It has cost a few bucks to generate power but the effort has been well worth it for Buckeye Power an electricity generation and transmission cooperative that provides electricity to 24 distribution companies in Ohio and one in Michigan. Together they serve about 400,000 homes and businesses in 77 of Ohio's 88 counties. The company was established by Ohio's rural electric co-ops to produce and transmit electric power for member systems throughout the state. Buckeye Power contracts with other Ohio electric companies to use their transmission systems to transmit power to its member electric distribution cooperatives.

Over the years the number of major US railroads has dwindled but Burlington Northern Santa Fe (BNSF) thrives as one of the survivors. Through its primary subsidiary BNSF Railway the company is one of the largest railroad operators in the US along with rival Union Pacific. BNSF makes tracks through 28 states in the West Midwest and SunBelt regions of the US and in two Canadian provinces. The company operates its trains over a system of about 32000 route miles. Along with its rail operations BNSF generates revenue from its BNSF Logistics unit a provider of transportation management services. Family-owned C&K Market operates more than 40 supermarkets in southern Oregon and northern California mostly under the name Ray's Food Place but also under Shop Smart and C&K banners. The Shop Smart warehouse-style stores focus on value-priced groceries and household goods. Most of C&K's stores are situated in small rural communities. C&K Market was founded in 1957 by Raymond "Ray" Nidiffer. Stung by competition from large national discounters including Wal-Mart and Costco the regional chain filed for bankruptcy in late 2013 and closed 15 supermarkets and sold 15 pharmacies. It emerged from bankruptcy in 2014.

Cactus Feeders founder and chairman Paul Engler may operate one of the world's largest cattle feedlot businesses but he was no match for Oprah Winfrey. Cactus Feeders operates 10 feedlots with a capacity of some 520,000 head of cattle which it beefs up and sells to meat packers. The company's feedyards are located in Texas and Kansas. It also provides market analysis marketing services Cactus Feeders offers financing for its rancher/suppliers. Oh and about Oprah Engler and other cattle ranchers unsuccessfully sued Winfrey and a guest after a 1996 broadcast of Winfrey's TV program The Oprah Show disparaged the beef industry.

Cadence Pharmaceuticals figures that if a drug had success in one area it might do well in others. The company licenses rights to compounds and develops them for sale in untapped markets or for new indications. Cadence's sole marketed product is Ofirmev an injectable form of acetaminophen. Cadence licensed the drug from Bristol-Myers Squibb which markets it in Europe under the name Perfalgan. Cadence markets Ofirmev in the US for the treatment of acute pain and fever in children and adults in hospital settings. With one drug on the market Cadence is also on the lookout for other new drugs for its sales force to carry into hospitals.

Cadiz hopes to strike gold with water. The land and water resource development firm owns some 45000 acres of land — and the groundwater underneath it — in eastern San Bernardino County California near the Colorado River Aqueduct and in the eastern Mojave Desert. Cadiz is betting on its groundwater storage and distribution project as water supplies become increasingly scarce in Southern California and as the state aims to increase its renewable energy production levels. Cadiz is also looking into commercial and residential development of its land. It has some agricultural assets that are leased as lemon groves and grape vineyards.

Cadus had hoped to make some dough from yeast but now is barely more than a hollow crust. Previously the company's drug discovery technologies used genetically engineered yeast cells but the firm sold its discovery programs to OSI Pharmaceuticals years ago and halted all research efforts. Its subsidiary Cadus Technologies still holds some assets related to its yeast cell technology and is seeking interested parties to license the intellectual properties. Its revenues consist of the payments on a sale of technology discoveries it made years ago. Investor Carl Icahn a director and former chairman of the company owns almost 40% of Cadus and effectively controls the company.

CalAtlantic builds homes from California to the Pacific Coast. Targeting entry level move-up and luxury market homebuyers the builder formerly known as Standard Pacific constructs homes in 40 metropolitan markets in the West Southwest Southeast and North that typically range in size from 1100 sq. ft. to more than 6000 sq. ft. with prices ranging from $165000 to more than $2 million and averaging around $480000 each. It also builds townhomes and condominiums and buys and develops tracts of high-quality land (both alone and through joint ventures). CalAtlantic offers home loans to its customers in all of its markets as well. Then-Standard Pacific acquired The Ryland Group in 2015 to form the fourth-largest builder in the US then changed its name to CalAtlantic.

Calavo (a combination of "California" and "avocado") began as a growers' marketing cooperative founded in 1924 in order to transform the exotic hobby crop avocados into a culinary staple. Mission accomplished. Since the avocado has become if not a staple a regular in US supermarket shopping carts. Calavo procures and processes avocados papaya pineapple tomatoes and other fresh fruits grown mainly in California but the company also uses fruit from Chile Peru and Mexico. The products are then distributed to retail food outlets food service operators and produce wholesalers throughout the world.

