So, in this article, I wanted to provide a gradual appearance to the call of CThulhu character creation process for the 7th edition. I was lucky enough to be able to play with its original author Sandy Petersen and with Chaosium's Lynne Hardy, the associated editor for the call of Cthulhu line. We hope that, I can also inspire you You to try to face the horrors of Lovecraftan on the road to the inevitable attacks of madness. When you give you the different steps to take during the process of creating the characters. Addunger This is also a true example of me creating a character so you can easily follow. Let's start the process of creating Cthulhu characters! A, before creating your character while the game is often played in the 1920s, the era in which to love him wrote his terrifying stunts, there are actually a nice number of settings where you can play call of Cthulhu. You can play to the end of the Roman era, through the Middle Ages, to modern times, and even in the future. It is therefore important to check with your caretaker of Arcane Lore that you will last, in order to prepare a representative character for the choice. It is also a good idea to talk to other players and see what their ideas are for the characters they want to play. While technically it is perfectly possible to play a Call of Cthulhu Investigator. Manual has a chapter that describes different This should help avoid the situation where an amateur, a drifter and a trib e member enter a bar and...If you want a challenge, you are invited to try that too. Once everyone has a basic concept of what they want to play, we can start throwing dice. The first step in the process of creating characters Call of Cthulhu: determine the characteristics. Valerie wants to play Call of Cthulhu for the first time. Ask Guardian Ralph what time the game will take place. Ralph tells her that they will play in the classic 1920s. The other players are Koen and Steven. Steven would love to play a tough private investigator while Koen prefers an older gentleman, Valerie still has no idea of all the professions and decides to let the process of creating character sparkle her creativity. There are really quite a few different ways to determine the characteristics of your character. First I will highlight the main sense that is used in the investigator's manual and then I will provide a quick description of some alternative/optional rules. In addition, the character will also have a Lucky score. For most of these features, 50 is considered a mean score For example, the resistance of an average human being is 50. Let's take a look at them one by one. Force (STR) The strength is determined by the launch 3D6 (3 dice to six faces). Multiply the result by 5 and you will have your strength feature. Constitution (CON) The score of constitution determines your character has. 160; Roll 3D6 and multiply the result by 5 to get your build feature. Ph Size (SIZ) Your score is a representation of your height and weight. The size will have an impact on your hit points and possible damage bonus. For your size feature roll 2D6+6 and multiply the result of 5.Dexterity is your agility. The higher the dexterity score, the sooner you can 2 act during the fight. Roll 3D6 and multiply the result by 5 to get your dexterity. feature. Also includes your appearance feature you roll 3D6 and multiply the result by 5. Intelligence represents your appearance feature your appeara for your personal interests. Its value is also equal to your Idea score. To determine your intelligence characteristic, roll 2D6+6 and multiply the result by 5. Power (POW) Power is useful to cast or resist magic spells. A Your power feature is achieved by rolling 3D6 and multiplying the result by 5. Education (EDU) Education measures your formal education. It differs from intelligence in that it determine your professional skill points and your knowledge score. Roll 2D6+6 and multiply the result by 5 to get your education feature. LuckLet's be honest, if you're facing of Mythos, you might need some luck here and there. To get out of hairy situations you can use a lucky roll. To determine your score, you roll up 3D6 and multiply the result by 5. Valerie rolls the dice and presents herself with the following results: A 160STR: 50CON: 50SIZ: 40DEX: 40DEX: 40DEX: 40DEX: 40DEX: 60INT: 75POW: 70EDU: 80Luck: 70Gooking at the results of his mental characteristics. He is thinking of a scholar, perhaps one of the first female professors of Miskatonic University. "They have a limited collection of books, right?" He asks. The caretaker Ralph nods and smiles. Page 58 of the Call of Cthulhu Investigator call manual provides five optional rules. These are basically other ways to generate characteristics. The first is to download the dice rolls and start again. Now this may seem super obvious to some of us, but believe me, it's good that it's literally printed in the book. Another option is to change the low rolls are connected to the characteristics in order. A third optional way is to throw all the dice first, and then decide which roll goes to which feature. There is also a point of purchase method to generate your scores by dividing 460 points among the eight features. Finally there is the method of guick fire. Described in the call of Cthulhu 7th Edition Ouick Start Rules. In this method you assign the scores 40, 50, 50, 60, 60, 70 and 80 to the different characteristics. Check with your custodian which method you prefer to use and move to the next step. Calling Cthulhu's Creation Rules gives you the option to age your character. Do you remember that 70-year-old professor you dreamed of playing? Depending on the age you choose to do a certain number of improvement checks for your educational feature. However, it also means that the older you start, the more points you have to deduct from yourself physical character of your 70-year-old dreams to overcome that byakhee are quite thin. Although if This could also be the case for your 20-year-old dreams to overcome that byakhee are quite thin. Although if This could also be the case for your 20-year-old dreams to overcome that byakhee are quite thin. old. This means that it can make a roll of improvement for its characteristic education and does not suffer from sanctions to its physical statistics. "At 31-year-olds, even in high heels, you will outrun that beakie thing," he exclaimed. The features that you have rolled in the first step of the characteristic education and does not suffer from sanctions to its physical statistics. determine a number of derived attributes. It's health points and magical health points are equal to your characteristic power score and your magic points equal to your characteristic power score divided by 5. Hit Pointsyour Points are determined by adding the scores of your Con and SIZ and then dividing them by 10. The fractions are rounded. Bonus damages & BuiltExceptionAlly Strong Characteristics could get a damage bonus in combination with Melee. Add your STR and Siz scores together and consult Table 1 on page 48 of the investigator manual to find the result for your damage bonus and build. The movement of movement of movement determines how many meters or meters you can move in a single round. To determine the rate of movement, check the following: Dex and str = siz: moving speed 8Dex and str > siz: increase your Dodge score by spending skill points in the Ability section of the character creation process. The value feature of Valerie is 70, so it starts with a very healthy dose of 70 health points. "No longer running in high heels," he says, while making some archaic gestures with his hands. His smile quickly fades away however, as he realized of his character the A 90-point score does not give you any bonus for damage or modification of construction. Comparing your DEX of 40 and your STR of 50 with your SIZ of 40, We can determine that the speed of movement of his character will be 8. His Dodge ability starts from 20 points. Valerie is curious to know all the other abilities of the game and wonders if a chance on 5 to dodge will save her (and her high heels). Chapter 4 of the investigator's manual details all the different professions you can choose from. The book details all the different professions such as the Journalist or the Editor are referred to as Lovecraftian as these professions often appear in Lovecraft stories. Others, such as Alienist employment, are classified as Classics, which means they are only available in the 1920s. The same applies to occupations such as the Hacker, which of course falls under the category "Modern". Each profession is provided with a short description, a certain number of professional skills points, a credit rating, suggested contacts and 8 skills that define the profession. "So much to choose! "She makes a list of professions that she likes: Ancient, Ancient, Bookseller, Librarian, Occultist or Professor. As Koen indicates that she would like to play a professor, Valerie eliminates this option from the list. She thinks the Librarian is only working for one institution and would like her character to be an independent woman who has her own business. Having a library would also allow her to filter hidden books for her personal collection like Book Dealer. His Job Skill Points are four times his EDU score, so 320. These points can assign the following competences: Evaluate, Drive Car, History, Library Use, Own Language, and an interpersonal skill (Charm, Fast Talk, Intimidate, Persuade). Persuaded). The library profession gives you some suggested contacts such as bibliographers, libraries and universities, and customers. This gives Valerie the opportunity to connect her character
