Vision: The Epperlys

The Epperlys have had a love affair with travel for almost 50 years. It started in graduate school, and they now have experiences from 45 different countries—and counting!

Vic, former mayor of Kennewick and retired engineer from Battelle, and Julie, retired instructor at Columbia Basin College (CBC) teaching English as a second language (ESL), have combined their love of travel with their passion for giving back. Globally, they have supported small business projects in 72 countries via micro-lender Kiva. Most recently they traveled to Guatemala to collaborate with communities to install water purification systems.

Locally, they are equally engaged in our community. They have frequently shared their travel experiences in Kennewick School District classrooms since their granddaughter, Emily, was in the 1st grade. Vic tutors 20 hours a week at Lincoln, Westgate, Highlands, and now Southridge, where Emily is currently enrolled. Julie continues her passion for ESL tutoring at CBC.

Vic and Julie learned of Three Rivers Community Foundation by visiting the website more than 10 years ago. Vic was “blown away” by the variety of needs in our community. The couple invested in 3RCF with an unrestricted endowment, trusting the Board to put funds where they are needed most. Vic has participated in the grant selection process for the past 3 years, affirming firsthand the process and outcomes of partnering with 3RCF. Julie appreciates that “the Three Rivers Community Foundation means that our money is being directed to local needs, with low overhead.” Vic adds, “Having participated in the grantee selection process, I know the funds are being well used and that 3RCF is taking seriously their fiduciary responsibilities.” They both agree, “There is great need, and one person can’t do it all—Three Rivers is our go-to place with trust!”

Building a Legacy: T & R Farms, Ron & Rella Reimann

As a young couple, Ron and Rella Reimann returned to their farming roots after Ron came home from the Vietnam war. In 1973 they formed a partnership with Rella's father, Haakon Thomsen, and her twin brother, Porky. Thomsen and Reimann—the T and the R of the farms—started near Moses Lake with “dry land” farming. Ron became interested in irrigation technology. He began researching the least amount of water that could be used to produce high yields. Ron teamed with Nelson sprinkler systems to develop a variable pressure irrigation system. With irrigation, their land turned into a rich and high-yielding farm.

T&R Farms now produces corn, summer wheat, potatoes, apples, and more. In fact, they are known as innovators in water management, having received the Ag Hall of Fame Pioneer Award in 2010. And Ron and Rella's son Reid, a partner in T&R Farms, is now in the process of buying the farms, ensuring that family traditions are carried on. The Reimanns feel blessed by their successes and have given much to the community in return. “The Ag industry is philanthropic,” Rella explains, “and we all have something we support. Porky supports the arts, Reid supports medical programs, Ron and I support education and other community work.”

Rella helped found the Three Rivers Community Foundation and still serves on the Board. The Reimanns say they could not be more satisfied with the work. They appreciate the low administration costs as well as efficiencies of screening applicants, limiting duplication of projects, and evaluating how money is spent. They both read grant applications each year and decide together what to support. “I never knew there was so much need in our community,” Ron said.

Rella summarizes their commitment, “We work very hard for our money, and we don't want it wasted. To be able to watch what you donated grow and improve life in our community is deeply satisfying. 3RCF has earned our trust!”

Tri-Cities' Future: Therapeutic Riding of Tri-Cities (TROT)

What would you do if you had 30 years of experience as a speech therapist, loved horses, and had a passion for helping children with disabilities? Well, you might convince your husband to turn your barn and paddock into a center for therapeutic riding lessons. You might get your horse trained for therapeutic riding and your dog certified as a “therapy dog.” You might even get a second horse. That’s exactly what Cynthia MacFarlan did in establishing TROT: Therapeutic Riding Of Tri-Cities.

For Cynthia, this is a dream several years in the making. During her work in speech therapy that spans more than 14 years in our area, she encountered a 12-year-old patient with difficulty pronouncing the letter “R.” Learning that he loved horses, Cynthia promised him contact with hers if he practiced and learned to pronounce “Rs.” The resulting success led to other ideas, seed money, and TROT in 2014.

TROT’s animal therapists include 2 horses, Cocoa and Cowboy, as well as golden retriever Camry, all specially trained for people with disabilities. TROT addresses such challenges as autism, Down syndrome, spinal cord injury and related trauma as well as other physical and mental disabilities. Grants from 3RCF helped fund certification of staff and animals as well as provided scholarships for their services.

“I couldn’t have done it without Three Rivers Community Foundation,” Cynthia says. “I want the families that come to have this joyful experience of watching their loved ones gain--not just the therapeutic experience of improving their motor and communication skills--but to see their child’s self-esteem and independence improve, matched with smiles. We want the parents to be able to step back and just enjoy their child!”

How Does This Work?

A number of endowed funds already exist under Three Rivers Community Foundation's management.

If a specific need or problem is not being addressed, a new fund can be created under one of five basic structures:

Unrestricted Endowment Funds generate income from which the Foundation can make grants as it sees the need.

Field-Of-Interest Funds target specific areas of donor interest such as education, children's health or performing arts.

Donor Advised Funds allow donors and/or designees to recommend specific groups and grants to the Foundation board.

Scholarship Funds can be created by individuals, companies or school districts.

Non-Profit Agency Endowments can be established by organizations to permanently support their long-range planning needs.

Pass-Through Funds gives the donor an option to make annual gifts from which the entire principal amount is granted for particular purposes rather than adding to the endowment.