All light's all right with Calient Networks. The company designs switches used to direct signals in fiber-optic communications networks. Unlike conventional switches that convert light to electrical impulses and back again Calient's DiamondWave switches use MEMS (micro-electromechanical system) technology that redirects optical transmissions using tiny movable mirrors. Its fiber cross-connect systems are used to manage and troubleshoot fiber networks. The company targets telecom service carriers and ISPs. Founded in 1999 Calient has attracted investments from venture capital firms including Enterprise Partners and TeleSoft Partners as well as networking companies such as Juniper Networks and Tellabs.

Fear of needles need not stop you from getting tested for HIV infection. Calypste Biomedical's line of HIV testing products includes several tests that use saliva rather than blood. These rapid-detection tests (sold under the Aware brand name) don't require sophisticated laboratory equipment and Calypste hopes that such products will appeal to markets in developing countries where the incidence of HIV is high but health care infrastructure is lacking. The company has obtained regulatory approval for its Aware Rapid HIV tests in several foreign markets including South Africa India and Russia. The company has also developed an Aware HIV blood test and an over-the-counter version of its oral test.

Lucas Energy puts a good amount of energy into drilling. The independent crude oil and gas company owns and operates about 35 production wells and holds more than 1.5 million barrels of oil in proved reserves. Its operations are spread over some 11000 acres primarily in the Austin Chalk region of Texas. The company leases its well-producing properties from local landowners and small operators and is building up its reserve base by acquiring and re-drilling older or underperforming wells that have been overlooked by larger oil and gas companies. Most of Lucas Energy's revenue comes from sales of crude oil to customers such as Gulfmart and Texon with the remainder derived from natural gas sales.

It's not just a heart — it's a "Cambridge" heart. Cambridge Heart makes noninvasive tools for diagnosing cardiac arrest and ventricular arrhythmia. Its CH 2000 system conducts cardiac stress tests and measures extremely low levels of T-wave alternans in an electrocardiogram indicating the risk of sudden cardiac death. Another product the Heartwave II System allows T-wave alternans screenings to be performed with any stress test system. The company's Microvolt T-Wave Alternans technology can detect the smallest heartbeat variation measuring from one-millionth of a volt. The company markets its products in the US through direct sales and representatives; it also has international distributors.

Capstone Turbine's products are here when the lights go out. The company makes the Capstone MicroTurbine a power-generating system that produces environmentally friendly electricity and heat. The microturbines which can operate on a stand-alone basis or be connected to the utility grid run on a variety of liquid and gaseous fuels such as natural gas diesel kerosene propane and flare gases from landfills and sewage plants. In the event of a power outage customers can use microturbines to produce their own secure power for extended periods of time; microturbines can also be used as onboard battery chargers for hybrid electric vehicles.

Cara Therapeutics cares about pain therapy. The clinical-stage biopharmaceutical company focuses on developing and commercializing new chemical products designed to alleviate pain by selectively targeting kappa opioid receptors. Its proprietary class of product candidates target the body's peripheral nervous system. In test with patients with moderate-to-severe pain they have demonstrated efficacy without inducing many of the undesirable side effects often associated with pain therapeutics. Cara's most advanced product candidate is intravenous CR845. The company filed to go public in 2014.

CARBO Ceramics' proppants (tiny alumina-based ceramic beads) are a welcome release for natural gas and oil well operators. To increase well production operators often pump fluids down wells at high pressure to create fractures in the hydrocarbon-bearing rock formation (hydraulic fracturing). Proppants are suspended in the fluid to fill the channels and "prop" up the fissures so that natural gas and oil may flow to the surface. CARBO Ceramics also offers related software and consulting services. The US accounts for 80% of company sales.

While Cardiovascular Systems Inc. (CSI) deals with blood there's no crime scene investigation here. Its Orbital Atherectomy Systems (OAS) treat calcified and fibrotic plaque in arterial vessels throughout the leg and heart in a few minutes of treatment time and address many of the limitations associated with existing surgical catheter and pharmacological treatment alternatives. CSI's Diamondback 360° Predator 360° and Stealth 360° products are minimally invasive catheter systems that help restore blood flow to the legs of patients with peripheral arterial disease (PAD) a condition that occurs when plaque builds up on limb arteries; and address the effects of coronary arterial disease (CAD).

If you can't act maybe Carnegie Mellon University can help. The university is known around the world for churning out award-winning actors from its highly regarded drama school. Drama isn't all Carnegie teaches though — the school has seven colleges and schools that offer academic programs in areas such as psychology computer science engineering biology and public policy. It has more than 13000 students and 5300 faculty and staff and it has a relatively small student-teacher ratio of 10:1. Carnegie Mellon was founded by philanthropist and industrialist Andrew Carnegie who established the Carnegie Technical Schools in 1900 for the sons and daughters of Pittsburgh's blue-collar workers.

