Yves Congar Award

The Yves Congar Award recognizes the contributions of today's theologians who embody the spirit of Cardinal Yves Congar, OP (1904-1995), by working, writing, and teaching in light of tradition while moving that tradition forward to meet the challenges of modern times. Our 2015 Yves Congar Award recipient Lisa Sowle Cahill, PhD, is the J. Donald Monan Professor of Theology at Boston College. She is the past president of the Catholic Theological Society of America and the Society of Christian Ethics. Her books include Global Justice, Christology and Christian Ethics (2013); Family: A Christian Social Perspective (2000); and

Sex, Gender, and Christian Ethics (1996).

Dr. Cahill's lecture explored Catholic theology and ethics of family, which today frequently centers on the nuclear family with a heterosexual married couple, children, and complementary roles of the sexes. Dr. Cahill believes that this is a definition which does not apply to many families in today's world. In light of these realities, Cahill examined how families today find meaning and guidance from the Catholic faith, how the gospel can be preached to them, and what today's families bring to the Church.

At the Sanctuary of la Caridad del Cobre, Santiago de Cuba.

by Elsie Miranda

By virtue of an invitation to teach a summer course in Cuba, I ended up taking one of the most significant trips of my life. I entered a time machine of sorts where I encountered the past ravaged by existential nihilism. The failed Socialist experiment that is Cuba has generated a meaninglessness that strives to permeate every level of the human imagination. Yet amidst the ruins of such despair I encountered brothers and sisters I never knew

I had who lived the daily struggle, for subsistence and in that eternal task they lose sight of meaning. I have been profoundly touched by this encounter of past and future, brought together to ask very demanding questions of my / our first world complacency. Ninety miles of ocean separates us, but 54 years of rhetoric on both sides of the Florida straits keep us from promoting a mutually beneficial and meaningful existence. Beyond the ideological barrage there is a world of wonderful human beings, and natural beauty needing to make contact -- I have never been more certain that my "Yes" to this invitation, will be, in the words of Robert Frost, the one that will make all the difference.

Ethics Bowl Team competes in the Southeast Regional Ethics Bowl competition.

The Barry University Ethics Bowl Team recently competed in the 11th Annual Southeast Regional Ethics Bowl competition on Saturday, November 8 at St. Petersburg College. Barry's squad competed against 21 other colleges and universities from Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, and Alabama with the top four teams receiving an invitation to the Ethics Bowl National Championship.

Barry's team competed in all four rounds and finished 11th overall. The team went 2-2 in head-to-head competitions, winning in rounds one and four.

This is the ninth year Barry's Ethics Bowl team has competed in the regional competition. Barry's team has qualified for the Ethics Bowl National Championship four times in the past nine years.

Barry's team captured the top spot last year, going undefeated in three rounds and beating Wake Forest in the semi-final.

This year's team included Cheryl Frazier, a senior majoring in philosophy; Alexi Sperling, a junior majoring in pre-law; Natalie Diaz, a senior majoring in sociology with a minor in biology; and Jessica Cousett, a sophomore majoring in philosophy.

The team is coached by Sandra Fairbanks, Professor of Philosophy, Joel Wilcox, Professor of Philosophy, and Ruth Tallman, Assistant Professor of Philosophy, and is sponsored by the Department of Theology and Philosophy.

The Annual Southeast Regional Ethics Bowl and the Intercollegiate

Ethics Bowl International Championship are sponsored by the Association for Practical and Professional Ethics.

A group of 11 Barry undergraduates provided 74 hours of service as part of Alternative Spring Break (ASB) in Immokalee, FL to support projects that promote farmworker justice. The students were all participants in Barry's Alternative Spring Break program (ASB) which took place the first week of March. The students served with the Coalition of Immokalee Workers, doing property clean-up and t-shirt inventory; providing early-childhood literacy lessons and middle-school STEM activities at the Redlands Christian Migrant Association and assisting with the "Hands are for Helping, Not for Hurting" campaign; building a library catalogue; and assembling emergency food packages at the Shelter for Abused Women and Children.

The ASB group members were Keiara Greene-Williams, Victoria Hoelscher, Mayra Martinez, Paola Montenegro, Peter Nwokoye, Quayneshia Smith, Latania Richardson, Qiwen Su, Alejandro

Tobon, Tamara Vuckovich, and Rajon Wright. Dr. Marc Lavallee, Assistant Professor of Practical Theology, and Courtney Berrien, Associate Director of the Center for Community Service Initiatives (CCSI), participated in ASB with the students. Dr. Lavallee was an active ASB member during his undergraduate studies at the Saint Anselm College.
