Philosophizing with children

Playing means discovering the world with all senses. Every little occasion is enough reason for children to start playing – everything becomes a game and a dandelion gone to seed is something special. A sensual picture book with photographs for the whole family – for parents who know that there is nothing more wonderful than to playfully discover the world with children.

There are lots of occasions for playing different games – finding just simple things, little treasures like bird feathers or pine cones. And if you pose children the right questions, you can start real conversations. »Where do little chicks sleep? How much grass do you need to build a nest?« or »How does it feel when hands whisper?« »Who lives inside the apple core?« Mille Foli's questions are touching and encourage to blow and stroke, sing and dance, run and frolic and hide in the grass.

- * An interactive photograph and question book, which encourages conversations
- * Great creative potential
- * Main emphasis on the world of nature
- * 75 wonderful photographs and over 70 questions

CANDY OR NO CANDY – THAT IS THE QUESTION

Time to go to bed! A little girl finds a piece of candy. Should she eat it? Or rather not? This situation causes an inner turmoil carried to the extremes with succulent language and space-consuming illustrations.

She simply has to eat that piece of candy. Yet after the sand man comes, she is not allowed to eat anything. But maybe it is cold... and it is nice and warm in her mouth. No, she can't! But maybe some monsters are looking for it? And her mouth would be the ideal hiding place! Wait a minute – maybe the piece of candy is just a dirty trap? Christian Duda places himself deep inside a child's fantasy world and Julia Friese provides the corresponding illustrations of magnificent power.

Christian Duda's real name is Christian Achmed Gad Elkarim. He was Austrian, Egyptian and is now German. He was a Catholic, Mohammedan and has now long been a happy atheist. He is a writer, producer, father and lives with his family near Berlin.

Julia Friese, born in 1979 in Leipzig, studied graphic design and fine arts in Leipzig, Bilbao and Dublin. She loves to illustrate books by Christian Duda. Both were nominated for the German Youth Literature Prize in 2008. She lives and works as a freelance graphic designer and illustrator in Berlin.

What is the blow-up crocodile doing in the zoo?

© Beltz & Gelberg

Doro Göbel, born in 1958, and Peter Knorr, born in 1956, live as freelance illustrators in Nierstein on the Rhine. Both illustrate children's books and design book covers. Their seek-and-find series that appeared with Beltz & Gelberg was done in teamwork.

For fans of the beloved seek and find series by Doro Göbel and Peter Knorr – one of the main characters from the storybooks experiences an exciting adventure in the zoo.

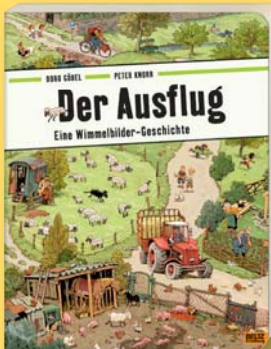

Tom and Paul go to the zoo with their grandparents. Of course Paul has his beloved inflatable crocodile along with him. Paul thinks it will have fun swimming in the flamingos' pond! Yet he didn't think about the danger of the pelican, who kidnaps the blow-up animal. A wild chase after the beloved crocodile! It gets really exciting when the toy animal meets up with its living counterpart ...

Fast-paced, splendidly illustrated and full of humour: Martin Baltscheit's new tale of the lion is a must for all those who love water – and for those who can't swim!

Help, the spring tide! The lioness lies on the island and pleads for someone to rescue her. Unfortunately, the lion can't swim. The other animals have all sorts of advice for the lion – after all, the duck, the frog and the trout have no trouble swimming! The flea thinks he should leap forward, the bird says to fly. It's when the cricket calls him a coward that the lion has to take action. He charges into the water and sinks like a stone... In the end, the lion accomplishes his task and swims to the island and back with the lioness.

Axel Scheffler, born in 1957 in Hamburg, lives and works as an illustrator in London with his family. His picturebook The Gruffalo brought him to fame worldwide. In addition to the illustrations for Julia Donaldson's texts, he has illustrated such wonderful books like The Squirrel is Quite Small, But... and When Rabbits Could Still Fly by Melanie von Bismarck.

Frantz Wittkamp, born in 1943, studied art education and biology and lives and works as a freelance graphic designer in Lüdinghausen. Many of his books have been published by Beltz & Gelberg.