This carpenter works with metal not wood. Carpenter Technology is a specialty materials producer that processes basic raw materials (cobalt nickel manganese titanium) to make highly engineered materials for applications in a wide variety of end-user markets. Most sales come from stainless steel and alloy products (billet bar rod wire) that provide special heat- or wear-resistance or special magnetic and conductive properties. Its titanium powder technology supports additive manufacturing (3D printing). Major customers are the aerospace and defense industry along with the energy automotive medical and other industrial companies. Carpenter's primary market is the US but it has major customers worldwide.

Carver Bancorp one of the largest minority-led financial institutions in the US is the holding company for Carver Federal Savings Bank. The bank was founded in 1948 to provide community banking services to New York City's African-American and Caribbean-American population. From about 10 branches in mostly low- to moderate-income neighborhoods in Harlem Brooklyn and Queens the thrift offers deposit accounts insurance and investment products. Carver Federal's lending activities are focused on housing (residential mortgages and multifamily real estate loans) and non-residential real estate (churches and commercial properties.) The latter makes up about 40% of Carver's loan portfolio.

Forget the dirty dishes. Cascade Bancorp wants to provide sparkling customer service. It's the holding company for Bank of the Cascades which operates some 40 branches serving the Oregon and Boise Idaho markets. Catering to individuals and small to mid-sized businesses the banks offer traditional deposit services like checking and savings accounts CDs and IRAs as well as credit cards and trust services. Commercial real estate loans make up more than half of the company's loan portfolio; business loans comprise nearly a quarter. To a far lesser extent the bank also originates consumer loans and mortgages. Cascade Bancorp acquired Home Federal Bancorp in 2014 boosting assets to more than $2.3 billion.

In the foothills of the Cascade Range Cascade Microtech makes test systems for microelectronics. Semiconductor makers such as Broadcom Fujitsu Semiconductor IBM Intel Samsung and Toshiba use the company's probe cards probe stations and analytical probes to ensure the quality of their integrated circuits (ICs). Many of Cascade's customers use its tools to test their wireless broadband or other communications ICs at the wafer level before the wafers are cut into individual chips. The company has a development alliance with test equipment giant Agilent Technologies.

Case Financial went from the courtroom to the goldmine. The former business litigation financing business shifted its focus away from loaning money to lawyers in 2005 and now wants to invest in mine exploration. Setbacks have prevented the company from operating since 2004. However in 2008 Case Financial announced that it would provide $4 million in funding to Canada-based Trio Gold Corp for a gold mine exploration project in Nevada.

Many a star has been born literally at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. The 886-bed teaching and research hospital is located right where Los Angeles meets Beverly Hills and West Hollywood and has tended to the medical needs of a number of celebrities since its founding in 1902. However the center is also a major teaching hospital for UCLA's David Geffen School of Medicine and is engaged in hundreds of research programs in areas such as cancer neuroscience and genetics. It also includes two multi-specialty physician associations Cedars-Sinai Medical Group and Ceders-Sinai Health Associates and operates a number of community health centers and outreach programs (such as mobile health clinics).

CEL-SCI hopes to make L.E.A.P.S. and bounds in preventing and treating deadly diseases. Its L.E.A.P.S. (Ligand Epitope Antigen Presentation System) technology modulates T-cells and may lead to synthetic vaccines for herpes viral encephalitis smallpox and other diseases; the National Institutes of Health is testing CEL-1000 (a compound developed using L.E.A.P.S. technology) as a potential avian flu vaccine. The firm's lead drug candidate however is Multikine which might make tumors more susceptible to radiation therapy and help a patient's body produce tumor-fighting antibodies. Multikine is undergoing clinical trials for the treatment of head and neck tumors. The company was founded in 1983.

Celldex Therapeutics develops cellular therapies to treat specific forms of cancer autoimmune diseases and infections. The biopharmaceutical company's development technologies use cloned proteins antibody-targeted vaccines and other biologic substances to create disease-specific drugs. It has candidates in clinical development for the treatment of brain cancer breast cancer and other oncology-related ailments. Celldex takes candidates through earlier stages of development then typically seeks partners to usher them through late stages. Its first commercial product rotavirus vaccine Rotarix was marketed worldwide by GlaxoSmithKline but that agreement and the company's rights to any profits ended in 2013.

