

CBS & ABC Repeatedly Reaffirm the Canadian Lawyer's Quantum Entitlement "Deal is Done"

Politicians have a reputation for saying one thing and either meaning another or not following through on what is represented or promised. That's been the signature methodology of the Obama administration before and after the epiphany. Fortunately, America's Fourth Estate prides itself on accuracy and honesty and when coalition partners who are members of the democracy-critical system of checks and balances on political power say something is fact you can take that to the bank.

Confirmation and corroboration are central features of the coalition back to its genesis. It's not enough that one partner articulates something important to collective interests and objectives. There must be an observable consensus on an issue. We saw it when it came to what kind of consequences there were for failing to halt MK-Ultra R&D and its deployment and global proliferation. The same went for those complicit in and loyal to Chinese joint governance. Similarly when the Bush and Obama White Houses were accused of malfeasance and impropriety it wouldn't be until a collective agreement formed that the accountability initiative the Canadian launched would gain traction and become their major focus throughout 2011.

There is logic to the perception that Obama et al. got so geo-hammered in December¹ they collectively cried 'uncle' and agreed to arrange for the Canadian to receive what the coalition, including two presidents a host of other world leaders and private sector members, said over a thousand times was his due. When on December 23rd Scott Pelley announced through the 'CBS Evening News' the "deal is done", that sent a sigh of relief through the entire partnership because members not only felt achievement in successfully challenging a mortifying abuse of power, but also brought a significant measure of justice to the person whose cause they've been championing since back-channel activity commenced in January 2004.

On January 4th CBS added to that original representation with an assurance the funds were on their way. As Scott sat around a table of Iowa voters he employed a Kudlow M. when using the phrase “foreign aid” to describe how the funds might be described. Then on January 5th CBS News producers added to this category of back-channel activity by underscoring this resolution. They designed a graphic that included a quantum ratifier to geopoliticize what a Republican said on the campaign trail who juxtaposed the matter of food stamps and pay checks. The clip ends with the phrase “demand pay checks” and is immediately followed by a graphic [@ 9:56 = 20] and a scripted combination China identifier and another quantum ratifier: “28% of food stamp recipients are black, 59% are white”.

Plus on January 7th ABC news producers inserted a clip of that Republican presidential hopeful using the word “pay check” and red flagged it with a Taylor Identifier.

Reporter: President Obama is the best food stamps president in history.

Gingrich: [1:19: clip] I would like to be the most effective paycheck president.

After CBS Evening News managing director and anchor Scott Pelley delivered the much anticipated message what the coalition had been seeking since 2006 was finalized the matter didn't stop there. Repetition, like consensus building and ad idem, has been a hallmark of coalition activity. So on January 13th he said it again. This time the broadcast began with quantum in the background and justice and prison certainty in the foreground.

And a graphic was displayed @ 8:58 that included five twenties.

The January 15th broadcast of '60 Minutes' contained several references to what the posting title articulates. The preview of Leslie Staul's segment included this script and two clips. The first @ 0:26 - a China identifier (plus quantum & Taylor Identifier [3+5+6=13]) refers to entitlement finalization; and the second, @ 0:38 - coalition and China identifiers, describes how the ideology Chinada promotes and perpetuates is temporary:

In this past November the company had the biggest initial public stock offering, or IPO, [0:26: TI, quantum] of any Internet company since Google. And yet Groupon is the subject of a fierce debate: will it revolutionize how we shop or just end up a passing fad [0:38: China identifier X3]

Leslie also weighs in on MK-Ultra Gate by timing a quantum ratifier and the colors of Chinada @ 4:33 to "The company began in 2008, at the height of the recession ... and then it grew so quickly so fast it took everyone by surprise". It's reasonably predicted given how the narrative could be written that as soon as there's publicity it'll grip Americans and then the rest of the world until accountability targets are achieved; and then be a matter of fascination for years, decades, to come.

