSikhim, ed. by H. II. Risley, p. 267.

² Ibid., p. 268.

³ Compare the following passage from the Yoga Vāshishtha (Nirvana Pnka—ratia, Sarga 38, verses 78—9): ‘Those wise Pandits, learned in the Shāstras, should be considered Jackals if they relinquish not desire and anger.’

¹ E. B. Tylor, Primitive Culture (London, 1891), ii. 17.

¹ Cf. Caesar, De B. G. vi. 14.5; 18. 1 ; Diodorus Siculus, v. 31. 4; Pom—ponius Mela, De Situ Orbis, iii, c a; Lucan, Pharsalia., 449—62; Barddas (Liandover, 1862), i. 177, 189*91; and W. Y. Evans—Wenzl, The Fairy—Faith in Celtic Countries (Oxford 1911), Chaps. VII, XII.

¹ T. H. Huxley, Evolution and Ethics (London, 1894), pp. 61—2, 95.

The late William James, the well—known American psychologist, independently arrived at substantially the same conclusion as Huxley; for, after explaining his ‘own inability to accept either popular Christianity or scholastic theism⁹, he saj’s, ‘I am ignorant of Buddhism and speak under correction, and merely in order the better to describe my general point of view; but, as I apprehend the Buddhist doctrine of Karma, I agree in principle with that—(77r Vanities of Religious Experiences, pp. 521—a.)

¹ Could we take the lámate conception of a universe to be that of a world—system, and of a plurality of universes to be that of a plurality of world—systems forming a universe, we should then be able better to correlate the cosmography of Northern Buddhism (and of Brabmanism, from which it appears to have originated) with the cosmography of Western Science.

¹ Cf. GazetUtr of Sikkim, pp. 320—3.

² Cf. ibid., p. 322.

¹*Udāna*. viii. 1,4,3; based on a translation from the original Pali by Mr. Francis J. Payne, London, England.

1 ‘These Block—Prints are usually composed of separate treatises belonging to the Bardo Thödol cycle. One of such Block—Prints—which was purchased in Gyantse, Tibet, during the year 7919, by Major W. L. Campbell, then the British Political Representative in Tibet, Bhutan, and Sikkim, and presented to the editor—contains seventeen treatises, whose Tibetan titles have been rendered, in slightly abbreviated form, by the translator, as follows:

1. ‘The Clear Directions on The Divine Bardo, called "The Great Liberation by Hearing¹’, from "The Profound Doctrine of the Divine Peaceful and [Wrathful] Self—Liberation" ‘

2. ‘The Exposition of the Wrathful [or Active] Aspect of the Bardó’;

3. ‘The Good Wishes [or Prayers] Invoking the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas for Assistance’;

4. ‘The Root Verses of the Bardo’;

5. ‘The Prayer to Rescue [One] from the Narrow Places of the Bardo’;

6. 'The Setting—Face—to Face of the Sidpa—Bardo ';
7. 'The Salvation by Attaching [whereby] the Body Aggregate is Self—Liberated'—a version of the Tadhol Doctrine—(see pp. 1361, 152', 194 of our text);
8. 'The Prayer to Protect [One] from the Fears in the Bardo ';
9. 'The Self—Liberating Diagnosis of the Symptoms of Death'—(cf. pp. 86,89—97 of our text);
10. 'The Setting—Face—to—Face called "The Naked Vision", and the Self—Liberation [by that]';
11. 'The Special Teaching showing the Forms of Merit or Demerit, while in the Sidpa Bardo, called " The Self.Liberating in the Sidpa Bardo "; ia. The Addenda [to the above, " The Special Teaching "];
13. 'Prayer to the Line [of Gurus'] of the Divine Self—Liberating Doctrine';
14. 'The Ransoming of the Dying';
15. 'Self—Liberation called " Absolution by Confession";
16. 'The Best Wish—Granting Tadhol' —another form of the Tadhol Doctrine;
17. 'The Ritual called " The Self—Liberation from Habitual Propensities " '.Herein, the treatises numbered 1, a, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8 correspond—in slightly different versions—to the matter contained in our manuscript. The manuscript, moreover, contains much matter in the Appendix not contained in this Block—Print. The Block—Print itself is quite new, but the blocks 'from which it was printed may be quite old—how old, we have been unable to ascertain.

¹ Rig—hdsin, a translation into Tibetan of the Sanskrit term Vidyā—Dhara used, as herein, of a learned person, such as a pandit, also denotes a class of supernatural beings like certain orders of fairies.

¹Text: ZAB—CHÖS ZHI—KHRO DGONGS—PA RANG—
GRÖL LAS BAR—DOHI THÖS—GROL CHEN—MO CHÖS—NYID BAR—DOHI NGO—SPRÖD BZHUGS—SO (pronounced:
ZAB—CHÖ SHI—HTO GONG—PA RANG—DÖL LAY BAR—DOI THÖ—DOL CHEN—MO CHÖNYID BAR—DOI NGO—TÖD ZHU—SO).

^{1,2} * See pp. 10—15.

³ These Deities are in ourselves. They are not something apart from us. We are one with all that is, in every state of sentient existence, from the lowest worlds of suffering to the highest states of bliss and Perfect Enlightenment. In this esoteric sense, the Lotus Order of Deities represent the deified principles of the vocal functions in ourselves; the Peaceful represent the deified principles of the heart or functions of feeling; the Wrathful represent, in the same way, the functions of our mentality—such as thinking or reasoning, and imagination or memory—centred in the brain—LāMa K azi Dawa Sam dup. See p. 131¹.

⁴ Padma Sambhava (Tib. Pidma Jungne), i. e. 'The Lotus—Born referring to birth under pure, or holy, conditions, commonly called by the Tibetans Guru Rin—po—chPe ('The Precious Guru'), or simply Guru (the Sanskrit for 'Teacher'), is regarded by his followers as an incarnation of the essence of the Buddha Shakyamuni in its Tantric, or deeply esoteric, aspect.

⁵ See pp. 10—15.

⁶ The Guide Series 'refers to various treatises offering practical guidance to devotees on the Bodhi Path through the human world and thence through har do, the After—Death State, and onward to rebirth or else to Nirvana.

⁷ The Text contains merely the Tibetan word Hpho (pron. Pho), meaning 'transference' (of the sum—total, or aggregate, of karmic propensities, composing, or bound up with, personality and consciousness). The use of the term 'soul' being objectionable, since Buddhism, as a whole, denies the existence of a permanent, unchanging personal—consciousness entity such as the Semitic Faiths and animistic creeds in general understand thereby, the translator has avoided using it. But wherever any similar or equivalent term occurs herein it should be taken to imply something akin to 'consciousness—principle' or 'compound of consciousness' as implied by the Tibetan Hpho, or else as synonymous with the term 'life—flux' as used chiefly by Southern Buddhists.

¹ A Tibetan work of the Bardo cycle, commonly used by ātnas as supplementary to the Bardo Thödol (see part 9 of Note 1, p. 71). It treats of the symptoms of death in particular, scientifically and in very great detail. The late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup had planned its translation into English.

² ‘Liberation in this context does not necessarily imply, especially in the case of the average devotee, the Liberation of Nirvana, but chiefly a liberation of the ‘life—flux* from the dying body, in such manner as will afford the greatest possible after—death consciousness and consequent happy rebirth. Yet for the very exceptional and very highly efficient yogf, or saint, the same esoteric process of Transference can be, according to the lāma—gurus, so employed as to prevent any break in the flow of the stream of consciousness, from the moment of a conscious death to the moment of a conscious rebirth. Judging from a translation, made by the late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup, of an old Tibetan manuscript containing practical directions for performing the Transference, which the editor possesses, the process is essentially yogic, and could be employed only by a person trained in mental concentration, or one—pointedness of mind, to such a high degree of proficiency as to have gained control over all the mental and bodily functions. Merely remembering the process at the all—important moment of death—as the text implies—is, for a yogf, equivalent to performing the Transference itself; for once the yogi’s trained mind is directed to the process, instantaneously, or, as the text explains, automatically, the desired result is achieved.

¹ The lāma or reader, stationed in the house of the deceased as directed, whether the corpse be there or not, is to summon the departed one in the name of Truth, saying, ⁴ As the Trinity is true, and as the Truth proclaimed by the Trinity is true, by the power of that Truth I summon thee\ Although no corpse be at hand (as there would not be when a person had met a violent or accidental death entailing loss or destruction of the human—plane body; or when, to accord with astrological calculations, the body had been removed or disposed of immediately after death, a not uncommon event in Tibet), the spirit of the deceased, in the invisible Bardo—p]ane body, must, nevertheless, be present at the reading, in order to be given the necessary guidance through the Other—world—as the Egyptian Book of the Dead also directs (see p. 19).

² This prohibition is found in Brāhmanism too.

³ According to Tibetan and lāmāte belief, the body of a dying person should not be touched, that the normal departure of the consciousness—principle, which should take place through the Brāhmanic aperture on the crown of the head, be not interfered with. Otherwise, the departure maybe brought about through some other bodily aperture and lead to birth in one of the non—human states. For example, it is held that if the departure is through the aperture of the ear the deceased will be obliged—ere he can return to human birth—to be born in the world of the Gandharvas (fairy—like celestial musicians), wherein sound, as in song and music, is the prevailing quality of existence.

²Cf. the two following passages, the first from The Book of the Craft of Dying, chap. VI, in Bodleian MS. 42 {circa fifteenth century), Comper's ed. (p. 39), the second from The Craft to Know Well to Die (fifteenth century), chap. IV, Comper's ed. (p. 74):

'Last of all, it is to be known that the prayers that follow may be conveniently said upon a sick man that laboureth to his end. And if it is a religious person, then when the covent [i. e. convent] is gathered together with smiting of the table, as the manner is, then shall be said first the litany, with the psalms and orisons that he used therewith. Afterward, if he live yet, let some man that is about him say the orisons that follow hereafter, as the time and opportunity will suffer. And they may be often rehearsed again to excite the devotion of the sick man—if he have reason and understanding with him.'

'And if the sick man or woman may, nor can not, say the orisons and prayers before said, some of the assistants [i. e. bystanders] ought to say them before him with a loud voice, in changing the words there as they ought to be changed.¹

³ Cf. the following from The Craft to Know Well to Die, chap. IV, Comper's ed. (p. 73): ¹ After all these things he [the person dying] ought to say three times, if he may, these words that follow/

¹ The first Bardo is the Chikhai Bardo ; the second, the Chönyid Bardo; the third, the Sidpa Bardo, (See p. 10a⁴⁻⁸.)

² See p. 85⁶.

³ ‘Text: Yar—gyi—sang—thal—chen—po : the ‘Great Straight Upward Path’. One of the Doctrines peculiar to Northern Buddhism is that spiritual emancipation, even Buddhahood, may be won instantaneously, without entering upon the Bardo Plane and without further suffering on the age—long pathway of normal evolution which traverses the various worlds of sangsäric existence. The doctrine underlies the whole of the Bardo Thödol, Faith is the first step on the Secret Pathway. Then comes Illumination; and, with it, Certainty; and, when the Goal is won, Emancipation. But here again success implies very unusual proficiency in yoga, as well as much accumulated merit, or good karma, on the part of the devotee. If the disciple can be made to see and to grasp the Truth as soon as the guru reveals it, that is to say, if he has the power to die consciously, and at the supreme moment of quitting the body can recognize the Clear Light which will dawn upon him then, and become one with it, all sangsäric bonds of illusion are broken asunder immediately: the Dreamer is awakened into Reality simultaneously with the mighty achievement of recognition.

¹ 'Here, as elsewhere in our text, 'nerve—centre' refers to a psychic nerve—centre. The psychic nerve—centre of Wisdom is located in the heart. (Cf. pp. 217 ff.)

² Text: Shespa (pron. Shepd): 'Mind', 'Knower'; i.e. the mind in its knowing, or cognizing, functions.

³ Text: Sprosbrol (pron. Todal) : 'devoid of formative activity'; i. e. the mind in its natural, or primal, state. The mind in its unnatural state, that is to say, when incarnate in a human body, is, because of the driving force of the five senses, continuously in thought—formation activity. Its natural, or discantate, state is a state of quiescence, comparable to its condition in the highest of dhyāna (or deep meditation) when still united to a human body. The conscious recognition of the Clear Light induces an ecstatic condition of consciousness such as saints and mystics of the West have called Illumination.

⁴ Text: lung (pron. lung): 'vital—air', or 'vital —force', or 'psychic—force'.

⁵ Text: rtsa—gyas—gyon (pron. tsa—yay—yön) : 'right and left [psychic] nerves'; Skt. Pingāla—nādl (right [psychic] nerve) and Idä—nādi (left [psychic] nerve). (Cf. p. 215.)

1 'When this text first took form the reckoning of time was, apparently, yet primitive, mechanical time—keeping appliances being unknown. A similar condition still prevails in many parts of Tibet, where the period of a meal—time is frequently mentioned in old religious books—a period of from twenty minutes to half an hour in duration.

2 'The dying person should die fully awake and keenly conscious of the process of death; hence the pressing of the arteries. (Cf. p. xxix.)

3 'Skt. of text: dhutih (pron. duti meaning 'median—nerve', but lit. "tri—junction". V. S. Apte's Sanskrit—English Dictionary (Poona, 1890) gives dhüH as the only similar word, defined as "shaking*" or "moving", which, if applied to our text, may refer to the vibratory motion of the psychic force traversing the median—nerve as its channel.'—LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup.

'Duti may also mean "throwing away", or "throwing out", with reference to the outgoing of the consciousness in the process of death.'—Sj. A tal B i ha ri Ghosh.

¹ See pp. 18, 87*, 215. If non—distracted, and alertly conscious, at this psychological moment, the dying person will realize, through the power conferred by the reading of the Thödoi, the importance of holding the vital—force in the median—nerve till it passes out thence through the Aperture of Brahma.

² ‘After the expiration has ceased, the vital—force (lit. ‘inner—breath’) is thought to remain in the median—nerve so long as the heart continues to throb.

³ Text: rnam—shes (pron. nam—she) : Skt. vijftdna or, preferably, chaitanya : ‘conscious—principle’ or ‘object—knowing principle’.

⁴ Sometimes it may continue for seven days, but usually only for four or fivedays. The consciousness—principle, however, save in certain conditions of trance, such as *yogi for example, can induce, is not necessarily resident in the body all the while; normally it quits the body at the moment called death, holding a subtle magnetic—like relationship with the body until the state referred to in the text comes to an end. Only for adepts in yoga would the departure of the consciousness—principle be accomplished without break in the continuity of the stream of consciousness, that is to say, without the swoon state referred to.

¹ The full meaning implied is that not only should the person about to die diagnose the symptoms of death as they come, one by one, but that he should also, if able, recognize the Clear Light without being set face to face with it by some second person.

² Cf. the following instructions, from Ars MorUndi (fifteenth century), Compels ed. (p. 93) : * When any of likelihood shall die [i.e. is likely to die], then it is most necessary to have a special friend, the which will heartily help and pray for him, and therewith counsel the sick for the weal [i. e. health] of his soul.’

³ The three chief symptoms of death (which the text merely suggests by naming the first of them, it being taken for granted that the reader officiating will know the others and name them as they occur), with their symbolical counterpart, are as follows : (1) a bodily sensation of pressure, ‘earth sinking into water’; (a) a bodily sensation of clammy coldness as though the body were immersed in water, which gradually merges into that of feverish heat, ‘water sinking into fire’; (3) a feeling as though the body were being blown to atoms, * fire sinking into air¹. Each symptom is accompanied by visible external changes in the body, such as loss of control over facial muscles, loss of hearing, loss of sight, the breath coming in gasps just before the loss of consciousness, whereby lāmas trained in the science of death detect, one by one, the interdependent psychic phenomena culminating in the release of the Bardo body from its human—plane envelope. The translator held that the science of death, as expounded in this treatise, has been arrived at through the actual experiencing of death on the part of learned lāmas, who, when dying, have explained to their pupils the very process of death itself, in analytical and elaborate detail. (See p. 162².)