Celsion is trying to turn up the heat on cancer. The company is developing a heat-activated cancer therapy in the form of its lead drug ThermoDox. ThermoDox combines a common oncology drug doxorubicin with a heat-activated liposome that may help deliver and release the drug more accurately. The drug is being studied as a treatment for liver cancer and breast cancer. Celsion was previously a device maker and developed the Prolieve Thermomodulation system an FDA-approved device used to treat benign prostatic hyperplasia (prostate enlargement). Celsion sold the product line to Boston Scientific in 2007.

Centre College's name reflects its location in the geographic center of Kentucky (near Lexington) as well as its founders' preponderance for British spellings. The private liberal arts school enrolls some 1,200 students majoring in about 30 academic areas. Some 85% of students participate in study-abroad opportunities which cost little more than regular tuition. Centre boasts a fraternity that carries an oil portrait of alum former Supreme Court Chief Justice Fred Vinson (Dead Fred) to all home football games. Living alums seem to like the place too: The school is ranked #1 in the nation in terms of percentage of alumni making annual contributions. Centre College was founded in 1819 by Presbyterian leaders.

Centrus Energy (formerly USEC) beats radioactive swords into enriched uranium plowshares. The company processes used uranium — about half of which comes from old Russian atomic warheads — into enriched uranium which it then supplies for commercial nuclear power plants. Centrus Energy is the radioactive recycler of choice for the "Megatons-to-Megawatts" program a US-Russian agreement to convert uranium from warheads into nuclear fuel. In addition Centrus Energy develops low-enriched uranium for the nuclear materials industry and also processes uranium for the US Department of Energy. The company filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in 2014 and emerged later the same year.

Century Aluminum has been smelting aluminum for years. Century Aluminum makes primary molten and ingot aluminum at three of the five still-operational US aluminum smelting facilities in Kentucky and West Virginia. It also has a smelter in Iceland where the small Atlantic nation's cheap electricity is a draw for the energy-intensive aluminum smelting industry. The Iceland facility is operated by subsidiary Nordural. Century is the last US-based producer of the kind of high-purity aluminum that is used in US military vehicles. Century Aluminum also owns an aluminum production plant in South Carolina. In addition the company owns 40% of a joint venture facility in China. Glencore accounts for the vast majority of Century's sales.

In the 19th century people rushed to Cripple Creek Colorado seeking their fortune in gold. Today thanks to Century Casinos they can do basically the same thing (but via mid-sized regional casinos rather than through prospecting). The company's Womack's Casino & Hotel in Cripple Creek offers some 440 slot machines and video devices as well as a handful of gaming tables. It also owns the Century Casino & Hotel in Central City Colorado and another Century Casino & Hotel in Edmonton Canada. In addition it operates four cruise ship casinos and is the casino concessionaire for cruise lines run by TUI Cruises a joint venture between German travel operator TUI and #2 cruise ship operator Royal Caribbean.

Imbued with the spirit of Ceres the Roman goddess of agricultural fertility Ceres Inc. is an agricultural biotechnology firm that specializes in developing plant seeds used for bioenergy feedstock production. Its products which include seeds to grow switchgrass sweet and high-biomass sorghum and miscanthus have the potential as biomass feedstock to generate electric power and produce fuels like cellulosic ethanol butanol and jet fuel. Ceres boasts that its grasses can be used with existing agricultural technologies and are suitable for cultivation on marginal crop land. (It claims its crops consume water and nitrogen more efficiently than corn and soy-bean crops.) Founded in 1996 Ceres went public in 2012.

Chaparral Energy searches the scrublands of America's Mid-Continent and Permian Basin looking for oil and natural gas. The exploration and production company also drills in North Texas the Gulf Coast the Ark-La-Tex region and the Rocky Mountains. In 2010 the company reported estimated proved reserves of some 149.3 million barrels of oil equivalent. About 30% of the its reserves are in enhanced oil recovery project areas primarily in Oklahoma and Texas where the company uses carbon dioxide (CO<sub>2</sub>) to flood wells to release trapped oil in mature and well-worked fields. Securing CO<sub>2</sub> supply from third party plants is key to its enhanced oil recovery an area of expertise the company has pursued since 2000.

Cheniere Energy is a leading producer of liquefied natural gas (LNG) in the US exporting LNG to customers in 32 nations around the world. The company purchases natural gas and processes it into LNG and offers customers the option to load the LNG onto their vessels at its terminals or it delivers the LNG to regasification facilities around the world. The company has two terminals on the US Gulf Coast in various stages of development: its Sabine Pass liquefaction project in southwest Louisiana and its Corpus Christi liquefaction facility in South Texas. Nearly three quarters of revenue come from outside the US. Cheniere also has pipeline assets and operates an LNG and natural gas marketing business.

