329 Healing Trauma with Yoga with Beth Shaw

Workshop: GE, MB, PT, S

Traumatic events are a part of life and no one is immune. Any event which threatens personal safety activates the sympathetic nervous system (SNS), a necessary and important survival response. Sudden horrific experiences, chronic experiences, or seemingly mundane experiences can manifest themselves in the body, creating imbalance and wreaking physical, emotional, and mental havoc when the SNS is unable to turn off. Continuous activation of the SNS rewires the nervous system, and physical changes take place in the brain and endocrine system that make healing more challenging. These changes can result in mood disorders, disease, addiction, self-esteem issues, anxiety, depression, lethargy, hopelessness, and destructive behavior. Healing comes from rebalancing and reversing the impact of the trauma on the brain. According to tradition, yoga is believed to cultivate happiness and reduce suffering with long-term, regular practice. Fortunately, studies are proving what yoga practitioners have known for ages - yoga reduces suffering. Yoga, breathing, and meditation practices can be used as an adjunct to clinical care as a way to cope with the symptoms of trauma. Experience the difference in a trauma-informed practice.

355 Why Restoration is the New Cardio with Michael Hughes

Workshop: GE, PT

Fitness is a trendy industry, but the problem with trends is that they come and go leaving trainers burnt out trying to hop on the next greatest thing. But what if, instead of following the trends, trainers innovated for the long game. This is exactly what Michael did by blending restoration with performance training. In doing this, we've significantly decreased the injury rate of our clients and kept our average churn rate down to 3% (compared to an industry average of 10%). By incorporating more restorative practices, trainers can keep their injury rates low and their client retention rates high. Michael's vision is for you to increase your client retention through incorporating more sustainable practices into your programming and workouts. We can break the cycle of injury by shifting the mentality away from "no pain, no gain" and always pushing to 100%.

356 Core Recovery for Women: From Strategy to Strength with Jenice Mattek

Workshop: GE, MB, PT, S

You've learned core strength is important to posture, performance, and addressing pain. However, even with a stronger core, many women continue to struggle with posture issues, tightness, and pain. In this session, you'll learn why core strength alone will not improve performance or reduce tightness. You'll discover how to identify and implement the best core exercises for clients of varying levels. Whether you work with clients who struggle with post-surgery issues (Cesarean or hysterectomy) or those who want to feel stronger, this interactive workshop will help you identify the best core exercises.

After attending this session, participants will be able to:

- describe the anatomy of the female core and its impact upon posture and movement
- demonstrate how to assess for common suboptimal strategies that lead to weakness and tightness and pain
- utilize the most effective strategy and exercises for improving core strength
