Destination: Chicago

Around the World in One Day

In the mood to go around the world? Visit Chicago and you can do it in a single day. The city's renowned ethnic neighborhoods, settled by waves of immigrants for over a century, are an enduring American treasure. No other city possesses such a rich diversity of preserved ethnic communities, where sampling the heady variety of foods, cultures, and shopping makes for a fascinating (and delicious) excursion.

Start in Swedish Andersonville with its smorgasbord of restaurants, taverns, bakeries, and delis that sell everything from farmer's cheese to pickled herring to glogg, a traditional spiced wine. Shopkeepers still chat in Swedish as they sweep their sidewalks. In Ukrainian Village, restaurants serve mouthwatering pierogis, borscht, and honey cakes with the gilded domes of magnificent Ukrainian churches gleaming in the background.

Little Italy's restaurants are still mostly family-owned with recipes handed down from the old country. They share space with gelato stands, pizzerias, and a bronze statue of baseball legend Joe DiMaggio. Bustling Chinatown's pagodas and ornate gateway are entrée to restaurants, tea shops, groceries, fascinating stores, and a garden of Chinese zodiac sculptures.

Greektown offers Athens-worthy restaurants, shops, coffee bars, and even a Macedonian dance troupe. Try the flaming cheese called saganaki and get ready to shout "opa!" Pilsen, a thriving Mexican-American community, is splashed with colorful street murals, great dining spots, and the nation's largest Latino culture museum.

There's Little Saigon on Argyle Street, Little Warsaw on Milwaukee Avenue, and Devon Avenue's phenomenal 10-block stretch — known as the International Marketplace — which boasts more than 60 ethnic restaurants and shops encompassing Indian, Pakistani, South Asian, Russian, and Jewish cultures.

Whether you buy a sari or try the falafel, there's always something new to explore. When your day ends, having visited numerous pseudo-countries, you'll never believe you've been in Chicago the whole time.

Chicago's elevated train, known as the "L," loops around the city and includes many stops in the downtown area.

Getting Around Chicago

Chicago has a mass transit system that makes navigation a breeze. After arriving at O'Hare Airport, take the Blue Line commuter rail into the city. The brisk, 45-minute journey will take you into the heart of the city with a nominal price tag of US $2. If you want to make your way up to Waveland Avenue to watch the Cubs play ball, take the Red Line north from downtown and get off at Addison Avenue. Take the Metra rail to explore the suburbs, and on your way back, hop off at Union Station and survey Chicago's beauty on the Wendella RiverBus, which will drop you off right at the Magnificent Mile. The "Mag Mile" has its own trolley car facilitating travel between attractions, boutiques, and restaurants. Learn more by visiting www.chicago-l.org.

Earn AAdvantage Miles Enroute to Faraway Places

They provide daily, direct links from Brussels to 53 European and 15 African destinations, which include the most important capital cities, commercial centers, and tourist regions in the countries they serve. Earn miles every time you fly on eligible fares on SN Brussels Airlines, anywhere in their flight network.

For details about earning miles on airlines that participate in the AAdvantage program, go to www.aa.com/aadvantage, then select Partners and Mileage Programs. ## GLAD YOU ASKED THAT QUESTION

Q. What is elite status?

A. It's the designation for AAdvantage members who have flown on qualifying carriers enough in one year to reach one of three tier levels: AAdvantage Executive Platinum (100,000 miles or points), AAdvantage Platinum (50,000 miles or points, or 60 flight segments), and AAdvantage Gold (25,000 miles or points, or 30 flight segments)*. Having elite status in the AAdvantage program means you have exclusive services and benefits that are not offered to all members. See page 4 for more information about elite status.

Q. What is the difference between miles, segments, and points?

A. Qualifying miles are the actual travel miles you earn on eligible purchased tickets**. A segment is one take-off and landing. So, if you fly from Brussels to Chicago, then Chicago to Los Angeles, you will have earned credit for two segments. Points are awarded per mile flown, but they are based on the type of fare purchased for each flight. When you fly in First, Business, or full-fare Economy Class, you earn 1.5 points for each mile flown. Discount Economy Class is 1.0 point per mile, and deeply discounted Economy fares earn 0.5 point per mile flown. The best part of this earning structure is that you don't have to worry about tracking it yourself — American takes care of the calculation for you!

If you're interested in seeing how close you are, log in to www.aa.com and click on View My Miles. For more details, see www.aa.com/aadvantage.

*Miles, points, and segments are subject to qualification rules. AAdvantage Executive Platinum status may not be earned based on segments flown.

**Qualifying miles include the minimum mileage guarantee where applicable, but do not include class-of-service bonus miles, other participant miles, or any other AAdvantage bonus miles.

Partners in Charity for Children

Through the 15-year-old Miles For Kids In Need® program, AAdvantage members have donated millions of miles to provide transportation for needy children seeking medical treatment that's not available where they live. For every three miles donated*, American adds one mile**, making your gift go even further. To donate, call your local American Airlines reservations office or go to www.aa.com/milesforkids (English). Among the children we have helped are formerly conjoined twins Carl and Clarence Aguirre from the Philippines, who flew from Los Angeles to New York for a miraculous surgery. Learn more about Carl and Clarence by visiting www.montekids.org.

The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) is another children's charity that American Airlines has worked with for many years. UNICEF is in 160 countries and territories around the world, providing children with medicine, immunizations, better nutrition, clean water and sanitation, basic education, and emergency relief. You can make a secure donation to UNICEF using any major credit card by going to www.aa.com/unicef.

Return to Top

*250 is the minimum number of miles you can donate.

**American Airlines reserves the right to determine the final use of miles within the guidelines of the Miles For Kids In Need program.