Cheniere Energy Partners a subsidiary of Cheniere Energy plans to be North America's biggest gas station — natural gas that is. The Sabine Pass LNG (liquefied natural gas) receiving terminal is one of North America's largest: It boasts 4 billion cu. ft. per day of regasification capacity as well as 13.5 billion cu. ft. of LNG storage capacity. All of the Sabine Pass LNG receiving terminal's capacity has already been contracted to Total Gas and Power North America Chevron and Cheniere Energy subsidiary Cheniere Marketing. In 2012 Blackstone agreed to invest $2 billion in the terminal's Sabine Pass liquefaction project. In 2016 Cheniere Energy bid to buy Cheniere Energy Partners before dropping the idea.

Three's not a crowd for Cheniere Energy Partners LP Holdings. The LLC was formed by Cheniere Energy Partners to own a 55.9% stake in Cheniere Energy Partners which operates the Sabine Pass LNG terminal in Louisiana. (Cheniere Energy Partners is itself an offshoot of Cheniere Energy.) By creating a stock-owning holding company Cheniere Energy Partners reduces its risk to early-stage development projects and marketing activities. Shareholders of Cheniere Energy Partners LP Holdings are also entitled to quarterly cash dividends. Cheniere Energy Partners LP Holdings completed an IPO in 2013 and raised $720 million which it will use to pay down debt and make a distribution to Cheniere Energy.

This company has thrilled and (mostly) disappointed baseball fans for a long time. Chicago National League Ball Club operates the Chicago Cubs franchise of Major League Baseball which has gone without a World Series title since 1908. The team was formed as the Chicago White Stockings in 1876 and became the Cubs in 1907. Despite the lack of championships Chicagoans still flock to the charming and famed Wrigley Field (the second-oldest ballpark in MLB after Boston's Fenway Park) to see their Cubbies play. A group led by billionaire Tom Ricketts acquired a majority of the Cubs in 2009.

In the summer in Chicago you can either "root root root for the Cubbies" or you can cheer on these southsiders. The venerable Chicago White Sox franchise is one of the oldest clubs in Major League Baseball having joined the American League in 1900. The team boasts just three World Series championships two from the early 1900s and it latest in 2005. (A World Series appearance in 1919 was marred by the "Black Sox" scandal that saw eight teammates banned from baseball for throwing the championship.) Playing host at US Cellular Field the White Sox franchise is owned by real estate developer and chairman Jerry Reinsdorf who also owns the Chicago Bulls basketball team.

From polio to poison control Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh has long been at the forefront of children's health care. Jonas Salk developed the polio vaccine there in the 1950s and the ubiquitous Mr. Yuk poison label also got its start there. Founded in 1890 the hospital cares for thousands of sick kids each year — both those who stay in one of its 300 inpatient beds and those who visit its outpatient ambulatory surgery and primary care centers. The hospital's doctors handle everything from flu to organ transplantation and they engage in wide-ranging pediatric medical research as well much of it funded by grants from the National Institutes of Health.

All that shimmers isn't . . . enhanced by lipid conjugate technology. Chimerix has developed technology to make molecules with therapeutic potential into oral drugs. Its lipid conjugate technology can modify drug compounds to mimic a particular lipid metabolite that is absorbed by the small intestine thus protecting the compounds from being broken down in the stomach. Chimerix is using its technology to develop lead drug candidate CMX001 (brincidofovir) to fight smallpox infections or bad reactions to smallpox vaccinations. The development-stage firm is also targeting drug-resistant HIV and hepatitis B with its clinical stage CMX157 nucleotide analog. The company went public in 2013.

ChromaDex can talk a blue streak about the health benefits of blueberries. The company markets pterostilbene a plant-based chemical found in blueberries that is said to lower cholesterol and reduce the risk of cancer. Sold under the brand pTeroPure the phytochemical is used in about 20 different nutritional supplements including Nutraceutical's Solaray Super Resveratrol with Pterostilbene. ChromaDex also launched its own line of supplements in 2011 called BluScience that are sold at GNC and Walgreens. Biotech investor Philip Frost the chairman of Teva Pharmaceuticals owns almost 20% of ChromaDex.

Chrysler hopes its crisis remains in its rearview mirror. After engineering an automotive resurrection by choosing a back-to-basics alliance with Fiat in 2009 the car-maker continues to manufacture its Chrysler brands including its Dodge Dart Fiat 500 Jeep Grand Cherokee SRT8 Jeep Wrangler Town & Country and Ram 1500 vehicles. Chrysler's trademarked MOPAR (Motor PARTs) automobile parts and service division carries almost 300,000 parts options and accessories for vehicle customization. Chrysler Group LLC emerged from a US government backed Chapter 11 bankruptcy in mid-2009. It was first founded by Walter Chrysler and organized as Chrysler Corporation in 1925.

