Euronet Worldwide might soon have the whole world in its net — thanks to the growing electronic payments industry. The company offers money transfer and processing services and manages ATM networks and point-of-sale (POS) terminals for itself and others. It operates three primary businesses: epay (which sells prepaid mobile airtime and related products and services) EFT (electronic financial transaction processing software and ATM/POS management services); and consumer-to-consumer money transfer. Traditionally Euronet is highly acquisitive and has snatched up money transfer processing and similar companies around the world. Founded in 1994 Euronet operates in 160 countries and its top markets are the US Germany and the UK.

Puget Sounders can earn their sheepskins at The Evergreen State College. The public liberal arts and sciences college the largest of its type in Washington state offers a variety of undergraduate degrees as well as graduate-level programs in environmental studies public administration and education. Evergreen is known for its unusual approach to learning; students enroll in comprehensive programs rather than a series of separate classes and courses are taught by teams of two to four professors. Students then receive "narrative" evaluations rather than traditional letter grades. Tuition per year is $5133 (residents) and $16440 (non-residents).

Just as petroleum and natural gas evolves from old living forms Evolution Petroleum has evolved by producing these ancient hydrocarbons. The company operates oil and gas producing fields in Louisiana Oklahoma and Texas. Its strategy is to acquire already-established properties and redevelop them making the fields more profitable. One method it uses is gas flooding which uses carbon dioxide to free up trapped oil deposits. Assets include a CO2-project in Louisiana's Delhi Field and patented artificial lift technology to extend the life and ultimate recoveries of wells with oil or associated water production. It reported 10.8 million barrels of oil equivalent proved reserves in fiscal 2016.

Guesstimates aren't good enough when diagnosing a deadly cancer so Exact Sciences aims for accuracy. The firm develops non-invasive tests for the early detection of colorectal cancer and precancerous lesions. Its Cologuard test isolates DNA in stool samples then identifies genetic mutations associated with cancer. Colorectal cancer is a common (and one of the deadliest) cancers and Exact believes its method is superior to existing diagnostic methods because it may be able to discern colorectal cancer in its early stages when it is most treatable. The company received FDA approval for Cologuard in mid-2014.

We've come a long way baby but we still have a lot in common with the fruit fly. Exelixis a pharmaceutical research and development firm got its start analyzing genetic data from fruit flies and other organisms as a means to speed the development of drugs and other products. Its early genomic work has yielded a pipeline of drug candidates primarily in the area of cancer therapies as well as some potential treatments for metabolic and cardiovascular diseases. Lead candidate Cometriq gained FDA approval for treatment of thyroid cancer in late 2012 and was launched in the US in early 2013. Exelixis takes its name from the Greek word for evolution.

ExOne wants to be THE one when it comes to non-traditional manufacturing. The company "prints" three-dimensional (3D) parts and materials — literally creating a prototype or part quickly from a computer model by laying down successive layers of material to form the part. It prints in silica sand ceramic stainless steel bronze and glass. ExOne also sells 3D printing machines and makes casting molds from silica sand and ceramics from production centers in the US Germany and Japan. The company's key customers Ford BMW Boeing Caterpillar and the KSB Group operate primarily in the aerospace automotive heavy equipment and oil and gas industries. ExOne formed in 2005 and went public in 2013.

As a freight forwarder Expeditors International of Washington keeps cargo moving. The company purchases air and ocean cargo space on a volume basis and resells that space to its customers at lower rates than they could obtain directly from the carriers. The company also acts as a customs broker for air and ocean freight shipped by its customers and offers supply chain management services. Customers include global businesses engaged in retailing and wholesaling electronics and manufacturing. How much does Expeditors ship? The company annually moves about 800 million kilograms of freight by air 900 million kilograms by ground and one million standard measurement shipping containers by sea.

Exponential Interactive envisions a world where all Internet advertisements will be specifically tailored to individual users. The company's proprietary eX Advertising Intelligence Platform is used by advertising agencies to process massive amounts (2 billion user events per day) of non-personal consumer data (what you click not who you are). Agencies use the data to create custom ad campaigns for relevant demographics. The company has partnered with almost 2000 advertisers such as Coca-Cola and McDonald's to develop ad campaigns for display video and mobile platforms. It also owns a handful of digital advertising services companies including Tribal Fusion. Exponential filed a $75 million IPO in March 2012.

Sure the US is running a huge trade deficit but don't blame the Export-Import Bank of the United States for not trying to stem the tide. The government agency (Ex-Im Bank for short) provides financing for the export of American goods and services mainly to developing countries and regions. Ex-Im Bank which assumes credit and country risks that private-sector lenders cannot or will not stomach furnishes US businesses (most of them with fewer than 100 employees) with operating credit and export credit insurance and provides loans and loan guarantees to foreign buyers of US goods. President Franklin D. Roosevelt established Ex-Im Bank as part of the New Deal in 1934.

Facebook is the face of social media for good and bad. The social networking juggernaut which continues to grow even as it struggles with public relations issues related to privacy security and fake news lets users share information post photos and videos play games and otherwise connect with one another online. The site which allows outside developers to build apps that integrate with Facebook boasts more than two billion monthly active users. In addition to its namesake platform Facebook owns photo and video sharing site Instagram messaging applications Messenger and WhatsApp and virtual reality platform Oculus. The company generates revenue through advertising; the US accounts for about 45% of total sales.

Penny-pinching single moms are drawn to Family Dollar. The nation's #2 dollar store (behind Dollar General) targets forty-something women shopping for a family earning less than $40,000 a year. It operates about 8,000 stores across some 45 states and Washington DC. Consumables (food health and beauty aids and household items) account for more than 70% of sales; stores also sell apparel shoes and linens. Family Dollar runs small neighborhood stores near its fixed- low- and middle-income customers in rural and urban areas. Most merchandise costs less than $10. Family Dollar was founded in 1959 by the father of CEO Howard Levine. Family Dollar has agreed to be acquired by rival Dollar Tree.

The Federal National Mortgage Association or Fannie Mae helps families realize the American Dream of owning a home. Like its brother Freddie Mac the government-sponsored enterprise (GSE) provides liquidity in the US mortgage market by buying mortgages from lenders and packaging them for resale transferring risk from lenders and allowing them to offer mortgages to those who may not otherwise qualify. It owns or guarantees more than $2.9 trillion in single-family home loans and about $295 billion in multifamily mortgages. Its largest customers are Wells Fargo Walker & Dunlop and Berkadia. Due to losses caused largely by the subprime mortgage crisis the government seized both Fannie and Freddie in 2008. Government plans to divest the firms into private ownership have proven difficult; they remain GSEs.

The importance of cooperation — it's one of life's most important lessons. Dating back to the early 1900s the Farmers Cooperative Company (FCC) learned that lesson early on. The 5500-member-plus co-op offers agronomy and grain marketing services to its members who oversee some 3 million acres of farmland in central and north central Iowa. The largest of its kind in Iowa FCC operates 40 grain elevators and provides soil testing and mapping services. It sells supplies including seed feed and fertilizer to its members. The coop merged with another Iowa coop West Central Cooperative in 2016 to form Landus Cooperative.

FARO Technologies is arming companies with a means to inspect the world around them. With the touch of its mechanical arm FARO's measuring systems can facilitate reverse engineering of an undocumented part or a competitor's product. The portable FaroArm FARO Laser ScanArm and FARO Gage are jointed devices that simulate the human arm's movement. Along with the FARO Laser Scanner LS and Laser Tracker inspections and measurements are integrated with 3-D software. Aerospace automotive consumer goods and heavy equipment companies such as Boeing Honda GM GE and Johnson Controls use FARO Arm units in their factories. Customers located outside the Americas account for about 60% of sales in 2014.

Farmer Mac (Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation) is Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac's country cousin. Like its city-slicker kin it provides liquidity in its markets (agricultural real estate and rural housing mortgages) by buying loans from lenders and then securitizing the loans into Farmer Mac Guaranteed Securities. Farmer Mac buys both conventional loans and those guaranteed by the US Department of Agriculture. Farmer Mac was created by Congress in 1987 to establish a secondary market for agricultural mortgage and rural utilities loans. It is a stockholder-owned publicly-traded corporation based in Washington DC with an underwriting office in Iowa.

Nobody goes up up and away until the folks at the FAA say it's OK. The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is the government agency responsible for overseeing air transportation in the US. An arm of the US Department of Transportation the FAA focuses on air transportation safety including the enforcement of safety standards for aircraft manufacturing operation and maintenance. It also manages air traffic in the US through a network of towers overseeing an average of 50000 flights per day. It maintains radar systems communication equipment and air traffic security systems. The FAA's annual budget is typically around $15 billion.

Where do banks go when they need a loan? To the Federal Reserve System which sets the discount interest rate the base rate at which its member banks may borrow. Known as the Fed the system oversees a network of 12 Federal Reserve Banks located in major US cities; these in turn regulate banks in their districts and ensure they maintain adequate reserves. The Fed also clears money transfers issues currency and buys or sells government securities to regulate the money supply. Through its powerful New York bank the Fed conducts foreign currency transactions trades on the world market to support the US dollar's value and stores gold for foreign governments and international agencies.

No cow collagen here — Fibrocell Science (formerly Isolagen) lets you be your beautiful self using your beautiful cells. The company's autologous cellular therapy process used in its primary LAVIV product offering extracts fibroblasts (collagen-producing cells) from a small tissue sample taken from behind a patient's ear. The cells reproduce over six to eight weeks and are then injected back into the patient giving him or her a "natural" boost. The company gained FDA approval for LAVIV for use on wrinkle correction in 2011. It also hopes to gain approval for indications such as burn and acne scar treatment and to regenerate tissue lost from periodontal disease.

Got oil and gas? FieldPoint Petroleum can point to its oil and gas fields and its interests in 480 productive oil and gas wells (96 net) in Louisiana New Mexico Oklahoma Texas and Wyoming. The independent oil and gas exploration company operates some 19 of these wells. About two-thirds of its gross productive oil wells are located in Oklahoma. FieldPoint Petroleum has proved reserves of more than 1.1 million barrels of oil and 1.9 billion cu. ft. of natural gas. Its business strategy is to expand its reserve base as well as its production and cash flow through the acquisition of producing oil and gas properties. However low oil prices have forced the company to hold back on further acquisitions.

FINRA is one of the long arms of the law for the securities industry. A non-governmental regulatory authority FINRA regulates all securities firms (roughly 4250) that conduct business in the US. Its activities include writing and enforcing rules; enforcing federal securities laws; licensing and registering brokerages and private equity firms; and providing educational information and arbitration services to investors. The regulator works with the SEC and the Fed and possesses the authority to issue fines and bar violators among other punitive actions. FINRA was formed in 2007 from the consolidation of the National Association of Securities Dealers and certain regulatory and enforcement elements of the NYSE.

First Advantage Bancorp is the holding company for First Federal Savings Bank which serves northern Tennessee from about a half-dozen branch offices. Founded in 1953 the thrift offers standard retail products and services including deposit accounts and loans. One- to four-family residential and commercial mortgages account for about half of First Federal's loan portfolio; the company also writes construction and land loans and to a lesser extent consumer and business loans. First Advantage was established when the bank converted to a holding company structure in 2007.

Money doesn't grow on trees so when farmers in Illinois need a little cash they turn to First Mid-Illinois Bank & Trust. The primary subsidiary of First Mid-Illinois Bancshares is a major supplier of farm credit (including real estate machinery and production loans; inventory financing; and lines of credit) in its market area. In addition to agricultural loans the bank offers commercial consumer and real estate lending. It also provides deposit products such as savings and checking accounts plus trust and investment services through a partnership with Raymond James. First Mid-Illinois Bank & Trust has about 40 branches. Other subsidiaries provide data processing services and insurance products and services.

First Robinson Financial is the holding company for First Robinson Savings Bank which provides traditional banking services to individuals and businesses through four locations in eastern Illinois' Crawford County. In 2008 the bank opened a division in Vincennes Indiana called First Vincennes Savings Bank. The banks' services include savings checking and NOW accounts; IRAs; and CDs. They use funds from deposits primarily to originate one- to four-family real estate loans (accounting for about half of the company's loan portfolio) and to a lesser extent consumer business agricultural and municipal loans.

FirstEnergy's first goal is to generate and deliver power but its second goal is to stay profitable in a market undergoing deregulation. Its ten utilities provide electricity to 6 million customers in the Midwest and the Mid-Atlantic. The company's domestic power plants have a total generating capacity of more than 16000 MW an amount expected to diminish as the company winds down its deregulated business. Subsidiary FirstEnergy Solutions trades energy commodities in deregulated US markets. FirstEnergy's other nonregulated operations include electrical and mechanical contracting and energy planning and procurement.

Fiskars Brands is fairly frisky in its old age. The company is the North American manufacturing and marketing subsidiary of Finland's Fiskars Corporation — the second-oldest incorporated business in the world having celebrated some 360 anniversaries. Orange-handled scissors are a signature item for consumers but Fiskars Brands' namesake line also includes garden tools (such as pruners reel mowers and axes) craft tools (hand drills punches) school and office supplies (child-sized scissors rulers and trimmers). It also makes ergonomic cutting tools for the garden as part of its PowerGear line scissors and shears for sewing and quilting under the Ginger name and outdoor cutting tools by Gerber.

If Old MacDonald actually had a farm he'd want to be a member of the Five Star Cooperative. Operating in north-central and northeast Iowa Five Star has operations in more than 15 small to mid-sized towns in the Hawkeye State. The cooperative is divided into five divisions according to the products and services offered — agronomy petroleum (diesel fuel and home heating oil) feed (for beef cattle and swine) grain and hardware — it operates a True Value hardware store in New Hampton that offers all the usual hardware products and services. Established in 1916 Five Star Cooperative provides a full complement for its member/farmers.

Yearning to learn to play — and maybe own — a home organ? Fletcher Music Centers would be a company to call. The firm sells a variety of Lowrey-brand organs and teaches aspiring organists to play. The company is one of the world's largest retailers of organs for home use. It boasts about 20 stores located in Arizona and Florida. Most of its locations offer lessons and the company plans special occasions such as student concerts parties and potlucks. Fletcher Music Centers operates OrganFest a three-day event featuring discussions seminars and professional concerts. Founded by Robert Fletcher in 1975 the company is still owned by the Fletcher family.