¹ The Tibetan of the text is here unusually concise. Literally rendered it is, 'will appear in whatever will subdue [for beneficial ends] whomsoever'. To subdue in this sense any sentient being of the human world, a form which will appeal religiously to that being is assumed. Thus, to appeal to a Shaivite devotee, the form of Shiva is assumed ; to a Buddhist, the form of the Buddha Shakya Muni; to a Christian, the form of Jesus; to a Moslem, the form of the Prophet; and so on for other religious devotees; and for all manners and conditions of mankind a form appropriate to the occasion—for example, for subduing children, parents, and vice versa; for shishyas, gurus, and vice versa; for common people, kings or rulers; and for kings, ministers of state.

¹Cf. the following, from The Book of the Craft of Dying, chap. V, in BodleianMS. 42 (circa fifteenth century), Comper's ed. (p. 35) : 'Also, if he that shall die have long time and space to be—think himself, and be not taken with hasty death, then may be read afore him, of them that be about him, devout histories and devout prayers, in the which he most delighted in when he was in heal [i. e. health].'

² Text: Shes—rig (*pron She—rig) is the intellect, the knowing or cognizing faculty.

³ Text: Chösnyid Kün—twbzang—po (pron. Ckō—nyid Küntu—eattg—po), Skt. Dharma—Dhātu Samanta—Bhadra, the embodiment of the Dharma—Kāya, the first state of Buddhahood. Our Block—Print text, in error here, gives for the All—Good (Kuntu—Zang—po, meaning 'All—Good Father') Kuntu—Zang—mo, which means 'All—Good Mother'. According to the Great Perfectionist School, the Father is that which appears, or phenomena, the Mother is that which is conscious of the phenomena. Again, Bliss is the Father, and the Voidness perceiving it, the Mother; the Radiance is the Father, and the Voidness perceiving it, the Mother; and, as in our text here, the intellect is the Father, the Voidness the Mother. The repetition of 'void' is to emphasize the importance of knowing the intellect to be in reality void (or of the nature of voidness), i. e. of the unborn, uncreated, unshaped Primordial.

¹ Text: Rig—pa, meaning ‘consciousness’ as distinct from the knowing faculty by which it cognizes or knows itself to be. Ordinarily, rig—pa and shes—rig are synonymous ; but in an abstruse philosophical treatise, as herein, rig—pa refers to the consciousness in its purest and most spiritual (i. e. supramundane) aspect, and shes—rig to the consciousness in that grosser aspect, not purely spiritual, whereby cognizance of phenomena is present.

In this part of the Bardo Thödol the psychological analysis of consciousness or mind is particularly abstruse. Wherever the text contains the word rig—pa we have rendered it as ‘consciousness’, and the word shes—rig ‘intellect’; or else, to suit the context, rig—pa as ‘consciousness’ and shes—rig as ‘consciousness of phenomena’, which is ‘intellect’.

² Text: Kun—tu—bzang—po : Skt. Samanta (* All’ or * Universal or ‘Complete’) B ha dra (‘Good’ or ‘Beneficent’). In this state, the experiencer and the thing experienced are inseparably one and the same, as, for example, the yellowness of gold cannot be separated from gold, nor saltiness from salt. For the normal human intellect this transcendental state is beyond comprehension.

³ From the union of the two states of mind, or consciousness, implied by the two terms rig—pa and shes—rig, and symbolized by the All—Good Father and the All—Good Mother, is born the state of the Dharma—Kāya the state of Perfect Enlightenment, Buddhahood. The Dharma—Kāya (Body of Truth’) symbolizes the purest and the highest state of being, a state of supramundane consciousness, devoid of all mental limitations or obscurations which arise from the contact of the primordial consciousness with matter.

⁴ As the Buddha—Samanta—Bhadra state is the state of the All—Good, so the Buddha—Amitābha state is the state of the Boundless Light; and, as the text implies, both are, in the last analysis, the same state, merely regarded from two viewpoints. In the first, is emphasized the mind of the All—Good, in the second, the enlightening Bodhi power, symbolized as Buddha Amitābha (the personification of the Wisdom faculty), Source of Life and Light

⁵ Text: dgongs—pa (pron. gong—pa) : ‘thoughts’ or ‘mind’, and, being in the honorific form, ‘divine mind’.

⁶ Realization of the JHon—Sangsära, which is the Voidness, the Unbecome, the Unborn, the Unmade, the Unformed, implies Buddhahood, Perfect Enlightenment—the state of the Divine Mind of the Buddha. Compare the following passage, from The Diamond [or Immutable] Sutra, with its Chinese commentary (trans, by W. Gemmell, London, 191a, pp. 17—18): * Every form or quality of phenomena is transient and illusive. When the mind realizes that the phenomena of life are not real phenomena, the Lord Buddha may then be clearly perceived/—(Chinese Annotation : ‘The spiritual Buddha must be realized within the mind, otherwise there can be no true perception of the Lord Buddha)

¹ If, when dying, one be familiar with this state, in virtue of previous spiritual (or yogic) training in the human world, and have power to win Buddhahood at this all—determining moment, the Wheel of Rebirth is stopped, and Liberation instantaneously achieved. But such spiritual efficiency is so very rare that the normal mental condition of the person dying is unequal to the supreme if A. of holding on to the state in which the Clear Light shines; and there follows a progressive descent into lower and lower states of the Bardo existence, and then rebirth. The simile of a needle balanced and set rolling on a thread is used by the lāmas to elucidate this condition. So long as the needle retains its balance, it remains on the thread. Eventually, however, the law of gravitation affects it, and it falls. In the realm of the Clear Light, similarly, the mentality of a person dying momentarily enjoys a condition of balance, or perfect equilibrium, and of oneness. Owing to unfamiliarity with such a state, which is an ecstatic state of non—ego, of subliminal consciousness, the consciousness—principle of the Average human being lacks the power to function in it; karmic propensities becloud the consciousness—principle with thoughts of personality, of individualized being, of dualism, and, losing equilibrium, the consciousness—principle falls away from the Clear Light. It is ideation of ego, of self, which prevents the realization of Nirvana (which is the ‘blowing out of the flame of selfish longing’); and so the Wheel of Life continues to turn.

¹ Immediately after the passing of the vital—force into the median—nerve, the person dying experiences the Clear Light in its primitive purity, the Dharma—Kāya unobscured; and, if unable to hold fast to that experience, next experiences the secondary Clear Light, having fallen to a lower state of the Bardo, wherein the Dharma—Kāya is dimmed by karm t c obscurations.

² Cf. p. xxx.

³ Text: shes-pa, rendered here as ‘mind’. The translator has added the following comment: ‘The vital—force, passing from the navel psychic—nerve centre) and the principle of consciousness, passing from the brain psychic—nerve centre, unite in the heart psychic—nerve centre, and in departing thence from the body, normally through the Aperture of Brāhma, produce in the dying person a state of ecstasy of the greatest intensity. The succeeding stage is less intense. In the first, or primary, stage, is experienced the Primary Clear Light, in the second stage, the Secondary Clear Light. A ball set bounding reaches its greatest height at the first bound ; the second bound is lower, and each succeeding bound is still lower until the ball comes to rest. Similarly is it with the consciousness—principle at the death of a human body. Its first spiritual bound, directly upon quitting the earth—plane body, is the highest; the next is lower. Finally, the force of karma having spent itself in the after—death state, the consciousness—principle comes to rest, a womb is entered, and then comes rebirth in this world/

⁴ Text: Gshin—rje (pron. Shin—jt) : ‘Lord of Death’; but the plural form is allowable and preferable here.

¹ Cf. the following, from The Craft to Know Well to Dü, chap. IV, Comper's ed. (p. 73) : * And after he [the person dying] ought to require the apostles, the martyrs, the confessors and the virgins, and in special all the saints that he most loved ever.'

² The favourite deity of the deceased is the tutelary (Tib. yi-dam), usually one of the Buddhas or Bodhisattvas, of whom Chenraze is the most popular.

³ Text: Jo—vo—thugs—rje—chen—po (pron. Jo—wo—thu—ji—chen—po) : * Great Compassionate Lord', synonymous with Tib. Spyan—ras—gsigs (pron. Chin—rā—zi) : Skt. A valokiteshvara.

⁴ A person may have heard a detailed description of the art of swimming and yet never have tried to swim. Suddenly thrown into water he finds himself unable to swim. So with those who have been taught the theory of how to act in the time of death and have not applied, through yogic practices, the theory : they cannot maintain unbroken continuity of consciousness; they grow bewildered at the changed conditions ; and fail to progress or to take advantage of the opportunity offered by death, unless upheld and directed by a living guru. Even with all that a guru can do, they ordinarily, because of bad karma, fail to recognize the Bardo as such.

¹ Text: dag—pahi—sgyu—lus (pron. tag—pay—gyu—lü) : ⁱ pure (or shining) illusorybody’: Skt. máyá—rüpa. This is the ethereal counterpart of the physical body of the earth—plane, the * astral—body’ of Theosophy.

² With the departure of the consciousness—principle from the human body there come a psychic thrill which gives way to a state of lucidity.

‘Text: Chosnyid—ma—bu : Skt. Dharma Mātri Putra : * Mother and Offspring Reality (or Truth)/ The Offspring—Truth is that realized in this world through practising deep meditation (Skt. dhyātia). The Mother—Truth is the Primal or Fundamental Truth, experienced only after death whilst the Knower is in the Bardo state of equilibrium, ere harmic propensities have erupted into activity. What a photograph is compared to the object photographed, the Offspring—Reality is to the Mother—Reality.

⁴ Lit., ‘karma is unable to turn the mouth or head’, the figure implied being that of a rider controlling a horse with a bridle and bit. In the Tantra of the Great Liberation, there is this similar passage : ‘The man blinded by the darkness of ignorance, the fool caught in the meshes of his actions, and the illiterate man, by listening to this Great Tantra, are released from the bonds of karma * (cf. Tantra of the Great Liberation, line 905, as edited by Arthur Avalon, London, 1913, P— 359).

¹ Text: yid—kyi—lūs (pron. yid—kyi—lūi), ‘mental—body’, ‘desire—body’, or ‘thought—body’.

² Cf. pp. 9a8, 95a, 96l.

³ The references are (i) to the share of food being set aside for the deceased during the funeral rites; (2) to his corpse being prepared for the shroud; (3) to his bed or sleeping-place.

¹ Text: Skye—gnas Bardo (pron. Kyg—nay Bardo) : ‘Intermediate State’, or 4 State of Uncertainty, of the place of birth (or while in the womb) K

² Text: Rmi—lam Bardo (pron. UUlam Bardó) : ‘Intermediate State’, or * State of Uncertainty, [during the experiencing] of the dream—state’.

³ Text: Ting—ngt—hzin Bsam—gtant Bardo (pron. Tin—ge—sin Sam—tarn Bardo): ‘Intermediate State, or * State of Uncertainty, [during the experiencing] of Dyghāna (Meditation) in Samadhi (Ecstatic equilibrium)’.

⁴ Text: Hchi—khahi Bardo (pron. Chi—khai Bardo) ‘Intermediate State’, or ‘State of Uncertainty, of the dying moment (or moment of death)’.

⁵ Text: Chös—nyid Bardo (pron. Chö—nyid Bardo) : ‘Intermediate State’, or ‘State of Uncertainty, [during the experiencing] of Reality’.

⁶ Text: Lugs—hbyung Srid—pahi Bardo (pron. Lu—jung Sid—pai Bardo) : ‘Intermediate State % or ‘State of Uncertainty, in the inverse process of sangsāric (worldly) existence’—the state wherein the Knower is seeking rebirth.

¹Text: Hkhor—va (pron. Khor—wa) : ‘a thing whirling round ’; ‘whirligig’ :Skt. Sangsāra (or Samsāra).

²That is, the Buddha, the Dharma, the Sangha.

¹).

⁴Text: rang—snang (pron. rang—nang) i ‘one’s own [mental] visions (orthought—forms}.’

¹Text: bag—chags yid—lüs (pron. bag—chah yid—lti). yid—lüs : ‘mind—body’ or ‘thought—body’; bag—chags: ‘habit’, ‘propensities’ (born of sangsáric or worldly existence).

¹That is to say, phenomena, or phenomenal experiences as experienced when in the human world, will be experienced in quite another way in the Bardo world, so that to one just dead they will seem to be in revolution or confusion; hence the warning to the deceased, who must accustom himself to the after—death state as a babe must accustom itself after birth to our world.

²At this point, where the marvellous Bardo visions begin to dawn, the student in attempting to rationalize them should ever keep in mind that this treatise is essentially esoteric, being in most parts, especially from here onwards, allegorical and symbolical of psychic experiences in the after—death state.

¹ Esoterically, this is the Dharma—Dhātu.

⁴ Text: Rnampar—Snang—mad (pron. Nam—par—Nang—zad) \ Skt. Vairochana the Dhyānī Buddha of the Centre (or Central Realm). Vairochana literally means, ‘in shapes making visible’; hence he is the Manifester of Phenomena, or the Noumena. The wheel he holds symbolizes sovereign power. His title Bhagavān (applied to many other of the deities to follow hereinafter), meaning ‘One Possessed of Dominion’¹ (or ‘of the Six Powers’), or ‘The Victorious*’, qualifies him as being a Buddha, i. e. One who has conquered, or has dominion over, sangsāric, or worldly, existence.

As the Central Dhyānī Buddha, Vairochana is the highest path to Enlightenment of the Esoteric School. Like a Central Sun, surrounded by the four Dhyānī Buddhas of the four cardinal directions, who dawn on the four succeeding days, he symbolizes the One Truth surrounded by its four constituents or elements. As the source of all organic life, in him all things visible and invisible have their consummation and absorption.

For general references to the deities of the Bardo Thödol, see L. A. Waddell, The Buddhism of Tibet or Lāmaisnt (London, 1895); and A. Getty, The Gods of Northern Buddhism (Oxford, 19.4).

¹ Text: Nammkh—ah—dvyinga—kyi—dvang—phyug—ma (pron. Nam—kha—ing—kya—wang—cliug—nta) : * Sovereign Lady of the Space of Heaven': Skt. Ākāśa Dhātti fshvari. The Mother is the female principle of the universe; the Father, Vairochana, the seed of all that is.

² Here the Block—Print reads : * It is the aggregate of consciousness (Rnatn—par Shts—fahi— pro. Nam—par skt Vijñūna SkandJia) resolved into its primordial state which is the blue light', In our MS. the aggregate of consciousness shines as a white light in relationship with Vajra—Sattva, on the Second Day (see p. 109).

³ 'Here, as in parallel passages following, the chief deity personifies in himself the female as well as the male principle of nature, and hence is called the Father—Mother—depicted, as described by the text, in appropriate symbolic colours, on the corresponding illuminated folio of our MS., as the Divine Father and the Divine Mother in union (i.e. in divine at—one—ment).

⁴ Text: De-bshing-shegs-pa pron. De—shings/teg—pa): Skt. Tat hāgala, meaning 'fHc] who hath gone that same way', i.e. One who hath reached the Goal (Nirvana)— a Buddha.

¹ Text: hphrang (prom htang) : ‘narrow passage’, ‘ambush’.

² ‘Cf. the following instructions to the dying person and the prayer from Thi Craft to Know Will to Dit, chap. IV, Comper’s ed. (p. 73) : ‘He ought afterwards, if he may, to call on the holy angels, in saying: “Ye spirits of Heaven, Angels much glorious, I beseech you that ye will be assistant [i.e. present] with me that now beginneth to depart, and that ye deliver me mightily from the awaits and fallacies of mine adversaries; and that it please you to receive my soul into your company. The principal, my leader and my good angel, which by our Lord art deputed to be my warder and keeper, I pray and require thee that thou now aid and help me.”’

³ Text: Stug—po—bkod—pahi ehing—khams (pron. Tug—po—kod—pai shing—kham) : ‘Thickly—formed* or ‘Densely—packed Realm’, i.e. the seed of all universal forces and things are densely packed together therein; also called in Tibetan ¹, the realm whence there is no fall, the state leading into Nirvana ; it is pre—eminently the realm of the Buddhas.