At the heart of Chugach Alaska Corporation is a vision of indigenous people running their own businesses on their own land. Chugach Alaska was formed following the activation of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (which was passed by the US Congress in 1971) to provide land management services for the 928000-acre Chugach region of Alaska. The company derives the bulk of its sales from oil and gas production mining commercial timber and tourist activities that occur in the region and from its engagement in military base construction projects at more than 30 locations in Alaska the US Pacific Northwest and the Western Pacific. Chugach Alaska's shareholders consist of Aleut Eskimo and Indian natives.

People might come for the mint juleps and fancy hats but they stay for the tokens. Churchill Downs is most famous for owning its namesake horse racing track that hosts the world-famous Kentucky Derby but it makes most of its money through its casino activities. The company owns five casinos and three hotels and holds stakes in four additional casinos; its casino operations span eight states. Its horse racing operations include four major race courses including Churchill Downs (Kentucky) Arlington International Race Course (Illinois) Calder Race Course (Florida) and Fair Grounds Race Course (Louisiana). Finally the company also operates a number of simulcast networks and off-track betting (OTB) facilities as well as a TwinSpires wagering deposit service that allows bettors to place bets online..

PMC Commercial Trust likes lending to little businesses. The real estate investment trust (REIT) makes small business loans primarily to limited-service hotel franchisees. The loans ranging from $100,000 to $4 million are secured by first liens on real estate and written for hotel owner/operators of national franchises such as Comfort Inn and Holiday Inn Express. PMC Commercial Trust also lends to owners of convenience stores restaurants and other small businesses. About 20% of its loan portfolio is concentrated in Texas. Subsidiaries are active in Small Business Administration (SBA) lending and in investing (as small business investment companies or SBICs). The company was founded in 1993.

These Bengals prowl the jungle of the NFL. The Cincinnati Bengals professional football franchise traces an elite heritage having been formed by Hall of Fame coach Paul Brown in 1968 as part of the American Football League (AFL). Cincinnati joined the National Football League in 1970 when the AFL and NFL merged and went on to make two trips to the Super Bowl (losing both times to the San Francisco 49ers). The team plays host at Paul Brown Stadium which opened in 2000. Brown's family led by his son Mike Brown continues to control the Bengals.

Citizens aims to prepare its customers for two of life's certainties: living and dying. A holding company Citizens provides ordinary life insurance in niche markets through its various operating subsidiaries. Through its CICA Life Insurance Company it issues life insurance in US dollars to wealthy individuals in Latin America and Taiwan. On the other end of the economic and life spectrum its Home Service segment sells life insurance to lower-income individuals in the a few Midwest and southern states primarily to cover final expenses and burial costs. The company has $1.4 billion of assets and $4.7 billion of insurance in force.

Historically a wartime victim of occupying forces modern Alexandria is home to many Defense Department contractors and employees. It uses a council-manager form of government wherein the mayor is part of the six-member city council (all elected at large) which determines city policy. The city manager works to carry out the policy and run the day-to-day operations of Alexandria. In addition to the city manager the council also appoints the city attorney city clerk and members of various commissions and boards. Alexandria's more than 30 departments operate on an annual budget of about $400 million and serve about 130,000 citizens. The city was founded in 1749.

It is bigger in Texas when you consider the City of Houston. As the largest city in the state and one of the largest cities nationwide Houston is more than an oil town. Founded in 1836 and home to Rice University and the Astros it also has a noteworthy museum district and operates the Texas Medical Center one of the world's largest health care facilities. While a mayor oversees Houston's management 14 council members (elected for two-year terms) have the power to enact and enforce city ordinances. With a population of more than 2 million Houston operates through some 20 departments including health and human services police and parks and recreation. It has an annual budget of about $2 billion.

Revenues come naturally to CKX Lands. The company owns or has stakes in about 14000 acres in Louisiana that contain oil and gas wells mines timber and agricultural operations. Formed in 1930 the company does not perform any of these operations and is not involved in oil and gas exploration. Instead it generates revenues through royalties from the natural resources produced on its land. Originally set up to receive mineral royalties spun off by a bank to its shareholders CKX Lands' growth strategy is built around acquiring land in southwestern Louisiana. Its largest customers Mayne and Mertz and Cox & Perkins account for nearly 40% of sales.

Forget cooking with gas — Clean Energy Fuels is driving with gas. Natural gas that is. The company owns and/or supplies more than 500 natural gas fueling stations across the US and Canada. These enable Clean Energy's 650 fleet customers to tank up their more than 35000 fleet vehicles with compressed natural gas (CNG) or liquefied natural gas (LNG). Clean Energy also helps customers buy natural gas vehicles and obtain government incentives. The alternative fuel company has CNG production plants in Canton (Michigan) and in Dallas and produces LNG at its two plants in California and Texas.