Flexion wants to help its customers be more flexible. The biopharmaceutical company develops anti-inflammatory and analgesic treatments for patients with osteoarthritis and other musculoskeletal conditions. Its first product Zilretta was approved in the US in 2017; it combines an existing steroid with a polymer in a formula that gets injected at the joint to relieve pain and swelling. The polymer is the company's proprietary sustained-release ingredient that allows medication to stay where it's needed. Flexion's pipeline candidates are also for post-operative pain and end-stage osteoarthritis. The company owns the worldwide rights to commercialize its Zilretta and its product candidates.

FLIR Systems doesn't sweat it when the heat is on. It finds it. The company's thermal imaging and obscurant-proof camera systems detect heat and radiation allowing operators to see objects through fog darkness or smoke. But FLIR senses and detects more than heat. It also makes visible-light imaging systems locator systems measurement and diagnostic systems and advanced threat-detection tools. Industrial customers use FLIR's thermography products which employ cooled and uncooled infrared technologies for equipment monitoring process control and other applications. More than half of FLIR's sales are generated in the US. FLIR is an acronym for forward-looking infrared.

Owning a home in Florida is just a bit easier thanks to Florida Housing Finance Corporation. Established in 1997 by the Florida Legislature as a public corporation Florida Housing's mission is to help Floridians obtain safe decent housing that might otherwise be unavailable to them. Florida Housing pursues its mission through a number of programs that provide financial assistance for first time homebuyers and for developers of multifamily dwellings that serve elderly and low income Floridians. Florida Housing partners with various local state and federal agencies as well as developers and not-for-profit organizations to achieve its goals.

Unlike some politicians Florida Municipal Power Agency (FMPA) doesn't believe in holding on to power. The non-profit public agency generates and supplies electric power to 31 county or municipally owned distribution utilities which in turn serve 2 million Florida residents and businesses. Each of the distribution utilities appoints one representative to FMPA's board of directors which governs the Agency's activities. The Agency is authorized to undertake joint power supply projects for its members and to issue tax-exempt bonds to finance the costs of such projects. It is also empowered to implement a pooled financing program for utility-related projects.

Florida's Natural Growers is known for squeezing out pulpy profits. The cooperative is one of the largest citrus juice sellers in the US ranking right up there with the country's two giant brand names: PepsiCo's Tropicana and Coca-Cola's Minute Maid. Some 1000 farmer/members harvest more than 50,000 acres of citrus groves for the co-op's products — frozen concentrated and not-from-concentrate juices (orange grapefruit lemonade apple and fruit blends). The co-op provides juice to customers in the foodservice retail food and vending industries. Its brands include Florida's Natural Growers Pride Bluebird and Donald Duck among others.

When Fluidigm's microfluidic systems measure volume by the nanoliter they're not using itty bitty Erlenmeyer flasks. Based on the fabrication technology that brought forth semiconductors Fluidigm develops integrated fluidic circuits (IFCs) and strings them together as systems to automate certain tasks in life sciences research. Fluidigm's BioMark HD and EP1 systems enable genetic analyses including genotyping and high-throughput gene expression. Its Access Array system enables automated sample preparation for DNA sequencing. Customers include academic institutions diagnostic laboratories and pharmaceutical biotechnology and agricultural biotechnology (Ag-Bio) companies.

SONAR finds objects hidden under the water using sound waves; FONAR uses magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) to find disease or injury hidden inside the body. The company was the first to market a commercial MRI scanner in 1980 and it is trying to stay at the forefront of the field. Its primary products include the Upright MRI which scans patients in sitting standing or bending positions and the FONAR 360 a room-sized MRI. Both systems do away with the claustrophobia-producing enclosed tubes of traditional machines. Additionally FONAR's Health Management Corporation of America (HMCA) subsidiary provides management services to more than 20 diagnostic imaging centers primarily in Florida and New York.

The Northwest is a prime nesting spot for this football team. Football Northwest owns and operates the Seattle Seahawks professional football franchise. The team joined the National Football League during the league expansion of 1976 (the same year as the Tampa Bay Buccaneers) but suffered through mostly disappointing seasons until a resurgence beginning in the late 1990s. Fans were finally treated to a Super Bowl appearance following the 2005 season; however Seattle fell to the Pittsburgh Steelers in that game. Founded by department store magnate Lloyd Nordstrom the Seahawks franchise has been owned by Microsoft co-founder Paul Allen since 1997.

Ford Motor is striving to build smart vehicles for a smart world. One of the "Big Three" automakers in the US (with GM and Fiat Chrysler) the company manufactures cars trucks and SUVs under the Ford and Lincoln brands ? the F-150 the Lincoln Navigator and the Mustang among its most popular models ?- and finances sales through Ford Motor Credit. Ford which does business worldwide is making significant investments in a strategic shift to move it from solely an automaker to a leader in vehicle technology and mobility services. In 2018 Ford said it would phase out nearly all of its car offerings except for the Mustang to focus on more profitable trucks and SUVs.

Seems its trucks aren't the only things built Ford tough. The automaker's subsidiary Ford Motor Credit is proving to be pretty resilient too. One of the world's largest auto financing companies it funds autos for and through Ford and Lincoln dealerships in some 70 countries. It finances new used and leased vehicles and provides wholesale financing mortgages and capital loans for dealers. The company also offers business fleet financing and insurance. Founded in 1959 Ford Motor Credit generates more than half of its revenue from operating leases and more than 70% of revenue from the US.

Why test each microchip one by one when you can test them all in one place? That's the question FormFactor answers with its interconnect technology called MicroSpring. The company makes wafer probe cards that test semiconductor circuits (especially memory chips) while they are still part of semiconductor wafers — before the wafers are cut into individual chips. FormFactor touts the process for its cost-effectiveness since it allows testing of many chips at once across a range of scales and temperatures. While the most of the company's products are made in the US the majority of sales are to customers in the Asia/Pacific region.

When it's time to haul freight Forward Air never looks back. The company transports deferred airfreight by truck — cargo that requires specific-time delivery but is less time-sensitive than airfreight. Forward Air typically receives freight that has been transported by plane sends it to a sorting facility then dispatches it by truck to a terminal near its destination. The company has nearly 3777 trailers and more than 570 owned and 100 leased tractors and straight trucks in its fleet. It operates from about 85 terminals at or near airports in the US and Canada including about a dozen regional hubs. It also provides services such as warehousing and local pick-up and delivery.

Graymark Healthcare wants its businesses to help remedy the ills of small-town Americans. Through its operating subsidiaries Graymark Healthcare acquires and operates independent pharmacies and sleep diagnostic centers many of which are located in smaller US markets. Its ApothecaryRx subsidiary manages pharmacies doing business in a handful of central US states and the company's Sleep Disorder Centers (SDC) subsidiary manages sleep diagnostics businesses in the South and Midwest. Formerly Graymark Productions (a film production firm) Graymark changed its name in 2008 following the acquisitions of ApothecaryRx and SDC. The company sold its ApothecaryRx stores to Walgreen in late 2010.

The right course of cancer treatment starts with a good foundation — at the molecular level. Foundation Medicine's personalized medicine test kit named FoundationOne analyzes a patient's genetic profile to determine a treatment strategy. The company processes the tests for solid tumor cancers and provides doctors and oncologists with a written report that matches detected molecular alterations with relevant treatment options and clinical trials. Foundation Medicine which has received investment funding from Bill Gates went public in 2013. In 2015 Roche acquired a controlling interest in the company for just over $1 billion.

Talk about shock value. Fox Factory makes suspension products — i.e. shocks — for high-performance mountain bikes and other powered vehicles that give riders a smooth ride over rough terrain. Some two-thirds of sales are for shocks for bicycles but the other third of revenue comes from shocks for ATVs motorcycles snowmobiles and off-road vehicles and trucks. Fox Factory sells its shocks to original equipment manufacturers (OEMs) such as Specialized and Trek (bikes) and Ford and Polaris (powered vehicles). It also sells branded apparel such as T-shirts sweatshirts and hats. Fox Factory went public in 2013.

Fred Meyer Stores went out for groceries and wound up in Kroger's cart. Freddy's — as the chain is known — is a supercenter pioneer providing food and general merchandise to cost-conscious consumers in the Pacific Northwest and Alaska. One of the largest supercenter operators in the US (along with Wal-Mart and Costco Wholesale) Fred Meyer's 130 multidepartment stores (averaging more than 165,000 sq. ft.) offer everything from apparel and home goods to groceries consumer electronics fuel and jewelry. Its Web store delivers to the Alaska Bush. Kroger has leveraged Fred Meyer's general merchandising expertise as defense against Wal-Mart which has overtaken Kroger as the #1 seller of groceries in the US.

These siblings know there's no place like home. Government-sponsored enterprises (GSEs) Freddie Mac (officially Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation) and Fannie Mae were established to buy residential mortgages and boost the housing market. They do so by purchasing mortgages from lenders and packaging them for resale thereby mitigating risk and allowing lenders to provide mortgages to those who may not otherwise qualify. The agency also provides assistance for affordable rental housing. Together Fannie and Freddie guarantee some 70% of all new home loans in the US. Due to losses related to the subprime mortgage crisis the government seized Fannie and Freddie in 2008. Government plans to divest the firms into private ownership have proven difficult; they remain GSEs.

Frederick's of Hollywood Group makes big money out of little somethings. Initially formed by the merger of Frederick's of Hollywood and Movie Star it sells intimates wigs hosiery and dresses through its catalog division (which mails more than 13 million) website and about 120 namesake stores in the US. It's also developing a presence in the Middle East. The manufacturer now solely focuses on its retail business. Years after acquiring Movie Star the group shed the wholesaler which made intimate apparel sleepwear leisurewear and loungewear. Additionally Frederick's of Hollywood Group in late 2010 sold off its wholesale unit to Dolce Vita Intimates amid declining revenues.

Fruth Pharmacy operates about 25 drugstores in southern Ohio and West Virginia. While prescriptions account for the majority of sales Fruth pharmacies also sell gift items and computer supplies and have floral departments and digital printing. The regional drugstore chain competes by constantly trying new things such as participating in the Face2Face diabetes program and testing in-store dollar departments. It is countering Wal-Mart Stores's $4 generic offering with a discount generic drug program created by Cardinal Health. Founded in 1952 by its namesake — the late Jack Fruth — the company is family-owned and -operated.

Fulcrum BioEnergy doesn't let anything go to waste. The development-stage company has a plan to make biofuel out of garbage (garbage!) using a proprietary process to convert solid waste into ethanol thus keeping it out of landfills. (The majority of ethanol produced in the US comes from corn which still takes time and resources to grow and is subject to commodity prices). Fulcrum BioEnergy intends to build a plant that can produce 10 million gallons of ethanol per year using solid waste purchased from Waste Management and Waste Connections. Energy marketer Tenaska has already agreed to sell its ethanol. Fulcrum BioEnergy filed a $115 million IPO in 2011 but withdrew it a year later.

Furiex Pharmaceuticals knows two heads are better than one. The drug development company partners with pharmaceutical and biotechnology businesses in the early stages of developing new medications to combine R&D know-how. A company can reduce time and cost by teaming up with Furiex to handle safety and efficacy tests for new compounds. (It takes on average more than 10 years and almost $1 billion to bring a new drug to market.) In return Furiex receives a share of the rewards after a drug continues into the late stages of clinical development. The company began in 1998 as a division of PPD; it was named Furiex and spun off into a separate publicly traded company in mid-2010.

FX Energy is not exactly fixated on energy in Poland but it is in western Poland's Permian Basin where it is hoping to make its big breakthrough. In 2012 the independent exploration and production company reported proved reserves of 44.1 billion cu. ft. of natural gas equivalent in Poland and 0.6 million barrels of oil equivalent in the US (from properties in Montana and Nevada). Partners include state-owned Polish Oil and Gas and CalEnergy Gas which have served as operators for exploration wells in Poland. FX Energy holds about 2.7 million gross acres (2 million net) in western Poland.

Multi-service utility Gainesville Regional Utilities (GRU) started out small more than a century ago but has been gaining ground ever since. The company (now the fifth largest municipal electric utility in Florida) is the sole utilities provider in Gainesville and surrounding areas in Alachua County. The municipal utility distributes electric water wastewater natural gas and telecommunications services to approximately 93000 retail and wholesale customers. GRU has interests in power generation facilities that give it more than 600 MW of capacity. It also offers internet and other communications services. GRU gets the bulk of its revenues from its electric utility operations.

While there's no vaccine for breast cancer Galena Biopharma has big plans for NeuVax its drug candidate. NeuVax which is in Phase III clinical trials is being tested for its efficacy in reducing the recurrence of breast cancer in patients who can't take Genentech's Herceptin. Galena Biopharma acquired the rights to NeuVax when it bought the drug's developer Arizona-based Aphera Inc. for about $7 million in April 2011. Galena itself was spun off from RXi Pharmaceuticals in a one-for-one stock split in March 2012. Galena having more potential for success with NeuVax became the public company while RXi Pharmaceuticals became a private company focused on developing RNA interference (RNAi) therapies.

Gallaudet University (GU) gives deaf and hard-of-hearing students the chance to be in the majority. Designed to accommodate hearing-impaired students GU offers undergraduate and graduate degrees in more than 40 majors to about 2000 students annually. The bilingual university which uses both American Sign Language (ASL) and English admits a small number of hearing ASL-proficient students to each incoming freshman class. Through its Laurent Clerc National Deaf Education Center GU provides training and support for teachers and parents of hearing impaired children and operates demonstration schools. Founded in 1864 GU was named for Thomas Hopkins Gallaudet a pioneer in education for the deaf.

Gallery Furniture and its founder Jim "Mattress Mac" McIngvale have become something of a Houston institution. McIngvale's animated TV ads promise they "really will save you money." With two locations the firm has evolved into a leading regional furniture retailer accounting for about 20% of Houston's market share. Gallery Furniture also ranks as one of the nation's top sellers in terms of sales per square foot. In addition to mattresses (Simmons Beautyrest and Tempur Sealy brands) it sells bedroom dining room home office and living room furniture. The firm was founded in 1981. A fire in May 2009 destroyed its 100000-sq.-ft. warehouse and damaged its North Freeway showroom.

