Ensuring the Future Charitable Gift Annuities

Although Leo R. Cardillo, M.D. (FCRH '51), had been a regular donor to Fordham for years, he also wanted to include the University in his estate in a way that would benefit both his alma mater and himself. Fordham, he says, prepared him well for his lifelong career as a doctor—a career he still practices today.

"Fordham gave me excellent preparation for medical school," recalls Dr. Cardillo, who completed his studies at Yale Medical School. "My first-year med courses were a breeze after my Fordham science classes. And Fordham continues to do a great job," he says, referring to the Rose Hill campus as "a Gothic oasis in an urban setting."

By setting up a Charitable Gift Annuity with long-term appreciated stock, Dr. Cardillo was able to ensure that Fordham's superb traditions and academic excellence will benefit needy students in the future, while he continues to receive annual payments from the University for life.

"I used long-term appreciated stock to make my gift because it's the most cost-effective way to do it: you maximize your gift and minimize taxes," he explains. "When you're looking at long-term capital gains, it's a great way to make a gift."

The father of five children and grandfather of 14, Dr. Cardillo plans to continue his internal medicine practice well beyond retirement age, simply because he loves it.

"Practicing medicine is more than a job," he says. "It's a way of life."

For more information about Fordham's Charitable Gift Annuity program, call Shanti Bajaj, director of gift planning, at 212-636-6695, or email her at giftplanning@fordham.edu.

Alumni Notes

A Half-Century of Honors

THE HONORS PROGRAM AT ROSE HILL has been described in previous years as a literary “boot camp” for talented undergraduates. Today, 50 years after it began, the program not only immerses students in sophisticated study of the liberal arts, but also asks its students to consider current issues in such seminars as “Ethical Dimensions of Contemporary Social Problems.”

More than 60 current and former Fordham scholars gathered at Rose Hill on Nov. 5 to celebrate 50 years of the honors program. A panel discussion held in the Great Hall of Duane Library featured honors scholars turned Fordham professors—George Shea, Ph.D. (FCRH '56), Mary Procidano, Ph.D. (FCRH '76) and Judith Jones, Ph.D. (FCRH '85)—as well as Antonella Iannarino, a Fordham junior currently in the program.

“The honors program needs to be the leaven in the college,” said Harry Nasuti, Ph.D. (FCRH '71), professor of theology and director of the program. “The goal,” he added, “is to enhance the impact of the honors program on the intellectual life of the larger college.”

Students accepted into the program spend their freshman and sophomore years in an integrated study of art, history, literature, music, philosophy and theology. They spend their senior year researching and writing a thesis with the guidance of a faculty member in their field of study.

Shea, a professor of classical languages who joined the Fordham faculty in 1967, recalled a very different program from that of today. Students entered on a probationary basis during their sophomore year, he said, likening it to a literary “boot camp,” with such assignments as reading the Iliad in one week. As a Fordham undergraduate, Shea also applied to study for a year in Paris. He was accepted, as was Alan Alda (FCRH '56). The two learned to speak French fluently together before spending a year enrolled in the Sorbonne.

For Jones, a philosophy professor who served as director of the Honors Program from 1999 to 2004, it was a discussion with her mentor, Elizabeth Kraus, Ph.D., that set the course for her life of study. Kraus, who taught philosophy at Fordham from 1968 to 1991, introduced Jones to the work of British philosopher Alfred North Whitehead. Kraus continued to work with Jones as she sculpted a patchwork of studies that linked Whitehead with Jones' favorite poet, W. B. Yeats, to complete her dual degree in English and philosophy. Jones eventually succeeded Kraus as Fordham's resident Whitehead scholar.

As the faculty challenged her, Jones said, she was given “the gift of mind,” a gift she works to share with her own students.

“I came to understand how Dr. Kraus could reach into [students'] lives,” Jones said, “because it turns out, the students reach into [the faculty's] lives.”

Learning to Govern

One of most influential civic leaders in recent New York City history, former City Council Speaker Peter F. Vallone (FCRH '56, LAW '59) has published a lively and candid memoir, Learning to Govern: My Life in New York Politics, From Hell Gate to City Hall (Chaucer Press, 2005), that is also a primer for aspiring politicians and public servants.

The Importance of Being Ethical

Cathleen Ellsworth (GBA '93), a managing director at First Reserve Corporation, received the 2005 Distinguished Alumna Award at the 8th Annual Fordham Women in Business Conference in October. She and fellow keynote speaker Ellen Alemany (GBA '80), president and CEO of CitiCapital, shared their insights on corporate responsibility.

