Welcome to Spring 2022!

Dear College of DuPage Community,

We have been glad to welcome some of you back to campus this past fall and look forward to seeing more familiar faces this spring as we continue to reintroduce in-person programming. It is our goal to continue offering our portfolio of courses in a blend of in-person, online and hybrid format to meet the needs of our community and ever-changing times. While the past two years have brought many challenges, one positive outcome has been the shift towards offering continuing education courses virtually. We've heard from many of you that these options have allowed you to continue to learn despite busy schedules, inclement weather and all the challenges that modern life puts before us.

College of DuPage Continuing Education continues to encourage students enrolling in professional development courses and who demonstrate financial need due to COVID-19 funds disruption to apply for HEERF (Higher Education Emergency Relief Funds). The funds allocated to COD by the Department of Education help students who may have experienced illness, loss of income or emergencies during the COVID-19 pandemic get back into the workforce. In order to receive the funds, individuals must be current College of DuPage students and apply through the online application. Additional information can be found at cod.edu/conted.

This spring we are also excited to partner with the Naperville Chamber of Commerce to present a new and dynamic Leadership Institute opportunity. The new Leadership Institute will guide participants through a series of self leadership skill-building sessions covering topics such as attitudes and behavior, ethics and motivation, goal planning, time management and self-assessment. Additional topics will be offered in Fall of 2022 and Spring of 2023. See page 47 to learn more.

We are happy to announce that the Adjunct Faculty Training Institute has been recognized and certified by the National Council of Continuing Education and Training as it meets the growing need of higher education to better prepare content experts for teaching at the college level. We are also pleased to announce that Innovation DuPage won the top corporate/college partnership award from the American Association of Community Colleges. Serving our regional residents is priority number one, and it is always reassuring to receive national recognition for our programs.

We hope you enjoy scanning the following pages as you plan for your spring activities. We look forward to seeing you in person or online very soon.

Music Academy

The music program at College of DuPage is recognized as one of the finest instructional programs in the Chicago metropolitan area.

Music Academy Private Lessons

We offer non-credit opportunities to participate in college music courses with distinguished COD faculty. For more information, visit cod.edu/musicacademy.

Harmonica Private Lessons

Private lessons are available online for the harmonica with instructor David Kachalon. One-on-one lessons are offered online for four total hours (eight 30-minute lessons). Your schedule will be confirmed with your instructor. Please call (630) 942-2208 to register.

Music Quest

Whether your skills have grown a bit rusty or you want to learn a new instrument, Music Quest classes offer weekly, one-on-one, 30-minute lessons in COD's beautiful McAninch Arts Center (MAC). Lessons are available on piano, organ, guitar, voice and all traditional band and orchestra instruments. Each of our applied music faculty has an advanced degree in performance and/or pedagogy and has the experience to work successfully with students of all ages and abilities. Music Quest lessons are offered in a variety of musical styles, ranging from classical to jazz and blues to contemporary.

Music Masters

This level is for intermediate or advanced students who want to take their performance skills to a higher level. Arrange weekly private lessons at a length that works for you and study with passionate musicians who are active throughout Chicagoland as recitalists, soloists, recording artists, composers and performers. Professional bios can be viewed online either at AtTheMac.org/private-lessons or cod.edu/musicacademy.

Balance of Power Theory in International Relations

The basic logic behind balance of power theory is that because there is no world government to protect nations from each other, each has to rely on its own power to avoid being endangered, coerced or conquered by another. When a nation perceives another nation as becoming more powerful, it may see this as a threat to its own security and respond. A threatened nation can mobilize more of its own resources or seek alliance with other nations in order to maintain the balance of power and avoid war. Look at how nations relate to each other and why they act as they do. We will try to explain these behaviors and use the information to anticipate future behavior. Look at the world today in terms of the balance of power. Instructor: Pat deRosset

The Fourth Amendment: Then and Now

The fourth amendment is just one sentence of 54 words, but it has kept judges and lawyers busy for centuries. The basic premise of the fourth amendment is to protect Americans from "unreasonable searches and seizures" of their property by the government. Look at this amendment to see how it has been interpreted by the Supreme Court in the past and how it is being applied today in the face of new technologies that challenge our understanding of what "search and seizure" now means. What about the internet, cell phones, drones, surveillance cameras, data collection, etc.? Does the fourth amendment protect digital property? The evolution of the fourth amendment continues. Film: Some Kind of Heaven

"Some Kind of Heaven" is an entertaining glimpse into life at The Villages—the retirement community in central Florida that is the fastest-growing metropolitan area of the last 10 years, according to the 2020 Census. The community has 130,000 seniors living their version of the American Dream, though the film's title may be ironic for the four people that are at the center of the movie. As "Rolling Stone" put it, the documentary "skips the sociology and goes straight to the good, the bad and the weird of it all." WWII: The Battle of Midway

