10 TOP TIPS TO MAKE YOUR BIG DAY RUN SMOOTHLY

1. Pick your perfect venue

The Hurlingham Club is a hidden gem bordering the Thames in Fulham, a beautiful location which encompasses 42 acres of green oasis and centred by the white Georgian façade of the traditional Clubhouse. For a striking and unrivalled focal point, the Palm Court has a glass dome cascading light into the room below. Additionally, the terrace room is a beautiful space with floor to ceiling glass windows and views over the grounds and River Thames.

2. Delicious menus

The food is one of the most significant aspects of your day. Come along to a tasting session with our expert team of chefs so that they can create your perfect menu. Think about having canapés and late evening appetisers, to ensure your guests are adequately energised throughout the event. Ask guests in advance about allergies and dietary requirements so we can cater accordingly.

3. Supply me to the moon

We have a fantastic list of trusted suppliers we work with, covering all aspects of your big day, from flowers to entertainment. This is where you can make your wedding truly bespoke and experienced suppliers will help you to achieve your vision.

4. A little help from friends

It is easy to get lost with all the elements of your wedding planning, so do not be afraid to pass some control over to people in your bridal party by delegating tasks. And do make full use of our event manager, too.

5. To do before 'I Do'

The lead up to your wedding will be busy, create your wish-list, manage your budget and secure the must-haves early on in the planning. Stick to your deadlines.

6. A couple of extra winks

Make time for yourself beforehand by relaxing and indulging in luxury so you feel rested and pampered. The Hurlingham Club has several highly recommended hotels nearby, some of which have their own spas.

7. Arriving in style

Brides are traditionally late, however, if it is caused by an external problem rather than by design, it just causes stress. With this in mind, plan your route, check for any disruptions, and stay close to the venue the night before.

8. One step at a time

It really helps if everyone in your wedding party understands the scheduling for the day, such as timing for the photos, the first dance and the cake cutting, to ensure everyone can be in position.

9. Time for two

Steal a moment with your partner and enjoy some time to yourselves. The Hurlingham Club has many tranquil areas where you can escape to privacy, especially the beautiful hidden garden.

10. Breathe and HAVE FUN!

This is your special day, remember to enjoy every moment and take in your surroundings, your guests' happiness and the everlasting memories this day will bring.

“Steal a moment with your partner and enjoy some time to yourselves.”

THINK OUTSIDE THE BOX

Create the most memorable day

Fun and games

Look at unusual entertainment for your guests. A coconut shy or a Roll a Ball Derby from Clownfish Events will add a fun element and provide a great ice breaker if guests don't yet know each other. A mirror booth can also be huge fun.

The entertainer

Your choice of entertainment is vast. Think about what is right for you and your guests, rather than what might be on-trend. Blank Canvas Entertainment has a fantastic range of options, including magic, caricaturists, children's entertainers and strolling bands.

Extravagant cakes

Wedding cakes have been transforming from a traditional fruit cake with fondant icing to next level masterpieces. Incorporating a multitude of textures and sugar sculptures, the traditional tiers are being swapped for elegant abstract displays. Watch out for extravagant decors and flavours, a contrast to the 2018/2019 naked cake.

Unique favours

You can choose from an array of personalised gifts to give out as favours but some of our favourites include packets of wildflower seeds that your guests can plant to remember your special day. Or a mini succulent in a pot is a quirky alternative. You could also buy each guest a lottery ticket and pop it into a cute envelope.

Social Media

#to\_post\_or\_not\_to\_post

Whether you are looking for a private day with your loved ones or an all-out documentary, consider what you want in advance and let your guests know. Everyone is a professional photographer with current technology, however, there is no harm in the photo and social media ban. There has been an increase in banning phones from the ceremony for guests to focus on the main event, and leave the photos to the professionals.

Hello food trucks!

Perhaps a cheese van from thecheesebar.com or Buttermilk chicken burgers from meatthechef.com? Food trucks are a great way to provide a gorgeous evening snack for your guests and a fun way to incorporate your favourite foods.

Sweet stations

A candy bar can look incredible when tied into your scheme. Or go retro and get people talking about treats from the past. You can provide personalised bags too, so they can take sweets away as a wedding favour.

Beauty stations

Most people want to look their best at a wedding, but rather than everyone crowding around a mirror in the ladies, book the professionals for a wedding beauty station where guests can pop in for a quick makeup touch up or hair fix.

MEET THE WEDDING PLANNERS

Harriet Harding
and Marcia Wood

Offering over 10 years of event experience combined, The Hurlingham Club's Event Managers are able to offer dedicated support to all of our couples, creating an overall outstanding experience all the way through the planning process to the delivery of your special day. Harriet and Marcia have exceptional knowledge to guide you through the process and they are here to make your dream wedding become a reality.