They say everything is bigger in Texas and for Gehan Homes that hopefully applies to the number of homes sold. Gehan Homes builds single-family houses in about 60 communities in and around Austin Dallas Fort Worth Houston and San Antonio. Its houses range in price from the low $100,000s to the low $300,000s. Gehan Homes owns the land it builds on and provides mortgage brokerage through majority-owned Suburban Mortgage. Through cutting costs and slowing down production the homebuilder is working to stay afloat in a market that has caused several competitors to file for bankruptcy or shut down operations. John Gehan founded the family-owned company in the 1960s.

GEICO (an acronym for Government Employees Insurance Company) has found that driving down costs brings drivers by the droves into its fold. GEICO has traditionally provided auto and other insurance to preferred low-risk demographic groups (such as government and military employees) but has also begun to sell to nonstandard (high-risk) drivers. In addition to auto coverage the company's offerings include motorcycle and RV insurance and emergency road service. GEICO eschews agents in favor of direct marketing through such vehicles as direct mail TV radio and the Internet. Its gecko mascot is one of the most recognized marketing icons. The company is a subsidiary of Warren Buffett's Berkshire Hathaway.

High-tech sound may drive development for LRAD (formerly American Technology Corporation) but the firm is also banking on it to drive its bottom line. LRAD whose past sales largely came from its portable radios discontinued its portable consumer electronics division to make products that transmit sound over short and long distances. The company's Long Range Acoustic Devices generate the majority of revenues nowadays and they have been deployed by the US military and used by public safety agencies worldwide. To strengthen its identity as a global provider of long-range acoustic technology systems the company changed its name to LRAD in 2010.

GeneLink has taken the science of molecular genetics and turned it into a way to sell face cream and vitamins. Although the promise of immortality is out of its reach the biosciences company aims to improve one's health beauty and wellness with customized nutritional supplements and anti-aging skin care products based upon proprietary DNA assessments obtained from a cheek swab. Other consumer genomic products in development include products to predict how an individual's skin will age or if an individual has a significant risk of developing cardiovascular disease Alzheimer's ADHD or loss of bone density.

General Moly reporting for molybdenum duty. The mineral development exploration and mining company (formerly Idaho General Mines) finds and exploits molybdenum oxide (moly) a mineral used primarily as an alloy in steel production. Steel makers create moly-enhanced pipes valued by the construction aircraft manufacturing and desalinization industries for their strength and resistance to heat and corrosion. Refiners use the pipes and employ the mineral to remove sulfur from diesel fuel and crude oil. General Moly owns two properties in Nevada one in an 80/20 joint venture with Korean steel company POSCO and one outright. The company's move from development to production was pending in early 2011.

Genocoea Biosciences seeks a panacea for human infection. It does this using its proprietary ATLAS technology that acts through T cells to target infectious diseases. The company's lead candidate is GEN-009 an adjuvanted peptide vaccine which will begin phase 1 clinical trials targeting a range of tumor types. Genocoea believes its T-cell methodology allows it to develop vaccines more quickly than the traditional method which uses B cells or antibodies. It also thinks certain infections respond better to T cell treatments which operate at the cellular level. Genocoea is seeking to partner with others to develop general cancer vaccines as well as a vaccine that will target cancers caused by the Epstein-Barr Virus.

Genomic Health believes the genome is key to good health and individualized treatments. The company conducts genomic research to develop molecular diagnostics and assays that can predict the likelihood of disease recurrence as well as response to therapy and treatments. Genomic Health's Oncotype DX breast cancer test predicts the likelihood of chemotherapy effectiveness and cancer recurrence in women with newly diagnosed early-stage invasive breast cancer. Genomic Health's research efforts are targeted at providing a wider base of cancer-related tests. The company generates around 85% of its sales in the US.

Gentex would agree that competitors never look better than when they are in the rearview. The company focuses on designing making and marketing interior and exterior auto-dimming rearview mirrors and camera-based driver-assist systems for the automotive market. It serves customers worldwide but its largest base includes big carmakers such as Toyota General Motors and Volkswagen. Its products are found as standard or optional features on hundreds of vehicle models. To a lesser degree Gentex also makes dimmable aircraft windows found on commercial aircraft and fire protection products — including smoke detectors fire alarms and signaling devices — primarily for commercial buildings.

GeoBio Energy used to think biodiesel was the way of the future but lately it's decided that the oil and gas industry isn't going anywhere anytime soon. Though it acquired GeoAlgae Technologies which develops low-cost renewable feedstock used for the production of biodiesel in 2008 GeoBio Energy has since switched directions. In 2009 it agreed to buy H&M Precision Products which makes chemicals used in the drilling of oil and gas wells. In 2010 it also agreed to acquire a Colorado-based oil field site preparation and maintenance company.

George Foreman Enterprises doesn't sell the boxer's namesake grills (Salton does); however the company actively looks to make acquisitions and licensing deals to keep George Foreman's name in the ring. Through its InStride Ventures George Foreman Enterprises makes and markets therapeutic footwear under the George Foreman name to ShopKo. The company also has partnered with G-Nutritional and Vitaquest International (which later formed Vita Ventures) to market and sell vitamins and nutritional supplements using the Foreman trade name. The company signed on legendary boxing champ George Foreman to a licensing and pitchman deal in 2005 in exchange for 35% of the company and his name on the marquee.

Georgia Power is the largest subsidiary of US utility holding company Southern Company. The regulated utility provides electricity to about 2.4 million residential commercial and industrial customers throughout most of Georgia. It has interests in about 20 fossil-fueled 2 nuclear and 20 hydroelectric power plants that give it about 22000 MW of generating capacity. When necessary the company purchases excess power from nine small power producers. Georgia Power sells wholesale electricity to several cooperatives and municipalities in the region. The utility also offers energy efficiency surge protection and outdoor lighting products and services.

Geospace Technologies (formerly OYO Geospace) analyzes the spaces below the earth's surface to help companies find gas and oil. It makes instruments and equipment used by seismic contractors and oil and gas companies to gather and process seismic data to zero in on hydrocarbons. The company's geophones detect energy from the earth's subsurface and its hydrophones detect changes in pressure and gather seismic data in water. Other products include seismic leader wire geophone string connectors seismic telemetry cable and thermal imaging equipment; all are compatible with most seismic data-acquisition systems. Geospace also makes its thermal printers available for the commercial graphics industry.

Four score and many years ago Gettysburg College opened its doors. The private four-year liberal arts and sciences college offers about 65 academic programs and about 40 majors to 2600 students who come from more than 40 states and 35 countries. Gettysburg's student-faculty ratio is 10:1. The campus is adjacent to the Gettysburg National Military Park in Pennsylvania. The college was founded in 1832; its first building Pennsylvania Hall served during and after the Battle of Gettysburg as a hospital for the wounded. In 1863 students and faculty of Gettysburg College walked from Pennsylvania Hall to the national cemetery in Gettysburg to hear President Lincoln deliver his legendary Gettysburg Address.

Putting sugar in a gas tank is generally not a good idea but Gevo has figured out a way to make it beneficial. A renewable chemical and biofuels company Gevo produces isobutanol a multi-purpose chemical derived from glucose and other cellulosic biomass extracted from plant matter. Its isobutanol can be used as a blendstock (additive used during the refining process) for gasoline and jet fuel production and as a chemical used in the production of plastics fibers and rubber. Gevo does not yet produce isobutanol on a commercial scale but it is in the process of building its customer and partnership base in preparation of commencing production. In 2016 the company was seeking strategic alternatives.

Global Access has no ax to grind just a bunch of kiosks to manage. Through subsidiary Nationwide Money Services the company operates a network of some 4700 ATMs around the US. More than half of the ATMs it manages are owned by merchants but Global Access does own around 2000 of the machines. The company provides maintenance cash management and network processing services; it processes some 1.5 million financial transactions per month. Its machine network is concentrated in the South and East. In 2009 Global Access formed subsidiary Nationwide Ntertainment to operate self-serve DVD rental kiosks under the InstaFlix brand. It operates more than 500 of the mini video rental stores.

Globe Specialty Metals is an apt name for a company that peddles its metals around the world. The specialty metals manufacturer sells silicon metal and silicon-based alloys to customers in the Americas Asia and Europe from facilities in the US Argentina China and Poland. Its silicon metal and alloys are used to make a variety of industrial products from aluminum and automotive parts to steel and semiconductors. It holds about one-fifth of the Western market share for magnesium ferrosilicon. Globe also recycles by-products such as silica fume (a dustlike material known as microsilica that is collected in air filtration systems) which it sells for use as a concrete additive.

"Like oil and water" may no longer be a cliché if Glori Energy has its way. The company's novel AERO System for oil recovery uses naturally occurring microbes to break down the barrier between oil and water allowing more oil to flow from underground formations. It uses a three-step approach to create custom nutrient formulas for microbes at each well site and estimates that its technology which uses existing pumps and pipelines can increase oil recovery by up to 100%. While it sounds like something from a sci-fi movie Shell Husky Merit Energy and Citation Oil are all customers; it has about 10 projects in various stages. Glori Energy filed to go public in 2011 but withdrew the IPO a year later.

Carbs are a good thing to GlycoMimetics. The biotechnology company uses carbohydrate chemistry to develop drug candidates for rare diseases. Its lead drug candidate is designed to treat vaso-occlusive crisis (VOC) a painful condition that affects people with sickle cell disease. If approved it would be the first drug to treat the cause of VOC and potentially reduce dependence on narcotics for pain management. Pfizer bought the rights to develop and commercialize the VOC drug. In addition the company is developing a drug to assist people with acute myeloid leukemia (AML) during chemotherapy. GlycoMimetics went public in 2014. It raised $56 million and plans to use the proceeds to further fund clinical trials.

Gold Reserve's primary asset was the Brisas project in Venezuela which contains estimated reserves of about 10 million ounces of gold and 1.4 billion pounds of copper. Gold Reserve had been developing Brisas since 1992. However all activity on the mine ceased in late 2009 when the Venezuelan government canceled Gold Reserve's permits and seized the assets of the Brisas project. The company is pursuing an arbitration claim through the World Bank against the Venezuelan government in an effort to recoup its investment in the Brisas project. The company is restructuring its debt while it continues its $2.1 arbitration claim.

The fruited plains with their golden grains have yielded Golden Grain Energy an ethanol production company with a plant in Iowa that converts corn into ethanol which is most commonly used as an additive to unleaded gasoline. Other uses include high octane fuel enhancer and a non-petroleum fuel substitute. Golden Grain Energy's plant has a production capacity of 110 million gallons of ethanol and 120000 tons of distillers grains per year. The distillers grains are used to produce animal feed. In 2009 with raw material costs rising and selling prices falling the company cut back production at the plant.

Terralene Fuels (formerly Golden Spirit Enterprises) has had many lives — and many names. Founded in 1993 as Power Direct an oil-and-gas exploration company this development-stage firm has undergone several different incarnations. It took a gamble on online poker through its goldenspiritpoker.com site. After Congress passed the Unlawful Internet Gambling Enforcement Act of 2006 Golden Spirit again switched gears seeking to develop waste-recycled products. In 2010 the company launched its Terralene Fuel product an alternative to ethanol-blended gasoline. It changed its name to Terralene Fuels in 2011 to reflect its core business.

The Goldfield Corporation earns more laying cable now than it used to digging for mother lodes. Through subsidiary Southeast Power Goldfield builds and maintains electrical facilities in the Southeast West and Mid-Atlantic regions for utilities and industrial customers including Florida Power & Light Company and Duke Energy. The unit also installs transmission lines and fiber-optic cable. Goldfield's Bayswater Development subsidiary maintains real estate operations in Florida specializing in developing waterfront condominiums for retirees. The company which had been in the mining industry since 1906 divested those operations in 2002 after deciding that it had become economically unfeasible.

Goldrich Mining Company is looking in a remote area of northern Alaska to get rich off gold. The development-stage company is exploring a mining site in Chandalar where gold was first discovered at the turn of the 20th century. Goldrich has mineral rights to 17000 acres on land owned by the state of Alaska. The Chandalar property does not have any proved reserves but the site did produce about 1500 ounces of fine gold and 250 ounces of fine silver in 2010. However its arctic climate creates a limited mining season; the company can only conduct business there for a few months every summer. Goldrich was incorporated in 1959 and has been public since 1970 buying its first mining claims in Chandalar in 1972.

Goodwill Industries International supports the operations of about 165 independent Goodwill chapters in the US and Canada. While it's most well known for its more than 3000 thrift stores the group focuses on providing rehabilitation job training placement and employment services for people with disabilities and others. Goodwill is one of the world's largest providers of such services as well as one of the largest employers in the world of the physically mentally and emotionally disabled. Support for its programs is generated primarily from the sale of donated goods both at the retail stores and through an online auction site as well as from contract work and government grants.

Great Lakes Aviation goes to great lengths to get people where they need to be even if it's far from the big city. Flying as Great Lakes Airlines the regional carrier transports passengers to more than 60 destinations in the western and midwestern US mainly from Denver but also from markets such as Phoenix Kansas City and Ontario California. It maintains code-sharing agreements with Frontier Airlines and United Airlines. (Code-sharing enables carriers to sell tickets on one another's flights and thus extend their networks.) Great Lakes operates a fleet of about 40 turboprop aircraft consisting mostly of 19-passenger Beechcraft 1900Ds but also including 30-passenger Embraer Brasilia 120s.

Great Lakes Dredge & Dock is an expert at keeping waterways and shorelines clear. Founded in 1890 this company is a stalwart of dredging services in the US mainly in the East West and Gulf Coast region. It also provides dredging abroad. Dredging involves enhancing or preserving waterways for navigability or protecting shorelines by removing or replenishing soil sand or rock. Great Lakes is involved in three major types of dredging work: capital (primarily port expansion projects) beach nourishment (movement of sand from ocean floor to shoreline to alleviate erosion) and maintenance (removal of silt and sediment from existing waterways and harbors). Great Lakes also provides environmental & remediation clean-up services.

