EXTENSION PROGRAM ACTIVITIES

MAJOR ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Provided Leadership for Statewide Planning Programs:

- FL713: Science and Technology Youth Program (1999-2002)
- FL411: Florida Water Conservation (1996-1997)
- FL029: Florida Water Conservation. (1996-1991)
- FL041: Florida Water Conservation. (1991-1995)
- FL411: Florida Water Conservation (1996-1997)

This involved planning, organizing and reporting extension statewide efforts.

Software Support Office.

Was a key member of the group that in 1983 established this office. It was the support and distribution center for agricultural software for IFAS until late 1997.

Developed software for water system design and management (See list of publications).

These were sold through the Computer Support Office. Were widely used in Florida, the US and Internationally. Most of the invitations the author received to teach courses outside Florida were related to this software.

Founding member of the CD-ROM effort in Florida.

This has become a major component of the IFAS extension information delivery system. This program was the undisputed leader in electronic information technologies in agricultural extension.

Mobile irrigation laboratory program.

Developed a field irrigation testing laboratory, including software for on field interactive evaluation. Field lab. used by state and county agencies. Standards were developed for statewide use.

OTHER EXTENSION ACTIVITIES.

- 4-H subject matter specialist in aerospace sciences. Organized and judged yearly state events on aerospace, rocketry and electronics, 1983-1996.
- Trickle Irrigation specifications review program. 1992-1995
A computer program for estimating the specifications of trickle irrigation systems was developed. The purpose is for growers to fill in a form with the specifications of their system. The data in this form is entered into a microcomputer and the resulting output mailed back to them allowing them to review the adequacy of the design. About 275 systems have been renewed since 1983.
- Designed irrigation park for Pinnellas and Hillsborough Co. Extension Offices. 1985.