Harriet Harding

Harriet's love for weddings and events started at 16 when she was offered the opportunity to have work experience at an events logistics company. She quickly got the events bug, volunteering on events such as the Tour de France, Tour de Yorkshire and AEGON Ilkley Trophy Tournament; before going on to graduate with a degree in events management from Sheffield Hallam University. With the degree under her belt, Harriet dived into the wedding industry working in hotels before moving to London to join us at the Hurlingham Club. Harriet is an asset to the team, bringing five years of wedding planning experience and energy to the club.

Marcia Wood

Whilst completing a degree in events management from Manchester Metropolitan University, Marcia was busy volunteering in various projects around Manchester, including volunteering in the events team at Royal Manchester Children's Hospital Charity. Marcia then moved down to London where she has managed events across several prestigious venues such as; Royal Hospital Chelsea, Merchant Taylors' Hall and the Garrick Club before joining the team at the Hurlingham Club in 2019.

Favourite part of the day

Harriet: 'The first moment the couple arrive on their special day and see the space dressed is so magical... what can be months and often years of planning all coming together into just one moment is a fantastic experience and one I am always honoured to be a part of.'

Marcia: 'I have two... the first look when the couple see each other in the ceremony, there is a lot of emotion and love in the room which is contagious. I also love seeing the newlyweds on the dancefloor with their friends and family letting their hair down and enjoying months of their hard work'

What is your all-time favourite wedding tradition?

Harriet: 'This has to be the first dance! I have noticed a trend for couples really going to town with this, with brass bands 'crashing' their dance, couple dance routines and flash mobs. Alternatively take the traditional route and make it just about you and your partner it really depends on your personality.'

Marcia: 'The exchanging of rings! It is one of the only traditions without a questionable origin and it symbolises eternity, therefore it has to be this. Also, the ring is placed on the 4th finger as its vein apparently runs directly to the heart which is cheesy but I love it.'

Are there any current trends you love?

Harriet: 'I think people feel they have to adhere to certain wedding traditions but realistically your day can be as unique as you are. I love to see the bride making a speech as traditionally this is not the case - if you want to do a speech, go for it, you have just as many stories and people to thank: why let the men have all the fun?'

Marcia: 'I am a massive fan of ditching gender roles, who says you cannot have bridesmen and groomswomen? Have your favourite people by your side, supporting you!'

Three words to describe weddings at the Hurlingham Club...

Harriet: 'Elegant, exclusive and historic.'

Marcia: 'Three words is difficult as it is so much more, but... quintessential, lavish and magical.'

What advice would you give couples who are in the planning process?

Harriet: 'Get creative, write a to do list, make mood boards, go on Pinterest and speak to your venue manager if you are choosing a venue. They know what works in the space so they can advise what has worked/ not so much in the past trust them!'

Marcia: 'Utilise the professionals! That is what they are there for and they will be happy to help. Get advice, discuss options and watch your dream wedding come to life.'

BRIDAL STYLE

We ask top bridalwear designer Phillipa
Lepley how to find the perfect dress...

Before you begin your dress search, try to decide what style of wedding you are going for and know your venue. Take your time and enjoy doing your research. There are so many wonderful magazines, websites, blogs and social media accounts out there filled with inspirational ideas. It's so helpful to have a feel of the wedding before starting to look for the dress.

Work out what your budget is. There's not just the dress to think about... there's the shoes, the accessories and the lingerie too. Brides often ask me what they should splurge and save on and I always say to them that if the dress is perfectly fitted (and not wearing you) people won't be looking anywhere else...!

Dessy

Phillipa Lepley

TRENDS:

Elegance and feminine grace run through the latest collection from Phillipa Lepley. Strong designs are softened with hand-tied bows and beaded embellishment. Pale pink makes an appearance too, for the bride looking for something different. Long sleeves and vintage crystals are a key trend for 2020.

Start the process early. If you go down the couture route the possibilities are endless, and you need to be able to take your time and allow your dress-designers to help you make all the important decisions, resulting in your perfect look for the day.

Always be open-minded and don't ever dismiss something until you have tried it on. What I call 'wild cards' are so often 'the one'. That is why our appointments are an hour and a half long, so you can try on lots of different frocks!

When you come with other people everybody has their own opinion, and although they are trying to help it can be confusing. I always advise coming to the first appointment on your own. If you're having a couture dress made there will be many more opportunities to invite your bridesmaids or family along to fittings once the dress has been chosen.

