

February 10th, 2020 - UPDATE

In light of the present situation, we've worked on summarizing the current status and gathered our tips to protect your supply chain. From today authorities in significant centers like Shanghai and Shenzhen have given the green light for businesses to resume operations. At the same time, many cities have local variations on how they return and to which extent. The situation is flexible and different between the cities.

The main limitation for transportation is road closure and limited availability of truckers. Our team is in close contact with shippers for the best solutions ongoing.

NGL Offices:

NGL offices in China resumed operations February 10th, except the Ningbo office that is working remotely, following the local instructions.

Factory production:

Some factories starting this week, but the majority of factories are still limited in operations or closed for production. Factories require an inspection to be cleared before the restart and is requested to have sufficient protection gears for the staff.

The limitations imposed on transportation also hinder many workers to get back to the factories after the extended CNY holidays. Many cities in China implemented 14 days of quarantine time for travellers. Workers that return to the factory of outside towns will have quarantine time prior they can start to work.

A limited no of factories may start production this week, while most starting from 17th or even further onwards. We expect the capacity for deliveries from China factories will remain low during the whole of February.

Status

Ocean carriers announced to “blank” a total of 58 sailings from Asia to Europe respective the same no of “blankings” on Asia to USA trade during Q1.

Rail Freight

Impacted by road closures and limited availability of truckers, the capabilities for pick up are greatly reduced. Many cities only accept local license plate trucks to operate within cities.

Full space is likely to recover from 2nd week in March. For the end of February and the first week in March, high demand is expected and limited space.

TIPS FOR YOUR CHINA SUPPLY CHAIN PLANNING

Actions:

- ✓ Check orders planned for shipping during February & March.
- ✓ Identify and inform your forwarder and factory for urgent cargoes.
- ✓ Consider alternate shipping modes, as an example, to transfer shipments from Ocean to Rail, either full or partial loads.
- ✓ Expect further blank sailings and reduced air capacity as the effect of factories closed for an extended period.
- ✓ Once factories are back in operation, the market is likely to receive peak demand with space shortage.
- ✓ Communicate with your forwarder & factory of your requirements.