Several parts of the segment are geo-politicized. First she draws a contrast between the civilized world of human beings and Chinada's 'devolved' - described at times as 'psycho-pubescent perverts' and during others 'unrecyclable human trash'. A Canadian flag is added to drive the point home to those who enthusiastically embrace these and other like labels.

Leslie: [voiceover] Unlike most dot com rocket ships, Groupon looks like a real business. Where most websites rely on algorithms Groupon relies on [5:25: Aussie M.] actual human beings.

Staff: And did you want to go ahead with the 25 for 50* for the mani pedi deal, or what?

* digits add up to 12 - a coalition identifier

Leslie: [voiceover] What the human beings, the sales people do, is [5:33: Canadian flag] think up deal ideas then convince [Diaz-Pfeiffer M.] local merchants to offer them at half price.

Staff: So what we're going to do is actually customize a deal specifically to you.

Leslie: [voiceover] Groupon has found out by trial and error how to present its deals. Used to be male and female subscribers got the same e-mails every day. Now Groupon is tailoring* [5:53: China identifier, quantum] its offers by age and gender.

* Taylor Swift reference

The merchants don't necessarily make money. The offers are half price to begin with and Groupon takes nearly [6:13: TI & CI] fifty percent of that.

Leslie draws attention to that which is described in Taylor Swift, Selena Gomez, 'The Dark Knight', 'G-Force' and ABC Producers High Profile What Bush and Obama White Houses Ignored in Favor of the MK-Ultra Asset (see infra):

Many ways of describing the Chinada High Command and their legion of operatives and loyal followers have been used over the years; all of which boil down to the simple fact that while they're not legally insane, i.e., unable to distinguish between right and wrong, they're clinically crazy and are such a danger to the Canadian public and the world they ought to be incarcerated for life

[7:22: Cl.M.] Andrew Mason is known as a little whacky himself.

[Clooney M.]

That 'repetition' aspect of coalition activity is observed once again when Leslie draws a parallel, employing a Taylor Identifier, between the Groupon founder's personal wealth and that which has been secured and is coming for the Canadian.