You will know when you have found the dress, so don't panic and go with your instincts. You will get it right. I always say it is a nice problem if you like a few totally different dresses - just keep coming back and drilling down until everything is apparent.

Phillipa Lepley

AND THE BRIDESMAIDS...

There's a whole range of ideas out there that mean you can find a style to suit all of your bridesmaids... they don't need to be matchy-matchy. Pick a unifying colour and choose a selection of styles – from trousers suits, to tea dresses to evening gowns, there will be a look to suit everyone's ages and shapes. Or pick various tones of one colour so that you can pick a shade that works for all your maids' complexions, eye and hair colours.

The Alternative Wedding Gift Guide

There's only so many toasters and Le Creuset pans a couple could possibly want. Fortunately, there are plenty of other ideas out there for a wedding gift list...

Trehouse retreat

When all the buzz of the wedding and honeymoon is over, it is nice to have something to look forward to. Have a weekend away in mind in an unusual location, and request money towards it. From suspended treehouses to evenings on a barge in the Regent's Canal, to a night in a countryside Victorian folly, there are plenty of unusual accommodation options out there to be explored. Canopy & Stars, Beds on Board, or CoolStays all offer excellent options for quirky accommodation, right on your doorstep in the capital and beyond.

Work of art

If you're looking for a piece to decorate your home, why not go to your favourite art gallery, many of which will take contributions towards a painting or sculpture for your home. You could also commission your own piece of art for that truly personal piece.

Honeymoon treats

Getting people to chip in to your honeymoon budget is both a practical and fun option. Rather than just asking for cash, these gift lists let you select an experience. There are plenty of websites out there where you can compile a holiday list and give people options to contribute to everything from a beach-side cocktail, to a catamaran trip. Flight upgrades are also a popular choice. Check out buymyholiday.co.uk or look to individual luxury travel brands like Kuoni who can help you out with registries.

Immersive theatre experience

Go for something a little out of the ordinary and jot down an immersive theatre experience on your list. Dotted across the capital are plenty of theatre events with outlandish themes set to impress. How about a candlelit soiree back to the 1920s, or a detective-style Sherlock Holmes escape room?

Sporty types

If you're an active pair, why not opt for something different with a sporty experience for two. London has plenty to offer in terms of sports - think kayaking down the canals with Secret Adventures, or paddle boarding with Back of Beyond Adventures, which offer tranquil tours along London's riversides. Adrenaline junkies might enjoy a speedboat trip along the Thames, an abseil down the Orbit slide near the o2, or for an inner-city countryside experience, vouchers for horse riding in Richmond Park would make for a fun treat. Check out sites like redletterdays.co.uk, where you can get fantastic vouchers for outdoor experiences for two.

Give to charity

If you're the type of couple that really does have everything and want to feel like you are making a difference to others instead, set up a page with JustGiving or Virgin to encourage charity wedding gifts. You can pick a charity of your choice that means something to you, with a wide range of initiatives that do outstanding work across all sectors.

NICE DAY FOR A GREEN WEDDING...

Indiebride
© Laura Viktualia Photography

It is possible to have an eco-friendly big day without tying yourselves in knots. Follow this guide and your nuptials will not only be kinder to the environment but also keep your conscience clear

So many individual elements combine to make the perfect wedding but what if these components also contribute to a serious amount of waste? The average wedding of around 100 people produces around 400lbs of it – a truly astonishing figure when you consider there are over 230,000 UK weddings per year.

With climate change agendas gaining momentum and more people taking action to reduce their carbon footprint, use less plastics and adopt more eco-friendly lifestyles, it is also possible to go green when it comes to tying the knot. From sustainable dresses and flowers, to eco-conscious favours and transport, here are some amazingly simple ways to have a stunning wedding and reduce your impact on the environment...

Wear a sustainable wedding dress

Every bride wants to look special on their wedding day and no matter what your style, there are many eco-friendly options when it comes to wedding dresses. If you're after a vintage look, then perhaps choose a pre-loved outfit, which will also reduce costs. Head to www.preloved.co.uk or www.openforvintage.com for ideas. Meanwhile, there are many ethical designers who produce beautiful gowns including Sanyukta Shrestha (www.sanyuktashrestha.com) a keen supporter of sustainability, fair trade, women's equality and an ethical workforce, and Minna – a Finnish designer who is committed to helping brides find their eco-friendly dream dress at an affordable price (www.indiebridelondon.co.uk)

Choose a location that is close

By opting for a location that is close by and near the majority of your guests, you'll be reducing carbon footprints and removing the need for air travel or long car journeys. If this isn't possible make sure to let your guests know how they can offset their carbon emissions by signing up to companies who are committed to the Voluntary Gold Standard or Voluntary Carbon Standard or the Climate Action Reserve, such as Atmosfair (www.atmosfair.de) and Gold Standard (www.goldstandard.org).