In 1942, the Allies were reeling from German and Japanese advances in Russia, Africa and all over the Pacific Ocean. The Dutch East Indies were overrun, the U.S. Fleet at Pearl Harbor had been decimated and the Japanese Navy had a secret, complex plan to destroy what remained of the American Pacific Fleet. The Japanese execution of that plan led to the early June 1942 Battle of Midway, a crushing U.S. Navy victory. This engagement has been described as a “miracle” by famous historian Walter Lord and many descriptions of the fighting have emphasized how outnumbered and outgunned the Americans were against the veteran Japanese Navy. But, was it a “miracle” at all? Many myths have grown up about this encounter; in reviewing the battle, we will see if those myths “hold water.” Instructor: Greig Siedor.

A History of the Electric Car

You might be surprised to learn that Elon Musk and Tesla did NOT invent the electric car! More than 100 years ago electric vehicles (EV) were the most popular automobiles in the world! In the late nineteenth century and at the start of the twentieth century, they outsold every other type of car including steam or internal combustion engine (ICE) powered vehicles. And yet, within a couple of decades of the start of the twentieth century, thousands of battery-powered cars disappeared from the streets, replaced by the internal combustion engine and their place in the history of the automobile was quietly erased. Join me as we explore the economic, political, and societal forces that caused electric vehicles to fail in the early 1900s as well as the recent comeback of the electric car and the current challenges that it faces. Thomas Paine

The Voice of the American Revolution America's first best-selling author tells his story of rising from working class roots to the pinnacle of world fame. His pamphlet “Common Sense” inspired the people to support independency. His words “These are the times that try men's souls” inspired Washington's army to continue the fight. Paine dramatically describes the pivotal Battle of Trenton where George Washington, against all odds, defeated the Hessian mercenaries after crossing the Delaware River.

Paine speaks of his writings: “Common Sense,” “The Rights of Man” and the controversial criticism of revealed religion “Age of Reason”. His belief in abolishing monarchy and establishing republican government earned him a British death sentence and French citizenship during their revolution. The first person to use the phrase “the United States of America” Thomas Paine helped create the modern world. Instructor: RJ Lindsey

NEW COURSE—check it out!

The Financial Cost of Bad Service

An exceptional customer experience and a robust bottom line are not at odds with each other. In many business cultures, it is believed that investing in service excellence does not provide a return, certainly not a healthy one, to the organization. This course demonstrates that exceptional customer experiences are exactly what leads to an impressive increase in revenue and profitability. Many solutions simply don't cost that much to deploy, while others are things seen as "the cost of doing business" that can be quantified and eliminated, leading to a more productive workforce, better customer experiences and sizeable savings. The course provides the framework of understanding the Financial Cost of Bad Service, as well as the tools to quantify areas for improvement in your business.

Leadership Institute

Sponsored by Naperville Area Chamber of Commerce and College of DuPage

There has never been a time in recent history where effective leadership is needed for organizations to succeed in the 21st Century! Consequently, that need has also exposed the glaring gaps in today's leadership development processes. True leadership development entails the process of improving one's leadership skills, knowledge and attitudes in the context of the leadership roles they have in the organization. While leadership training provides the skills and, to some degree, knowledge, it is only through true leadership development in the context of the leader's environment that the knowledge and attitudes are fully developed for sustainable success as a leader.

Naperville Area Chamber of Commerce and College of DuPage Career and Professional Training together are pleased to bring you this leadership program. This program achieves that development goal by breaking leadership development into three key areas; self-leadership, leader relationships and organizational leadership. Each of the 12 sessions builds on the previous sessions such that learning is progressive repetitive. Additionally, each session includes fieldwork requiring the participants to apply that current skills and knowledge in the context of their work environment and receive real-time feedback from the facilitators to reinforce learning.

We will offer Self-Leadership in Spring 2022, Leader Relationships in Fall 2022, and Organizational Leadership in Spring 2023. Each semester will have one topic each month meeting on the first Tuesday of the month and will be held at College of DuPage's Naperville Center. To bring all the topics together, each participant will create a goal they want to complete or be well on their way to completing by the time they graduate from the program. While all 12 sessions are encouraged, the curriculum is also set up to where participants can also apply a-la-carte to any combination of sessions they feel are most beneficial to them as leaders.

The Leadership Keynote Series

The Leadership Keynote Series offers short workshops that provide you with immediate, actionable insight in light of the ever-changing global environment. Each workshop is designed to enhance your business acumen and elevate your leadership profile. The Leadership Keynote courses are taught by Andy Kaufman and offered in a convenient live, online learning format.

*If you are already PMI certified, you can earn two PDUs for each completed course.