Making Poverty History

"Ours is the first generation with the ability to eradicate extreme poverty," writes Kevin Ahern (FCRH '03), president of the International Movement of Catholic Students (IMCS-Pax Romana). That was the central message of "Student Action Against Poverty: MDGs + 5, Now What?" a weeklong formation session sponsored by IMCS-Pax Romana leaders and held on the University's Rose Hill and Marymount campuses in October.

Writing Solo

Singer-songwriters Bryan Master and Don McCloskey (both FCRH '99), honed their musical chops as two-fifths of the band Mother Bacchus during their undergraduate days. Now they are pursuing solo careers—in Los Angeles and Philadelphia, respectively—and building separate fan bases, though they still occasionally share the same bill.

ALUMNI PROFILE

On the Shoulders of Giants

Spero Dedes is the most recent Fordham-trained sportscaster to hit it big.

FOR ANY NEW Los Angeles Lakers broadcaster, there's an elephant in the Staples Center. The elephant in the Lakers' arena is the memory of Chick Hearn. From 1965 to 2001, Hearn broadcast 3,338 consecutive Lakers' games, captivating the community with warmth, picture-like presentations and trademark calls. Although Hearn died in 2002, he's the standard by which Lakers' announcers are measured.

The Lakers' new radio play-by-play announcer, Spero Dedes (FCRH '01), knows that nobody can replicate Hearn and is smart enough not to try.

"I have so much respect for Chick not missing a game in all those years," Dedes said. "But I never came in trying to be Chick or to replace Chick in anyone's mind. . . . I'm just trying to be me and to do the things that I was taught."

Apparently, he's succeeding.

"He's smooth, he's articulate and he tells you what's going on," said Larry Stewart, a sports radio and television columnist for the Los Angeles Times. "He's the whole package, it seems to me."

The trim, 6-foot-3-inch Dedes grew up in Paramus, N.J., and most recently lived in nearby Hackensack. He came to the Lakers from the YES Network, where he broadcast college football and basketball. He also worked for NBA-TV, hosting two shows and calling first-round NBA playoff games. And he's called games for three of the four major networks. Still, he was a longshot to land a play-by-play job with a premier sports franchise.

"Deep down I wanted it more than anything, and I knew deep down I could do it," Dedes said. "But it's so high profile, and I realized that extremely talented guys with many years experience on me would apply, so I didn't think I would get it."

But while he was in San Antonio last June for the NBA finals, his agent called to tell Dedes he'd gotten the job. Now Dedes is living his dream, though he would be nowhere near the Lakers if not for his undergraduate experience at Fordham's WFUV (90.7 FM). He continues a long line of sportscasters from the station, starting with Vin Scully (FCRH '49) of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Dedes said he has received special help from three people at the University. Bob Ahrens, executive producer of WFUV sports, gave him his start. John Cirillo (FCRH '78), who teaches a course on sports communication, became Dedes' mentor and agent. And the late sportscaster Marty Glickman critiqued his tapes.

"He would be very harsh on most of the kids' [tapes]," Dedes said of Glickman. "But he called me in my dorm room after I'd worked a weekend basketball game and told me he'd heard something in my tapes and that if I kept working on it, I had a bright future in the business. That gave me confidence."

coordinator of the Alcohol and Substance Abuse Program at York College in Jamaica, N.Y., where he also works as a counselor and lecturer. He recently completed a book for the college titled Introduction to Alcohol and Substance Abuse Studies. He also serves as an adjunct professor at Manhattan College.

FCRH: Kelly (Rau) Chios and Elias Chios (FCRH '95) welcomed the birth of their first child, Catie Ann, in September. They live in Westbury, N.Y.

Jill Graziano married Brandon Warburton last August. More than a dozen Fordham alumni attended the wedding, which took place on Block Island, R.I.

GBA: Ann Garreaud was recently appointed chief financial officer of the Publicis Healthcare Communications Group.

1997

GBA: Andrew Bieler, a former managing director at JP Morgan, joined S3 Partners, a hedge fund financing firm, as a managing director last August.

GRE: Carole Hallundbaek is the author of Dear Little One: Thoughts to My Child in an Uncertain World (Crossroad Publishing, 2005).

1998

CBA: Cindy O'Brien and Steve Leahy were married at St. Paul's Catholic Church in Princeton, N.J., last December.

Maureen O'Keefe (FCRH '98) was the maid of honor and Danielle Pastor (FCRH '99) was a bridesmaid. Cindy's mother, Lorraine (Marino) O'Brien (UGE '63 and GSE '67), is also a Fordham alumna. Cindy and Steve live outside of Boston, where she works for Deloitte & Touche and he is a systems engineer at Pegasystems.

FCRH: Kelly (Danga) Giallella and her husband, Jeff, celebrated the birth of their son, James Michael, last April. They also have a daughter, Angelina.