Meanwhile, organise a car pool for the big day, or hire a coach or bus to take all your guests to and from the venue without the need for so many cars. Encourage guests to use public transport or walk, if possible.

Select an eco-friendly venue

An eco-friendly venue doesn't have to mean an empty field. There are many venues across the UK that are well-established wedding venues, which means they already have everything you need from a marquee, to tableware, as well as recycling facilities, so there is no need to source outside businesses who have to travel a distance to bring items and set up. Choose a sustainable wedding venue that is also committed to reducing waste and which doesn't use items such as plastic straws or disposable dinnerware and glasses. Meanwhile, it is essential to choose caterers who have good relationships with local producers and suppliers, as well as making sure only seasonal produce is used, reducing the need for plastic packaging and food air miles, as well as bolstering the local economy, too.

Go paperless

These days, practically everything can be done online or digitally - and sending wedding invitations is no exception. With pretty designs and the options of creating personalised videos or even creating your own wedding website, can save you substantial costs and get rid of the need for tons of paper - which will only end up in the recycling bin. Plus, the added benefit is, people will have to respond via email, too, which means there should be less delays in RSVPs.

Opt for ethical flavours

Instead of written or printed name cards, you could have individual biscuits and ice guests' names onto them - then they can also double up as edible favours. Or use old jam jars to fill with sweet treats or homemade jam. If you're still set on buying favours and don't have the aptitude to make your own, offer gifts that give back to the environment such as wildflower seeds. Friendsoftheearth.uk does personalised packets made from recycled Manila paper and decorated with bees.

Borrow the decorations

Rather than spend a fortune buying decorations - why not borrow or hire them instead. If you've gone with an established wedding venue, then it is likely they will already have plenty that you can use.

“Instead of printed name cards, you could have individual biscuits and ice guests' names on to them”

Ask for contributions

Rather than ask for wedding gifts that you really don't need, why not ask for contributions towards your honeymoon for instance (and off-setting it of course), or if people insist on buying a tangible gift, then suggest eco-friendly and sustainable items.

Flowers

The best way to reduce the impact on the environment when it comes to flowers is to choose wisely. Source from local suppliers only and only flowers that are in season. This reduces the carbon footprint of having to fly in out of season blooms. Meanwhile, use potted plants or herbs as table centrepieces as they can be taken home afterwards.

FLORAL TRENDS

Jamie Grant from Gardenia of London showcases 6 beautiful ways to feature flowers on your big day

“Use fronds of greenery, sprigs of herbs or single stems to brighten up place settings”

The bridal bouquet

Your bridal bouquet is a very special part of your day and an opportunity to incorporate personal touches like favourite flowers, a piece of heirloom lace, or trinkets and treasures with special meaning.

Cake flowers

If your budget won't stretch to an elaborately iced wedding cake, you can use flowers and foliage to transform simple white tiers into a breath-taking showstopper.

Place settings

It's the little details that bring your wedding design together – and they don't have to be expensive. Use fronds of greenery, sprigs of herbs or single stems to brighten up your place settings; and scatter simple vases and jam jars throughout your venue for colour, scent and interest.

Long banquet tables

Banquet tables are relaxed and sociable, and look beautiful with floral runners or smaller, low level arrangements repeated down the length of the space.

Tall table centres

Want to make a big statement? Tall, opulent table centres always make an impression. Ask your florist to use structures and containers that lift the bulk of the flowers above eye-level – it's hard to get to know your fellow wedding guests if you have to peer through greenery to see them!

Floral arches

These are a big trend still for 2020 giving couples the chance to tie the knot under a bower of blooms, ferns and grasses. They're great for outdoor ceremonies, but can also be installed inside to create a stunning focal point.

HONEYMOON OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

By Angela Griffin, Flight Centre

Beach honeymoon not your cup of tea? Looking for a little more excitement? This was the very dilemma that I faced when planning my own honeymoon. While googling ‘honeymoon ideas’ brought up endless photos of identikit paradise beaches, which for me held limited appeal, I wanted something different – some adventure, a new culture, and scenery to die for. So if, like me, you’re using your honeymoon as the perfect excuse for another far-flung holiday, then read on, as I let you in on my favourite non-beach honeymoon destinations:

Road tripping across America

Hire a car, wind down the windows and feel the wind in your hair as you cruise the US highways. Yes, that’s right, self-driving is a fabulous way to see the sights at your own pace, and the USA is a great (and easy) place to try it. Choose from an almost infinite number of routes – try driving the east coast from Florida to Boston via New York and Philadelphia, travel California’s rugged Big Sur, or for the ultimate, once-in-a-lifetime road trip, drive Route 66 across the country from Chicago to Santa Monica.