Scheffler's fantastic illustrations paired with Frantz Wittkamp's subtly cryptic quatrains are produced by great champions – particularly wonderful because they playfully and ironically boil small bits of wisdom to an essence.

Frantz Wittkamp's »Foundlings« follow a long tradition of nonsense and aphorisms – wonderful pieces of worldly wisdom about people, animals and other strange creatures – expertly rhymed, very amusing and sometimes also sad. Axel Scheffler's amazing illustrations help see how playfully cunning and ironic they can be from time to time.

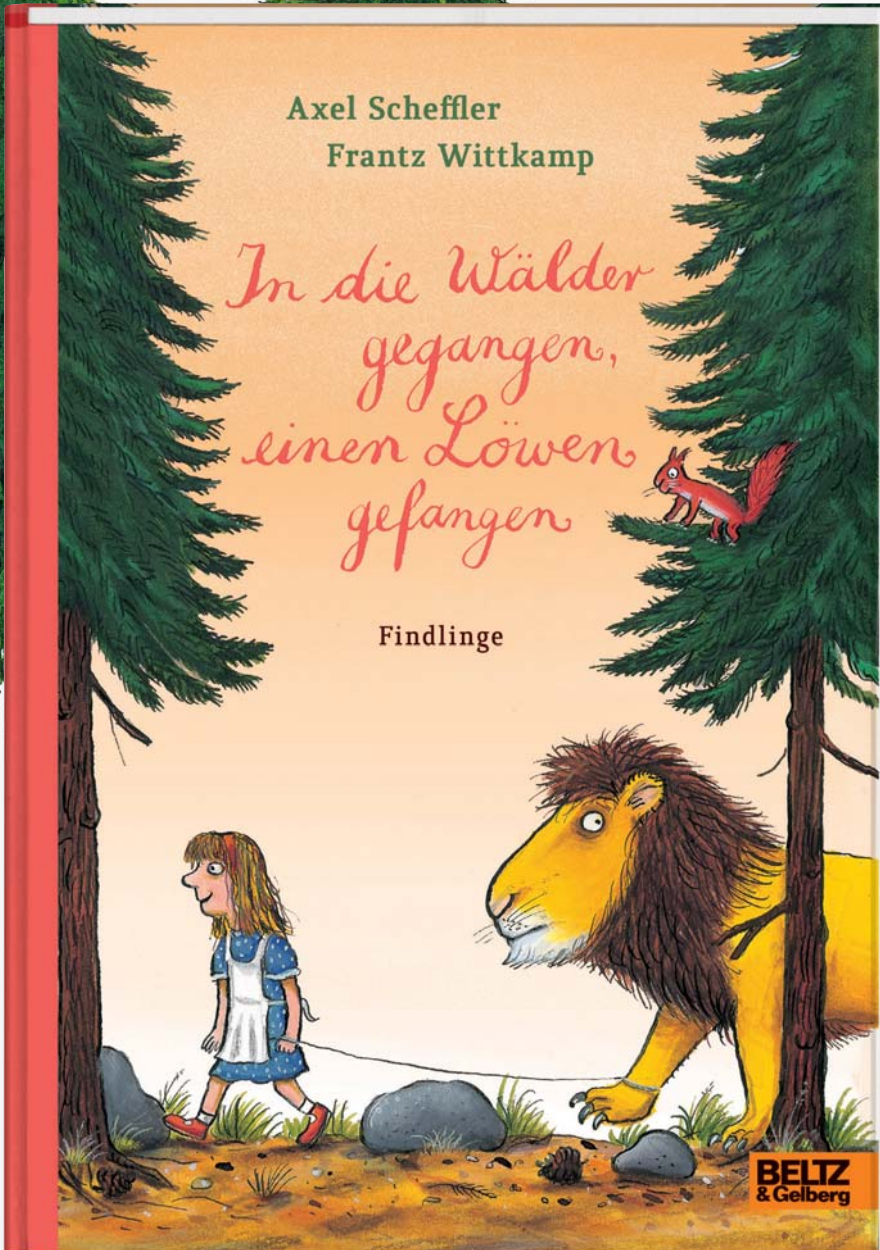

I know some dangerous creatures,
the dragon seems the worst.
But when I photograph its features, into laughter it will burst.

On the ground right next to me,
a big black animal you see.
Sometimes it licks my cheek,
for we've know each other over a week.