Improved energy efficiency and lower emissions? Clearsign believes it has found a way to do what many said couldn't be done. The company's proprietary Electrodynamic Combustion Control (ECC) system uses a computer connected to electrodes inside a combustion system to electrostatically control the process. ECC uses existing ions to manipulate chemical combustion thereby reducing pollution and directing the heat transfer for greater efficiency. The process which can be part of new construction or a retrofit works in combustion power generation (from coal natural gas and other fuels) in petrochemical refining and in other industrial heat processes. Formed in 2008 Clearsign filed to go public in 2011.

No pulp fiction here — the story of Clearwater Paper is clearly fact. The company produces solid bleach sulfate paperboard consumer tissue products lumber and hardwood and softwood pulp. Business is divided into two primary divisions: Its Pulp and Paperboard segment manufactures paperboard (used to make packaging for foods liquids pharmaceuticals and toiletries) and pulp (consumed internally to make paperboard and tissues). A Consumer Products arm produces a private label tissue largely for grocery chains. Most of Clearwater sales are made in the US.

Looking for a current investment opportunity? Try NRG Yield. The company was formed by NRG Energy as an investment vehicle for shareholders to earn quarterly stock dividends. NRG Yield owns a mix of renewable and fossil-fuel powerplants — seven solar power plants three natural gas/oil plants and one wind generation facility. These energy-generation facilities provide power under long-term contracts to customers such as AEP CL&P and PG&E. In addition the company owns eight thermal power systems that provide steam water and electricity. The company went public in 2013 raising $431 million. It plans to use some of the proceeds to complete construction on another solar power plant in California.

Cleveland BioLabs' scientists are working hard to develop drugs that help healthy cells stay that way as well as drugs that promote cell death in cancerous tumors. The company has based its research on the suppression and stimulation of the process known as apoptosis a form of cell-death that occurs after exposure to radiation toxic chemicals or internal stresses. In development are two product lines: protectans (suppressing apoptosis in healthy cells after radiation exposure) and curaxins (stimulating apoptosis in some forms of cancer). Protectans have applications in reducing side effects from cancer treatment and terrorist or nuclear events while curaxins are being developed as anticancer therapies.

The Dawg Pound is the place to be for football fans in Cleveland. The Cleveland Browns Football Company owns and operates the Cleveland Browns one of the more storied franchises in the National Football League. Started in 1944 by Arthur McBride as part of the All-American Football Conference the club joined the NFL in 1949 and boasts four championship titles its last in 1964. The present team was awarded to the late Alfred Lerner and former 49ers president Carmen Policy after Art Modell relocated the original Browns to Baltimore in 1996. (A deal struck with the NFL allowed Cleveland to retain the team name colors and history.) Lerner's family led by son Randy continues to control the team.

Coates International Ltd. (CIL) may be sparking the next industrial revolution. CEO George J. Coates founded CIL to develop his many patents the most noteworthy being the Coates Spherical Rotary Valve (CSRVR). The CSRVR is designed to replace the century-old technology of the internal combustion engine's camshaft and poppet valve system. An engine equipped with the CSRVR can run on different fuels while reducing emissions and increasing efficiency; the need for maintenance is also reduced. CIL licenses its CSRVR engine technology to makers of heavy-duty vehicles automobiles and industrial engines. Major customer Almont Energy (Canada) took first delivery of CSRVR engines in 2010.

Cobalt International Energy scours the deep blue seas in search of oil. An exploration and development company Cobalt International owns interests in offshore properties located in the Gulf of Mexico and West Africa. The company's assets include majority and minority stakes in more than 600,000 net acres in almost 50 blocks in the Gulf and more than 2 million acres in more than 100 prospects located off the coast of Gabon and Angola. It focuses primarily on searching for oil pockets encased beneath salt layers which until recently was traditionally untapped geological territory in the oil industry. Cobalt International Energy contracts two drilling rigs one from EnSCO and one from Diamond Offshore.

You could say CoBank is dependent on its rural customers and vice versa. A member of the Farm Credit System (which is regulated by the FCA) the $110 billion cooperative bank provides seasonal and wholesale loans to agribusinesses as well as to rural power water and communications cooperatives across the US. The bank also leases vehicles farming equipment and agricultural facilities through various Farm Credit System affiliates. Its core agribusiness customers range from local and regional farmers' cooperatives to multinational food companies. It has counted Land O' Lakes Blue Diamond Almonds and National Beef as among its larger customers. Formed in 1989 CoBank merged with US AgBank in early 2012.