² The dorje is the lámate sceptre, a type of the thunderbolt of Indra (Jupiter).

³ This is the Sanskrit form as incorporated in our Tibetan text. Here the Block—Print, evidently in error, contains, in Tibetan, Sangs—rgyas—spyan—ma (pron. Sang—yay Chan—ma), meaning 'She of the Buddha Eye', who, in our manuscript text, comes with Ratna—Sambhava on the Third Day. Mämakl is also one of the 108 names given to Dölma (Skt. Tārā), the national goddess of Tibet. (See p. 116⁸.) In the Dharma Samgraha it is said that there are four DevTs, namely, Rochan!, Mämakl, Pändurä, and Tära.

⁴ Text: Sahi—snying—po (pron. Sayi—nying—po) : Skt. Kshitigarhha : * Womb (or Matrix) of the Earth.'

⁵ Text: Byams—pa (pron. Cham—pa) : Skt. Maitreya 'Love'; the Buddha to come, who will reform mankind through the power of divine love.

⁶ Lasema and Pushpema are corrupt Sanskrit forms incorporated in our manuscript. Their Tibetan equivalents are, respectively, Sgeg—mo—ma (Skt. Låsyå), meaning 'Belle' (or 'Dallying One'), and Me—tog—ma (Skt. Pushpā), ¹ She who offers (or holds) Blossoms'. Pushpā, depicted holding a blossom in her hand, is a personification of blossoms. Låsyå, the Belle, depicted holding a mirror in a coquettish attitude, personifies beauty.

¹ Text: Ritam-par—shes—pahi—phung-po (pron. Nam-par—she—pay—phung—po), aggregate of consciousness—principle', the Knower. The Block—Print contains, in place of this, Gsugs—hyi—phung—po (pron. Zu—kyi—p/mng—po), 'i aggregate of the body' or 'Bodily—aggregate'.

² See p. i06.

³ The rays of divine grace are a hook of salvation to catch hold of the deceased and drag him away from the dangers of the Bardo. Sometimes each ray is thought of as ending in a hook, just as each ray emanating from the sun—god Ra, and descending as a grace ray upon a devotee, is depicted in ancient temples of Egypt as ending in a hand. Similarly, the Christian thinks of the saving grace of God.

⁴ The deceased is here thought of, perhaps, as being able to see his people on earth and as liable to anger should he see them disputing over the division of his property, or if he perceives avarice on the part of the lāma conducting the funeral rites. But the prohibition touching anger is essentially yogic, yogis of all religions recognizing that anger prevents spiritual progress; and it parallels the moral teaching against giving way to anger contained in the ancient Egyptian Precepts of Ptah—hotep.

¹ Text: Rinchn—hbyung—ldan (pron. Rinchn—Jung—dan) :
Skt. Ratna—Sambhava, i. e. 'Born of a Jewel'. He is the Beautifier, whence comes all that is precious; a personified attribute of the Buddha.

¹ Text: Saug-srgyas-spyaii-nia (pron. Sang-yay Chan-ma): 'She of the Buddha Eye (or Eyes).'

² Text: Nant-mkhahi-snying-po (pron. Nam-khai-nying-po) : Skt. Ākāśha-Garbha, 'Womb (or Matrix) of the Sky'.

³ Text: Kwtu-bzang-po (pron. Kiintu-zang-po) : Skt. Samanta-Bhadra, 'All-Good'. This is not the Ādi-Buddha Samanta-Bhadra (cf. p. 95s), but the spiritual son of the Dhyānī Buddha Vairochana.

⁴ Text: Mahlaima, 'She Who Holds (or Bears) the Rosaryf; and Dhnptma, 'She Who Holds (or Bears) the Incense'. These are corrupt forms, hybrids of Sanskrit and Tibetan, their Sanskrit equivalents being Māla and Dhupa, and their Tibetan equivalents Hphnttg-ba-ma (pron. Phreng-ba-tna) and Bdug-spös-ma (pron. Dng-po-wa), The colour of these goddesses, corresponding to that of the earth—light, is yellow.

¹ Text: Snang—va—mthah—yas (pron. Nang—wa—tha—yay): $it. A $tütñbha 'Boundless (or Incomprehensible) Light'. As an embodiment of one of the Buddha—attributes or Wisdoms, the All—discriminating Wisdom, Amitābha personifies life eternal.

² Text: Gös—dkar—mo (pron. Gö—kar—mo), * She—in—White—Raiment'.

³ Text: Spyaii—ras—gtigs (pron. Chtn—rä—zi) i Skt. Avahkiteshvara, * Down—Looking One', the embodiment of mercy or compassion. The Dalai LāMas are believed to be his incarnations; Amitābha, with whom he here dwells, is his spiritual father, whose incarnate representatives are the Tashi LāMas. He is often depicted with eleven heads and a thousand arms, each with an eye in the palm—as 'The Great Pitier'—his thousand arms and eyes appropriately representing him as ever on the outlook to discover distress and to succour the troubled. In China, Avalokiteshvara becomes the Great Goddess of Mercy Kwanyin, represented by a female figure bearing a child in her arms.

⁴ Text: Hjam—dpal (pron. Jam—pal): Skt. Mañjusñi, 'Of Gentle Glory. A fuller Tibetan form is Hjtm—dpal—dvyangs (pron. Jam—pal—yang) : Skt. Man—jughosha, * Glorious Gentle—Voiced One \ He is * The God of Mystic Wisdom', the Buddhist Apollo, commonly depicted with the flaming sword of light held aloft in his right hand and the lotus—supported Pook of Wisdom, the Prajñā—Pāramiä, held in his left.

⁵ Text: Ghir—dhi—nm and Äloke, corrupted from Skt. Gitä, 'Song'^T, and A oka, 'Light': Tib. Glu—nta (pron. Lu—nta) and Snang—gsal—ma (pron. Kangsal—ma). Gitä, commonly represented holding a lyre, personifies (or symbolizes) music and song, and Äloka, holding a lamp, personifies (or symbolizes) light. Related to the element fire, as herein, their colour is red.

¹ Ut. 'Of Liberation there will be no time.' Once the deceased become* a preta, or unhappy ghost, the after—death attainment of Nirvana is, normally, no longer possible; he must then wait for the opportunity afforded by rebirth in the human world, when his Preta—loka existence has ended.

¹ Text: Don—yod—grnb—pa (pron. Don—yöd—iub—pa) : Skt.
A wogha—Siddhi; ‘Almighty Conqueror.’

1 'That is, a dorje with four heads. It symbolizes equilibrium, immutability, and almighty power.

2 Text: shang—shang, refers to an order of creatures like the fabulous harpies of classical mythology, having human form from the waist upwards, and from the waist downwards the form of a bird ; but whereas the Greek harpies were female, these are of both sexes. That a race of such harpies exists in the world somewhere is a popular belief among Tibetans.

3 Text: Sgrol—ma (pron. Döl—ma): Dölma (Skt. Târn) = *Saviouress'. She is the divine consort of Avalokiteshvara. There are now two recognized forms of this goddess : the Green Dölma, as worshipped in Tibet, and the White Dölma, as worshipped chiefly in China and Mongolia. The royal Nepalese princess who became the wife of the first Buddhist king of Tibet is believed to have been an incarnation of the Green Dölma, and his wife from the Imperial House of China an incarnation of the White Dölma. (See p. 74.) The late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup told me that, because Tibetans saw the likeness of Queen Victoria on English coins and recognized it as being that of Dölma, there developed throughout Tibet during the Victorian Era a belief that Dölma had come back to birth again to rule the world in the person of the Great Queen of England ; and that, owing to this belief, the British representatives of the Queen then met with an unusually friendly reception in their negotiations with Lhasa, although probably unaware of the origin of the friendship.

4 Text: Phyag—na—rdorjt (pron. Chag—na—dorje): 'Bearing the Dorjt in hand':Skt. Vajra—päni.

5 Text: Sgrib—pa—rnam—stl (pron. Dtb—pa—nam—sel)'. 'Clearer of Obscurations':Skt. Dipana, also Dipt kä

6 Skt.—Tib. hybrid of text. Corresponding Tib., Dri—chha—ma (Skt Gandha), She Spraying Perfume', one of the eight mother goddesses {Matris) of the Hindu pantheon. She is depicted holding a shell—vase of perfume (än).

7 Skt.—Tib. hybrid of text. Corresponding Tib., Zhal—mas—nta (pron. Shal—za—ma)j'She Holding Sweetmeats '. Although a goddess like Gandhema, Nidhema (Skt. Naivedya) cannot be included in the formal list of eight Matris, the eight already having been named in our text. Both goddesses are green in colour, like the light of the All —Performing Wisdom.

¹ Here, as in the previous and following paragraph, the jealousy referred to is the karmic propensities of jealousy existing as part of the content of the consciousness (or subconsciousness) of the deceased; and, erupting on this the Fifth Day of the Bardo existence, they produce their corresponding ‘astral’ hallucinations.

² ‘Quarrelling and warfare are the chief passions of a being born as an asuru in the Asura—loka.

¹ ‘The Block—Print has ‘Realm of Perfected Good Deeds (or ‘Actions”)’; and this is the more correct form.

¹ The philosophically descriptive Tibetan terms (which are not contained in our text) for these Four Wisdoms are: (i) Snang—Stong (pron. Nang—Tong), * Phenomena and Voidness*; (a) Gsal—Stong (pron. Sal—Tong), ‘Radiance and Voidness’; (3) Bde—Stong (pron. De—Tong), Bliss and Voidness’; (4) Rig—Stong (pron. Rig—Tong), ‘Consciousness and Voidness’.

They correspond to the four stages of dhyāna which arise in the same order. They probably also correspond, but in a less exact manner, to the Four Wisdoms: the Mirror—like Wisdom, the Wisdom of Equality, the All—Discriminating: Wisdom, and the All—Performing Wisdom.

‘Dhyāna consists of progressive mental states: analysis (Skt. vitarka), reflection (Skt. vichara), fondness (Skt. prttt), bliss (Skt. ānanda), and concentration (Skt. ekagrata). In the first stage oi dhyāna, the devotee asks himself, " What is this body? Is it lasting; is it the thing to be saved ? " and decides that to cling to an impermanent, corruptible bodily form, such as he thereby realizes it to be, is not desirable. Similarly, having gained knowledge of the nature of Form, he analyses and reflects upon Touch, Feeling, Volition, Cognition, and Desire ; and, finding that Mind is the apparent reality, arrives at ordinary concentration.

‘In the second stage of dhyāna, reflection only is employed; in other words, reflection transcends the lower mental process called analysis. In the third stage, reflection gives way to a blissful state of consciousness ; and this bliss, being at first apparently a physical sensation, merges into pure ecstasy, in the fourth stage. In the fifth stage, the sensation of ecstasy, although always present in a suppressed or secondary condition, gives way to complete concentration.’—LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup.

² Heretofore each of the chief deities has been called Bhagavān (‘The Victorious’), but, herein, Buddha (‘The Enlightened1) is the designation. The text contains Tib. Sangs—rgyas (pron. Sang—yay) = Skt. Buddha: Sangs

¹ Between this bar and the bar in the sentence following is contained the translation of the Tibetan text on the upper folio (35a) of our Frontispiece.

² Text: Rnam—par—rgyal—Va (pron. Natn—par—gyal—wa) : Skt Vijaya : * Victorious [One]', the Door—keeper of the East.

³ Text: Gshin—rje—gshed—po (pron. Shin—je—shed—po) Skt. Ya män tak a: 'Destroyer of Yama (Death)', the Door—keeper of the South, a form of Shiva, and the wrathful aspect of Avalokiteshvara. He, as a Wrathful Deity, personifies one of the ten forms of Anger (Tib. ICro—bo— pron. Vo—wo: Skt. Krodha).

⁴ Text: Rta—mgrin—rgyal—po (pron. Tarn din—gyal—po): Skt. Hayagriva: 'Horse—necked King, the Door—keeper of the West.

⁵ Text: Bdud—rtsi—hkhyil—va (pron. Du—tsi—khyil—wa): Skt. Amrita—Dhāra '[He who is the] Urn of Nectar', whose divine function is to transmute all things into nectar (in the esoteric sense of Tantric Yoga), amrita meaning 'nectar' exoterically, and esoterically, 'voidness' He is the Door—keeper of the North.

⁶ Text: Chags—kyu—nta (pron. Chak—yu—ma): Skt. Ankushā: She holding the Goad the shahti, or female counterpart, of Vijaya.

⁷ Text: Zhags—pa—ma (pron. Zhag—pa—ma): Skt. Pāshadhari: 'She holding the Noose', the shakti of Yamāntaka.

⁸ Text: Lghags—sgrog—ma (pron. Cha—dog—nta) : Skt. Vajrashringkhalā : 'She holding the Chain', the shakti of Hayagriva.

⁹ Text: Dtil—bu—ma (pron. Til—bu—ma): Skt. Kinkini—Dhart: She holding the Bell, the shakti of Amrita—Dhāra.

All the Door—keepers and their shaktis possess occult significance in relation to the four directions and to the manéala (or conclave of deities) to which they belong. As Tantric faith—guarding deities (Tib. Ch'os—skyoh : Skt. Dharntapāla) they rank with Bodhisattvas. They symbolize, too, the four tranquil or peaceful methods employed by Divine Beings for the salvation of sentient creatures (of whom mankind are the highest), which are : Compassion, Fondness, Love, and Stern Justice.

‘awakened [from sleep of stupidity]’ + rgyas = developed fully [in all attributes of perfection (or moral virtues)].

¹ Text: Dvang—po—rgya—byin (pron. Wang—po—gya~jin) : ‘Powerful One of a Hundred Sacrifices’: Skt. Shata—Kratu a name of Indra (‘ [One of] Supreme Power’).

² Text: Thag—beang—ris (pron. Thag—zang—ree) : ‘[He of] Strong Texture’ (Skt. Virāchāra) : a name referring either to the bodily strength of, or else to the coat of mail worn by, this Lord of the Asuru—loka, the world wherein warfare is the predominant passion of existence.

³Text: Chös—kyt—rgyal—po (pron. Cho—kyi—gyal—pd) : Skt. Dharnta—Rāja.

⁴); though there may be, as in the instance of the PrajHä—Pāramitā (often called the Mother) which this deity holds, some symbolic representation of a shakti. This is, apparently, a doctrine of universal dualism. In the final analysis, however, all pairs of opposites being viewed as having a Single Source—in the Voidness of the Dharma—Kāya—the apparent dualism becomes monism.

¹According to the esotericism of Northern Buddhism, man is, in the sense implied by the mystical philosophies of ancient Egypt and Greece, the microcosm of the macrocosm.

²Text: dkyil—hkkhor (pron. kyil—kkor): Skt. matizala, i. e. conclave of deities.* The Tutelary Deities, too, in the last analysis, are the visualizations of the person believing in them. The Demchok Tantra says that the ‘Devatās are but symbols representing the various things which occur on the Path, such as the helpful impulses and the stages attained by their means’; and that ‘should doubts arise as to the divinity of these Devatās, one should say “The Dākinī is only the recollection of the body” and remember that the deities constitute the Path’ (cf. A. Avalon, Tantrik Taxis, London, 1919, vii. 41).

¹ Each of these mystical radiances symbolizes the particular Bodhic, or Wisdom, quality of the Buddha whence it shines. In the Tibetan of our text there is here such fervency in the poetical description of the light*paths that the translator, in order to render something of the beauty of the original language, essayed several renderings, of which the actual rendering is the outcome.

“ The mood of non— thought—formation’ is attained in samādhi—yoga. This state, regarded as the primordial state of Mind, is illustrated by the following figure: So long as a man afloat on a river passively submits to the current, he is carried along smoothly; but if he attempts to grasp an object fixed in the water the tranquillity of his motion is broken. Similarly, thought—formation arrests the natural flow of the mind.

