Degree Type: Associate Degree

Diagnostic Medical Sonographers work with sophisticated ultrasound technology to create detailed internal images of the human body and assist physicians throughout various medical specialties in making diagnoses. Sonographers are in high demand throughout the US, and the Bureau of Labor Statistics projects that by 2024, employment in the field will increase by 26%, far above the national average.

Monroe's program in Diagnostic Medical Sonography will provide students with knowledge and understanding of anatomy, physiology and the different sonography specialties, as well as the opportunity to train directly with health professionals. Students will understand the ethical, legal and regulatory standards of diagnostic medical sonography, and will be able to expertly and safely employ and interpret sonographic imaging to assist in diagnosis. Students will also learn to effectively communicate with patients, colleagues, and healthcare professionals and have the option to sit for the national certification examination.

Day and evening classes are available.

NOTE: Clinical Internships are only available during the day.

MEDICAL ASSISTING

Degree Type: Associate Degree

Medical Assistants work side-by-side nurses and other caregivers to treat patients across the lifespan, from newborns to senior citizens. Medical assistants are versatile because they perform both clinical and administrative duties. The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics predicts a 29% increase in medical assistants through 2026.

When you are a Medical Assisting student at Monroe, you will experience your future career early on, with faculty and simulated hospital rooms that expose students to what they are likely to encounter in a clinical setting.

Monroe's Medical Assisting graduates find themselves with entry-level jobs at an array of health care facilities, including medical practices, hospitals, long-term care facilities and assisted living facilities. However, many graduates choose to transition into a bachelor's degree program.

Local facilities like Open Door Family Medical Center, Jacobi Hospital and Morris Heights Health Center have all employed Monroe Medical Assistant graduates.

The demand for public health professionals has soared in recent years. Reasons for this surge are widening public health concerns, such as natural disasters, potential terrorist attacks, tuberculosis and other infectious diseases, the increased prevalence of chronic diseases due to obesity and an aging population, and the ongoing desire to address substance abuse and the diseases it causes.

Our public health professors use project-based learning in the classroom to allow students to actively participate in the learning process and to apply their critical-thinking skills. Students in the Bachelor's in Public Health program have the opportunity to choose a minor in Human Services.

EDUCATION

Degree Type

Bachelor's Degree

Early Childhood Education

Bilingual Certificate

Extension Program

Master's Degree

Early Childhood or Childhood Urban Education/Urban Special Education

Monroe College's education programs were developed to meet the pressing educational needs of its surrounding communities. The curriculum focuses on high-needs schools that work with children from diverse backgrounds. Intensive coursework reinforces the latest methods in promoting early childhood development as well as childhood reading, writing, critical thinking and problem solving.

Monroe's extensive partnerships with local public and charter schools enable students to gain more than 600 hours of field experience, providing students with the knowledge and skills necessary to become effective teachers and pass the New York State teacher examinations to be certified to teach in public schools.

DID YOU KNOW?

- + After graduation, School of Education alumni are invited back for symposiums led by Monroe faculty. These seminars serve to provide graduates with additional mentoring and a support system early in their career.
- + Monroe maintains a partnership with the AmeriCorps Jumpstart Program, an early childhood education organization that trains college students to serve preschool children in low-income neighborhoods. This experience provides students the opportunity to compete over 300 hours of teaching experience in pre-kindergarten classes in exchange for tuition support or a direct salary.
- + Monroe School of Education has developed a network of partner schools in the Bronx, NYC and surrounding suburbs, providing ECE candidates with diverse fieldwork and student teaching experiences, and excellent employment opportunities.

POPULAR CAREER PATHS

Some of the popular career choices for graduates of Monroe's Bachelor's degree program in Early Childhood Education:

- + Teacher in a Public or Private Elementary School
- + Teacher in a Public or Private Universal Pre-K
- + Teacher in a Public "3 for All"
- + Teacher in a Head Start Program

The Bilingual Extension is designed to extend Early Childhood certified teachers or ECE teacher candidates licenses. Program graduates will learn how to provide exceptional instruction that meets the needs of this population and will earn a New York State Bilingual Education Certificate Extension. In addition to helping a high-needs student population, this certification opens up possibilities for varied job opportunities and higher salaries.