Great Northern Iron Ore Properties is the landlord of one big iron formation. The trust gets income from royalties on iron ore minerals (principally taconite) taken from its more than 67000 acres on the Mesabi Iron Formation in Minnesota. The trust was formed in 1906 to own the properties of an affiliate of Burlington Northern Santa Fe (BNSF formerly Great Northern Railway). The trust's beneficiaries were the heirs of railroad founder James Hill; however the last survivor his grandson Louis Hill died in 1995. In 2015 (20 years after Louis Hill's death) the land will be transferred to a unit of ConocoPhillips which acquired the BNSF assets in 2005.

Great Plains Energy is sweeping the plains with electric power. The company serves about 850000 electricity customers in the breadbasket of America through regulated utility Kansas City Power & Light (KCP&L) and the KCP&L Greater Missouri Operations Company. The utility generates most of its own electricity which it supplements as needed with power purchase agreements. In 2017 the company agreed to a merger-of-equals transaction with its neighboring utility Westar Energy and expects the union to complete in the first half of 2018.

Green Brick Partners (formerly BioFuel Energy) climbed aboard the ethanol bandwagon but found that bandwagon be on traveling down an uncertain course. The company's two plants (sold 2013) had the combined capacity to produce 220 million gallons of ethanol annually as well as 720000 tons of distillers grains. It sold all of its production to agribusiness giant Cargill which in turn gave it reliable corn supplies an established logistics/transportation network and marketing expertise. BioFuel Energy went public in 2007 using the proceeds to repay outstanding debts as well as to fund construction of its ethanol facilities. The name change to Green Brick Partners occurred in late 2014.

Public utility Green Mountain Power (GMP) lights up the hills of Vermont supplying electricity to more than 250000 customers in the state. The utility also markets wholesale electricity in New England. The company operates several thousand miles of transmission and distribution lines and owns a minority stake in high-voltage transmission operator Vermont Electric Power (VELCO). About half of the generation capacity GMP taps is from hydroelectric and other renewable energy sources. GMP is an indirect subsidiary of Canada's GazMetro. The company absorbed Central Vermont Public Service's assets in 2012.

It's plain to Green Plains that the US heartland's cornfields offer so much more than a food source. The company operates nearly corn-based ethanol facilities in Illinois Indiana Iowa Nebraska Michigan Minnesota Tennessee Texas and Virginia. The vertically integrated Green Plains has the annual capacity to produce 1.5 billion gallons of ethanol which is primarily used as an auto fuel. It also sells ethanol produced by others. In addition Green Plains' plants when operating at full capacity produce about 4.1 million tons of animal feed known as distillers grains the primary co-product of ethanol production. Another co-product is corn oil sold to biodiesel manufacturers and feed lot markets.

Searching for its share of the green GreenHunter Energy has renewable energy in its sights. Focusing on wind biomass (plant material and animal waste) and biofuels the company owns generation projects and refineries in California Wyoming and Texas. Its biofuels group the only segment producing revenue refines processes and stores biofuels at the company's Houston plant. It uses purchased methanol to create biodiesel up to 105 million gallons per year. GreenHunter's other operations include a biomass plant in California (currently being refurbished) and three development-stage wind energy projects in Wyoming and Texas. The company began operations in 2007 when it purchased the biofuels plant.

In a case of modern alchemy GreenShift (formerly GS CleanTech) is working overtime to turn organic material into biodiesel. The company's proprietary technologies are used to produce biomass-derived end products and at reduced cost and risk by extracting and refining raw materials that other producers cannot access or process. GreenShift owns and operates four proprietary corn oil extraction facilities one biodiesel production facility and one vegetable oilseed crushing plant. GreenShift claims that its technologies have the capability of extracting more than 6.5 million gallons of crude corn oil for every 100 million gallons of corn ethanol produced. The company also produces culinary oil.

You might say this company is cooking up some classics on a daily basis. Grill Concepts operates a chain of more than 20 Daily Grill restaurants offering upscale casual dining in a setting reminiscent of a classic American grill during the 1930s and 1940s. Located primarily in California the restaurants serve such fare as chicken pot pie meatloaf and cobbler as well as steak seafood and pasta. In addition to its company-owned locations Grill Concepts has a small number of licensed and managed units operating in shopping areas and hotels. The Daily Grill concept is based on the company's half dozen Grill on the Alley fine dining restaurants. CEO Robert Spivak co-founded the Daily Grill chain in 1984.

A centaur is part man part horse; a griffin is part eagle part lion; and a gyroplane is part helicopter part airplane. Through its subsidiaries Groen Brothers Aviation (GBA) develops and manufactures gyroplane and gyrodyne rotor-wing aircraft. Its Hawk series gyroplane is designed to be safer in low and slow flight than either an airplane or a helicopter. Gyroplanes get lift from rotary blades and thrust from a propeller. Potential applications for the Hawk series include commercial surveying fire patrol law enforcement and military surveillance. In 2012 GBA reached an agreement with its creditors to enter a period of financial restructuring and eliminate its debt of more than $170 million.

GT Advanced Technologies (formerly GT Solar International) is a beacon on the path of the solar power supply chain. The company manufactures the equipment used by other companies to produce silicon wafers and solar cells. Key products include chemical vapor deposition (CVD) reactors used to produce polysilicon the raw material in solar cells; and directional solidification systems (DSS) the furnaces used to transform polysilicon into ingots which are sliced into silicon wafers to become solar cells. GT Advanced Technologies does most of its business in Asia primarily in Malaysia. In 2014 the company filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

Guided Therapeutics (formerly SpectRx) can shed some light on your condition. The firm is developing diagnostic products including a cervical cancer detection device using its proprietary biophotonic technology known as LightTouch. The technology uses optics and spectroscopy to provide doctors with non-invasive diagnostic methods for finding cancer. In order to zero in on its diagnostic business the company in 2007 sold its SimpleChoice line of insulin pumps which diabetics use to control blood glucose levels to ICU Medical; it changed its name to Guided Therapeutics the following year to reflect its new focus.

Thanks to Habitat for Humanity more than 5 million people worldwide know there's no place like home. The mission of the not-for-profit ecumenical Christian organization is to provide adequate and affordable shelter. It has built or remodeled more than 800,000 houses at cost for families who demonstrate a need and are willing to invest "sweat equity" during construction. Homeowners make payments on no-interest mortgages; Habitat for Humanity funnels the funds back into the construction of homes for others. The group operates in all 50 states the District of Columbia Guam and Puerto Rico in addition to affiliates in nearly 80 countries. It was founded in 1976 by Linda Fuller and her late husband Millard.

Haemonetics helps health care providers keep track of blood. The company develops and produces automated blood collection systems that collect and process whole blood taking only the components (such as plasma or red blood cells) needed and returning the remainder to the donors. Typically these systems sold under the Cell Saver TEG and OrthoPAT brands are bought and used by plasma centers and blood banks. Haemonetics also makes hospital systems that collect and re-infuse a patient's own blood during surgery; these are sold under the cardioPAT and Cell Saver brand names. Additionally the company sells information management software and provides consulting services to blood banks and hospitals.

Hampshire Group has cooled on the women's sweater business. After years of declining sales and mounting losses the company in 2011 sold its women's lines to focus exclusively on men's sweaters and woven and knit tops. The firm is licensed to manufacture men's knitwear under the Geoffrey Beene Dockers and Joseph Abboud labels. Hampshire Group's own brands include Spring+Mercer and scott james. The company's apparel is sold by major department store chains and specialty retailers throughout the US. JC Penney Kohl's and Macy's are Hampshire Group's largest customers accounting for more than 50% of total annual sales.

Through careful piecing and pinning Hancock Fabrics has become a leading nationwide fabric chain (far behind Jo-Ann Stores). The company caters to customers who sew by offering fabrics crafts sewing machines and accessories through some 260 stores (down from more than 400 five years ago) in more than 35 states. It also sells merchandise online. To compensate for the waning popularity of sewing clothes the company has expanded its selection of craft and home decorating products including drapery and upholstery fabrics and home accent pieces. Founded in 1957 Hancock Fabrics has struggled to grow its sales in recent years and filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in 2016 to reorganize its business.

Hansen Medical helps doctors maneuver through matters of the heart. The company develops medical devices designed to diagnose and treat common types of cardiac arrhythmia (irregular heartbeats) such as atrial fibrillation. Its core portable Sensei system (used along with its Artisan and Lynx catheters) incorporates robotics to assist in guiding the movement of flexible catheters in such places as the atria and ventricles. Sensei has received FDA and European regulatory approval for certain uses including manipulation and control of catheters during diagnostic electrophysiology procedures which detect irregular heartbeats by mapping the electrical impulses of the heart.

Adrenal steroids do the heavy lifting in the body's natural defense and metabolic systems and Harbor Biosciences (formerly Hollis-Eden Pharmaceuticals) hopes to harness their power. The company focuses on developing adrenal steroid hormones and hormone analogs which may reduce inflammation regulate immunity and stimulate cell growth. Natural levels of adrenal steroid hormones can decline as a result of aging or stress leaving the body less able to fend off illnesses. Harbor Biosciences' TRIOLEX candidate is being tested as a possible treatment for type 2 diabetes rheumatoid arthritis and ulcerative colitis. Its APOPTONE candidate is being investigated as a therapy for prostate and breast cancer.

Hatteras Financial hopes for smooth sailing on the sometimes tumultuous seas of mortgage investing. The company is a real estate investment trust (REIT) that invests in adjustable-rate and hybrid adjustable-rate single-family residential mortgages guaranteed by a US government agency or a government-backed company such as Ginnie Mae Fannie Mae or Freddie Mac. Hatteras Financial's investment portfolio valued at some $7 billion consists mostly of hybrid adjustable-rate loans with terms of three to five years. Hatteras Financial is externally managed by Atlantic Capital Advisors.

Aloha! Hawaiian Electric Industries (HEI) interests itself with powering the Hawaiian Islands while running a profitable banking subsidiary. An unusual combination HEI operates two regulated utility companies that provide electricity for 95% of Hawaii residents and also runs one of the state's largest financial institutions. The utilities serve 460000 customers across all islands except Kauai and generate the bulk of HEI's revenue. In 2016 due to regulatory hurdles it terminated a proposed merger with NextEra Energy that would have triggered HEI's divestiture of its banking operations.

Business is nuts (and that's a good thing) at ML Macadamia Orchards. As the world's largest macadamia nut grower the company owns or leases some 4200 acres of macadamia orchards located on the southeastern portion of the island of Hawaii where it produces a yearly average of 21 million pounds of nuts. ML Macadamia is strictly a nut grower; it sells its crop to Hawaiian nut processors including the Mauna Loa Macadamia Nut Corporation MacFarms of Hawaii and others under various contract agreements. The company decided to become vertically integrated in 2008 and is looking to acquire processing operations in order to insulate itself from low commodity prices.

Haynes International is one of the world's largest producer of alloys in flat product form such as sheet coil and plate. The company develops and manufactures nickel- and cobalt-based alloys—high-temperature alloys (HTAs) able to withstand extreme temperatures and corrosion-resistant alloys (CRAs) that stand up to corrosive substances and processes. HTAs are used in jet engines gas turbines used for power generation and waste incinerators while CRAs have applications in chemical processing power plant emissions control and hazardous waste treatment. HTAs account for about 80% of the company's sales. Haynes does the majority of its business in the US. The aerospace industry is its biggest market accounting for about 50% of total sales.

Headwaters is a modern-day alchemist turning stone and coal into money. Through subsidiaries it provides building materials such as coal combustion products (CCP) and synthetic gypsum and reclaims waste coal in North America. Headwaters' light building products segment — its largest — makes stone products and siding accessories under the Eldorado Stone brand. The heavy construction materials segment sells residuals from the coal combustion process (such as fly ash) which can be used as a substitute for Portland cement in building materials. Headwaters' energy technology segment licenses coal conversion and heavy oil upgrading technology. In late 2016 Headwaters agreed to be purchased by Australia-based Boral Limited.

HealthWarehouse.com sells over-the-counter in more than one way. The online pharmacy sells prescription and over-the-counter drugs to more than 160,000 customers. It sources its products from suppliers including Masters Pharmaceutical and The Harvard Drug Group. HealthWarehouse went public through a reverse merger with OTC-traded Clacendix in 2009. Clacendix provided products that protected enterprise data and networks from security threats. Faced with declining sales and mounting losses Clacendix sold its assets to API Cryptek for $3.2 million in 2008. Clacendix later merged with HealthWarehouse and changed its name in 2009. HealthWarehouse purchased the online assets of Hocks Pharmacy in 2011.

HeartWare International makes hardware for your heart. The company's proprietary heart pump is an implantable device designed for patients suffering from advanced-stage heart failure. The pump branded as HVAD (for HeartWare Ventricular Assist System) is used for people who can't undergo a heart transplant or who are on a waiting list for a heart to become available. The HVAD is small fits above the diaphragm (not the abdomen like other VADs which makes it less invasive) and can generate up to 10 liters of blood flow per minute. HeartWare International is a development-stage company; the HVAD is approved for sale in Europe and Australia.

Engineering and architectural group Heery International is known as much for its program management as for the schools and stadiums it designs. Architect George Heery who helped found the firm in 1952 was an early practitioner of program management which involves consulting and client representation for complex projects at each phase of construction. Heery with its 35 offices also offers facilities and construction management and interior design services. Most of its billings come from government projects; its markets include educational medical correctional and judicial facilities. A subsidiary of UK engineering giant Balfour Beatty Heery operates as the buildings division for Parsons Brinckerhoff.

Change seems to be the only constant for Counsel RB Capital (which was known as C2 Global Technologies prior to 2011). The asset liquidation and patent licensing company sold its original business — the operation of a communications network — in 2003 and began providing phone and Internet service to residential and business customers. It sold the telecom unit which provided long-distance and business communications services to North Central Equity in 2005 to focus on the licensing of patents including two Voice-over-IP (VoIP) technologies. Counsel RB Capital is also involved in the acquisition and disposition of distressed and surplus assets in North America. Counsel Corporation owns 93% of the company.

High Point Solutions can solve your networking needs. The company supplies network hardware — routers switches and access servers — to telecommunications companies and other large enterprises. High Point's procurement specialists provide equipment from leading manufactures such as Cisco Systems and Nortel Networks. The company also provides services in repair network design and installation. Owners Mike and Tom Mendiburu maintain a lean-and-mean corporate philosophy: a small staff dedicated to procurement and focused on speed and service for a short list of large clients. The brothers founded High Point in 1996.