Verena Reinhardt, born in 1983, has been writing novels since she was a child. She studied biology and English Literature in Mainz and Birminham/England and did her thesis on the behaviour of honey bees regarding pollination. She also plays lead guitar in a punk band. Verena Reinhardt lives in Wiesbaden. Friedrich Snapdragon, the Bumblebee Rider is her first work to be published.

Friedrich Snapdragon plunges himself into a crazy adventure together with Hieronymus Bumble, a spy for the Queen of Southward. They manage to get themselves into a huge mess in the course of which they expose a conspiracy and often fear for their lives.

Friedrich Snapdragon, who comes from a long line of famous bumblebee riders, is initially not at all happy about having Brumsel, chief of the secret service, accompany him to the north of the country to spy. When it turns out that the bewitching Queen Ophrys is a dangerous despot, great danger threatens. Things start to happen thick and fast, and after several voltes, all the insects, small animals and other living creatures join forces to render the queen harmless and to prevent the great war of Skarland.

A breathtaking debut of an extraordinary writer.

The flood fetches the greatest secrets

Konrad and his extremely annoying cousin are not the only ones who are curious about the bunker at the beach. That place seems to attract people like a pile of horse manure attracts flies! What are they all looking for? Gold? And whose corpse is that? Konrad and Lisbeth run into many strange things this summer on the French Atlantic coast, yet lastly it is the family's own secret that shakes everyone up.

Everything is Konrad's fault – probably even the fact that the seawater is salty. But having to spend his vacation with his prodigy cousin, Lisbeth (who does back dives into the pool and won the math olympics) really tops things off. Never mind. At any rate, Konrad and Lisbeth also feel drawn to the cement bunker and want to take a closer look. They not only discover the Blue House when doing so, they also stumble across some peculiar mysterious documents originated from dark times and closely guarded family secrets. These are first revealed when the mystery of Lisbeth's disappearance is solved! A wonderfully thrilling new novel that is full of suspense – and once again proves what a »literary champion« (Süddeutsche Zeitung) Martina Wildner is.

»Martina Wildner is presumably one of the most interesting voices in the sector of preteen literature. (...) Few of these novels present such depth and nevertheless so thrilling, complex and such a fascinating read.« eselsohr Anke Leitzgen is both a journalist and author. She was the chief editor of miss VOGUE and writer for the SZ-Magazin and Zeit-Magazin. She has worked writing screen plays and filmed documentaries. But her favourite thing to do is to write books for children and youths.

Dr. Anna Bockelmann studied biology with the main focus on marine biology. After having received her doctor's degree, she has worked in oceanography for 10 years. Today she works as teacher in Kiel with the aim to pass on her view on nature and to teach children her knowledge. Discover the Ocean is her first non-fiction book for children.

There are thousands of fascinating things to discover at the sea and on the coast. But at home, researchers can also look into many questions about this topic!

How does the salt get into seawater? Why do coasts and beaches look different in different places? How do monster waves occur? Those who spend their vacations at the seaside can find out lots of new, exciting facts. Even those who stay at home or even live by the sea also have many questions that want to be answered.

This book contains all kinds of expert knowledge on the topic of the ocean and coastlines as well as many experiments that will make children into oceanographers.

Today Mahatma Gandhi (1869-1948) is still the icon of peaceful protest. He fought for India's independence, for justice and truth and against violence. He fearlessly and uncompromisingly followed his visions with a great sensitivity for people and their needs.

»Virtuous, abstinent, non-violent and bound to the truth«, thus reads the Satyagraha oath that Gandhi followed his whole life. This biography tells of an extraordinary life without idealizing him. About the young lawyer who was too shy to speak in front of an audience, who developed his beliefs in South Africa among the Boers only to return to India to become a charismatic politician, able to convince hundreds of thousands of Indians to join the famous »salt march« – a tactically brilliant achievement. A fascinating biography of the peaceful rebel, written from a critical point of view.

SET TO ZERO

How does it feel to leave your home? And to find a new life somewhere else? And how do you start a new life?

The main topic of the year 2015 is surely the story of people who had to leave their home countries. People who have experienced uprooting and upheaval, who were forced to start all over again somewhere new. This book describes some of their stories and tells how it feels to »reset« their lives by starting all over again. How they cope with their daily lives, but also which dreams and hopes they have for the future. And because nothing would work without volunteers, those who support and provide assistance in everyday life or just simply listen also tell their stories. An exciting, current topic.