GSS: John J. Shea, O.S.A., Ph.D., a former associate professor of psychology and pastoral counseling at Fordham University's Graduate School of Religion and Religious Education, is the author of Finding God Again: Spirituality for Adults (Rowman & Littlefield, 2005).

FCLC: Lauren Portada, who received an M.F.A. degree from the University of Illinois at Chicago, has been awarded a Fulbright grant to spend the 2005-06 academic year conducting research on breathing and yogic systems in India.

GBA: Joe Kutchera recently started working as a sales development manager at CNNMoney.com, a division of Time Inc.

FCRH: Martha Allen and Frank Trapani were married last March in Alexandria, Va. In October, Martha was named assistant director of development for donor acquisition in the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications at Syracuse University. Before joining the university, she was campaign coordinator for the New York City-based Catholic Medical Mission Board.

Jean Marie McCormick has been promoted to serve as a project manager for InsightExpress, an online market research firm.

Jonathan Williams stopped at Fordham's Rose Hill campus last September, near the end of his five-month trek across the country. Inspired by the title character in the film Forrest Gump and by Tom Dewey, his former cross country coach at Fordham, Williams ran from Newport Beach, Calif., to Newport, R.I.

Kristin Wynn and Russ Stellfox were married last June in Bear Creek, Pa.

CBA: Christopher Keeney has been working in the Marshall Islands as a member of the Jesuit Volunteer Corps since August 2004. He has taught high-school English and summer school for first- through eighth-grade students. This academic year, he is teaching two courses—"Christian Vocations" and "Religions of the World"—for juniors and seniors, respectively, in high school.

FCRH: Kevin Eakin, who holds several career and single-season passing records at Fordham, is the starting quarterback for the Canadian Football League's Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Kevin F. Neafsey, an officer in the New York Police Department, traveled to New Orleans last September to assist the New Orleans Police Department in their rescue efforts in the wake of Hurricane Katrina.

Nick Smalc is the executive producer of Wilde and Fee, the morning show on WQAL (104.1 FM) in Cleveland.

GBA: Peter Gomez was elected to serve a two-year term on the Ridgefield, Conn., Board of Finance.

Alumni notes received after Oct. 31, 2005, will appear in the next issue of FORDHAM magazine.

Passion Play

Last season, men's basketball Coach Dereck Whittenburg started four freshmen and the Rams put together a string of six home-court victories—including wins against conference rivals Xavier and Temple—that brought new life to the 80-year-old Rose Hill Gym. The Rams went on to earn their first victory in the Atlantic 10 Tournament, posting a 13-16 overall record. The women's basketball team struggled last year, posting a 10-21 record, but Coach Jim Lewis hopes to have the right mix of veterans and newcomers in place for a breakout year. One the eve of the 2005-06 season, both coaches spoke about their expectations for the campaign ahead.

How is the team coming together?

JL: I feel our early team-building efforts and team chemistry are at an all-time high. Talent is important, but talent without chemistry is nothing, and I really feel like we have both of those components at a high level.

What can this year's team accomplish that last year's did not?

JL: We still have those same goals of trying to be champions of our conference and represent our league in postseason play, whether that's [in the] NCAA or NIT [tournaments]. That's our focus every year. I think this year's team can accomplish that for a number of reasons. One is the continuity of players in the system. They provide excellent leadership and have gone through the struggles of trying to develop our program. It's time to reap the benefits.

With the recent success of the men's program, is there a sense that the two programs push each other to excel?

JL: Exactly. We have a great relationship with the men's program. We all want Fordham to do well. We're both setting high standards. Why not us this year? We're very supportive of them, and they are of us. And those infectious attitudes, efforts and results can really become a prominent feature of Fordham winter sports.

Jim Lewis is in his sixth season as the women's head coach.

When you're recruiting student-athletes for Fordham, what are some of the words you use to describe the atmosphere here?

DW: I try to sell all the positives that we have here, and I think that's why we're getting the quality student-athletes. I think at Fordham that's what we cannot compromise. We have to have young men who can appreciate and understand what a tough academic school this is. It's challenging. At the same time, they get the opportunity to play in one of the top basketball leagues in the country and live in one of the greatest cities in the world.

Is this the toughest schedule in the history of the program?

DW: That's true. This is probably the most talented schedule in the history of Fordham University—period. We play probably, at a minimum, seven to eight teams in the top 20 or top 25, which has never happened here. I don't think we've ever had an ESPN game here at home. Beating Temple and Xavier last year for the first time—that was a big stepping stone, but we think we can do better. We look forward to achieving even higher goals this year.

Our goal, our vision, is to win the league, to establish ourselves in the top half of this league. That's our constant goal. Are we there yet? Not quite, but it takes time.

