Ermy & Jia

This concept was requested by a lovely couple who wanted a touch of the beach and treasure map theme. Since it was a destination wedding, we came up with the idea of a message in a bottle as one of their invitations, while the foldout one version (banquet information) was given to family members and friends in a Chinese-bilingual format.

This couple enjoys the great outdoors and wanted to tie in an outdoor theme according to the season that they were going to be married in. We came up with the idea of falling leaves and wood carvings of their names on a tree. This particular design was cost effective and a fresh way of approaching an all in one invite and RSVP card. Guests receive the invites and return the tear away RSVP card, creating a fast and easy response without licking the envelope. The finished piece created a personal touch and a warm and cozy feeling.

{a} A postcard was designed to accommodate different groups of guests attending after the official invite was sent out. {b} A 16-page program was designed to accommodate all church hymns and the wedding party. {c} As a bonus we created seating cards that mimic a swing on a tree that was designed on their invite.

Cherry blossoms bloom as this couple starts their life together announcing their marriage. In this design, we explore the pink color of the bride's color palette. The invite is in the front with green knots to mimic tree leaves. While the back utilized the green strings to hold together the RSVP and direction card. A program was also designed to accomodate the wedding invite.

A Hawaiian flower was what the bride wanted for her theme. We designed the wavy streams to accent the robust floral design of the flower. A save the date postcard was also designed to hand out to their guests. After the wedding, the couple came back asking us to design their Thank You cards by utilizing the photos that was taken by their photographer.