If you've ever flown to the Tampa area to catch the NFL's Buccaneers or Major League Baseball's Rays then you've probably been through an airport managed by the Hillsborough County Aviation Authority. The agency operates Tampa International Airport which handles more than 8.4 million passengers annually plus three general aviation airports. Three of the agency's five board members are residents of Hillsborough County who are appointed by the governor of Florida; other board members include the mayor of the City of Tampa and a member of the Hillsborough County Board of Commissioners. The Hillsborough County Aviation Authority was established by the Florida Legislature in 1945.

Got meat? Hillshire Brands Company (formerly Sara Lee Corp.) certainly does. Hillshire Brands is the new home of the Hillshire Farm Ball Park Jimmy Dean and State Fair brands of deli meats and other packaged-meat products including hot dogs and sausages as well as the artisanal brands Aidells and Gallo. For dessert the company serves up Sara Lee's line of frozen desserts including cheesecake. Taking its name from its predecessor's most-recognized meat brand Hillshire Brands was formed in 2012 when Sara Lee split to form two publicly-traded companies the other being its European coffee-and-tea business D.E. Master Blenders 1753. The split followed years of divestitures and strategic acquisitions.

It's balconies and pools for the middle-income set. Home Properties invests in develops renovates and operates multifamily residential properties primarily in growth markets in the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic. The self-administered real estate investment trust (REIT) owns and manages a portfolio of about 125 properties with around 42000 individual units. Home Properties typically invests in communities for which it can provide a little TLC (such as improved landscaping interior upgrades and amenities such as swimming pools) allowing it to benefit from increased property values post-rehabilitation. The REIT also develops new properties usually on raw land adjacent to existing properties in its portfolio.

Jet engines and Muck Boots seem worlds apart but they coexist at Honeywell International. More than a century old the company is a diverse industrial conglomerate its four segments making and selling products from aircraft engines flight safety and landing systems to smart controls for commercial buildings to personal safety products such as gas masks and footwear. In late 2018 Honeywell completed the spin-off of its vehicle turbo charger operations and home heating and security businesses to create two new publicly-listed companies—Garrett Motion Inc. (turbo charger technology) and Resideo for home comfort and security products (formerly its Homes and ADI Distribution business). The company does business worldwide although the US generates more than half its sales.

Horizon Lines rides the waves to connect the mainland US with its far-flung states and territories. The container shipping company transports cargo such as building materials consumer goods and foodstuffs to and from the continental US and Alaska Hawaii and Puerto Rico. Horizon Lines maintains a fleet of about 15 container ships and 30,000 cargo containers; it also operates five port terminals. The majority of its revenue comes from operations subject to the Jones Act which restricts marine shipping between US ports to companies with vessels that are US built/owned/crewed.

Horizon Pharma sees commercial drug success in its future. The biopharmaceutical company develops medicines for arthritis pain and inflammatory diseases through its two operating subsidiaries Horizon Pharma USA and Horizon Pharma AG. Its DUEXIS pill combines two existing drugs to treat mild to moderate pain from rheumatoid arthritis. Its LODOTRA is a low form of prednisone formulated to reduce morning stiffness associated with rheumatoid arthritis. DUEXIS has received approval for sale in the US while LODOTRA is approved for sale and marketed in Europe. Horizon Pharma also has a pipeline of earlier stage candidates to treat pain-related diseases and chronic inflammation. The company went public in 2011.

Hovnanian Enterprises builds and markets residential single-family and multi-family homes on planned construction cycle of less than 12 months. It designs communities that offer homes with a diversity of architecture textures and colors frequently with recreational amenities such as swimming pools tennis courts and clubhouses. The company generally seeks option contracts to purchase land for future community developments rather than outright land purchases. In fiscal 2018 about 75% of the proposed communities and developable home sites under the company's control were optioned. Following acquisition Hovnanian develops land into finished lots and begins constructing homes.

The Howard Hughes Corporation (THHC) is involved in neither planes movies or medical research but one of the 20th century entrepreneur's later interests real estate. The company arose from the bankruptcy restructuring of shopping mall developer General Growth Properties (GGP) to oversee much of GGP's non-retail assets. THHC owns GGP's former portfolio of four master planned communities outside Columbia Maryland; Houston Texas; and Summerlin Nevada; as well as about two dozen other as-yet undeveloped sites and commercial properties in 16 states from New York to Hawaii including GGP's own headquarters building in downtown Chicago. Unlike GGP THHC does not operate as a REIT.

HP Hood tries to cream the competition — with ice cream sour cream and whipping cream. The leading US dairy producer also makes fluid milk cottage cheese and juices. Its home turf is New England where it is one of the few remaining dairies to offer home milk delivery serving some 15000 customers. However Hood's products are distributed throughout the US to chain and independent food retailers and convenience stores and to foodservice purveyors. In addition to its own and subsidiary brands the Massachusetts company makes private-label and licensed dairy products and owns regional dairy producer Crowley Foods. Hood operates about 15 manufacturing plants throughout the US.

Just about every office — from home to big business — has two basic items: a computer and printer. That's pretty much the business of HP Inc. one of two companies created from the breakup of Hewlett-Packard Co. in 2015. HP makes a full line of computing devices from desktops and laptops for commercial and consumer use to tablets and point-of-sale systems. Its printers include large format commercial printers and inkjet and laser printers as well as 3D printers. And don't forget printer supplies such as ink cartridges. HP ranks as one of the top one or two PC makers and the No. 1 printer company in the world.

Hub Group helps its clients by handling the hubbub of freight movement throughout North America. An intermodal marketing company Hub Group specializes in arranging the transportation of freight by a combination of rail and truck. A customer's freight is loaded into a container or trailer and transported by rail from one Hub Group distribution center to another then taken to its destination by a local trucking company which in some cases is a Hub Group unit. The company also provides truck brokerage and logistics services. Hub Group's Mode operations offer complementary services including temperature protected transportation. It is active in the US Canada and Mexico.

All that glitters is not gold; some of it's silver. That's the story at Allied Nevada Gold a mining company that produces gold primarily and silver as a by-product from its property in Nevada. Its wholly owned Hycroft Mine sitting on 96 sq. mi. has proven and probable mineral reserves of about 3 million ounces of gold and nearly 50 million ounces of silver. The company is conducting feasibility studies for a mill on the property that would process sulfide and other high oxide ores. Allied Nevada Gold also explores for gold silver and other minerals on more than 100 properties in the state. The company was spun off from Vista Gold in 2007 when it acquired its former parent's Nevada mining operations.

Icagen wants to set the market for ion channel modulators on fire. The development-stage biotech focuses on treatments for epilepsy asthma pain and inflammation by regulating the inflow into cells of such ions as calcium potassium and sodium. Icagen's lead candidate senicapoc for sickle cell disease died in 2007 following lackluster Phase III clinical trial results. The drug was being developed in a partnership with Johnson & Johnson subsidiary McNeil Consumer & Specialty Pharmaceuticals. Shortly thereafter Icagen announced a deal collaborating with Pfizer on the development of epilepsy and pain treatments. Then in 2011 the company decided to just go ahead and be acquired by Pfizer.

ICU Medical sees the future of infection prevention. The company's devices protect health care workers and patients from the spread of diseases such as HIV and hepatitis. Its primary products are intravenous (IV) connection devices called Clave needleless connectors that reduce the risk of needle sticks and disconnections. The firm also makes custom IV sets many of which use Clave connectors and other ICU products for third parties. Additionally ICU Medical makes critical care equipment such as angiography kits and heart monitors. ICU Medical sells its products to other equipment makers and distributors throughout the US and internationally.

Idenix Pharmaceuticals seeks to identify treatments for viral diseases. The firm is busily developing orally administered drugs to combat hepatitis C (HCV). It has one marketed drug for hepatitis B (HBV) Telbivudine sold under the brand names Tyzeka in the US and Sebivo internationally. Idenix's other candidates are in various stages of clinical testing — from preclinical to late stage trials. Most are intended to be taken in combination with other therapeutic agents to improve efficacy and convenience. Idenix's lead HCV drug candidates include IDX184 a nucleotide inhibitor in Phase II clinical testing and IDX719 an NS5A inhibitor to which the FDA granted fast-track status in 2012.

Idera Pharmaceuticals a clinical-stage biotech firm is developing DNA and RNA therapies that manipulate the immune system's response to disease. It is focused on Toll-Like Receptors (TLRs) — immune cell receptors that recognize and respond to viral and bacterial invaders. Some of Idera's drugs (such as treatments for infectious disease and cancer) mimic those invaders to stimulate an immune response; others (including treatments for autoimmune and inflammatory diseases) target TLRs to suppress the immune response. The firm's lead candidate is IMO-8400. Idera conducts some of its R&D efforts through partnerships.

iHeartMedia is one of the world's leading radio companies. The firm owns and operates some 850 radio stations in about 160 markets. With more than 245 million listeners a month it generates revenue by selling ads and subscriptions. The company also owns subsidiaries Premiere Networks (syndication) Katz Media Group (ad sales) and Total Traffic & Weather Network (real time reports for commuters). The company filed for Ch. 11 bankruptcy protection in March 2018 and emerged a newly reorganized company in May 2019. It returned to public markets in July 2019 after spinning off billboard subsidiary Clear Channel Outdoor. Before the restructuring about two-thirds of sales came from the US.

Ikanos Communications hopes to become an icon in the field of broadband semiconductors. The fabless semiconductor company designs DSL chipsets for use in modems and other customer premises equipment and communications processors used in gateways (multi-protocol routers). Its products allow networks to achieve fiber-like broadband speeds (up to 100 megabits per second) over copper wires enabling high-speed data features. Besides DSL its products also support wireless broadband passive optical network and Ethernet. Service providers such as AT&T and Orange are Ikanos' end users but its direct customers are manufacturers such as Alcatel-Lucent Sumitomo Electric Industries and ZTE.

The Fightin' Titans of Illinois Wesleyan University cannot be accused of having a one-track mind. The small private university offers 50 majors and programs and is organized into three colleges: liberal arts fine arts and the school of nursing. As an undergraduate university with about 2000 students Illinois Wesleyan also offers pre-professional programs in fields including engineering law and medicine. Traditionally about 80% of the student population is enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts. The school was founded in 1850 by civic and Methodist Church leaders.

Illumina is the top-ranking maker of next-generation sequencing tools used by life sciences and drug researchers to isolate and analyze genes. Its systems include the machinery and the software used to sequence pieces of DNA and RNA as well as the means to put them through large-scale testing of genetic variation and biological function. Its proprietary BeadArray technology uses microscopic glass beads that can carry samples through the genotyping process. The tests allow medical researchers to determine what genetic combinations are associated with various diseases enabling faster diagnosis better drugs and individualized treatment. Customers include pharma and biotech companies research centers and academic institutions.

If you're stuck in traffic you can't blame Image Sensing Systems (ISS). ISS's Auto-scope vehicle detection system converts video images into digitized traffic data for traffic management. Unlike traditional embedded wire loop detectors which are buried in the pavement Autoscope enables wide-area detection using video cameras a microprocessor software and a PC. The systems help users to design roads manage traffic signals and determine the environmental impact of gridlock. Royalty income from traffic management company Econolite Control Products accounts for nearly half of sales. The company gets three-quarters of its sales in North America.

Imaging Diagnostic Systems is a medical technology company involved in the research and development of breast-imaging devices used for detecting cancer. Using laser-based technology the company has created a more comfortable radiation-free breast examination that does not require breast compression. Its CTLM (Computed Tomography Laser Mammography) system used in conjunction with X-ray mammography may help improve early diagnosis of cancer. The company is also researching other breast screening systems using fluorescence imaging. It had been developing laser imaging products for research with lab animals but it has licensed the technology to Bioscan in order to focus on the women's health market.

Immersion wants to immerse people in digital experiences with its haptics technology. The company develops touch feedback technology called haptics that simulates tactile experiences — such as the feel of an object or the jolt of an explosion during a video game — in order to improve how people interact with digital devices. Immersion licenses its TouchSense technology to companies such as Motorola and Samsung for use in mobile phones and to Logitech and Microsoft which use TouchSense in joysticks mice steering wheels and other peripherals. Its technology backed by more than 2000 issued and pending patents is also used in automotive consumer electronics and medical products.

ImmunoGen really has it out for cancer. Its antibody-drug conjugates (ADC) technology targets tumors delivering an ImmunoGen cell-killing agent specifically to cancer cells. The firm uses its antibodies along with its ADC platform to create product candidates; it also out-licenses the ADC technology to other companies. (Breast cancer drug Kadcyla produced by Roche is the first marketed product using ADC.) ImmunoGen's lead compounds target conditions including lung cancer multiple myeloma and non-Hodgkin's lymphoma. In addition to its proprietary candidates the company has some compounds that are being developed through partnerships and licensing agreements with companies such as Genentech and Amgen.

Immunomedics develops monoclonal antibody (Mab) medicines to treat cancer autoimmune conditions and other diseases. Its lead product epratuzumab is in development for the treatment of lupus; biopharmaceutical firm UCB has licensed the drug for further applications in autoimmune diseases but is exiting that partnership. Immunomedics is also conducting clinical trials for epratuzumab as an oncology treatment for non-Hodgkin's lymphoma. Other drugs in clinical trials aim to treat various cancers including pancreatic cancer and multiple myeloma. It also makes diagnostic imaging products; its majority-owned IBC Pharmaceuticals develops radiotherapeutics for applications in oncology treatments.

Impinj designs semiconductors to adapt to their surroundings. The company's "self-adaptive silicon" technology allows analog circuits — which translate light sound and radio waves into data usable by electronic systems — to be made smaller and more efficient and allow for chip adjustment. The company focuses on designing communications chips particularly UHF Gen 2 radio-frequency identification (RFID) devices for supply chain management/automation (from pharmaceuticals to apparel) and other applications such as food safety and event timing. Impinj was founded in 2000 by chip design legend (and Caltech professor emeritus) Carver Mead and his former student Chris Diorio. The company withdrew its IPO in 2012.