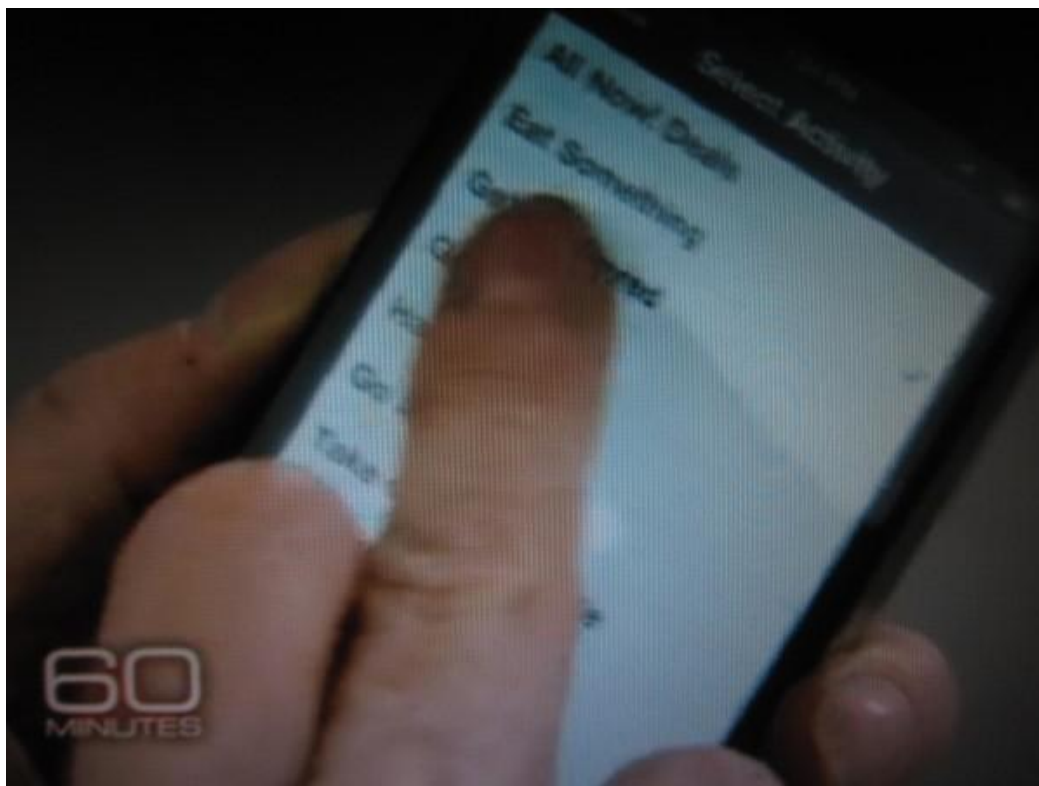

Leslie: [interview] On the first trading day your personal worth jumped to [13:26: Erin M.] $1.3 billion.

To drive home how much producers and cast and all committed partners want the Canadian to receive justice and his due, the set in which the sit-down interview is conducted contains a coalition identifier, the prison certainty pattern and the color of quantum.

And she employs the geo-gesture that both says what's to Chinada principals what's coming viz. severe consequences and mirrors back the kind of political and corporate culture that has permeated Canada since the early 1970s.

The formalities confirmations continued on January 18th with CBS news producers again being the communiqué generator. The segment begins @ 13:15 with a graphic of three one hundred dollar bills. It's followed by graphics in which every single statistic of a quantum ratifying five is lexiconic: 14, 28, 28, 35; and the last one a reminder of what still horrifies the coalition, 47. It powerfully symbolizes a morphing of the Chinada threat and represents a Bush-Obama abdication of national security responsibilities: a reminder of the assassination of an innocent American, Todd Bachman.

Then producers arrange for the next segment to be about Boeing to underscore the Canadian's 'Dreamliner lifestyle'.

Taylor Swift, Selena Gomez, 'The Dark Knight', 'G-Force' and ABC Producers High Profile What Bush and Obama White Houses Ignored in Favor of the MK-Ultra Asset

The coalition's original members knew in 2003-04 when planning and commencing the reform and accountability agenda they were dealing with seriously warped Canadian political and corporate leaders, judges, law enforcement executives, security apparatus personnel and others. That's one of the reasons why partners' activities exclusively conducted their activities in the back-channel environment and employing an understandably idiosyncratic lexicon.

Terminology to describe them in the Fiefdom treatise and archive evolved over the years to the point where by 2008 the paradigm of governance was said to constitute "fiefdom-totalitarian commu-nazi genocidal racism". In non-technical terms and when considering Western values and beliefs, they're just plain crazy and ought to be locked up in the prison psych ward forever.

Many ways of describing the Chinada High Command and their legion of operatives and loyal followers have been used over the years; all of which boil down to the simple fact that while they're not legally insane, i.e., unable to distinguish between right and wrong, they're clinically crazy and are such a danger to the Canadian public and the world they ought to be incarcerated for life. It's ironic that instead of them being locked away and heavily medicated they tried to toss the Canadian into a psych ward in August 2004 based on fabricating evidence and then were successful in doing so six months later. Over time it became apparent the coalition's been confronting what are now identified as incorrigible "psycho-pubescent perverts". That they've been internationally exposed as such for years and not only thrive on the attention and demonization but also have ratcheted up their unlawfulness and immorality makes them even more exceptionally dangerous.

It was during a TV rerun of the July 2008 released film 'The Dark Knight' in late December 2011 a scene was again observed to contain three geo-components. One comprises the description of Canada's system of parliamentary democracy as "gangster governance", the second coercive diplomacy, threatening to execute top members of the China-Canada military alliance - standard fare for the time - and the third labelling them as off their rocker, so to speak.