The Power to Influence Without Authority

Do you ever depend on someone in a different part of the organization and yet they don't have the same sense of urgency as you? Do you have situations where you need your sponsor to take action or a colleague to deliver, yet you don't have the authority to make it happen? Increasingly we are responsible for delivering initiatives with people who do not report to us while relying on stakeholders we don't have authority over. Our ability to influence can make all the difference in getting commitment and achieving our objectives as leaders. In this session, we'll talk about what influence is (and how it differs from manipulation). We'll talk about a five-part model from neuroscience that will help improve your ability to influence without authority. Review Dr. Robert Cialdini's six weapons of influence, including how to ethically use them (as well as defend against them when people try to use them on us). Kaufman shares insights from his People and Projects Podcast interviews with influence authors and researchers, giving you practical, evidence-based tips to help you lead and deliver. Walk away with recommended books and resources to continue your learning after the session.

How to Make Better Choices for You, Your Team and Your Projects

As leaders of teams and projects, we regularly face choices and decisions that have downstream consequences. Do you want to be able to make better decisions in your personal or professional life? Do you want to help your team members make better choices when it comes to decisions on their projects? Or are you simply curious about how and why people make certain choices? In this highly interactive keynote, Andy Kaufman, PMP, shares why the familiar pros-and-cons approach seems to make sense—but is profoundly flawed. He discusses how our biases influence the options we consider and the choices we make, and how we can fight those biases. Kaufman shares examples of how team leaders can influence team decisions in positive and negative ways. Is our problem with decisions that we are overconfident? Maybe—and maybe not! He will show how overconfidence is overrated as an explanation for poor decisions.

You and your team have important decisions that need to be made. No technique can guarantee great decisions every time, but you will leave this session with practical ideas and tools to make better choices for you, your team and your projects.

Developing Your Executive Presence: Improving Your Ability to Confidently Lead and Deliver

We often recognize executive presence when we see it, but it can be more difficult to define. There's something about a person with presence. People are more likely to listen to them and willingly follow them. In this fast-paced, highly interactive keynote, Andy Kaufman shares practical insights gleaned from years of working with executives around the world. He builds on the idea that executive presence is based on confidence without arrogance. But what about those daunting moments when you don't feel so confident? Through interviews with senior leaders and leading authors and experts, Kaufman shows how the imposter syndrome is an issue we all struggle with, from aspiring frontline leaders to CEOs (and shares practical ideas on how to address it). From how we show up, speak up and deliver results, executive presence is not something we innately have or not—it is something you can develop. This fun, insightful, motivating keynote shows you how.

Managing Up: How to Succeed With Your Boss Without Sucking Up

Managing up is not sucking up. It's not a set of insincere political maneuvers designed to fake your way to success. In this workshop, learn practical approaches to build and maintain a productive relationship with your boss. Learn why waiting for your boss to change doesn't work. Discuss why your success and your boss's success are tied together. You'll learn insightful tips on helping your boss trust you and see how understanding your boss's preferences and styles can help you adjust accordingly and how being proactive can make all the difference. Kaufman will share insights from his People and Projects Podcast interviews with leadership and management authors and researchers, giving you practical, evidence-based tips that will help you thrive with your boss. Foundations of Agile Project Management

Agile projects are characterized by short work iterations and incremental development of products, made possible by focusing on business priorities and customer value. By producing smaller deliverables more frequently and efficiently, agile practices can be an excellent choice for teams that work in product development, programming, business analysis and other collaborative areas. This excellent next step for trained project managers is aligned with the Agile Certified Practitioner exam objectives developed by Project Management Institute. 14 PDUs are certified Project Management Professionals (PMP®). Public Service Institute

The Public Service Institute (PSI) provides professional development and comprehensive training for the ongoing success of local government organizations and their employees. PSI has developed programming focused on key topics and best practices in public service leadership. Attend one of our series and bring back leadership lessons that you can use on day one! Network with others in your field and return to your organization invigorated with new ideas. PSI Project Management training is back by popular demand.

The PSI Program is comprised of the following series:

- Engaging Employees I and II
- Leading Teams I and II
- Organizational Leadership I and II
- PSI Project Management Training

PSI Project Management Training

Join us for this one-day interactive session to increase your ability to lead and deliver projects. Learn key principles that will help you deliver your projects, including leading factors for projects success and failure. Learn how to develop plans to help you and your team stay on track as well as how to respond when (not if) changes occur. You'll get a better understanding of what agile project management is (and isn't) and why it's relevant to more than just systems projects. Walk away with practical techniques to identify and manage risks so you can spend less time reacting to problems and more time avoiding them in the first place.

Leading Teams II

Targeted for those newly developing supervisors, team leads, managers or those that aspire to lead others in the future. Employees often get promoted into a managerial role, but rarely receive the appropriate training. When you align people and create an organization, where everyone works together in partnership for a common goal or direction, that organization becomes successful. Inspire others to make a real difference at your workplace and to work toward a shared vision of positive change.