¹ In the transcendental state of the Illumination of Buddhahood, on the Inner, or Secret, Path, into Vajra—Sattva merge, in at—one—ment, all the Peaceful and Wrathful Deities of the greater mam/a/a described by our text; in all, one—hundred and ten,—forty—two in the heart—centre, ten in the throat—centre, and fifty—eight in the brain—centre. (Cf. pp. 217—8.)

² There are irreconcilable differences between the colours assigned to these light—paths in the Block—Print (35b) and in our MS. The Block—Print gives them as follows: white, from the devas ; red, from the asuras; blue, from human beings; green, from the brutes; yellow, from the prgts; smoke—coloured from Hell. According to the translator, the colours should correspond to the colour of the Buddha of each oka, thus : dtva, white; asura, green ; human, yellow; brute, blue; preta, red; Hell, smoke—coloured or black. Therefore, the Block—Print is wrong in all save the first and last; and the MS. is wrong in assigning dull blue to the human and black or smoke—coloured to the animal world. On folio 23, the MS. correctly assigns yellow to the human world light—path. The necessary corrections have been made in the translation herein and in the corresponding passages in folio 46 following.

¹ Text: Bdt—var—gshegs—pa (pron. De—war—sheg—pa) i Skt. Sugaia: literally meaning * Those who have passed into Happiness (or attained Nirvana) ‘—i.e. Buddhas’

² The five virulent poisons, which, like drugs, enslave and bind mankind to the sufferings of existence within the confines of the Six Lokas, are: lust, hatred, stupidity, pride or egoism, and jealousy.

³ Text: rang (self) + sNang (Might’): ‘self—light’ or ‘inner—light’, i.e. thoughts or ideas appearing in the radiance of the consciousness—principle. The Bardo state is the after—death dream state following the waking or Hving—on—earth state, as explained in our Introduction (pp. 28 if.); and the whole aim of the Bardo ThÖdol teaching is to awaken the Dreamer to Reality—to a supramundane state of consciousness, to an annihilation of all bonds of sangsāric existence, to Perfect Enlightenment, Buddhahood.

1). To tread this Path successfully, the Neophyte must be instructed by the Hierophant.

² This Truth is that there is no reality behind any of the phenomena of the Bardo plane, save the illusions stored up in one's own mind as accretions from sangsāric experiences. Recognition of this automatically gives Liberation.

³ As the gross physical atoms of a life—deserted human—plane body gradually separate and go to their appropriate places, some as gases, some as fluids, some as solids, so on the after—death plane there comes about a gradual dispersion of the psychic or mental atoms of the Bardo thought—body, each propensity— directed by karmic affinity—inevitably going to that environment most congenial to it. Hence, as our text suggests, the brute—passion stupidity has a natural tendency to gravitate to the brute kingdom and become embodied therein as a disintegrated part of the mentality of the deceased. (See pp. 44 ff.)

1M.)

² The Pākīns (Tib. Mkhah—hgro—ma [or * Sky—goer >] : Skt Dākinī), fairy—like goddesses possessing peculiar occult powers for good or for evil, are, also, purely Tantric; and, as such, they are invoked in most of the chief rituals of Northern Buddhism. (See p. 100.)

³ Esoterically, the skull (which is human), and the blood (also human) filling it, signify, in one sense, renunciation of human life, the giving up of the Sangsāra self—immolation on the cross of the world ; and in the mass—ritual of Lāmaism there are resemblances between the blood (symbolized by a red fluid) in the skull and the wine (as blood) in the chalice of the Christian Communion.

⁴ A mudrā is a mystic sign made by posturing the hand and fingers or the body. Some mudrās are used as signs of recognition by members of occult fraternities, after the manner of the Masonic hand—clasp. Others, chiefly employed by yogis as bodily postures, short—circuit or otherwise change the magnetic currents of the body. Placing the tip of one finger against the tip of another in mudrā controls, likewise, the bodily forces, or life—currents. The mudrā of fascination is of this last sort, being made (with the right hand) by the second finger touching the thumb, the index—finger and the little finger held upright, and the third finger folded in the palm of the hand.

¹See p. 1351.

²Herein the dâkinis are represented like various orders of fairy—like beings, some dwelling in one place, some in another. The eight places of cremation are the eight known to Hindu mythology ; the three abodes are the heart—centre, the throat—centre, and the brain—centre, over which, esoterically speaking, certain dâkinis (as the personification of the psychic forces resident in each centre) preside, just as other dâkinis preside over the holy—places and places of pilgrimage.

³ That is, hides of râkshasas, an order of giant demoniacal beings having human form and possessed of certain siddhys (i. e. supernormal powers).

⁴ Tibetan Jamas, in chanting their rituals, employ seven (or eight) sorts of musical instruments: big drums, cymbals (commonly of brass), conch—shells, bells (like the handbells used in the Christian Mass Service), timbrels, small clarionets (sounding like Highland bagpipes), big trumpets, and human thighbone trumpets. Although the combined sounds of these instruments are far from being melodious, the lâtnas maintain that they psychically produce in the devotee an attitude of deep veneration and faith, because they are the counterparts of the natural sounds which one's own body is heard producing when the fingers are put in the ears to shut out external sounds. Stopping the ears thus, there are heard a thudding sound, like that of a big drum being beaten; a clashing sound, as of cymbals ; a soughing sound, as of a wind moving through a forest—as when a conch—shell is blown ; a ringing as of bells ; a sharp tapping sound, as when a timbrel is used ; a moaning sound, like that of a clarionet; a bass moaning sound, as if made with a big trumpet; and a shriller sound, as of a thigh—bone trumpet.

Not only is this interesting as a theory of Tibetan sacred music, but it gives the clue to the esoteric interpretation of the symbolical natural sounds of Truth (referred to in the second paragraph following, and elsewhere in our text), which are said to be, or to proceed from, the intellectual faculties within the human mentality.

¹That is, the Wisdom which is born simultaneously with the achievement of Recognition ; the Simultaneously—Born Wisdom.

² See Addenda, pp. 220—2.

¹ Cf. p. 126

². The deceased, having by now fallen to lower and lower stages of the Bardo, looks to the heaven—worlds (which are worlds of embodiment within the Sangsāra) rather than to Nirvana (which is non—Sangsāric) as a place of refuge. Although, theoretically, Nirvana is ever realizable from any stage of the Bardo, practically, for the ordinary devotee, it is not, meritorious karma being inadequate; hence the lāma or reader officiating aims at making the best of the situation in which, it is assumed, the deceased inevitably finds himself.

¹ Up to this time, the fifty—two Peaceful and Knowledge—Holding Deities, emanations from the heart and throat psychic—centres of the Bardo—body of the deceased, have dawned. The Wrathful Deities now about to dawn issue from the brain psychic—centre ; they are the excited, or wrathful, reflex forms of the Peaceful Deities (who, when contrasted with their wrathful aspects, include the Knowledge—Holding Deities). (See p. 85^s and Addenda, pp. 217—9.)

¹The fear, terror, and awe (or fascination)—on the part of the deceased on beholding the deities—arise only in the case of the ordinary devotee, who, as the text explains, has not had adequate yogic training, ere death, to enable him to recognize the Bardo as such, immediately upon dying, and pass beyond it. For the adept in yoga, who can take the Bardo ‘by the forelock’, as the text puts it (p. 100), mastering Death, and who knows that all apparitional appearances are unreal and powerless, both in this world and in all other worlds, there is no Bardo to experience; his goal is either an immediate and conscious rebirth among men or in one of the paradise realms, or, if he be really ripened—which would be an exceedingly rare circumstance—Nirvana.

²No sooner does one radiance cease than another dawns; the deceased not having a moment of distraction, his intellect becomes concentratedly (i.e. one—pointedly) alert.

³The blood symbolizes sangsāric existence; the blood—drinking, the thirsting for, the drinking of, and the quenching of the thirst for, sangsāric existence. For the devotee who—even at this stage—can be made to realize that these deities are thus but the kartnic personifications of his own propensities, born from having lived and drunken life, and who has, in addition, the supreme power to face them unwaveringly (as in Bulwer Lytton’s Zanoni the Neophyte to succeed must face the ‘Dweller on the Threshold’), meeting them like old acquaintances, and then losing his personality in them, enlightenment as to the true nature of sangsāric existence dawns, and, with it, the All—Perfect Illumination called Buddhahood.

¹ The belief, prevalent among almost all peoples since immemorial time, that unusual phenomena commonly mark the death (as the birth) and funeral of a great hero or saint, also prevails among the Tibetans; and the lāmas hold that such phenomena have a purely rational explanation, such as our text herein suggests. Furthermore, the lāmas maintain that, if a reputed saint be really a saint, among the charred bones from his funeral pyre there will be found some shaped into beautiful forms like images, and that small pearl—like (or, as the text has it, seed—like) nodules will appear in the ashes of the bones cremated.

¹That is to say, the esoteric doctrines being realizable—because based on Truth itself—one who follows or even reverences them is, thereby, automatically brought into rapport with very definite psychic forces.

²That is to say, those devotees who have practised, in a thoroughly scientific manner, under a competent guru, the intonation of certain sacred mantras called essence mantras. Examples of such mantras are: öm Mani PadmtHum (‘Hail to the Jewel in the Lotus V or * Hail to Him Who is the Jewel in the Lotus 1’); Öm Wagi Short Müm (‘Hail to the Lord of Speech ! Müm ’); ÖmVajra Pant Hum (* Hail to the Holder of the Dorje I’); the three essence mantras of * The Three Protectors’ of Lāmaism ; the first being the essence mantra of the Bodhisattva Chenraze (Skt. Avalokita \ ¹ ‘The Seer with keen eyes’, The Great Pitier; the second, that of the Bodhisattva Jam paly ang (Skt. Mahjughosha), ‘The God of Mystic Wisdom’; and the third, that of the Bodhisattva Chakdor (Skt. Vajra—Pant), ‘The Wielder of the Thunderbolt’.

¹ Difficult indeed is it to obtain Liberation through intellectual knowledge alone ;through faith, Liberation is easily obtained.’

^{2*} The Great Perfection’ refers to the fundamental doctrine concerning thegaining of Perfection or Buddhahood as taught by the School of Guru PadmaSambhava. ‘The Great Symbol (Tib. Chhag—chhen : SkU Mahā Mudra) ‘refersto an ancient Indian system of yoga, related to the same School, but moreespecially practised nowadays by the followers of the semi—reformed Kargyutpasect, founded in the latter half of the eleventh century a. d. by the learnedTibetan yogi Marpa, who, having sojourned in India as the disciple of the pandit Atisha and of Naropa, Atisha’s disciple, introduced the Great Symbol into Tibet.Milarepa, the most beloved of all Tibetan yogis, who was Marpa’s successor,developed the practice of the Great Symbol and made it the foundation teachingof the Sect. (See pp. 78—9.)

³ If there be recognition of Reality when it first dawns, i. e. if the Dreamer in sangsāric existence be awakened into the divine state of the S am b/toga—Kāya during the Chönyid Bardo, the normal cycle of rebirth is broken; and the Awakened One returns voluntarily and fully conscious to the human world as a Divine Incarnation, to work for the uplifting of mankind. If recognition be delayed till the Sidpa Bardo, and the Nirmāna—Kāya be attained, that is but a partial awakening, not an unclouded realization of Reality, the Sidpa Bardo being a much lower plane than the Chönyid Bardo ; but even then there will be won the great boon of spiritually enlightened birth on one of the higher planes— dtva—loka, asura—ioka, or the human—/oa—and, upon being born anew in the human world, the devotee will take up, in virtue of acquired propensities gained in the previous earth—life, the study of the mystic mantrayāna doctrines and yoglc practices from the point where it was broken off by death—this being the continuity of karma,

¹ Text: Btags—grol (pron. Tah—dol), a small Tibetan work, consisting wholly of mantras, used as an accompaniment to the Bardo Thödol. If the deceased dies knowing the Tahdol mantras, they, being powerful talismans, give him safe passage through the Bardo and a happy rebirth. Very often a copy of the Tahdol (or perhaps merely some of its mantras copied on small strips of paper and wound together in a tiny roll) is tied to the corpse and burned or buried with it—just as a copy of the Egyptian Book of the Dead was ordinarily interred with a mummy.

¹Text: Dpal-Chen-po Bud-dha Hernka (pron. Pal-chat-po Bud-dha Hcruka): ‘Great Glorious Buddha-Hcruka.’

²Text: Bud-dha Kro-ti-shva-rx-ma (pron. Buddha Kroti-shau-ri-ma), i.e. the[female] Buddha, the Mighty Wrathful Mother.

³These are the *Garuda of Indian and Tibetan mythology. They are depicted with eagle head, and human-bird body, having two human-like arms, two eagle wings, and two eagle feet. Symbolically, they personify energy and aspiration. (Cf. p. 126^s.)

¹ Lit.,(filled with red substance'; and likewise for parallel passages following. In ámate rituals a fluid red pigment is commonly used to represent blood (symbolical of renunciation of life, or of sangsáric existence), as red wine is by Christians in the Eucharist.

¹These three orders of deities are goddesses, Indian and Tibetan in origin, the Kerima having human shape, the Htamtma and the IVang—chugma, like Egyptian deities (more or less totemistic), having human—like bodies and animal heads; and each deity symbolizes some particular karmic impulse or propensity appearing as a hallucination in the Bardo consciousness of the deceased. Kerima seems to be a hybrid Sanskrit—Tibetan word (from Skt. Keytri), which, having become current in Tibet—like so many similar words—was incorporated into our text unchanged. Htamennta (as pronounced from Tib. Phra—men—ma) is probably the name of an order of pre—Buddhistic deities belonging to the ancient Bön religion of Tibet. Wang—chugma (as pronounced from Tib. Dvang—phyug—ma) is the Tibetan rendering of the Sanskrit Ishvarī, meaning 'Mighty Goddesses'.

¹ Or 'undergoing psychical development'.

¹Text: Kerima, corrupted from Skt. Keyürl, name of an Indian cemeterygoddess.

²The corrupted Skt. form in text, name of another Indian cemetery goddess.

³Tib.—Skt. of text.

⁴Text: chu—srin (pron. chu—sin) : * water—lion', or 'leviathan' (Skt. Makara), a mythological monster.

^{5, 6, 7} Tib.—Skt. of text.

⁸Textual form, from Skt. ChandáH, referring, apparently, to the spirit of a female of low caste (i. e. Chan(fál)), who, like each of the goddesses of our text herein, haunts cemeteries or cremation grounds. All such goddesses, here appearing, seem intended as symbols—each in its own way—to impress upon the deceased, as in an initiatory drama, the nature of sangs äric existence—its impermanence, its unsatisfactoriness—and the need to rise above it, conquering it through world—renunciation: all the goddesses emanating, as the text repeatedly teaches, from the mental content which the percipient's sangsäric existence has bequeathed to him.

⁹In place of this Tib.—Skt. form of our text, the Block—Print gives SmashaH, which is a more correct form.

¹Tin's bracketed phrase here (and in the three corresponding passages following in this section) is incorporated from the text of the Block—Print, our MS. text omitting it.

² Between this bar and the bar after 'Moon—goddess' in the sentence following is contained the translation of the Tibetan text of the lower folio (67*) of our Frontispiece.

¹ Here the Block—Print givet only * the Big Elephant—Headed Goddess⁹.

²Text: Rdor—jt—ma (pron. Dor—jt—nta) :’She [called] the Dorje \ or’She [called] the Mystic One’; hence ‘Mystic Goddess’. The Block—Print gives White Cuckoo—Headed Mystic Goddess’.

1

2 They are the emanations from the void, or primordial, tranquil, unshaped aspect of the Dharma—Kāya state, viewing man as the microcosm of the macrocosm.

3 They are the emanations from the active radiant aspect of the Dharma—Kāya state,—the Clear Light shining in the primordial Voidness,—man, as the microcosm of the macrocosm, being inseparable therefrom.

4 The symbolism of the blood—drinking should here be kept in mind. (See p. 13a⁸.)

5 Mt. Meru (Tib. Ri—rab) is the central mystical mountain of Buddhist cosmography. (See pp. 6a ff.) The spinal column, the central support of the human bodily structure, is, analogously, symbolized in the Tantras and in works on Yoga as the Mt. Meru of man the microcosm.