The setting is the lair of Gotham City's crime boss where the gang is confronted by the Joker who makes them a proposition they easily refuse given the terms of the offer.

Criminal: What do you propose?

Joker: It's simple. We [1:52: Diaz M.] kill the Batman.

Criminal: If it's so simple, why haven't you done it already?

Joker: If you're good at something never do it for free.

Criminal: How much do you want?

Joker: Ah, half.

[laughter]

Criminal: [Cl.M.] You're crazy.

In July 2009 the film 'G-Force' was released. When the animals are delivered to a pet shop they're placed in a glass cage where they meet two rodents. One is expressly portrayed as a Canadian - with the country's flag hanging over the doorway of his residence, a log cabin, that's rendered with the stripes of prison certainty and the color of quantum.

He's scripted to be anti-social, threateningly violent and very possessive of his turf - having drawn a line in the sawdust to mark what is symbolic of the 49th Parallel. He repeatedly warns the newly arrived that crossing the line will lead to being physically assaulted. When a second character enters the scene he describes the combative hamster as having grown up in a psych ward; and when doing so nods towards the critter to underscore how "crazy" the Chinada High Command and its co-conspirators are.

Darwin: Guys, cool it. The world's [Paula M.] at stake. We gotta get outta here.

Blaster: Well, let's ask that guy. He looks cute and friendly. Excuse me my incarcerated little friend, may I ask you a question.

Buckey: Don't move. All I'm sayin' is 'know your place' behind this line'. That's all I'm sayin'.

Blaster: Is he talkin' to us?

Buckey: Did someone order a knuckle sandwich because I'm about to make a delivery [fist].

Darwin: Wow, you talk a lotta smack for a little guy, buddy.

Buckey: "Buddy"? No. For your information it's 'Buckey'. And if you wanna stay alive do not cross that line!!!

Hurley: Don't pay any attention to him, he's a quarter ferret.

Buckey: I have no ferret in me Hurley. That has never been proven.

Hurley: Then why are you marked down?

Buckey: I'm on sale. Everyone goes on sale eventually.

Hurley: This should come as no surprise, but ah, [head nod to flag] he grew up in the psych ward at U.C.L.A..

The most recent articulation of the malfeasant being "crazy" is by two-time Partner of the Year Taylor Swift. During a scene where she's sitting at her office desk in the late 2011 released music video to the song 'Ours', she links paperclips together - representative of the chain gang those who are convicted will be on to pay their massive debt to society. An extra immediately behind her is choreographed [@ 1:38] to execute the standard swirling finger gesture publicly understood to be the way of identifying someone as mentally deranged. And behind him another extra first employs an Eva M. and then mimics a hypno-itch scratch to underscore the systemic madness that is the Canadian government's joyfully relentlessness 24.7.365 torturing of the Canadian with stealth cognition technologies.

Selena Gomez articulated the same observation. On October 29th she granted an ETalk interview. The show's co-host and producers used the platform as much to advance their nefarious interests as she used it to pursue coalition objectives. She employed the lexicon's gesturing constituent to high profile what she and most all other partners believe to be at the core of the problem - namely, everyone who is complicit with and loyal to the Chinada High Command are mentally deranged.

Question: Do you feel that energy from your fans when you're performing every night?

Selena: I do. It's like more crazy here [Diaz M.] than it is in the States.

Observing authorship of the foregoing led one collection of coalition partners to not only acknowledge this posting - a practice that's been going on since early 2006 - but also agree with the psychological assessment. This posting was commenced on January 1st. By the time ABC News went to air the next day producers had already scripted a so-called witness to the arrest of the alleged L.A. car fire bombings to reference 'The Dark Knight' when describing the perpetrator.

Reporter:[voiceover] The prime suspect now charged with arson was arrested on Sunset Blvd. early this morning. Sources directly involved in the case tell ABC News one of the first things he said was "I hate America".

Witness: [1:00] He's got this big smile on his face like he's The Joker or something.
