

ORGANIC FARMERS ASSOCIATION

April 29, 2021

U.S. Department of Agriculture
1400 Independence Avenue SW
Washington, DC 20250

Re: Docket Number USDA-2021-0003

Dear Secretary Vilsack:

Organic farmers prioritize soil health, biodiversity, and ecological systems and do not use inputs like synthetic fertilizers that contribute to greenhouse gas emissions. But the USDA needs to do more to make sure the organic standards keep up with what organic farmers can do to protect the environment and help reduce climate change.

We urge USDA to:

- Prohibit hydroponic operations from being certified organic. Organic should be based in the soil.
- Finish stalled regulations for livestock (the Origin of Livestock rule and the Organic Livestock and Poultry Practices rule) and enforce the pasture standards to make sure organic animals are raised in climate-friendly pasture-based systems.
- Make sure USDA conservation programs work for organic farms and prioritize practices that build resilience like well-managed grazing and building healthy soils.
- Require any new USDA program on climate to work for all types and sizes of farms – organic, diversified, small-scale, in all regions. Don't repeat the same mistakes of previous USDA programs that were designed only for large-scale conventional farms raising commodity crops. Reach out to all types of farmers and engage communities of color to find out how to design programs that will work for everyone.
- Invest in research on organic methods and technical assistance to help organic farmers solve production challenges and help farmers who want to transition to organic.
- Farmers cannot help the climate if they can't afford to keep farming. Climate policy for agriculture must include rules and enforcement to make sure that organic markets provide a fair price for farmers and a fair wage for workers.

Sincerely,