¹Text: Mgon-po-Nag-po (pron. Gon—po—Nag—po) : Skt. Kāla—Nāth, commonly known in India as Mahā—Kāla. At this stage, all ‘the illusory forms of the Peaceful Deities blend and appear as this one deity.

²Text: Gsfriwrje—hichos—kyi—rgyal—po (pron. Shin—jei—cho—kyi—gyal—po) : Skt. Dharma—Rāja + Yama—Rāja. As described here and in the Second Book of the Bardo Thödol (see p. 167¹) this illusory deity commonly assumes many and varied forms capable of merging into a single form.

¹ Text: khram—shmg (pron. htant—shing) referring to a board—either a flogging—board such as that on which culprits are stretched and flogged in Tibet, or else, as here, a board written over with karmic records of the deceased's life. Khram is the name given to a scroll of records or an inventory like a rent—roll; shing alone means 'wood'. Hence we may render the two words as 'wood-register' or 'record-board'. In the great Tibetan Arthurian—like saga called in Tibetan Gt—sar—bsgrungs (pron. Kt—sar—dootg), or Kesar Saga (of unknown author, but probably dating from the eighth or ninth century a. d.), which is so much the popular saga of Tibet that many Tibetans know it by heart, a boy, thirteen years of age, who, when wishing to join in a battle, is held back by fond relatives, brushes them aside, saying, The place of illness, the place of death, and the place of cremation are in accordance with the [karmic] register of the Lords of Death'; and here the Tibetan word for register is khram.

The verification of our rendering of this passage is important because, like other passages in the Bardo Thödol, particularly the closely—related passage describing the Judgement, coming in the Second Book (pp. 165—9), It ^{liai}striking correspondence with parts of the Egyptian Book of the Dtad,

1.) Chenrazee being the patron—god, or national tutelary deity, of Tibet, and this being his mantra, its repetition, both in the human world and on the Bardo plane, is credited with bringing to an end the cycle of rebirth and thereby giving entrance into Nirvana ; hence its importance in the Bardo prayer. In the Tibetan work called Ma-ni-kah-hbttn (pron. Ma—ni—kah—boom), i. e. * History of the Mani or Mantra of Chenrazee) this mantra is said to be ‘the essence of all happiness, prosperity, and knowledge, and the great means of liberation’; also it is said that the öm closes the door of rebirth among the gods, mā, among the asuras (or titans) ;/f, among mankind, pay, among sub—human creatures, me, among pretas (or unhappy ghosts), and hung, among the inhabitants of Hell. Accordingly, each of the six syllables is given the colour of the light—path corresponding to the six states of existence, thus : öm, the white light—path of the deva—loka (or world of the gods); ma, the green light—path of the asura—oka (or world of the titans); m, the yellow light—path of the manaka—loka (or human world); päy the blue light—path of the ttryaka—loka (or brute world); mi, the red light—path of the preta—oka (or ghost world) ; and hung, the smoke—coloured or black light—path of the rtaraka—oka (or Hell world).

There is an old Tibetan folk—tale concerning a religious devotee who tried to incline his irreligious mother to devotional observances and merely succeeded in habituating her to the recitation of this mantra. Her bad karma predominating over her good karma at death she passed into the Hell—world, whereupon her son, being proficient in yoga, went to her rescue; and she, upon seeing him, was able, in virtue of having recited the mantra on earth, to recite it in Hell, and instantaneously she and all who heard it were liberated from Hell: for, as the tale at its end teaches, * Such is the power of the mantra’.

The origin of this mantra is traceable through tertön works concerning the introduction (during the eighth century) of Tantric Buddhism into Tibet. Dr. Waddell is inclined to doubt that these ttrfön works were hidden away then (i.e. in the time of Padma Sambhava) and in later centuries recovered, as the Urtöns (i. e. ’takers—out’ of such lost books) claim, and suggests that their compilation dates from the fourteenth to the sixteenth century—a tentative and possibly unsound theory (cf. L. A. Waddell, LāMaism in Sik him, in the Gazetteer of Sikkim, ed. by H. H. Risley, Calcutta, 1894, p. 289 ; also our Introduction, PP* 73—7)* In any case, the mantra, at least by tradition (which ordinarily is as reliable as recorded history), seems to have come into, or been originated in, Tibet contemporaneously with the introduction of Buddhism into Tibet.

¹ That is, Chenrazcc.

² These are : Earth, Air, Water, Fire, and Ether.

¹ Lit., intellect or ‘consciousness—principle’.

² Cf. the following passage from The Book of tht Craft of Dying, chap. V, Comper’s ed. (p. 37): ‘That what man that lusteth, and will gladly die well and surely and meritorily, without peril, he must take heed visibly, and study and learn diligently this craft of dying, and the dispositions thereof abovesaid, while he is in heal [i. e. health]; and not abide till the death entereth in him.’

¹ These are : patricide, matricide, setting two religious bodies at war, killing a saint, and causing blood to flow from the body of a Tathâgata (i. e. a Buddha).

² Here the Block—Print has : ‘This is the Tantra of all doctrines’

³ This refers to the Thadol. (See p. 19a⁴.)

⁴ The Block—Print text, corresponding in all essentials, and in almost every important detail, word for word with the text of our Manuscript, contains (on folio 48 b), as the parallel concluding sentence of the Chönyid Bardo, the following, which differs from our own: ‘The Teaching for the Intermediate State, the Setting—Face—to—Face while experiencing Reality, from The Great Liberation by Hearing While in the Intermediate State, Liberating by Merely Being Heard, And Liberating By Merely Being Seen, is finished.’

¹Text: SRID—PA BAR—DOHI NGO—SPRÖD GSAL—
HDEBS THÖS—GROL ZHES—BYA—VA ZAB—PAHI NYING —KHU ZHES—BYA—VAHI DVU—PHYOGS LEGS (pronounced: SID—PA BAR—DOI NGO—TÖD SAL—DEB THÖ
—DOL SHAY—CHA—WA ZAB—PAI NYING—KHU SHAY—CHA—WAI U—CHÖ LAY).

In the Block—Print, the Bardo Thodol being divided into two distinctly separate books—whereas in our MS. Book II is an unbroken continuation of Book I—the first four folios of its second book contain—unlike our MS.—a summary of the introductory parts of the first book; and the title of Book II of the Block—Print is as follows: Bar—do Thös—grol Chnt—mo Las Srid—pa Bar—dohi Ngo—Spröd Bshugs—so (pronounced : Bar—do Thö—dol Chen—mo Lay Sid—pa Bar—dot Ngo—Töd Zhu—so), which means, * Herein Lieth the Setting—Face—to—Face in the Intermediate State of [or when seeking] Worldly Existence (i. e. Rebirth), from " The Great Liberation by Hearing on the After—Death Plane " .

¹Lit., ‘Act so as to liberate in the Intermediate State’—a direct supplication to the Deities, Tutelaries, and Gurus, rendered by us in the third person to fit the context better.

¹Text: rdzüs—skyes (pron. eu—kye), meaning * to be born in disguise *— tdzüs —’ to disguise ’ + skyts = ‘to be born’—or ‘to be born in a supernormal manner’, i. e. ‘supernormal birth’. As the text will proceed to explain, the birth—process in the after—death states is quite unlike that known on earth.

²In error, probably in transcribing, the text here has ‘four* instead 01 / three’.

³ This springing forth, or birth of the Bardo body, about three and one—half days after death, i. e. upon the expiration of the three and one—half (or four) days (comparable to the pre—natal period, normally passed in sleep, or dream, or unconsciousness, on the human—plane), mentioned on pages 93 and 105, is said to occur instantaneously. ‘Like a trout leaping forth from water’ is the simile used by Tibetan gurus to explain it; it is the actual process of being born in the Intermediate State, paralleling birth in our world.

¹That is to say, esoterically, a human brute—like being (cf. pp. 126, 199; and 39—61).

²That is to say, the habitual (or karmic) predilection for sangsāric existence arising from the thirst for life, from the wish to be born, is the sole cause of one's possessing a body, human or any other. The Goal which the devotee must gain is 'the Unbecome, the Unborn, the Unmade, the Unformed'—Nirvana.

³ It is herein assumed that the deceased has had, when in the human world, some elementary teachings, at least, concerning mental concentration, or control of the thinking processes, sufficient to have realized the state of non—thought formation described as that of 'the nothing—to—do nothing—to—hold condition' of the unmodified, primordial mind, which is the state of Yoga defined by Patanjali (in his Yoga Aphorisms, i. a) as 'the suppression of the transformations of the thinking principle \ Another rendering of the same passage is, * Yoga is the restraint of mental modifications' (Rama Prasad, Patanjali's Yoga Sūtras in The Sacred Books of the Hindus Allahabad, 191a, iv. 5).

1.)

2 The 'seat' is the human body which has been left behind.

3 This power, supernatural in the human world, is normal in the fourth—dimensional after—death state. In the human world, such powers, innate in all persons, can be developed and exercised through proficiency in yoga The Buddha describes some of them thus: 'In this case suppose that a being enjoyeth the possession, in various ways, of mystic power: from being one, he becometh multiform; from being multiform, he becometh one ; from being visible, he becometh invisible; he passeth without hindrance to the further side of a wall or battlement, or a mountain, as if through air; he walketh on water without dividing it, as if on solid ground ; he travelleth cross—legged through the sky, like the birds on the wing—{Brāhmnana Vagga, Anguttara NiKāya).

4 Unless previously endowed with a very high degree of spiritual enlightenment, the deceased cannot consciously go to these two places at will; for from Budh—Gayā (as a great psychic—centre) and from the mother's womb (as being the destined path to rebirth) radiate such psychically—blinding radiances that the ordinary mentality would be overcome with fear in the same manner as when in the Bardo various radiances dawn, and so would avoid them. (Cf. stanza 6, 'The Path of Good Wishes Which Protecteth from Fear in the Bardo \ p. 206.)

¹Text: rdzu—hphrul (pron. eu—iiil) ; rdzu meaning * power to change one's shape'; and hphrul meaning 'power to change one's size and number', by appearing or disappearing at will, as one or as many, large or small. If developed on the earth—plane, through yogic practices, such miraculous power becomes a permanent endowment, and can be employed In the body or out of the body (as when in the Bardo),

² The text implies that the deceased is possessed of the miraculous power as a result of his being—through the workings of karma—in the Intermediate State, wherein such power is natural, and not because of merit acquired through the practice oī yoga when in the human body.

³ See pp. 62—5, concerning Cosmography.

⁴ The most advanced of the lāmas teach the disciple not to strive after psychic powers of this nature for their own sake; for until the disciple is morally fit to use them wisely they become a serious impediment to his higher spiritual development: not until the lower or passional nature of man is completely mastered is he safe in using them.

¹ In addition to the normal human eyes with their limited vision, antas say that there are five sorts of eyes: (1) Eyes of Instinct (or Eyes of the Flesh), like those of birds and beasts of prey, which, in most cases, possess a greater range of vision than human eyes; (2) Celestial Eyes, like the eyes of the devas, capable of seeing the human world as well as their own, and the past and future births of beings in both worlds throughout many lifetimes; (3) Eyes of Truth, like the eyes of Bodhisattvas and Arhants, capable of seeing throughout hundreds of world—periods (or kalpas) backwards and in the future; (4) Divine Eyes, of the most highly advanced Bodhisattvas, capable of seeing throughout millions of world—periods that which has been and that which will be; and (5) Eyes of Wisdom of the Buddhas, capable of seeing, in like manner, throughout eternity.

² Ordinarily it is only when clairvoyant vision is induced by dhyāna, or exists naturally in certain specially gifted clairvoyants, and directed to the eleva— world, that the devas are seen; sometimes, however, the devas appear unexpectedly. The Tri—Pitaka like the canonical literature of Northern Buddhism, is replete with visions and unexpected visitations of devas as Christian and Moslem sacred literature is replete with lore concerning angels.

¹This refers to a superhuman guru of the Divyanga Order. (See Addenda, p. 232.)

²Like the restless wind, karma is ever in motion, and the intellect, when without the support of the human body, is its plaything.

³*Yogis* explain this by saying that in the Bardo—body, which is a mind—born desire—body, the nervous system of the earth—plane body being lacking, the light of the sun and moon and stars is not visible to the deceased. Only the natural light of nature (referred to by medieval alchemists and mystics as the * astral light') is to be seen in the after—death state; and this 'astral light' is said to be universally diffused throughout the ether, like an earth twilight, yet quite bright enough for the eyes of the ethereally constituted beings in the Bardo. (Cf. p. 92⁴.)

⁴See our Introduction, pp. 6—7.

¹ The dweller in the Bardo, because of the karrnic effects of selfishness when living in the human world, is obsessed with the belief that all other Bardo beings are at enmity with him ; hence he has these frightful hallucinations, as in a nightmare. (Cf. p. 148.)

²In The Six Doctrines, a treatise on the practical application of various yogas, which we have translated out of the original Tibetan, there is a parallel passage which amplifies this, as follows: 'If one findeth not the Path during the Second Bardo (i.e. during the Chönyid Bardo), then four sounds called "awe-inspiring sounds" [are heard] : from the vital—force of the earth—element, a sound like the crumbling down of a mountain ; from the vital—force of the water—element, a sound like the breaking of [storm—tossed] ocean—waves ; from the vital—force of the fire—element, a sound as of a jungle afire; from the vital—force of the air—element, a sound like a thousand thunders reverberating simultaneously.' Herein are described the psychic resultants of the disintegrating process called death as affecting the four grosser elements composing the human body aggregate; the ether—element is not named, because in that element alone— i. t. in the ethereal, or Bardo body—the consciousness—principle continues to exist (Cf. page 93^s.)

³ The precipices are karmic illusions, symbolical of the three evil passions and the falling down them symbolizes the entrance into a womb prior to rebirth. (See page 125*.)

¹Text: hsgom—tHcd—yefggs—medpron.yom—med—ytng—med) ‘non—meditation +non—distraction’; referring to a state of mental concentration in which no thought of meditation itself is allowed to intrude. This is the state of Samādhi. If one thinks one is meditating, the thought alone inhibits the meditation; hence the warning to the deceased.

² object of worship and rnam—rgyal as ‘victory’; hence this sort of pagoda is one for marking a victory, i.e. a monument; (2) myang—hdas—mchod—rien (pron. nyang—day—chöd—ten) refers to a stüpa used as a monument for marking the spot where a saint or sage died, or the place of burial of the urn containing such a one’s ashes. Other pagodas are purely symbolical structures erected—as Christian crosses are—as objects of worship or veneration. In Ceylon many stüpas are erected solely to enshrine sacred books or reliques. The great stüpas of North—west India, near Peshawar and at Taxila, lately opened, contained bone—reliques and other objects. Two of them contained authentic bits of the bones of the Buddha.

¹ Like a person travelling alone at night along a highway, having his attention arrested by prominent landmarks, great isolated trees, houses, bridge—heads, temples, stupas, and so on, the dead, in their own way, have similar experiences when earth—wandering. They are attracted, by karmic propensities, to familiar haunts in the human world, but being possessed of a mental or desire body cannot remain long at any one place. As our text explains, they are driven hither and thither by the winds of karmic desires—like a feather before a gale.

²It should be remembered here that all the terrifying phenomena and the unhappiness are entirely karmic. Had the deceased been developed spiritually, his Bardo existence would have been peaceful and happy from the first, and he would not have wandered down so far as this. The Bardo Thödol is concerned chiefly with the normal individual, and not with highly developed human beings whom death sets free into Reality.

³), there is this reference to the inhabitants of the Bardo : ‘They live on odours [or the spiritual essences of material things].’

⁴ Friends may or may not exist in the Intermediate State, as on earth; but even if they do, they are powerless to counteract any bad karma of the deceased. He must follow his own path, as marked out by karma.

¹All known forms of disposal of a corpse are practised in Tibet, including mummification. (See pp. 25—8.)

²This symbolizes the getting into undesirable wombs, such as those of human beings of animal—like nature.