Safari in Tanzania

There are thousands of safari options across Africa, but for me Tanzania stands out from the crowd, both for its excellent game viewing and also for its close proximity to the picture-perfect beaches of Zanzibar, ensuring you don’t miss out on at least a few days chilling by the sea if you wish to. Spend around four days on safari in the Ngorongoro Crater looking for lions, leopards and elephants, then hotfoot it over to the neighbouring Serengeti National Park for some of the best wildlife watching in the world.

Still like a little bit of beach in the mix?

As if the fabled temples of Angkor Wat didn't make Cambodia enough of a draw, it's also easy to add an all-luxury beach experience here and still stay off the beaten track. Head south to the private island of Song Saa. This luxury resort has been created with sustainability as a guiding influence, using local materials and craftsman, while ticking all the usual boxes – overwater villas with private pools, white sand beaches and turquoise waters. And why not seal your union with a monk's blessing?

Go big or stay home

With direct flights to Perth, Australia is now an even more accessible honeymoon destination, even if you're not lucky enough to be taking a post-wedding career break. And staying on the west coast doesn't mean having to compromise. Where else could you enjoy a holiday that combines sweeping sandy coastlines with dramatic desert landscapes, waterfalls, gorges, rainforest and some of the most fascinating natural encounters you'll find anywhere on the planet? Take a selfie with the cute quokkas on Rottnest Island, swim with whale sharks off Ningaloo Reef or meet the wild dolphins of Monkey Mia. Let Western Australia take your breath away.

Cruising the Galapagos Islands

The ultimate wildlife destination has to be the Galapagos Islands, made famous by Charles Darwin's ground-breaking Theory of Evolution by Natural Selection. There are few places on the planet where you can see so many uniquely-adapted species in such a small area. Fly in from Quito in Ecuador, join a cruise ship and spot Galapagos penguins, bottlenose dolphins, bright orange Sally Lightfoot crabs and marine iguanas to name just a few. To add a touch of honeymoon sparkle, choose a smaller, more intimate vessel or even a yacht for your cruise; splash out on the deluxe suite or book a cabin with its own deck for evenings under the stars.

Stay somewhere unique

For an extra romantic break, consider staying somewhere unusual. I'm talking palaces, castles, mansions and safari tents! And don't think you'll be roughing it – some of these are simply stunning. For palaces, India is the place to go; try the Gajner Palace Hotel in Rajasthan. For a fairy-tale castle try a stay in Quebec City's Fairmont Le Château Frontenac; although perhaps not technically a castle, it certainly feels like one. Alternatively, sip wine in the late evening sun in an antebellum mansion in Savannah, or stay in a luxury tented safari lodge – there are plenty to choose from across Africa and many offer honeymoon bonuses such as Champagne sundowners and private dinners under the stars, with only the sound of roaring lions for company.

Spot Polar bears, Arctic Canada

What can be more romantic than surrounding yourself with pure white landscapes and spending your days searching for beluga whales, Polar bears and Arctic foxes? Well head to Churchill in northern Canada and you can do just that. Set sail on a wildlife-watching cruise on Hudson Bay and look for Polar bears on the tundra, then wrap up warm and spend those snowy nights hunting the aurora borealis. Where do I sign up?

Climb a mountain

It may not sound like the most relaxing thing to do on your honeymoon, but climbing a mountain gives you a great sense of achievement, not to mention fantastic views. Plus, you'll wear off all the Champagne and wedding cake calories while you're at it. And, what's more, when you're struggling with heavy legs or dwindling energy, having your partner by your side is excellent motivation to push on to the summit. Perhaps choose Mount Kinabalu in Borneo, or really push the boat out and summit Kilimanjaro, Africa's highest mountain. Then you could add a safari on the end too. Just saying.

Tour the temples of India's Golden Triangle

After shortlisting all of the above options and far more besides, my husband and I ended up honeymooning in India. Torn between the fabled Golden Triangle and trekking in the Himalayas, we went for the less energetic (but no less spectacular) option and spent a couple of weeks touring the temples and palaces of Delhi, Agra and Jaipur, including the magnificent Taj Mahal, gorging ourselves on aromatic curries and staying in some wonderfully ornate palaces along the way. But in the end we just couldn't resist a bit of mountain, and tacked a few days in the Himalayan foothills in Shimla on the end.