Implant Sciences is giving the security industry new technologies to detect explosives. Using its ion implantation know-how the company has developed handheld and tabletop bomb detectors for use in airports and other public places. The firm is developing a walk-through portal through a contract with the Transportation Security Administration. Originally the company applied ion implantation technology into use in medical technology and semiconductor production but has since refocused its operations entirely into security sensors. It is building a customer base in China and the US.

It makes sense that a company that calls itself Independent Bank Group (IBG) would do business in a state that was once its own country. The bank holding company does business through subsidiary Independent Bank which operates about 40 banking offices and 70 branches in North and Central Texas Houston and Colorado. The banks offer standard personal and business accounts and services including some focused on small business owners. IBG has total assets of nearly $8.9 billion and loans of about $6.4 billion. The company traces its roots back 100 years but took its current shape in 2002.

Fans of this team are can saddle up for football glory. The Indianapolis Colts trace a long and storied history as a franchise in the National Football League boasting five championships since joining the league in 1953. Most of those glory days though took place when the team was the Baltimore Colts and boasted the likes of Johnny Unitas on its roster. The team relocated to Indianapolis in 1984 but fans there had to wait until the 2006 season for the team to make a successful Super Bowl run with the help of such talent as Peyton Manning and Marvin Harrison. Started by Carroll Rosenbloom the team has been owned by CEO James Irsay and his family since 1972.

Just because you're tired doesn't mean you're thirsty. Innovation Ventures is a holding company that owns Living Essentials LLC which markets the two-ounce energy drink 5-hour Energy. Unlike other carbonated energy drinks 5-hour Energy doesn't contain any sugar and only has four calories thanks to its small size that packs quite a punch. Five-hour Energy is a blend of vitamins amino acids and caffeine and comes in flavors (berry grape lemon-lime) as well as a decaf and extra-strength formula. Five-hour Energy drinks are strategically placed at the checkout counter not the beverage aisle at most major grocery drug and convenience stores in the US and Canada.

Pilots use products by Innovative Solutions and Support (IS&S) to gauge their success. The company makes flight information computers electronic displays and monitoring systems that measure flight information such as airspeed altitude and engine and fuel data. IS&S's reduced vertical separation minimum (RVSM) system enables planes to fly closer together; engine and fuel displays help pilots track fuel and oil levels and other engine functions. IS&S offers flat-panel displays which take up less cockpit space than conventional displays. Customers are the US DoD and other government agencies defense contractors and commercial/corporate air carriers.

Innoviva (formerly Theravance) figures there's no sense in re-inventing the wheel. The biotech takes aim at already proven biological targets taking advantage of existing research to create next-generation treatments. The firm is focused on the discovery development and commercialization of small molecule medicines across a number of therapeutic areas including respiratory disease bacterial infections and central nervous system pain. Its VIBATIV product (an injectable antibiotic approved to treat skin infections and hospital-acquired pneumonia) was successfully developed and commercialized with partner Astellas. It also develops chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) products with GlaxoSmithKline (GSK).

Combine innovation with oxygen and you've got Inogen. The company makes portable oxygen-concentrators that provide supplemental oxygen by people with chronic respiratory conditions. Oxygen concentrators pull nitrogen from ambient air to supply an oxygen-rich mix through a breathing tube. Its 4.8- and 7-pound models are meant to replace both large in-home concentrators as well as portable tank systems which also eliminates the need for home delivery of oxygen tanks. Unlike most suppliers in the market Inogen sells and rents directly to patients. International customers account for about a third of revenue. Inogen was formed in 2001 and went public in early 2014.

Inovio Pharmaceuticals is electrifying its vaccine delivery process. The firm's needle-free electroporation infusion therapy uses electrical pulses to open up cell membranes thus optimizing the delivery of its DNA vaccines that can protect from cancers as well as chronic infectious diseases including HIV and hepatitis C. Its SynCon process identifies shared characteristics among different strains of similar viruses to help develop a universal flu vaccine that will be effective on most influenza strains unlike traditional flu vaccines that are strain-specific. It also has a couple of anti-inflammatory drugs in its pipeline and some DNA-based animal growth hormones for livestock.

Inphi wants to shift broadband networks into high gear. The fabless semiconductor company offers specialized logic devices modulator drivers and other components used in high-speed optical telecom networks. Key parts of Inphi's more than 170 products are made from indium phosphide (InP; hence the company name) which Inphi touts as running at much higher speeds but with lower power consumption than competing products made from other specialized materials such as silicon germanium. Other elements of the company's designs are made from standard silicon to lower overall costs.

Insulet wants to isolate an insolent disease. The medical device company manufactures an insulin pump for people with insulin-dependent diabetes. Its disposable waterproof product called the OmniPod Insulin Management System weighs a mere 1.2 ounces and adheres directly to the patient's skin making it more discrete than most insulin infusion systems that typically clip to a belt or fit in a pocket. It also includes a handheld device to wirelessly program the OmniPod with insulin delivery instructions. The company sells the OmniPod system to customers both directly and through its distribution partners.

Insys Therapeutics a developer of pain management and nausea medicines is operating under bankruptcy protection and plans to sell substantially all of its assets. Main product Subsys which brings in virtually all of its revenue is a fast-acting oral spray version of cancer pain drug Fentanyl. Newer drug Syndros (dronabinol) is a generic liquid formulation of Marinol (a synthetic version of the active chemical in marijuana) for treatment of chemotherapy-induced nausea and vomiting. Facing scrutiny over its opioid drug marketing practices Insys filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in 2019.

Insys Therapeutics aims to take the rough edges off of chemo and cancer pain. The drug development company is focused on treating side effects of chemotherapy as well as therapies for pain management. Its lead candidate is a fast-acting oral spray version of cancer pain drug Fentanyl. Its Dronabinol candidate is a generic capsule form of Marinol (a synthetic version of the active chemical in marijuana) for treatment of chemotherapy-induced nausea and vomiting. Both drugs are in late stage development awaiting FDA approval. All of the company's drug candidates are reformulations of already-approved therapeutic ingredients. Insys filed to go public in 2011.

Integrated Surgical Systems (ISS) wanted to be the hippest company around with its ROBODOC Surgical Assistant System a computer-controlled robot used in hip and knee replacements. However ISS ceased operations in mid-2005 because of lawsuits and lack of funding and it sold its ROBODOC assets to Novatrix Biomedical in 2007. Using those assets Novatrix has set up a new company called Curexo Medical to continue development of ROBODOC which is sold in Europe Asia and other regions and received FDA approval in 2008. Meanwhile ISS used the money from the asset sale to pay its debtors and is looking for acquisition opportunities.

Intel Corp. is the brains of the operation. One the biggest computer chip companies Intel controls roughly 90% of the market for microprocessors that act as the brains of desktop notebook and server computers. It has dominated the PC chip market from the early x86 processors to Pentiums to today's Core technology. Intel also makes chips for smartphones and tablets as well as embedded semiconductors for the industrial medical and automotive markets. The company develops its chips and makes most of them itself in one of the industry's biggest manufacturing systems. While PC chips account for most sales Intel has shifted focus and resources to chips for the data centers that power cloud computing.

InterMetro Communications hopes to take over the VoIP market city by city. The company's national private voice-over Internet Protocol (VoIP) network delivers long-distance phone service to telecoms providers and calling card users. InterMetro's more than 200 customers include traditional long-distance carriers broadband companies VoIP service providers and wireless providers. Its VoIP network utilizes proprietary software switching equipment and fiber-optic lines to deliver carrier-quality VoIP services which are typically more cost efficient than circuit-based technologies used in traditional long-distance networks. Chairman and CEO Charles Rice owns almost 40% of the company.

Intermolecular sees R&D as a service that can be sold to semiconductor and clean energy customers. Through multi-year collaborative development programs (CDPs) customers pay the company service fees to help them develop proprietary technology and intellectual property (IP) so that they can quickly move new devices materials and processes into high-volume production. Intermolecular uses its High Productivity Combinatorial (HPC) platform to reduce the time needed to experiment with and prototype devices. Smaller portions of revenues are made from the sale of its Tempus HPC hardware and software platform and royalty fees from licensing out its IP. Founded in 2004 Intermolecular went public in 2011.

International Building Technologies Group (INBG) has raced from business to business. Formerly a card game developer for casinos and a seller of racing and motorsports accessories and apparel the company changed lanes in 2007. That's when it began a new life as a manufacturer of a specialty panel-based technology that helps buildings withstand earthquakes and hurricane-force winds. INBG also offers other services including site planning engineering contractor services training and supervision. In 2011 a merger plan between INBG and Chinese petroleum storage company FHH Sino New Energies was terminated. The deal would have allowed INBG to move into yet another line of business — the energy sector.

John Travolta bought his own Boeing; if your company's cash flow is more limited International Lease Finance Corporation (ILFC) will lease you one. The company which leases the entire range of Boeing and Airbus commercial aircraft is the world's second-largest lessor of new aircraft and widebody carriers. It boasts of owning the world's most valuable fleet of leasable aircraft — about 930 planes. ILFC's airplane-parts management business maintains the aging aircraft in its fleet. Commercial airlines outside the US generate more than 95% of revenue; ILFC counts most of the world's airlines as customers. Parent AIG (American International Group) spun off ILFC's holding company ILFC Holdings as an IPO in 2011.

Internet America is changing its "lines" of business. Traditionally a provider of dial-up Internet access and to a lesser degree of wire-line DSL broadband Internet access to rural and suburban markets in Texas the company is battling dwindling subscriber numbers by expanding its wireless broadband Internet business. Total subscribers number more than 30000 with about one quarter of those connecting wirelessly. Internet America also provides installation and maintenance services from its three Texas operational centers in Corsicana San Antonio and Stafford (near Houston). The ISP founded in 1995 is known regionally for its 1-800-BE-A-GEEK sign-up number.

Can anyone manage the Internet? This group says "ICANN." The Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN) is a not-for-profit organization responsible for the management of the Internet's domain name system (DNS) allocation of Internet protocol (IP) addresses and assignment of protocol parameters. The DNS allows people to type in an address like "www.hoovers.com" rather than the string of numbers that represents the underlying IP address. Internet users register some 20 domain names ending in .com . org .info and .net among others through ICANN-accredited DNS registrars. The group is also managing the application process for a slew of new generic top-level domains (gTLDs).

PDI handles sales and marketing for pharmaceutical companies that would rather focus on product development. As a contract sales organization (CSO) the company provides sales teams dedicated to a single client and teams that represent multiple non-competing brands. Sales teams typically are assigned to geographic territories on a client's behalf. Each year contract sales services account for about 90% of PDI's revenue. The company's marketing and strategic consulting services operations are represented by its Pharmakon Interactive Healthcare Communications unit. PDI was established in 1987.

Robert Johnson went to the crossroads to get the blues; consumers can go to Intersections to make sure they don't. Intersections provides credit management and identity theft protection to subscribers in North America. Its offerings include credit reports and ongoing record monitoring through major reporting agencies Equifax Experian and TransUnion. Its Intersections Insurance Services unit offers customers discounts on insurance products. Bank of America is the firm's #1 client accounting for more than 40% of its revenue. Amid declining sales and profits Intersections has exited the bail bonds and market intelligence businesses to focus on its core consumer protection services business.

Intervest Bancshares is the holding company for Intervest National Bank which operates one branch in New York City and six other branches in Pinellas County Florida. Most of the company's lending activities are real estate-related: Commercial mortgages make up more than half of its loan portfolio while multifamily residential mortgages account for another 40%. Some of the company's lending has historically been carried out by its Intervest Mortgage Corporation arm. However the subsidiary drastically scaled back its lending practices as market conditions deteriorated in 2008. The family of chairman and CEO Lowell Dansker controls Intervest Bancshares.

The more film deposits Intevac's equipment makes the more bank deposits the company can make. It's Equipment division makes machines — called sputtering systems — that deposit alloy films onto hard-disk drives. The films magnetize the drives enabling them to record information. The Equipment division also makes disk lubrication systems used in disk drive manufacturing and processing equipment used to manufacture solar cells. Intevac's Photonics division develops electro-optical devices used in night vision and materials identification applications. Top customers include Seagate Fuji Electric and Hitachi Global Storage Technologies which collectively account for more than half of sales.

Hungry plants turn to Intrepid Potash for their food supply. The mining company produces two potassium-containing minerals potash and langbeinite that are essential ingredients in plant and crop fertilizer. Intrepid culls these minerals from a handful of mines in New Mexico and Utah where it also operates production facilities. The company has the capacity to annually produce about 400000 tons of potash and 400000 tons of langbeinite (marketed as Trio) and sells its products primarily in the US to the agricultural industrial and feed markets. Intrepid Potash is the largest producer of muriate of potash (potassium chloride) in the US the second-largest consuming country of potash.

IntriCon hears its future calling and that future is in precision microminiature components and molded plastic parts such as volume controls and switches primarily used in hearing aids. IntriCon's components are also used in professional audio equipment such as headsets and microphones and in biotelemetry devices for such uses as diagnostic monitoring and drug delivery. The company has concentrated its product portfolio on what it terms "body-worn devices" through a series of acquisitions and divestitures including the 2010 sale of its RTI Electronics business line to Shackleton Equity Partners.

Intuitive Surgical brings an artistic flair to advanced surgical equipment. Employing haptics (the science of computer-aided touch sensitivity) the firm developed the da Vinci Surgical System a combination of software hardware and optics that allows doctors to perform robotically aided surgery from a remote console. In fact Intuitive Surgical is the global market leader in surgical robotics. The da Vinci system reproduces the doctor's hand movements during minimally invasive surgery in real time performed by tiny electromechanical arms and instruments. The company manufactures its systems and relies upon contract manufacturers to supply the instruments and accessories used with the systems.

Ionis Pharmaceuticals develops biotech drugs to target neurological disorders and other conditions. Products are based on its antisense technology in which drugs attach themselves to strands of RNA to prevent them from producing disease-causing proteins; the hoped-for result is a therapy that fights disease without harming healthy cells. Commercial medicines approved in major global markets include SPINRAZA for spinal muscular atrophy and TEGSEDI for polyneuropathy caused by hereditary TTR amyloidosis (marketed by Biogen and majority-owned affiliate Accea respectively). Ionis has more than 40 pipeline drugs under development in areas including neurological cardiovascular metabolic and rare diseases.

iPayment doesn't want small businesses to pay an arm and a leg for credit and debit card processing. The company's approximately 133000 clients are mostly small US merchants firms taking money over the phone or Internet and those that previously may have accepted only cash or checks as payment. iPayment markets through independent sales organizations and has grown by consolidating its niche buying a dozen competitors and merchant portfolios since 2003. A typical iPayment merchant generates less than $185000 of charge volume per year with an average transaction value of about $70. Company co-founder Greg Daily sold his two-thirds' stake and stepped down as CEO in 2011.