³Text: Lhan—chig—skyes—pahi—lha {prow.Lhan—chig—kye—pai—lha) = * simultaneously—born god (or good spirit, or genius) \ the personification of a human being's higher, or divine, nature; popularly known in Sikkimese as Lha—karchung, 'Little white god'.

¹Text: Lhan—chig—skyes—pahi—hdre (pron. Lhan—chig—kye—pai—de) 'simultaneously—born demon (or evil spirit, or genius)', the personification of a human being's slower, or carnal, nature; popularly known in Sikkimese as Bdud—nag—chung (pron. Düd—nag—chung), 'Little black märä (or demon)'.

²These tortures symbolize the pangs of the deceased's conscience; for the Judgement, as herein described, symbolizes the rising up of the Good Genius in judgement against the Evil Genius, the Judge being the conscience itself in its stern aspect of impartiality and love of righteousness; the Mirror is memory. One element—the purely human element—of the consciousness—content of the deceased, comes forward, and, by offering lame excuses, tries to meet accusations against it, saying, 'Owing to such—and—such circumstances I had to do so—and—so'. Another element of the consciousness—content comes forward and says, 'You were guided by such—and—such motives; your deeds partake of the black colour'. Then some more friendly one of such elements arises and protests, 'But I have such—and—such justification; and the deceased deserves pardon on these grounds'. And so—as the lāmas explain—the Judgement proceeds. (Cf. pp. 35—7—)

³ Meaning that the 'astral' or desire—body is incapable of ordinary physical injury. 'As through a cloud, a sword can be plunged through the Bardo—boāy without harming it'—the lāmas explain; or it is like the forms seen in materializing seances of necromancers and spirit—mediums.

¹These Lords of Death are Yama—Rāja and his Court of Associates, including, perhaps, the Executive Furies. These last are, as Tormenting Furies, comparable to the Eumenides of Aeschylus* great drama—elements of one's own consciousness—content. Following the Abhidhamma, of Southern Buddhism, there are mind (Skt. efci/, Tib. sems—pron. sent) and impulses of mind (Skt. chittavritti Tib. sems—hbyung—pron. scm—jung) ; and the impulses of mind are the Furies. (Cf. pp. 147—8.)

²Text: JRagsha—glang—mgo (pron. Ragsha—lang—go) : * Bull—headed Spirit of Death ', commonly depicted as having a buffalo—head. The chief tutelary deity of the Gelugpa or Yellow Hat Sect, called Jampa I Shinjeshed (Tib. Hjam—dpalGshin—rje—gshed), meaning 'Jampa/ (Skt. Mañjusrhi), the Destroyer of the Lord of Death (Skt. Yamāntakd) \ is often represented as a blue buffalo—headed deity.

³ See pp. 10—15.

⁴ Tib. Gowo—nyidku \ Skt. Ādi—Kāya (' First Body'), which is synonymous with the Dharma—Kāya.

¹In virtue of knowing the true nature of sangsāric existence—that all phenomena are unreal—Buddhas, or Perfectly Enlightened Ones, are beings quite apart from unenlightened sentient beings.

²T .it., * there will be no time when thou canst get out’.

³ This is a literal rendering, meaning that the rays of grace or compassion of Chenrazeē will cease to dawn.

⁴The idea meant to be conveyed is that trials and tribulations, although karmtic, act as divine tests, and so, being for the good of the deceased, ought even to be visualized as such, i. e. as the tutelary deity, or as Chenrazeē.

¹This revealing of the initiatory name is for the purpose of establishing occult connexion between the deceased and the King of Death—i. e. between the human and the divine in man—in much the same way as a Freemason will make himself known to another Freemason by giving some secret password.

²Lit., 'will be obtained'.

³That is to say, at one time good karma will be operative and raise the deceased to a spiritual state of mind, and at another time, bad karma becoming predominant, the deceased will be pulled down in mental depression. The operator of the catapult is karma, who stretches out the catapult to its limit and then relaxes it, alternately.

⁴ Each time an animal is sacrificed—presumably to be prepared for food afterwards—the deceased is said to be unable to escape the karmic result, the sacrifice being done in his name, so that horrors come upon him directly. He calls to the living to cease, but, they not hearing him, he is inclined to grow angry; and anger he must avoid at all costs, for if allowed to arise on the Bardo—plane, like a heavy weight, it forces him down to the lowest mental state called Hell.

Animal sacrifice to the dead, in Tibet as in India, originated in ancient times, far prior to the rise of Buddhism, which, of course, prohibits it. Survivals of it have persisted in Tibet, but without the approval of the lāmas, as our text clearly proves; and, if practised nowadays, it is only rarely, and by the rude folk of remote districts, who are Buddhist merely in name.

Save for the yogi or lāma eager for the highest spiritual development—with which flesh—eating is said to be incompatible—Tibetans, being confirmed caters of animal corpses, like the Brahmins of Kashmir (who are, consequently, not recognized as Brahmins by the pure—living Brahmins of India), excuse their meat—eating on the grounds of climatic and economic necessity. Although Tibet is poor in cereals and vegetables and fruits, this seems to be chiefly an unconscious attempt to cover up a racial predisposition, inherited from nomadic and pastoral ancestors, for a flesh diet. Even in Ceylon, where there can be no such excuse for Buddhists to disobey the precept prohibiting the taking of life, flesh—eating has already made rapid progress since the advent of Christianity, which, unlike Buddhism, does not, unfortunately, teach kindness to animals as a religious tenet, St. Paul himself being of opinion that God cares not for oxen (see / COK ix. 9). And yet on Ceylon's Sacred Mount of Mihintale still stands, as witness of a purer Buddhism, the ancient edict, cut on a stone slab, prohibiting—as the Edicts of Asoka prohibit—the slaying of any animal, either in sacrifice or for food.

¹ This mantra is believed to have the magical power of so transmuting food sacrificed to the dead as to make it acceptable to them.

² In its fullness, this power of prescience includes knowledge of the past, present, and future, the ability to read others' thoughts, and the unobscured knowing of one's own capabilities and limitations. Only highly developed beings, such, for example, as adepts in yoga, enjoy such complete power of prescience. On the Bardo plane—unlike the human world—every being possesses, in virtue of freedom from the impeding gross physical body, a certain degree of the power, as the text makes clear.

³ That is, fear and fright, or impropriety, or carelessness on the part of any person conducting the funeral rites.

¹‘White’ as opposed to * black (as in black magic or sorcery).

² Cf. the following from the Orologiunt Sapientiae, Comper’s ed. (p. 119) : ¹ Where is now the help of my friends ? Where be now the good behests of our kinsmen and others ?’

¹Here as before (see p. 1241) the MS. is faulty. It gives the lights as follows: white for the Z) /a—world, red for the Asura—world, blue for the Human—world, green for the Brute—world, yellow for the PrWa—world, smoke—coloured for the Hell—world. This error, apparently on the part of the copyist of the MS., has been corrected by the translator.

²This expression, ‘the Clearness and the Voidness’, from the instructions following, seems to be synonymous with ‘the Clear Light’, or ‘the Clear Light and the Voidness’.

¹.)

⁴Text: nam—mkhah (pron. nam—kha) : Skt. A kasha: ‘ether¹, or ‘sky’.

¹To obtain results, the accumulated merit, born of good actions done in the earth—life, must be made operative, that is, it must be linked with the Bardo existence of the deceased.

²Normally, existence in the Bardo ever tends to lead the deceased back to birth; and this is due to karntic propensities, which are the opposition, the forces opposing the Enlightenment of Buddhahood. Hence the deceased must oppose this innate tendency with every help available.

¹‘The father and mother⁹ are the male and female seen in union ; the Guru is the celestial or spiritual Guru, not the human guru ; and the Divine Mother is the Guru’s Shakti.

²That is, the Gum with the Shakh, as above directed.

³ Text: breus—skyes (pron. eu—kye) : SVt.Svayarnbhfi : *supernormal (or miraculous) birth’, by translation or transference of the consciousness—principle from one loka to another. (See pp. 85—6.)

⁴This refers to the germination of seeds and spores, or the processes of birth in the vegetable kingdom.

⁵ Brāhmanism, likewise, recognizes four kinds of birth : svidaja (sweat—born, or moisture—born), andaja (egg—born) jarayuja (womb—born), and udbhija (vegetation).’— Sj. Atal Behari Ghosh.

¹ Herein we see the animal symbolism expanded in such manner as quite to parallel the passage in Plato's Republic describing the choosing of animal bodies for the next incarnation. (See p. 178; also pp. 49—53.) The popular or exoteric interpretation of such passages in our text as this passage (cf. pp. 126, 129, 156—7 herein) would seem to be as reasonable as it would if applied to similar passages in Plato; and, furthermore, the copyist, and possibly the composer or composers of the Bardo Thödol, may have been exotericists, or at least intended their text to emphasize the exoteric interpretation, holding as priests often have held, and as some hold even nowadays, that fear—producing doctrines (e.g. the Christian doctrine that hell is an eternal condition), although literally untrue, are, nevertheless, like whips to keep the lower mentalities alert and possibly more virtuous. Nevertheless, for our own (more or less corrupted) text, as for Plato's, there does exist the esoteric key to the real meaning, such as we have given in our Introduction, pp. 55—9.

¹Text: Bdcn—ucd—sgyu—ma—llabu (pron. Den—ned—gyu—ma—tabu) : * Non—true[and] Illusion—like ', the title of a Tibetan treatise on the unreality of phenomena.

¹ Text: Dri—sa (pron. Di—ea) : * Odour—eaters; Skt. Gandharva, the Fairies of Indian and Buddhist mythology. Their cities are fantastically—shaped clouds, which dissolve in rain and vanish. (Cf. p. 164⁹.)

¹Text: rNam—shes (pron. Nam—she) : * consciousness—principle’: Skt. VijñānaSkandha. The translator preferred to follow the context here and rendered this as ‘mind’, as synonymous with ‘consciousness’.

²As mentioned above, on p. 178.

³Text: ntngon—shes (pron. ngon—she), referring to certain gifts of supernormal perception (Skt. Abhijna), of which six are commonly enumerated: (1) supernormal vision and (a) hearing; (3) thought—reading; (4) knowledge of miraculous power ; (5) recollection of former existences ; (6) knowledge of the destruction of the passions. For the ordinary deceased person such ‘supernormal power of perception’ is limited (or exhaustible), and only operative in the after—death state ; whereas for a Buddha, or a devotee perfected in yoga, it is a permanent and unlimited possession on all planes of consciousness.

⁴ That is, without the human—plane body to depend upon.

¹ Lit., ‘Fourthly, turning the mouth [of the consciousness—principle or Knower, as of a horse with a bit] is easy.¹

¹: Skt. smrii.

¹In the description of these Continents which follows, Tibetan names are given ; in our Introduction (pp. 64—5) the Sanskrit names are given along with complementary description.

²Text: rułogi ‘rebellion’ or ‘revulsion’. By recollecting the revulsion, i. e. the mental attitude which will oppose entering there, the deceased is put on his guard.

³ This paragraph is misplaced in the MS., having been copied as coming after (‘will be seen’ in the paragraph immediately above, following our rendering.

⁴ The Christian conception of Heaven, a definite place, having streets of gold and walls of precious stones, probably owes its origin to pre—Christian beliefs parallel to the Hindu and Buddhist beliefs concerning the Heaven of the Divas. Nirvana misleadingly has been called the Buddhist Heaven: a Heaven implies a place and sangsāric phenomena, whereas Nirvana is non—sangsāric, is beyond all phenomena, being ‘the Unbecome, the Unborn, the Unmade, the Unformed’—a concept altogether foreign to popular, or exoteric, Christianity and found only in esoteric Christianity, i. e. Gnosticism, which, very unwisely, the councils of exoteric Christianity have officially repudiated as being * heretical’.

¹ Or, as in the text on p. 194 (wherein the clue to the esotericism underlying the references to birth 'amongst beasts' is given), amongst human beings *resembling the brute order'.

² Lit., 'there will be no time [soon] when one can get out of it'. Buddhism (and Hinduism, too,) does not postulate eternal condemnation to a state of hell, and is, in this respect, more logical than Christian theology which has in the past postulated it

¹ That is to say, interfering in such a way as to prevent birth or a good birth.

² Each of these three deities, who dawn in the Chönyid Bardo (see pp. n6⁴, I2O4, 1371), is held to be particularly potent as an exorcizer of evil spirits.

¹ Owing to having arrived at the false concept that the Intermediate State is a desirable or fixed state of existence, all dwellers therein,—sprites, preias, demons, and deceased human entities,—becoming thereby habituated to the Bardo, their normal evolution is retarded. According to the most enlightened of the lāmas, whenever a spirit is called up, as in such spirit—evocations as are nowadays common throughout the West, that spirit, through contact with this world and the prevailing traditional animistic beliefs concerning the hereafter, being strengthened in the illusion that the Bardo is a state wherein real spiritual progress is possible, makes no attempt to quit it. The spirit called up ordinarily describes the Bardo (which is pre—eminently the realm of illusion), in which it is a dweller, more or less after what it had believed whilst in the fleshly body concerning the hereafter; for just as a dreamer in the human world lives over again in the dream—state the experience of the waking state, so the inhabitant of the Bardo experiences hallucinations in karmic accord with the content of his consciousness created by the human world. His symbolic visions, as the Bardo Thödol repeatedly emphasizes, are but the psychic reflexes of thought—forms carried over from earth—life as mental deposits or seeds of karma. (See pp. 31—5.) This is said to explain why none but very exceptional spirits when evoked have any rational philosophy to offer concerning the world in which they exist; they are regarded as being merely the playthings of karma, lacking in mental coherence and stability of personality—more often than not, as being senseless ghosts, or psychic 'shells* which have been cast off by the consciousness—principle, and which, when coming into rapport with a human 'medium', are galvanized into automaton—like life.

It is true that spirit—evocation of a kind is practised in Tibet, as throughout Mongolia and China, by lāmas who form a class of oracular priests, consulted on important problems of political policy even by the Dalai LāMa himself. But the spirits called up are tutelary deities of a low order called the 'executive—order' (Tib. bkah—dod—pron. ka—döt, meaning 'one awaiting orders') and never intentionally the spirits or ghosts of men or women recently deceased. Some of these bkahdods are, so the Tibetans believe, the spirits of lāmas and devotees who have failed—often through practising black magic—to obtain spiritual enlightenment when in the human world, or who otherwise, in the manner described in the text here, have been diverted from the normal path of progress. Thus, in many instances, they have become demoniacal and malignant spirits, whose progress has been arrested not by being bound to the earth—plane through having been called up by ‘mediums’ soon after their decease, but naturally through very evil karma. Such bkahdods, thus often presenting themselves with ordinary spirits of the dead, are, as obsessing demons, said to do much harm mentally and psychically to the untrained ‘medium’ and clients, insanity and moral irresponsibility not infrequently resulting. For these reasons, the lāmas maintain that psychic research should be conducted only by masters of the occult, or magical, sciences, and not indiscriminately by thegurn—jess multitude.

In Sikkim, where our translation was made, necromancy precisely like that now practised in the West has been practised for unknown centuries, as it still is. The Lepchas, descendants of the primitive races of Sikkim, who still form a large part of the rural population, are as thoroughly animistic in their worships as the American Red Men ; and, largely through their influence, the evocation of the dead has become rather widespread among the Sikkimese Buddhist lay—folk, many of whom are of both Tibetan and Lepcha blood. Similarly, in Buddhist Bhutan, such spirit—evocation is common. In both countries, however, the lāmas strenuously, though rather ineffectually, oppose it.

It is said that the retardation of a Bardo—bound spirit may be for any time from five hundred to one thousand years; and, in exceptional cases, for ages. All the while, escape from the Bardo being prevented, the deceased can neither pass on to a paradise realm nor be reborn in the human world. Ultimately, however, the womb will be entered and the Bardo come to an end.

¹ Text: risal (pron. sal) : ‘powers’; elsewhere in our text dvang—po (pron. wang—po) being rendered as ‘faculties’.