What can Fordham fans, students and alumni expect to see when they come to Rose Hill Gym and watch your team play?

DW: A lot of excitement, a lot of passion. I think hopefully my team will feed off my excitement, but more importantly off their own excitement. I think fans haven't seen a player like [2004-05 Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year Bryant] Dunston or [sophomore forward Marcus] Stout in a long time. I think that's exciting. I've got some other guys who have some tremendous potential. They're just waiting for their breakout games and breakout seasons.

We started four freshmen last year. We still have growing pains. We're going to be a better team than we were last year, in terms of talent and numbers.

Men's Coach Dereck Whittenburg is in his third season at Fordham.

In Memoriam

The Fordham University Community extends its deepest sympathy to the loved ones of recently deceased alumni and friends. A special Memorial Mass will be held on Monday, May 1, 2006, at 12:15 p.m. in the Lowenstein Chapel on the Lincoln Center campus, 113 West 60th Street and Columbus Avenue, to remember deceased alumni as well as those whose names are submitted by members of the Fordham community. A reception in the 12th-floor lounge of the Lowenstein Center immediately follows the Mass. If you are interested in attending the Memorial Mass and Reception, please contact Paul Francis in the Office of Alumni Relations at 212-636-6503, or by email at pfrancis@fordham.edu.

University Mourns Passing of Wellington Mara

WELLINGTON MARA (FCRH '37), one of the most influential owners in professional sports history, died on Tuesday, Oct. 25, at his home in Rye, N.Y. He was 89.

"As the owner of the New York Giants, he will long be remembered for the integrity and class that he brought to one of the country's finest sports franchises and the National Football League," said Joseph M. McShane, S.J., president of Fordham University. "But as a son of Fordham, his name will always be recalled with sincere fondness and admiration for a life reflective of the Jesuit principles of charity and compassion."

Mara's decision to support revenue sharing in the early 1960s enabled the National Football League to thrive. In an Oct. 25 obituary, the Associated Press referred to Mara as "the patriarch of the NFL, a man who was willing for more than 40 years to split the millions in television revenues he could have made in the nation's largest market with the Green Bays and Pittsburghs of the league."

Mara joined the New York Giants as a ball boy 80 years ago, when his father, Timothy J. Mara, purchased the team. In 1930, at the age of 14, he became co-owner of the team (with his brother Jack, who died in 1965) and continued to run the day-to-day operations of the Giants until 2003, when he handed much of that responsibility over to his son John.

A member of the Fordham University Athletics Hall of Fame since 1972, Mara was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1997. He received the Distinguished American Award from the National Football Foundation in 1992. In 2002, the University showed its appreciation for Mara by honoring him as one of the first recipients of the Fordham Founder's Award. The award, inaugurated in 2002 in recognition of the University's 160th Anniversary, honors individuals whose lives reflect the highest aspirations of the University's defining traditions, as an institution dedicated to wisdom and learning in the service of others.

"The Fordham community is fortunate to have had the opportunity to share in Mr. Mara's life and to have been able to express its gratitude with the Founder's Award," said John Tognino (FCLS '75), chairman of the Fordham University Board of Trustees. "I have been a Giants ticketholder for 42 years and as a youngster can vividly remember watching the Giants practice at Fordham's Rose Hill campus and seeing Wellington Mara on the sidelines tentatively watching everything."

Wellington Mara was honored as one of the inaugural recipients of the Fordham Founder's Award, during the University's 160th anniversary celebration on March 25, 2002. Joseph A. O'Hare, S.J. (right), then president of Fordham University, presented Mara with the award.

A generous supporter of the University and its football program, Mara instituted the Mara Family Award to honor a Fordham alumnus who makes an outstanding contribution to the program. Last April, he presented the 2005 award to Herb Seidell (FCRH '50) at the annual Fordham Gridiron Club Dinner, held at the New York Athletic Club.

"Wellington Mara was a true Fordham gentleman," said Frank McLaughlin (FCRH '69), executive director of athletics at Fordham. "As a former student-athlete, coach and now administrator, I saw firsthand Mr. Mara's love for Fordham, our coaches and, above all, our student-athletes. Fordham will always treasure Wellington Mara and his family."

The University honored Mara with a moment of silence before the Oct. 29 football game with Holy Cross—and the Rams paid their own tribute to the former Giant, breaking a 10-game losing streak with a 24-20 come-from-behind victory. They continued to honor Mara by wearing his initials on their helmets for the remainder of the season.

Mara is survived by his wife, Ann, 11 children and 40 grandchildren.

John Mara's eulogy for his late father, delivered at St. Patrick's Cathedral in Manhattan on Oct. 28, can be reached through FORDHAM online, www.fordham.edu/magazine.