IPC The Hospitalist Company (IPC) is on the leading edge of a growing US trend toward hospitalist specialization. The staffing firm provides 1800 hospitalists to more than 400 hospitals and 1200 post-acute care facilities facilities in about 30 states. Hospitalists are health care providers (physicians nurses and physicians assistants) who oversee all of a patient's treatment from the beginning to the end of their stay. They answer questions and coordinate treatment programs to improve the quality of care and reduce the length of a patient's hospital stay. In addition to providing staff IPC offers training data management billing and risk management services for its medical professionals and clients.

Irvine Sensors puts its hopes in big returns from tiny products. Much of the company's sales come from research and development contracts related to its minute solid-state microcircuitry technology in which circuits are assembled in 3-D stacks (rather than flat layouts) to lower weight and boost performance. Irvine Sensors also develops and manufactures miniaturized infrared and electro-optical cameras and image processors as well as products incorporating the components primarily for defense and security applications. The US government and its contractors account for nearly all of the company's sales. Leading customers include the US Air Force US Army and Optics 1 a defense contractor.

Isola puts the "board" in printed circuit board (PCB). The company manufactures base materials used to make PCBs at more than a dozen facilities around the globe. Its manufacturing processes for laminates and other materials such as glass cellulose and epoxy use state-of-the-art technologies (closed-loop feed-forward and feed-back cure and thickness control systems) to ensure composite integrity. Other technical innovations ensure tight dielectric thickness control. End users include customers in the automotive computer medical military and wireless communications markets. Nearly 80% of sales come from outside the US. Investment firm TPG Capital owns Isola which filed to go public in late 2011.

Isomet never met a laser beam it couldn't control. The company makes acousto-optic systems that manipulate interactions between light and sound to control laser beams especially in color image reproduction applications such as laser printing and phototypesetting. Isomet had long made graphic arts systems of its own — including digital scanners and graphics plotters — but has been winding down that business as it expands its production of birefringent materials (such as lead molybdate) used in fiber-optic applications. The company also offers components such as athermal filters anti-reflection coatings tunable filters and optical switches.

IsoRay hopes its medical device is a seed of change for cancer patients. Through subsidiary IsoRay Medical the company produces and sells FDA-approved Proxcelan Cs-131 brachytherapy seeds which are mainly used in the treatment of prostate cancer. Brachytherapy is a procedure that implants anywhere from eight to 125 small seed devices containing therapeutic radiation as close as possible to a cancerous tumor. The seeds can be used alone or in combination with external beam radiation surgery or other therapies. Proxcelan Cs-131's application is also expanding to other areas of the body with US approval for use in the treatment of head and neck tumors as well as eye lung colorectal and chest wall cancers.

The US Constitution does a pretty good job with transfer of power. So does IXYS in a different context. IXYS (pronounced ike-sys) makes a variety of power semiconductors (including transistors and rectifiers) and power modules which convert and control electric power in electronic gear. They are used in such equipment as power supplies and medical electronics. IXYS also sells microcontroller chips display drivers power management integrated circuits (ICs) gallium arsenide field-effect transistors and proprietary direct copper bond substrate technology. The company's 2500-plus customers include ABB Boston Scientific Emerson Medtronic Schneider Electric and Siemens. Three quarters of the company's sales come from customers outside the US.

J.R. Simplot hopes you'll have fries with that. Potato potentate J. R. "Jack" Simplot simply shook hands with McDonald's pioneer Ray Kroc in the mid-1960s and his company's french fry sales have sizzled ever since. Simplot still remains the major french fry supplier for McDonald's and supplies Burger King and Wendy's as well. Along with potatoes J.R. Simplot produces fruits and vegetables under the Roast-Works and Simplot Classic labels. It owns and operates more than 82000 acres on some 40 farms located primarily in Idaho and Washington. It produces more than 3 billion pounds of frozen french fries and formed potatoes annually making it one of the world's largest processors of frozen potatoes.

Jewel-Osco operates about 180 combination food-and-drug stores mostly in Illinois but also in Indiana and Iowa. The regional chain is the #1 seller of groceries in Chicago with more than 30 stores there and about 31% of the market (triple that of its nearest competitor Safeway-owned Dominick's). Jewel-Osco trails rival Walgreen in pharmacy sales in the Windy City. The company also runs about 30 fuel centers. Started as the Jewel Tea Company in 1899 Jewel-Osco is the largest traditional supermarket chain owned by grocery retailer and wholesaler SUPERVALU. Long accustomed to being #1 in a two-company market Jewel-Osco is fighting to stay on top of an increasingly crowded Chicago grocery scene.

Things are a little upside-down at Johnson & Wales University and that's just the way the school likes it. The private not-for-profit accredited institution provides what it calls an upside-down curriculum allowing students to take courses in their major during the first year so they learn right away if their career choice is right for them. At the end of two years of study students earn an associate's degree and the opportunity to go on to earn a bachelor's degree. Founded in 1914 the school enrolls more than 14000 graduate undergraduate and online students across its four campuses in Colorado Florida North Carolina and Rhode Island instructed by more than 600 faculty members.

Keeping up with the Joneses at Jones Soda requires an adventurous palate. The beverage company makes markets and sells brightly colored sodas with wacky names and flavors like Fufu Berry and Blue Bubblegum. Seasonal offerings include Turkey and Gravy for Thanksgiving and Chocolate Fudge for Valentine's Day. To keep things interesting it regularly discontinues flavors and introduces new ones; labels also can be customized with photos submitted by customers. Jones Soda also sells Jones Zilch (zero calories) and the WhoopAss Energy Drink an energy beverage that's available with or without sugar. Jones Soda's beverages are distributed throughout North America as well as in Australia the UK and Ireland.

When casual Fridays put a wrinkle in the starched selling philosophy of Jos. A. Bank Clothiers the company dressed down. Although it is still best known for making tailored clothing for the professional man including suits sport coats dress shirts and pants it has added casual wear suitable for those dress-down Fridays and weekends. It also launched the David Leadbetter line of golf wear. The company sells its Jos. A. Bank clothes and a few shoe brands through its catalogs website and some 625 company-owned or franchised stores in 40-plus states and the District of Columbia. For corporate customers it offers a credit card that provides users with discounts. Most of its stores house a tailoring shop.

Jujamcyn Theaters screws in a lot of the light bulbs on the Great White Way. The company owns and operates five theaters in New York City that house plays and musicals such as Tony award winner The Producers and Pulitzer Prize winner Angels in America. Its theaters include the St. James and the August Wilson Theatre (formerly the Virginia). Jujamcyn — along with The Shubert Organization and the Nederlander Producing Company — controls most Broadway productions. Jujamcyn was founded in 1956 by James Binger. It's named after his children Ju[dith] Jam[es] and Cyn[thia]. Former president and producer Rocco Landesman bought Jujamcyn in 2005 for about $30 million but left the company in 2009 to head the NEA.

The Juniper Group is hoping to turn over a new leaf. The company primarily provides broadband installation and wireless infrastructure construction services through its Tower West Communications subsidiary including tower erection and construction site installation and surveying and antenna installation. Its clients include national providers of wireless voice messaging and data services. Juniper also is involved in film distribution acquiring motion picture rights from independent producers; that business line accounted for less than 2% of revenues in fiscal 2008.

The feminization of K&G Men's Company is well underway. The retailer operates about 100 deep-discount career apparel superstores in nearly 30 states. Its stores feature brand-name and private-label tailored and casual clothing footwear and accessories for men women and children. The bargain warehouse-type stores average about 23000 sq. ft. and offer first-run merchandise at prices 30%-60% lower than department stores. Founded in 1989 K&G is a subsidiary of The Men's Warehouse and accounts for about 18% of its parent company's sales. After purchasing K&G Men's Warehouse converted most of its outlets to the K&G Fashion Superstores banner and began adding women's and kids' apparel to the racks.

These chiefs are trying to lead a tribe of football fans to the Super Bowl. The Kansas City Chiefs Football Club was founded by oilman and sports impresario Lamar Hunt as the Dallas Texans in 1959 a charter member of the American Football League. (Hunt also helped start the AFL and served as its first president.) The franchise moved to Kansas City Missouri in 1963 and was renamed the Chiefs. After winning three league titles and one Super Bowl the franchise joined the National Football League when the rival associations merged in 1970. The Chiefs play host at Kansas City's Arrowhead Stadium. Hunt's family led by his son Clark Hunt continues to own the football franchise.

KBR builds big projects for the US government. The company once part of oilfield services giant Halliburton made its name providing infrastructure contractor services to the US military in Afghanistan and Iraq. As the US government winds down its involvement in the Middle East KBR is finding ways to deepen its exposure to the hydrocarbon energy minerals civil infrastructure and power and industrial markets. KBR has designed many of world's liquefied natural gas production facilities and developed new technologies such as coal gasification. Operations outside the US account for half of KBR's revenue.

Drugs are a life-or-death business for Keryx Biopharmaceuticals. The company specializes in developing treatments for life-threatening ailments such as cancer and kidney disease. Its lead candidates are Zerenex a compound that may reduce high phosphate levels in patients with end-stage renal disease. The drug has been approved for sale in Japan under the name Riona to treat elevated phosphate levels in patients with chronic kidney disease. Marketing rights there have been granted to partner Japan Tobacco. Keryx is also testing Zerenx as a treatment for elevated phosphorous levels and iron deficiency in patients with kidney disease.

How's this for a crowning achievement? King Kullen Grocery claims to have been the originator of the supermarket format. Heralding itself as "America's first supermarket" the firm operates some 40 grocery stores on Long Island New York. King Kullen also owns four Wild By Nature natural foods stores and offers a line of vitamins and supplements under the same name in some King Kullen stores. Most outlets average about 35000 sq. ft. but it has a 62000-sq.-ft. upscale market with features such as ethnic fare catering and a Wild By Nature section. Started in a Queens New York warehouse in 1930 by Michael Cullen the firm is owned and operated by Cullen's descendants.

Renewable crude oil. Wait - what? KIOR makes actual crude oil using renewable non-food biomass like wood chips and switch grass. It also makes gasoline and diesel as well as blends for standard gasoline from its crude. Refined in standard petrochemical refinery equipment the development stage company's products can be transported using existing oil and gas transportation infrastructure. Unlike ethanol and biodiesel KIOR's fuel is completely interchangeable with fossil fuels and can be "dropped in" to engines. The company claims it can produce a gallon of gas for $1.80 with an 80% reduction in greenhouse gas emissions compared to standard gasoline.

Kips Bay Medical makes medical devices that help veins do their jobs in patients with coronary artery disease. The company is focused on developing and commercializing a vein support device called eSVS MESH a mesh sleeve implanted by surgeons in coronary artery bypass grafting (CABG) that when placed over a patient's vein graft improves the graft's structure and long-term performance. It is designed to mimic the artery's job of constricting the vein and preventing harmful vessel expansion. The company began selling the eSVS MESH in Europe and other international markets in 2010 and it plans to seek marketing approval in the US as well. Kips Bay Medical completed an IPO in 2011.

Kiwibox.com (formerly Magnitude Information Systems) offered a line of ergonomic software tools that helped employees avoid repetitive stress injuries in their use of computers. In 2007 Magnitude acquired Kiwibox Media which operates a social networking site for teenagers. In late 2009 the company changed its name to Kiwibox.com as part of a shifting strategy to focus on its social networking operations. With social media only getting stronger in 2012 it completed its purchase of European social network site KWICK! based near Stuttgart Germany for about $6.4 million ($8.3 million). KWICK! reports more than 10 million registered users and 1 million active users.

Have the barbarians at the gate become civilized? KKR & Co. the master of the leveraged buyout has ditched its hostile takeover image for a kinder gentler buy-and-build strategy. The global investment firm has some $59 billion in assets under management including significant stakes in such companies as Del Monte Foods Samson Investment and Go Daddy. An active owner it often supervises or installs new management and revamps strategy and corporate structure selling underperforming units or adding new ones. KKR tends to hold onto its investments for the long term. The company has offices in major business centers in Asia Australia Europe and the US. KKR went public via a nearly $2 billion IPO in 2010.

Attention Kmart shoppers: Kmart is the #3 discount retailer in the US behind Wal-Mart and Target. It sells name-brand and private-label goods (including its Joe Boxer and Jaclyn Smith labels) mostly to low- and mid-income families. It runs about 1300 off-mall stores (including 30 Supercenters) in 49 US states Puerto Rico Guam and the US Virgin Islands. About 270 Kmart stores sell home appliances (including Sears' Kenmore brand) and some 980 locations house in-store pharmacies. Poor sales have forced its parent Sears Holdings Corp. to close 100 to 120 Kmart and sister subsidiary Sears Roebuck stores. Kmart also operates the kmart.com website which includes merchandise from Sears.

Searching the cosmos for energy? No searching Africa for oil and gas. Kosmos Energy is a US-based oil and gas exploration firm with about 30 producing wells off the coast of Ghana. The company also has leases on oil fields off the coasts of Cameroon and Morocco. It looks for underdeveloped or "misunderstood" energy assets off west Africa. Kosmos Energy owns about 31% and 18% of its two producing units off Ghana and 75% each in the other assets. The company was formed in 2003 by management before it was acquired by Hess Corporation. Kosmos went public in 2011. In 2016 BP agreed to acquire stakes in exploration blocks in Mauritania and Senegal from Kosmos for $916 million.

What's old is new again at Kraft Foods Group. The newly-independent company was spun off by Mondelez International (formerly Kraft Foods Inc.) separating the North American grocery from the global snacks business in 2012. Kraft Foods Group is one of the largest consumer packaged food and beverage companies in North America. Its familiar brands include Kraft natural/processed cheeses beverages (Maxwell House coffee Kool-Aid drinks) convenient meals (Oscar Mayer meats and Kraft mac 'n cheese) grocery fare (Cool Whip topping Shake N' Bake coatings) and nuts (Planters). While globetrotting Mondelez is focused on growth overseas Kraft Foods Group is looking to revive its business in North America.