² In a series of visions, the Knower will become aware of the lot or destiny associated with each womb or place of birth seen: Here again we are reminded of the episode in the tenth book of Plato’s Republic, describing a band of Greek heroes in the Otherworld choosing their bodies for the next incarnation.

¹ Text: rig—pa ('consciousness') + bdag (pro. dag, meaning 'self': Skt. âtma). Should we consider 'consciousness' in this context to be the essential or true consciousness, i. e. the subconsciousness—and this meaning is implied—the passage would be in direct accord with the psychology of the West, which, on the basis of much accumulated data, might very well postulate that the sub—consciousness, being the storehouse of all memory—records, from this life or from hypothetical past lives, is the real self—the bed in which flows on un—brokenly the 'life—flux', from one state of existence to another, and which, when transmuted by the alchemy of Perfect Enlightenment, becomes the supra—mundane consciousness, i. e. the Buddha consciousness. (Cf. W. Y. Evans—Wentz, The Fairy—Faith in Celtic Countries, Oxford University Press, 1911, chap. XII.)

That this view is in keeping with the recorded teachings of the Buddha Himself is evident from the Lonaphala Vagga of the Anguttara Nikaya, wherein He expounds the yogic method of recovering memories, innate in the sub—consciousness (see our Introduction, pp. 40—1). Sobhita, one of the Buddha's disciples, was declared, by the Buddha Himself, to be pre—eminent in 'ability to remember former existences' (cf. Etaddagga Vagga, Anguttara Nikaya), being credited with ability to recall systematically his former existences throughout 500 kalpas; and, in the same Vagga, the Buddha names, from among His female disciples, Bhadda Kapilâril as being pre—eminent' in ability to trace lineage of prior skandhas (or human bodies)/.

² Here, as elsewhere through this treatise, the Buddha Amitâbha is to be regarded not as a personal deity, but as a divine power or principle inherent in or emanating from The Happy Western Realm.

³ See p. 190.

⁴ This is the Paradise of Vajra—Pâni (see p. 1164), and is not a Buddha Realm.

If, as seems probable, the 'long hair' refers to wearing the hair in 'pigtailed*' after the Chinese fashion, that would provide further internal evidence of our text having taken form in Tibet rather than in India.

¹ This is the Realm wherein the Great Guru Padma Sambhava (here called Urgyan) now reigns.

² ‘Maitreya, the next Bodhic World—Teacher, now bides his time in the Tushita Heavens, where He reigns as King. (See p. 108.)

³ Birth from within a lotus blossom, in the Tushita Heavens, as in the Deva— world, esoterically implies pure birth, that is, birth without entrance into a womb, womb—birth being considered impure.

⁴ That is, the sperm and the o\um in the impregnated womb.

¹ Text: sala : Skt. shāla (the shorca robusta), one of the hardwood forest—trees of India, growing to great size; the Tibetan word for Brahmin is Brāmet (pron. Tāmze). The ancient Indians regarded the sal—tree, with its splendid foliage and beautiful blossoms, as the best of trees; and for the Buddhists it is sanctified by the birth and death of the Enlightened One which took place under its protecting shade.

² ‘Text: grub—pa—thob—pa (pron. dub—pa—thob pa) : Skt. Siddha—purusha : adept in siddhic (or yogfc) powers.’

³ The meaning may otherwise be put thus: By exercise of thy supernormal powers, visualize, as a celestial mansion, the womb thou art entering.

⁴ These are: the four cardinal points, the four midway points, and the nadir and zenith.

¹ Or, esoterically, amongst wombs of brute—like human beings. (Cf. p. 1851.)

² ‘The text here contains, instead of Yellow Light, ‘Blue Light’, evidently, as in like instances above, through error in copying.

³ These four Prayers (or ‘Paths of Good Wishes’) are given in the Appendix, pp. 197—208.

⁴ The aggregate of a living human body, according to some Tibetan systems ofyoga, is composed of twenty—seven parts: (1) the five elements (earth, water, fire, air, ether); (2) the five skandhas (body—aggregate, sensation—aggregate, feelings—aggregate, volition—aggregate, consciousness—aggregate); (3) the five airs (downward—air, warmth—equalizing—air, the pervader, upward—moving—air, life—holding air); (4) the five sense—organs (nose, ears, eyes, tongue, skin); (5) the six faculties (sight, smell, hearing, tasting, perception, reasoning); and (6) the mentality. These twenty—seven parts constitute the impermanent personality. Behind them all stands the subconsciousness, the Knower, which, unlike the personality, is the principle capable of realizing Nirvana,) and attached to the body, both of the living and dead; and at the time of a person’s death are either cremated or interred with the corpse, the popular belief being that thus liberation is conferred upon the body—aggregate.

The Astrology for the Dead—a, Tibetan work, in many versions, for determining (by using the moment of death as a basis for astrological calculations) the appropriate time, place, and method for the disposal of the corpse, and the after—death realm to which the deceased is destined and the land and condition in which he will be reborn on earth—prescribes such use of the TahdoL

¹ Text: Chö-spyod-bag-chags-rang-grol, (pron. Chö-chod-bag-chah-rang-dol), the title of a metrical version, in brief form, of the Bardo Thödol, which, being easy to memorize and thereafter recite as a matter of habit, is referred to as liberating because of such acquired habit or propensity on the part of the deceased, it being supposed that the deceased knows the ritual by heart and that its reading will remind him of it and thereby bring about his liberation.*

² Sec pp. 85—6, above.9

⁴ Or ‘narrow passages’, or ‘ambuscades’.

¹; ‘freed* implying freedom from the eight thraldoms: (i) the ever—recurring round of pleasure concomitant with existence as a deva ; (a) the incessant warfare concomitant with existence as an asura ; (3) the helplessness and slavery concomitant with existence under conditions like those prevailing in the world of brutes; (4) the torments of hunger and thirst concomitant with existence as a puta ; (5) the extremes of heat and cold concomitant with existence in Hell; (6) the irreligi6n or perverted religion concomitant with existence amongst certain races of mankind, or (7) the physical or (8) other impediments concomitant with certain sorts of human birth.

To win a perfectly endowed human body, one must inherently possess faith, perseverance, intellect, sincerity, and humility as a religious devotee, and be born at a time when religion prevails (i. e. when an Enlightened One shall be incarnate or when His teachings are the driving force of the world) and meet then a great, spiritually developed guru.

² ‘If a drain be broken, the continuity in the flow of the water is broken. The Teaching is, in its effects, like repairing the drain by insertion of a trough to conduct the water across the break (which is symbolical of the break in the stream of consciousness caused by death). Thereby is the merit of good deeds done in the human world made to carry the deceased forward: the continuity is re—established.

¹As a catapult enables one to direct a great stone at a definite target or goal,so this Doctrine enables the deceased to direct himself to the Goal of Liberation.

²As water makes the moving of the beam possible, so this doctrine makes possible the conducting of the deceased to the place or state of existence most appropriate, or even to Buddhahood.

³As with a bridle, controlling the bit and the course of the horse, so with this Doctrine the deceased can be directed or turned in his after—death progression.

⁴.)

⁵ Wailings and lamentations have been customary amongst Tibetans and related Himalayan peoples, as amongst the peoples of India and of Egypt, since immemorial times; but Buddhism, like the Islamic Faith, discountenances them.

⁶ Such deeds are, for example, the feeding of lāmas and of the poor, almsgiving, the presentation of religious texts or images to monasteries, and the endowment of monasteries if the deceased left much wealth.

¹ See p. 85

² Lit., ‘be recited always’.

³ Text: Bsgrub (pron. Dub) : Skt. Sādhanā, ‘perfected devotion, which ordinarily requires the very careful performance of a ritual more or less technical and elaborate.

⁴ Fierce mastiffs are numerous in most Tibetan villages, and travellers protect themselves by special charms against them. This reference to seven mastiffs is purely Tibetan, and is additional internal evidence that the Bardo Thödol took form in Tibet itself, deriving much of its matter from Indian mythology and systems of Yōga philosophy.

¹ The directions for employing these rituals and prayers are contained in the Bardo Thödol above (pp. 88, 192).

² Cf. p. IQI⁴.

¹ See p. 109s.

² It is interesting to compare with this Northern Buddhist prayer the following medieval Christian prayer, to Saint Michael, from The Craft to Know Well to Die, chap. VI, Comper's ed. (pp. 84—5): * Saint Michael Archangel of God, succour us now before the right high Judge. O champion invincible, be thou present now and assist thou this (Name), our brother, which strongly laboureth towards his end, and defend him mightily from the dragon infernal, and from all the frauds of the evil spirits. O yet furthermore, we pray thee, which art the right clear and much fair shower of the divinity, to the end that in this last hour of the life of this (Name), our brother, thou wilt benignly and sweetly receive his soul into thy right holy bosom ; and that thou wilt bring him in the place of refreshing, of peace and rest. Amen.'

¹ The Blue Buddha is Samanta—Bhadra; the White Buddha, Vajra—Sattva; the Yellow Buddha, Ratna—Sambhava; the Red Buddha, Amitfibha ; the Green Buddha, Amogha—Siddhi, Herein Samanta—Bhadra occupies the position often given to Vairochana, both deities being in essence the same, although sometimes Vairochana is depicted as being white in colour instead of blue. (Cf. the Bardo Thödoi, the First to the Fifth Day.)

¹ There is a very profound system of yoga in which the devotee's aim is to enter the dream—state at will and carry on experiments therein in full consciousness of being in the dream—state, and then return to the waking—state with complete memory of the experience ; thereby is realized the unreality of both states— that both are merely illusory, being based wholly upon phenomena.

² Or, 'May I enter into the bright space of undistractedness [and enlightening] teachings'.

¹ Lit., '[May I be able to] join with the remnants of good deeds by repeated effort'. (Cf. p. 135³.)

² Text: Grub—chin (pron. Dub—chm) : Skt. Mahā—siddhas.

1

2 These are: öm—mā—n%—pāy—mi—Hftng ! (Cf. p. 149¹.)

3 This may also refer to the jealousy arising when one is taking rebirth either as a male or a female. (See p. 179.)

¹ ‘Hunger and thirst’ refer to the sufferings concomitant with existence as a pitta (or unhappy ghost); ‘heat and cold’, to existence in the hot and cold Hells.

² ‘This refers to the body of a Buddha, in which appear various supernormal signs and powers.

³ This is a reference to the Ludd ha, Who when born is said to have taken fifty—six steps, seven forwards and seven backwards in each of the four cardinal directions, and to have uttered a divine premonitory sentence at the end of each fourteen steps. After that supernormal performance He, like an ordinary babe, was unable to walk or to talk until normally old enough.

⁴ In the Samgati Sutta, Digha Mkaya, of the Pali Canon of Southern Buddhism, there is the following explanation from the Buddha Himself as to the non—forgetting (and the forgetting) of past incarnations:

‘There are four conditions of entrance of the embryo into the womb:

‘Brethren, in this world, one cometh into existence in the mother’s womb without knowing, remaineth in it without knowing, and cometh out from the mother’s womb without knowing; this is the first.

‘Brethren, one cometh into existence in the mother’s womb knowingly, remaineth in it without knowing, and cometh out from it without knowing; this is the second.

‘Brethren, one cometh into existence in the mother’s’ womb knowingly, remaineth in it knowingly, and cometh out from it without knowing ; this is the third.

‘Brethren, in this world, one cometh into existence in the mother’s womb knowingly, remaineth in it knowingly, and cometh out from it knowingly; this is the fourth.’

(Cf. the method, taught by the Buddha, of remembering past lives, pp. 40—1.)

¹ Some scholars question this generally accepted explanation and think that the term yoga probably means 'practice' as opposed to theory in religion. If so, it would then imply yogic practice such as will produce indomitable control over the mental processes and lead to realization of Reality. In this sense, yoga may be regarded as a system of applied psychology far more highly developed than any known to Western Science.

¹ Yoga practice was introduced into Mahāyāna Buddhism by Asaṅga, a monk of Gāndhāra (Peshawar, India). He is said to have been inspired directly by the Bodhisat Maitreya, the coming Buddha, and so produced the Scriptures of the Yogā—cārya (i. e. ‘Contemplative’) School called The Five Books of Maitreya (cf. Waddell, The Buddhism of Tibet, p. 128).

² The editor possesses a number of very important translations, by the late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup, of Tibetan treatises on Yoga, one of them having originated in ancient India. If there should be encouragement to publish them, the editor hopes then to put on record in more detail the results of his own researches in Yoga.

¹ General references (also for Sections III and IV following): A. Avalon (Sir John Woodroffe), Tantra of the Great Liberation (London, 1913), Introduction ; and The Six Centres and the Serpent Power (London, 1919), passim ; Sir John Woodroffe, Shakti and Shdkta (London, 1920), passim ; also Rama Prasad, Nature's Finer Forces (London, 1890), passim.

¹). Religiously considered, there are two chief groups of Tantras, one Hindu, the other Buddhist. The Hindu Tantra is generally cast in the form of a dialogue between the god Shiva, as the Divine Guru, and his S hak ii Pārṇati, often in their wrathful forms as Bhairava and Bhairavi. In the Buddhist Tantra, these purely Hindu deities are replaced by Buddhist deities, Buddhas and their Shaktis, or by gods and goddesses. One characteristic of both classes of Tantras is that usually they are based upon the Yoga Philosophy. Which of the two classes is older is a disputed question ; but the oldest Tantras are probably far older than European critics (who have placed their origin well within the Christian era) have thought. Some Tantras are indisputably quite modern. According to orthodox Hindus, the Tantras are of Vedic origin, and designed to serve as the chief Scriptures for this age, the Kali Yuga. Some Buddhists claim a purely Buddhist origin for the Tantras. The Hindu view is, however, the commonly accepted view.

As encyclopaedias of the knowledge of their times, the Tantras are very numerous. Some are concerned with the nature of the cosmos, its evolution and dissolution ; the classification of sentient beings and of the various heavens, hells, and worlds; the divinely instituted rules governing human relations and conduct; the numerous forms of worship and spiritual training, ceremonial rites, meditation, yoga, duties of kings, law, custom, medicine, astrology, astronomy, magic ; and, in short, the whole cycle of the sciences of the East.

In so far as the Bardo Thödol is a ritual based upon Yoga, and has for its chief matter the science of birth, death, and rebirth, interwoven with descriptions of the various states of existence and beings peopling the universe, and teaches of the ways of obtaining salvation, it is a Tantric work, although, strictly speaking, not a Tantra.

For detailed knowledge concerning the Tantras, the student is referred to Principles of Tantra, Part I, by Arthur Avalon (London, 1914).

¹ The Sanskrit term Shaktt (literally * [Divine] Power') refers to the female.

or negative, phase of that divine force or power concentrated in or personified by the consort of a god, the god representing the positive phase; the Tantric worshipper of Shakti (Power), or divine universal forces, personified as a Mother—Goddess, being called a shākta. The Tantrics—like the ancient Egyptians—exalt right knowledge of the reproductive processes, as no doubt it should be exalted, to the level of a religious science ; and in this science, as illustrated in the Bardo Thödol' the union of the male and female principles of nature, in what is called in Tibetan the yab (Skt. deva) —yum (Skt. shakti) attitude, symbolizes completeness, or at—one—ment. Power, symbolized by the male (yab or deva), and Wisdom, symbolized by the female (yum or shakti), are said, esoterically, to be ever in union.

It is much to be regretted that actual abuse of Tantric doctrine, due either to wilful perversion or, as is commonly the case, to misunderstanding, resulting in practices (like those of certain decadent sects or individuals in India) improperly called Tantric, by non—initiates in America and in Europe, in some instances under the aegis of organized societies, has brought upon Tantricism undeserved odium. Such unfortunate outcome of lack of guidance under properly trained gurus tends to justify the high initiate of Oriental occultism in his stern refusal to divulge the inner teachings of his cult to any save carefully prepared pupils who have been long on probation and found worthy ; this was the view both of the late LāMa Kazi Dawa—Samdup and of his late guru in Bhutan.

¹ ‘Of the Wrathful Deities there are two classes, the less wrathful (Tib. 7V— wo) and the more wrathful (Tib. Drag—pd). See Waddell, op. cit., pp. 332—3.

