Hello there!

HAPPILY MADE IN ISSAQUAH by Alison Lang.

There are a lot of ways to use a graphic design degree, and after a few computer-driven jobs I decided that I really wanted to use my own two hands to make neat things. In 2009 I began printing with a vintage tabletop letterpress, and have since expanded my studio to include a large letterpress from the 1890's and all the other tools I need to make paper, cards, journals, and more.

WHERE DOES THE ART COME FROM?

Every design starts as a little idea in my head, I like to play with words, nostalgia, and problem-solving. I spend some time on the graphite sketch that will be the basis of the design. After a lot of drawing and erasing I use a combination of inking, digital inking, painting, and redrawing to get a design that matches up with what's in my brain.

SMALL BATCH AND HANDMADE

Almost every step of production is done in my Issaquah studio. I print, fold, trim, bind, package and even make paper as needed for the line. I make pieces in small batches so that I have to control to ensure that they are just right, keep their character, and don't create any needless waste. There can be some variation, but they are all special.

LETTERPRESS + MORE

Most pieces are printed on an antique California Reliable letterpress in my studio. I use polymer plates to print some designs on amazing, thick, cotton stock, and turn the trimmed scraps into rough handmade paper for even more cards. Every once in a while a design lends itself to a larger range of colors, so there are some digitally printed pieces in the line. All So, There digital prints are high-quality ink or toner prints on specialty cover stock.

JOURNALS + JOTTERS

So, There journals and jotters range from blank places to record everything, to purpose built books that make life easier. I print, fold, bind, and trim all of our journals and jotters in-house so that every detail is just-so.

EARTH FRIENDLY + THOUGHTFUL

It's much easier to be friendly to the environment in a small shop, and I do my best. Cards and journals come without plastic sleeves or other extraneous packaging. I use scraps from our production in our handmade paper, and often use scrap materials from other sources as well. So, There strives to make designs that use materials on-hand, and keep extra bits out of landfills. It just requires a little bit of creativity!

GREETING CARDS

A great greeting card can say a lot, even before you sign your name. This ever-expanding selection of cards really says something.

A1 folded cards measure 4 7/8 x 3 1/2" and are typically blank inside. A7 cards are 5" x 7", and most often flat with a small brand mark on the back side. All cards come with a descriptive paper wrap or tag and a corresponding envelope.

The cards are either letterpress printed or digitally printed on high end cotton, handmade, or recycled cover stock.

Plastic sleeves can be included by request, but the cards really shine when you touch them!

Sometimes a design is even better off of paper! These nifty canvas prints are new to the line for Fall 2019. They are printed using the same process as the letterpress cards, but these little guys can really be put to work!

Add embroidery or embellishment, then turn it into something great—a pouch, pocket, or any other thing you can imagine.

Each piece is approximately 4¼x10" printed on unbleached cotton canvas. The ink is permanent, but cotton may shrink in washing.

OTHER NEAT STUFF

Write something here! This journal line runs from lovely blank books to purpose-built planning machines.

Journals have recycled chipboard cover, and our jotter covers are thick paper stock. I choose a binding techniques that suits the purpose: spirals, rings, or staples. The inside sheets are recycled papers, either blank or digitally laser printed with lines, grid, or a quarter-inch dotted-grid.

RECYCLED, RECLAIMED, RETHOUGHT

When possible I use recycled and reclaimed materials. I work with chipboard covers, recycled papers, offcut stock, and spiral bindings rescued from a closing business. I often let these materials inform my creative process.