Your Chrysler might have a hemi under the hood but this Kreisler focuses on bigger engines. Kreisler Manufacturing through subsidiary Kreisler Industrial makes precision metal components for commercial and military aircraft engines and industrial gas turbines. Tube assemblies — used to transfer fuel for combustion hydraulic fluid for thrust reversers and oil for lubrication — account for most of the company's sales. A second subsidiary Kreisler Polska supplies machined components to Kreisler Industrial from a manufacturing plant in Krakow Poland.

You'll excuse L & L Energy (formerly L & L International) if it's a bit jet lagged. Incorporated in Nevada with headquarters in Seattle the company mines coal in China. Granted a license by the government to extract a set amount of coal in exchange for up-front fees L & L owns mines in China's Yunnan and Guizhou provinces. The company currently extracts more than 630000 tons of coal per year from the mines. It also processes coal to produce coke used in steel production medium coal used for heating and coal slurries used as a lower quality fuel. L & L is swapping a stake in a coking mine with Singapore-based Union Energy to acquire a 50% stake in the LuoZhou coal mine.

La Jolla Pharmaceutical aims to eliminate tissue damage. The company is working to develop tissue-repair compounds based on a cell-stimulating regenerative medicine technology. It is focused on skin and lung tissue cardiac muscle cartilage and bone repair. La Jolla Pharmaceutical had previously ceased most of its operations after trials of lupus candidate Riquent failed in 2009. After exploring its options the firm began searching for new potential pharmaceutical candidates to develop. In 2011 La Jolla found a new focus when it acquired a regenerative medicine program for tissue repair from private research firm GliaMed.

Landec's products don't turn into pumpkins at midnight but the changes are nearly as sudden and much more practical. The company has developed a technology that allows polymers to change physical characteristics when exposed to temperature changes. Its BreatheWay permeable membrane packaging allows oxygen and carbon dioxide to enter and escape from sealed fresh-cut produce packages to keep produce fresh. It's used primarily by subsidiary Apio which grows and packages fresh vegetables. Landec's Lifecore Biomedical subsidiary is a leading supplier of premium hyaluronan-based biomaterials for the ophthalmic and orthopedic markets. Landec has licensing deals with Air Products and Chemicals and Monsanto.

LaPolla Industries would hate for its customers to have leaky roofs over their heads or insufficiently protected exterior walls. The company makes foam products used to protect roofs and the "building envelope" which is the separation of the exterior and interior parts of a building. It also makes coatings for weatherproofing concrete and metal roofing and other materials. The company changed its name in 2005 when it absorbed subsidiary LaPolla Industries a provider of roof coatings and polyurethane foam construction systems. The former IFT Corp. which had previously been called Urecoats acquired LaPolla in 2005. Chairman Richard Kurtz owns 57% of LaPolla.

If casinos can bloom in the desert why can't water flow? It can thanks to the Las Vegas Valley Water District (LVVWD) which provides water to some one million residents living in one of the driest places in the US. In addition to Las Vegas the LVVWD serves residents of Blue Diamond Coyote Springs Jean Kyle Canyon Laughlin Searchlight and other parts of Clark County in Southern Nevada. The district delivers water to customers through some 4500 miles of water transmission pipeline connected to 59 pumping stations 104 wells and 94 reservoirs and tanks. (Its tanks and reservoirs have the capacity to store more than 900 million gallons.) The LVVWD sources 90% of its water to the Colorado River.

Legal Services Corporation (LSC) works to deliver Francis Bellamy's pledge "with liberty and justice for all." A private not-for-profit entity established by Congress and President Richard Nixon in 1974 LSC helps poor Americans gain equal access to the judicial system. It doesn't provide legal services directly but instead grants funds to independent local programs throughout the country. It makes grants to more than 130 programs and is the nation's single-largest funder of civil legal aid for the poor (with 811 offices across the US). LSC-funded programs handle about 1.8 million cases each year. About 64 million US citizens are eligible to receive assistance from the organization.

The LGL Group is hoping that one isn't the loneliest number. Previously made up of two separate businesses the company has a sole remaining line of business: its MtronPTI subsidiary. The subsidiary produces frequency control devices such as crystals and oscillators used primarily in communications equipment. MtronPTI was formed in the 2004 merger of M-tron Industries and Piezo Technology Inc. In 2007 The LGL Group sold certain assets of its unprofitable Lynch Systems subsidiary for about $3 million. The company's sales are roughly split between the US and other countries.

Liberty Bancorp was formed in 2006 to be the holding company for BankLiberty (formerly Liberty Savings Bank) which operates about 10 branches in the Kansas City area. It offers traditional deposit services such as checking and savings accounts CDs and IRAs in addition to newfangled offerings like Internet banking bill payment and cash management services. Commercial real estate loans account for the largest portion of the company's loan portfolio (around 40%) followed by construction loans mainly to custom homebuilders. However citing depressed market conditions the bank has decreased its volume of construction loans. It also offers business residential real estate and consumer loans.

Life Partners Holdings parent company of Life Partners Inc. makes its bucks by helping its customers make a buck. The company facilitates viatical and life settlement transactions in which an institution or wealthy investor purchases individual life insurance policies (at a discount) and becomes the beneficiary of those policies when they mature. Viatical settlements involve terminally ill policyholders with only a couple of years to live; life settlement transactions involve sellers with longer life expectancies. Life Partners makes its money from fees earned by facilitating viatical and life settlements. Nearly all of the company's business is done through life settlement brokers. It filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy in early 2015.

Lifecore Biomedical aims to help bodies plump up smooth out and keep moving. Lifecore manufactures hyaluronan a natural lubricating compound found in animal and human connective tissues. The hyaluronan is then turned into products used in ophthalmic surgeries during bone grafting as pain treatments for osteoarthritis and in veterinary orthopedics. Hyaluronan might eventually be used in cosmetic procedures as a dermal filler (to smooth out wrinkles). Lifecore has supply agreements with Alcon to use its hyaluronan solution in cataract surgery products. Landec Corporation acquired Lifecore in 2010.

LifeLock is trying to put a choke hold on identity theft. One of the fastest growing privately-held companies in the US and a leader in the security industry LifeLock serves consumers and businesses in the US Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands with its identity theft protection and detection services. Members pay annual or monthly subscription fees to receive alerts about potentially fraudulent credit applications made in their names. Its eRecon and TrueAddress services search the Web for illegal selling and trading of personal information as well as fraudulent address change attempts. LifeLock was founded in 2005 and went public through a 2012 IPO.

Tired? Run-down? Listless? Do you poop out at parties? Time to call Tonicman! LifeQuest World uses its Tonicman radio shows to help get the word out about its Jurak Classic Whole Body Tonic but its main distribution is through multilevel marketing. The company's primary product is a liquid herbal formula created in 1943 by Carl Jurak father of CEO Anthony Jurak (who owns 41% of the company). LifeQuest has acquired ImmunXT for about $2 million and since has invested heavily in marketing the immune stimulating dietary supplement (even hiring actor and body builder Peter Lupus as its spokesman). The company expects ImmunXT — which is an algae-based botanical complex — to become its flagship product.

Lightbridge is ready to illuminate the wonders of using thorium as a possible nuclear fuel. The development-stage company has been working on a new kind of nuclear fuel that uses thorium a less radioactive element than uranium to power nuclear reactors. Thorium's lessened radioactivity also means it doesn't produce enough plutonium to make nuclear weapons unlike uranium. The company's ideas for thorium were developed by the late nuclear engineer Dr. Alvin Radkowsky who co-founded Lightbridge's predecessor Thorium Power in 1992. While Lightbridge's plans for thorium power plants are not ready for commercialization the company has earned some revenue as a nuclear energy consultant.

HOVENSA brings together US and Latin American know-how and operations to handle oil products in the US Virgin Islands. HOVENSA is a joint venture of Hess and Venezuelan oil giant PDVSA (its major crude oil supplier). Once the largest private employer in the US Virgin Islands the company operated a 500000-barrels-per-day crude oil refinery on St. Croix along with two specialized oil processing complexes a 150000-barrels-per-day fluid catalytic cracking unit and a 58000-barrels-per-day delayed coker unit. However the St. Croix refinery had run up losses for years; it was shut down in 2012 and was put up for sale in 2013.

LinnCo, LLC knows the drill on how to raise money. The company formed in April 2012 in order to buy shares of stock in Linn Energy LLC an oil and natural gas concern focused on production in the Mid-Continent California and the Permian Basin. LinnCo, LLC filed a $1 billion initial public offering in June 2012 with plans to buy stock in Linn Energy and become a major shareholder. (Linn Energy completed its IPO in January 2006 and doesn't have any significant shareholders.) While LinnCo, LLC doesn't have any operations or assets of its own as an investment vehicle its IPO (which took place in October 2012) helped raise additional equity capital for Linn Energy.

When the founders of Liquefied Natural Gas (LNG) created the company's name they went straight to the point. As a producer and distributor of liquefied natural gas LNG turns coalbed methane gas supplied by third-party companies into liquid form for more efficient transport. It operates more than 30 liquefaction plants around the world and targets energy users in developing markets that have little or no existing natural gas resources. Distributing its liquid gas products by land and sea the company operates a fleet of more than 260 carriers as well as 60 reception terminals located around the world. LNG was established as a public company in 2004.

It's not liquid it's not metal — well OK it is metal. Still Liquidmetal Technologies has built on research done at the California Institute of Technology by company officers William Johnson and Atakan Peker to sell amorphous metal alloys. Those products include an alloy that's lighter than titanium but twice as strong as conventional titanium alloys. The company's products are sold as bulk alloys coatings composites and powders. Applications include casings for cell phones defense products (armor-piercing ammunition) industrial coatings and sporting goods (baseball bats tennis rackets). Electronics giant Samsung is among the company's largest customers.

Pursuing the corny American Heartland dream of profitable renewable energy Little Sioux Corn Processors operates an ethanol plant in northwest Iowa. (It actually owns a 60% interest in the limited partnership that owns the ethanol facility.) The company converts bushels of corn into ethanol distiller grains (used as feed for the dairy and beef industries) and corn oil. Ethanol is used as an additive to gasoline as well as a fuel enhancer for high-octane motors and it burns more cleanly than normal gasoline thereby reducing carbon monoxide emissions. Little Sioux's production capacity is about 90 million gallons of ethanol annually more than double its original capacity after successive expansions.

It's hard to find anything online without looking unless you're talking about ads. LookSmart helps publishers advertisers and consumers see what they want when it comes to online advertising. The company earns most of its revenue through its Advertiser Networks offering (AdCenter) which provides advertisers with targeted pay-per-click search advertising contextual advertising and banner products. It also offers Publisher Solutions that help content publishers maintain advertiser relationships online. LookSmart completed its transition to a full-on provider of advertising and publishing services after a couple of years spent divesting its non-core consumer website assets.

In the City of Angels it takes more than wings to get around. Thanks to the bus and rail systems of the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (LACTMA or Metro) millions of passengers are carried through one of the most populous counties in the US via Metro Bus Metrolink (commuter rail) and Metro Rail (subway and light rail). Together they cover an extensive freeway network four airports and various ports. LACTMA operates these systems and it serves as a transportation planner designer and builder. A 14-member board consisting of elected officials (including the mayor) and appointees secures the budget (approximately $4 billion) and selects the projects for Metro.

The Los Angeles Department of Water and Power (LADWP) keeps the movie cameras running and the swimming pools full. The largest municipally owned utility in the US LADWP provides electricity to 1.4 million residential and business customers and water to 674000 customers. The company has power plant interests that give it more than 7220 MW of generating capacity; it also buys and sells wholesale power. Most of the city's water supply is transported through two aqueduct systems from the Sierra Nevada Mountains; other water sources include wells and local groundwater basins. Because LADWP is city-owned its retail monopoly status has been unaffected by utility deregulation in California.

Louisiana Bancorp's vault isn't filled with Mardi Gras doubloons chère. The holding company owns the Bank of New Orleans which offers standard retail banking products to individuals and small businesses including deposit accounts loans and mortgages and credit cards. Residential mortgages represent about half of the bank's loan portfolio; commercial mortgages and land loans make up most of the rest. Bank of New Orleans operates three locations and a loan office in the Crescent City; a fourth branch has been closed since being damaged by Hurricane Katrina in 2005. The bank was founded in 1909 as Greater New Orleans Homestead.

The stars at night may be big and bright but more than 1 million people deep in the heart of Texas still need electricity from the Lower Colorado River Authority (LCRA). Serving 80 counties along the lower Colorado River between Central Texas and the Gulf of Mexico the not-for profit state-run entity supplies wholesale electricity to more than 40 retail utilities (primarily municipalities and cooperatives). It operates three fossil-fuel powered plants and six hydroelectric dams that give it a production capacity of about 3800 megawatts; it also purchases electricity from Texas wind farms. The LCRA provides water and wastewater utility services to more than 30 communities as well.

LSI can show you around the circuit. The fabless semiconductor developer provides standard integrated circuits (ICs) and custom-designed application-specific ICs (ASICs) focusing on broadband and wireless communications data storage personal computer and networking markets. LSI (an acronym for large-scale integration) was a pioneer of system-on-a-chip (SoC) devices which combine elements of an electronic system — essentially a microprocessor memory and logic — onto a single chip. LSI also provides hardware and software for storage area networks. Customers located in the Asia/Pacific region account for most of the company's sales. LSI has agreed to be acquired by Avago Technologies for $6.6 billion.

Not so long ago in a galaxy not so far away filmmaker George Lucas founded a software company to entertain audiences with something other than movies. Lucasfilm Entertainment (which does business as LucasArts) produces games for computers and home video game consoles. Much of that source material is of course the "Star Wars" films created by Lucas. LucasArts has more "Star Wars" games than you can shake a lightsaber at and it also produces games based on Lucasfilm's successful trilogy of "Indiana Jones" films as well as other titles such as the popular and acclaimed Monkey Island series. LucasArts' products are distributed in about 60 countries worldwide through its own distribution efforts and those of partners.