¹ Siddhi here means 'Powers' arrived at through yogic practices. Literally, Siddhi is the attainment of any aim.

¹ The three lines oi gurus are so called not because of any difference in their respective powers, but because of their different places of abode. In the Tanira—rāja (ch. I) it is said that the Gurus of the Divya Order always abide in Shiva's Heaven, those of the Siddha Order both in the Human—World and in the Heaven—Worlds, and those of the Mānava Order on Earth only.

¹ The exact date of Ashvaghosha (or Acvaghosha) is uncertain. According to Suzuki, who has investigated the question with great care, Ashvaghosha * lived at the time extending from the latter half of the first century before Christ to about 50 or 80 a. d. ... At the very most, his time cannot be placed later than the first century of the Christian era' (T. Suzuki, This Awakening of Faith, Chicago, 1900, p. 17).

¹ There are two English translations of The Awakening of Faith, from the Chinese, one by a Christian missionary to China, the late Rev. Timothy Richard, made in 1894 and published, in Shanghai, in 1907, the other by the learned Japanese Buddhist Mr. Teitaro Suzuki, published in 1900, in Chicago. We give herein, in parallel, extracts from both. There are, likewise, two Chinese versions, each based upon the original Sanskrit version, which is now lost: one made in a.d. 554, by Paramartha (otherwise called Kulanātha), an Indian Buddhist missionary, who reached China in a. d. 546 and died in a. d. 569, at the age of 71 years; the other was begun in a. d. 700 by Qikshānanda, also an Indian Buddhist missionary, who died in China, in a.d. 710, at the age of 59. Richard's translation is from Paramartha's version, and Suzuki's from lik—shananda's.

² 'Richard's trans, (p. 18). Cf. Suzuki's trans, (p. 89): 'Though all beings are uniformly in possession of suchness, the intensity [of the influence] of ignorance, the principle of individuation, that works from all eternity, varies in such manifold grades as to outnumber the sands of the Ganges. And it is even so with such entangling prejudices (klefa or āfrava) as the ego—conception, intellectual and affectional prejudices, &c. [whose perfuming efficiency varies according to the karma previously accumulated by each individual],—all these things being comprehended only by the Tathāgata. Hence such immeasurable degrees of difference as regards belief, &c'

³ Richard's trans, (p. 17). Cf. Suzuki's trans, (pp. 86—7) : * On account of this perfuming influence [i. e. through suchness perfuming ignorance] we are enabled to believe that we are in possession within ourselves of suchness whose essential nature is pure and immaculate ; and we also recognize that all phenomena in the world are nothing but the illusory manifestation of the mind (ālaya—vijñāna) and have no reality of their own. Since we thus rightly understand the truth, we can practise the means of liberation, can perform those actions which are in accordance [with the Dharma]. Neither do we particularize, nor cling to. By virtue of this discipline and habituation during the lapse of innumerable asantkhyeyakalpas [lit countless ages], we have ignorance annihilated. As ignorance is thus annihilated, the mind [i.e. ālaya—vijñāna] is no more disturbed so as to be subject to individuation. As the mind is no more disturbed, the particularization of the surrounding world is annihilated. When in this wise the principle and the condition of defilement, their products, and the mental disturbances are all annihilated, it is said that we attain to Nirvana and that various spontaneous displays of activity are accomplished.’

¹Richard's trans, (p. 26). Cf. Suzuki's trans, (p. 107): 'In a word, all modes of relative existence, our phenomenal world as a whole, are created simply by the particularization of the confused mind. If we become dissociated from the latter, then all modes of relative existence vanish away by themselves.'

²Richard's trans, (p. 12). Cf. Suzuki's trans, (pp. 77—8): 'Therefore the three domains [or triloka, i. e. domain of feeling (kāmaloka), domain of bodily existence (tūpaloka), domain of incorporeality (arupāloka)] are nothing but the self—manifestation of the mind [i. e. ālaya—vijñāna, which is practically identical with suchness, bhūtatathaiā]. Separated from the mind, there would be no such things as the six objects of sense. Why? Since all things, owing to the principle of their existence to the mind (ālaya—vijñāna) are produced by subjectivity (smṛti), all the modes of particularization are the self—particularization of the mind. The mind in itself being, however, free from all attributes, is not differentiated. Therefore, we come to the conclusion that all things and conditions in the phenomenal world, hypostatized and established only through ignorance (avidyā) and subjectivity (smṛti) on the part of all beings, have no more reality than the images in a mirror. They evolve simply from the ideality of a particularizing mind. When the mind is disturbed, the multiplicity of things is produced; but when the mind is quieted, the multiplicity of things disappears.'

¹ ‘Richard’s trans, (pp. 25—6). Cf. Suzuki’s trans, (p. 107) : * Be it clearly understood that space is nothing but a mode of particularization and that it has no real existence of its own. Where there is a perception of space, there is side by side a perception of a variety of things, in contradistinction to which space is spoken of as if existing independently. Space therefore exists only in relation to our particularizing consciousness/

² Richard’s trans, (pp. 34—5). Cf. Suzuki’s trans, (pp. 103—4) Matter (rū/xi) and mind (citta) from the very beginning are not a duality. So we speak of [the universe as] a system of rationality (pmjīākāya), seeing that the real nature of matter just constitutes the norm of mind. Again we speak of [the universe as] a system of materiality (dhartnaKāya), seeing that the true nature of mind just constitutes the norm of matter. Now depending on the DharmaKāya, all Tathāgatas manifest themselves in bodily forms and are incessantly present at all points of space. And Bodhisattvas in the ten quarters, according to their capabilities and wishes, are able to manifest infinite Bodies of Bliss and infinite lands of ornamentation, each one of which, though stamped with the marks of individuality, does not hinder the others from being fused into it, and this [mutual fusion] has no interruption. But the manifestation of the DhamtaKāya in [infinite] bodily forms is not comprehensible to the thought and understanding of common people ; because it is the free and subtlest activity of suchness.’

¹ Richard's trans, (p. 26). Cf. Suzuki's trans, (pp. 108—9): 'Be it clearly understood that suchness (bhñtataihata) has nothing to do with any form of distinction produced by defilement, and that even in case we speak of its possessing innumerable meritorious characteristics they are free from the traces of defilement.'

² Richard's trans, (p. 37). Cf. Suzuki's trans, (p. 109): '. . . defiled objects . . . are nothing but non—entity, have from the first no self—existence (svab/tāva), . . .'

³ Richard's trans, (pp. 07—8). Cf. Suzuki's trans, (pp. na—13): '* If one be absolutely freed from particularization and attachment, one will understand that all things both pure and defiled have only relative existence. Be it therefore known that all things in the world from the beginning are neither matter (rñpa), nor mind (citta), nor intelligence (prafitta) nor consciousness (vtjnāna), nor non—being (ahhōva), nor being (bhāva) ; they are after all inexplicable. The reason why the Tathāgata nevertheless endeavours to instruct by means of words and definitions is through his good and excellent skilfulness [or expediency, upñya—kaufalyā]. He only provisionally makes use of words and definitions to lead all beings, while his real object is to make them abandon symbolism and directly enter into the real reality (lattvd). Because if they indulge themselves in reasonings, attach themselves to sophistry, and thus foster their subjective particularization, how could they have the true wisdom (tattvajnāna) and attain Nirvana ?'

⁴ Richard's trans, (p. 13). Cf. Suzuki's trans, (pp. 79—80) : '* While the essence of the mind is eternally clean and pure, the influence of ignorance makes possible the existence of a defiled mind. But in spite of the defiled mind the mind [itself] is eternal, clear, pure, and not subject to transformation. Further, as its original nature is free from particularization, it knows in itself no change whatever, though it produces everywhere the various modes of existence. When the oneness of the totality of things (idhamtadhātu) is not recognized, then ignorance as well as particularization arises, and all phases of the defiled mind are thus developed. But the significance of this doctrine is so extremely deep and unfathomable that it can be fully comprehended by Buddhas and by no others.'

¹ Richard's trans, (p. 15). Cf. Suzuki's trans, (p. 84): 'Let ignorance be annihilated, and the symptom of disturbance [in the mind] will also be annihilated, while the essence of the mind [i.e. suchness] remains the same. Only if the mind itself were annihilated, then all beings would cease to exist, because there would be nothing there by which they could manifest themselves. But so long as the mind be not annihilated its disturbance may continue.'

² Richard's trans, (p. 25). Cf. Suzuki's trans, (pp. 105—6): * As a lost man who takes the east for the west, \ 'ile the quarter is not changed on account of his confusion, so all beings, because of their misleading ignorance, imagine that the mind is being disturbed, while in reality it is not. But when they understand that the disturbance of the mind [i. e. birth—and—death] is [at the same time] immortality [viz. suchness] they would then enter into the gate of suchness.'

¹Richard's trans, (p. 21). Cf. Suzuki's trans, (pp. 95—6): 'It was not created in the past, nor is it to be annihilated in the future; it is eternal, permanent, absolute ; and from all eternity it sufficiently embraces in its essence all possible merits (punya). That is to say, suchness has such characteristics as follows: the effulgence of great wisdom; the universal illumination of the dharmadhātu [universe] ; the true and adequate knowledge ; the mind pure and clean in its self—nature; the eternal, the blessed, the self—regulating, and the pure; the tranquil, the immutable, and the free. And there is no heterogeneity in all those *Buddha—dharma*s which, outnumbering the sands of the Ganges, can be neither identical (ekavtha) nor not—identical (nānārtha) [with the essence of suchness], and which therefore are out of the range of our comprehension.'

This description of the Absolute is also a description of the Dhamta—Kāya, for the two terms are synonymous. A modern student of Buddhism, Mr. P. Lakshmi Narasu, in The Essence of Buddhism (Madras, 1912), pp. 352—3, describes the Summum Bonum thus: 'Buddhism denies an Ishvara [i. e. a Supreme Deity, for even the Primordial Buddha is not such, but merely the lāma's hypothetical First Buddha] ; and the latter cannot, therefore, be its goal and resting—point. The Buddhist's goal is Buddhahood, and the essence of Buddhahood is DharntaKāya, the totality of all those laws which pervade the facts of life, and whose living recognition constitutes enlightenment. DharmaKāya is the most comprehensive name by which the Buddhist sums up his understanding and also his feeling about the universe. DharmaKāya signifies that the universe does not appear to the Buddhist as a mere mechanism, but as pulsating with life. Further, it means that the most striking fact about the universe is its intellectual aspect and its ethical order, especially in its higher reaches. Nay more, it implies that the universe is one in essence, and nowhere chaotic or dualistic. . . . DharmaKāya is no pitiable abstraction, but that aspect of existence which makes the world intelligible, which shows itself in cause and effect. . . . DharmaKāya is that ideal tendency in things which reveals itself most completely in man's rational will and moral aspirations.... It is the impersonated inspiring type of every perfected rational mind. Without DharmaKāya there would be nothing that constitutes personality, no reason, no science, no moral aspiration, no ideal, no aim and purpose in man's life. . . . DharmaKāya is the norm of all existence, the standard of truth, the measure of righteousness, the good law; it is that in the constitution of things which makes certain modes of conduct beneficial and certain other modes detrimental.'

² Richard's trans, (p. 27). Cf. Suzuki's trans, (p. 112): 'Be it clearly understood that the essence of the five skand has is uncreate, there is no annihilation of them; that, since there is no annihilation of them, they are in their [metaphysical] origin Nirvana itself.'

³ 'Richard's trans, (p. 31). Cf. Suzuki's trans, (p. 121) :'. . . all things (sarvadharma) from the beginning are in their nature Nirvana itself.'

¹‘is preferable.’

¹Cf. P. Lakshmi Narasu, The Essence of Buddhism (Madras, 191a), p. 35a n.

²Hue, in his Travels in Tartary (Hazlett's trans., ii. 84), notes that TsonKhapa, the founder of the Gelugpa, or Established Reformed Church of Tibet, was acquainted with Christianity through Roman priests who seem to have had a mission near the place of his birth, in the Province of Amdo, China. But Tsoñ Khapa having been born during the latter half of the fourteenth century and having founded the Gelugpa during the early fifteenth, such probable Christian influence would be of no importance in relation to the primitive unreformed Ñingmapa Church founded by Padma Sambhava in the eighth century, whence our Manuscript had its origin. The semi—reformed Kargyiitpa Sect, too, antedates the Gelugpa, having been founded in the last half of the eleventh century by Marpa (see p. 135³), whose chief guru was the Indian Pandit Atisha (cf. Waddell, The Buddhism of Tibet, pp. 54—75).

¹ Origen, the pupil of St. Clement of Alexandria, and the best—informed and most learned of the Church Fathers, who held the doctrine of rebirth and karma to be Christian, and against whom, two hundred and ninety—nine years after he was dead, excommunication was decreed by the exoteric Church, on account of his beliefs, has said : ‘But that there should be certain doctrines not made known to the multitude, which are [revealed] after the exoteric ones have been taught, is not a peculiarity of Christianity alone, but also of philosophic systems, in which certain truths are exoteric and others esoteric’ (Origen Contra Celsum, Book I, c. vii). That Origen was a sound Christian in this view—despite his condemnation as a * heretic’ by the corrupt Second Council of Constantinople, held by the exoteric Church —is clear from sayings attributed to the Founder of Christianity Himself: Unto you [the chosen disciples] it is given to know the mystery of the Kingdom of God; but unto them that are without [i. e.
the multitude] all these things are done in parable : that seeing they may see, and not perceive; and hearing they may hear, and not understand’ {Mark, iv. n—ia); cf. St. Paul in I Corinthians, ii. 7 ; iii. i —a; and Pistis Sophia, \. 9, ia, 15, ana passim, translation by G. R.
S. Mead (London, 1896).

‘Ct. A. J. Edmunds, Buddhist Texts in John (Philadelphia, 1912); also Buddhist and Christian Gospels (Philadelphia, 1908).

¹ Cf. the Fo—sho—hing—tsan—kittg (vv. 1455—68), a professed Chinese version of Ashvaghosha's Buddhakarita, made by an Indian Buddhist priest named Dharmaraksha about the year a.d. 420, trans, by S. Beal in The Sacred Books of the East, xix (Oxford, 1883), pp. 206—8.

¹ Cf. G. Clinch, Old English Churches (London, 1900), pp. 169—4, where a photograph of the Chaldon wall—painting is reproduced ; also L. S. Bouchier, Notes on the Stained Glass of the Oxford District (Oxford, 1918), pp. 66—7, concerning a stained glass window in Brightwell Baldwin Church, depicting the soul—weighing episode of the Judgement: ‘Below, the hand of St. Michael in white glass supports a yellow balance, in the left tray of which a half—length soul with yellow hair is praying, while beneath the right a small devil, with horns, tail, claws, and yellow wings, is trying to pull it down.’

'Sigmund Freud, The Standard Edition of the Complete Psychological Works of Sigmund Freud, Vol. 14 (London: Hogarth Press, 1957), p. 289.

² Timothy Leary, Ralph Metzner, Richard Alpert, The Psychedelic Experience: A Manual Based on the Tibetan Book of the Dead (New Hyde Park, N.Y.: University Books, 1964), p. 17.

³Ibid., p. 31.

⁴Ibid., p. 20.

⁵ Francesca Fremantle and Chögyam Trungpa, The Tibetan Book of the Dead (Boulder: Shambhala, 1975), p. xvi.

⁶Elisabeth Kübler—Ross, Death: The Final Stage of Growth (New York: Touchstone Books, 1986), p. 69.

⁷Raymond Moody, Life After Life: The investigation of a phenomenon — survival of bodily death (Harrisburg, Penn.: Stackpole Books, 1976), p. 109.

⁸ Sogyal Rinpoche, The Tibetan Book of Living and Dying (San Francisco: HarperSanFrancisco, 1992), p. 14.

⁹Robert A. F. Thurman, The Tibetan Book of the Dead (New York: Bantam Books, 1994), p— 10.

¹⁰*Ibid.*, p. 18.