Speech Topics

- Agriculture productivity
- Rural-urban relations
- The farmer's image
- Governmental affairs
- The current state of the agriculture economy
- Agriculture's heritage

In more than 40 years as a farm broadcaster and NAFB member I have spoken at a great number of events all over the country. Most, but not all, have been meetings of agriculture organizations. I thoroughly enjoy serving as a moderator convention programs and have acted in this role repeatedly, helping assure for meeting planners that their program will move fluidly and on-time. I want people walking away and saying, "That was a great program."

With a degree in Agricultural Production from the University of Florida, Patrick Cavanaugh pioneered the farming of table grapes in Casa Grande Arizona for three years. Shifting gears in 1985, he embarked on his career in agricultural journalism as an editor in Fresno, writing feature stories for several crop-specific magazines.

In 1994, Patrick launched Pacific Nut Producer magazine, which covers the tree nut industry in the West, including almonds, walnuts, pistachios, hazelnuts, macadamias, and pecans. The magazine is highly respected and widely circulated. In 1996, he launched Vegetables West magazine, which covers the vast vegetable industry in California.

Since 2011, Patrick has been a daily radio broadcaster for many radio stations in California. He has also been involved in agricultural TV broadcasting and web video reporting. In January 2014 Patrick and his wife, Laurie Greene, launched the CaliforniaAgToday Radio Network and now broadcast on 22 affiliates in California's agricultural areas.

Patrick and his wife, both members of the National Association of Farm Broadcasters (NAFB), live in Clovis, Calif. [\[Full Bio\]](#)

- Current events of agriculture. State, national and international farm news. Anecdotes about growing up in a farm family.

I'm an anchor/reporter based in Minnesota for the Brownfield Ag Radio Network. I've been a farm broadcaster for more than a decade. Growing up, my dad farmed with my uncle who took over the operation from my Grandpa. My other Grandpa also farmed, so I've been around agriculture my entire life. Working as a farm broadcaster has brought me back to my roots and has opened my eyes to all the unique challenges farmers face. This job also gives me great purpose as I'm able to share the stories of men and women who closely resemble my family because they farm to make a living. I enjoy any and every opportunity to tell their stories, which is why I'm interested in joining NAFB's Directory of Speakers. [\[Full Bio\]](#)

I was born and raised on a dairy farm in Licking County. I began my farm broadcasting career right out of high school at WRFD-AM. From there, my radio path led to Columbus country music station WHOK-FM and eventually I ended up right where I started and where I feel most comfortable, as an Ag Communicator. Sabrina Hill was brought on staff at AgNet West shortly after the network started in 2012. Within a few months, she was moved into the position of Farm News Director and lead anchor. In 2014, AgNet West created its hour-long farm radio show Farm City Newsday, with Hill as the host and producer. An award-winning journalist, Hill has a background of more than 20 years as a news professional. She has worked in print and television news as well as radio. She is an active member of the National Association of Farm Broadcasting, and was elected by her peers as the 2016-17 Western Region Vice President. In addition, she is the chairperson for the NAFB's news service committee. Hill now also speaks at events and is interviewed on agricultural and professional topics, such as California's agricultural issues, women in agriculture, reaching the consumer, building an online presence, and working with the media.

Topics and Specialties include but are not limited to: advocating for agriculture, the role communication plays in the industry, why producers should tell their story and how, agricultural leadership and education, motivation, marketing and promotion. I work with committees and organizations to create a message that is specific to an event to ensure that my message is meaningful, makes an impact and is also informative and entertaining.

Speeches: "Advocate: Finding Your Voice in Ag"; "Your Voice for Agriculture"; "Telling Your Story"; "Why Do Millennials Do What They Do?"; "Living the Good Life"

Lane Nordlund, born and raised in Central Montana, has been involved in production agriculture his entire life. He is the owner Nordlund Communications which provides radio, TV and digital programming to ag. media groups like the Northern Ag Network, RFD TV, the Public Lands Council, American Sheep Industry Association and for the National Cattlemen's Beef Association's weekly TV show, Cattlemen to Cattlemen. In 2016 Lane received the Horizon Award from the National Association of Farm Broadcasting. The award recognizes young farm broadcasters who show promise in the industry. As a professional emcee and speaker Lane has entertained audiences from 25 to 5000. From events as big as the Cattle Industry Convention's Best of Beef Awards Breakfast to events like a local FFA chapter banquet. Lane truly knows his audiences, big or small. Even though Lane travels across the nation on a regular basis he is still committed to being involved in production agriculture. He and his father own a cattle ranch on Montana's Hi-Line. His career in front of the TV camera and behind the microphone along with having firsthand experience of what occurs out in the countryside help Lane be "Your Voice for Agriculture." Growing up on a multi-generational grain and livestock farm in West Central Illinois, Cyndi was active in 4-H and FFA. Shortly after completing student teaching, this Western Illinois University Agriculture Education major took her first job at a local radio station.

Cyndi joined Brownfield as Regional Farm Director in 1998, and was promoted to her current role as Director of Brownfield & Ag Operations in October of 2001.

Cyndi has traveled extensively throughout the United States and to 16 different countries covering agriculture for Midwestern farmers. Her work has earned her dozens of honors from agriculture groups and associations. A member of the National Association of Farm Broadcasting for nearly 30 years, Cyndi was recognized as Farm Broadcaster of the Year for the nation in 1997, and received the coveted Oscar in Agriculture in 2009.

In addition to managing the largest ag radio network in the country, Cyndi produces a daily radio commentary program and pens a popular weekly column in Illinois AgriNews and Indiana AgriNews. A partner with her husband, Jim Puyear, in Rocking P Ranch near Jamestown, Missouri, Cyndi enjoys spending time at home with the registered Simmental cattle herd. [\[Full Bio\]](#)