The pharmaceutical and the biodiesel industries don't seem like they have much in common but they both use the chemicals produced by Codexis. The company develops biocatalysts — chemicals used to manufacture other chemicals in a way that's easy on the environment. Its technology is used to make the active ingredients in pharmaceuticals and produce biofuel from plant material. Codexis has a research agreement with Shell to develop new ways of converting biomass to bio-fuel; Shell accounts for more than half of Codexis' sales. The company is also working within other markets to use its technology to manage carbon emissions from coal-fired power plants and treat wastewater.

Even those outside California know Cogentix Medical's products are totally tubular. The firm (formerly named Vision-Sciences) makes endoscopic tools — tubular instruments that let doctors see into the body and perform procedures without invasive surgery. It makes traditional endoscopes and the EndoSheath System which consists of a disposable sterile sheath covering the reusable endoscope. The system allows health care providers to save money by avoiding costly cleaning and repairs and reduces the risk of cross-contamination. Subsidiary Machida makes flexible borescopes endoscope-like tools used in industrial applications. In 2015 Vision-Sciences merged with Uroplasty to create Cogentix Medical.

Machines might not possess big picture vision but Cognex machines have excellent vision when it comes to detail. The company is one of the world's largest producers of systems that linked to a video camera serve as eyes where human vision is insufficient. Manufacturers of consumer electronics and vehicles as well as logistics companies use the company's machine vision and industrial identification systems to position and identify products gauge sizes and locate defects. Cognex's big market is factory automation and it also offers consulting and educational services and tech support for its products. Sales to customers based outside the US account for about three-quarters of sales.

Women quench their thirst for classic casual clothing and accessories from Coldwater Creek's stores catalog and Web site. The upscale multi-channel retailer sells mostly traditional apparel through some 360 full-line stores and about 35 retail outlets targeting middle- and upper-income women 35 years of age and older. It also sells directly to consumers via its Coldwater Creek catalog and online store and operates about 10 namesake day spas that typically span 5400 sq. ft. While it got its start as a catalog operator today the company's retail presence is felt more at the mall than the mailbox with stores accounting for more than 75% of sales. Coldwater Creek was founded in 1984 by Dennis and Ann Pence.

Founded in 1968 to provide loans to African-Americans living in Washington DC Independence Federal Savings Bank continues that mission today. Through three branches in the US capital and nearby Maryland the bank offers standard deposit products such as checking and savings accounts money market accounts and CDs. Mortgages secured by residential or commercial real estate make up almost all of its loan portfolio; the bank ceased providing guaranteed student loans through Sallie Mae in 2008. Chairman Morton Bender owns a majority of Independence Federal. The company withdrew a plan to merge with Maryland-based Colombo Bank after regulatory approvals were delayed indefinitely in 2010.

Colorado College does things a little differently but it shares its mission with other institutions of higher learning. The private liberal arts and sciences college in 1970 adopted the Block Plan which divides the school year into eight three-and-a-half week blocks. Students take one course per three-and-a-half week block allowing them to focus on a single subject at a time. Its class size averages about 15 students with most classes capped at 25. Colorado College's 12000 students can choose from more than 40 majors and 30-plus minors. They are required to live on campus the first three years. Established in 1874 the Colorado Springs school boasts a 10:1 student-faculty ratio.

Even one of the country's most scenic areas needs creature comforts and that's where utilities come in. Community-owned Colorado Springs Utilities is a multi-utility company that provides natural gas electric water and wastewater services in the Pikes Peak region. Colorado Springs Utilities' service territories include Colorado Springs Manitou Springs and several of the suburban residential areas surrounding the city. The City of Colorado Springs is the only customer of the streetlight system and is responsible for all streetlight service charges. The military installations of Fort Carson Peterson Air Force Base and the US Air Force Academy are also serviced by the multi-utility.

Colorado State University (CSU) got its start as an agricultural college in 1870 six years before Colorado was even a state. The school still has agricultural and forestry programs as well as a veterinary medicine school but it also offers degrees in liberal arts business engineering and the sciences. True to its roots as a land-grant college CSU engages the larger community in research and outreach through statewide Cooperative Extension programs and centers like the Colorado Agricultural Experiment Station. More than 30000 students are enrolled at CSU about 80% of whom are Colorado residents. It employs about 1500 faculty members and has a student-to-teacher ratio of 19:1.

Conatus Pharmaceuticals is ready to deliver a sliver of hope to people suffering from liver disease. The biotechnology company is developing a drug named emricasan to treat patients with chronic liver failure or liver fibrosis (scarring) from Hepatitis C. Emricasan is designed to reduce the enzymes that cause inflammation and cell death in order to interrupt the progression of liver disease; currently there's no other drug like it. Pfizer initially developed the drug; Conatus bought the rights to emricasan in 2010. It is beginning Phase III trials in Europe and Phase II trials in the US in 2014. Conatus went public in mid-2013 raising $66 million in its IPO. It will use the proceeds to further fund the drug's development.

Concert Pharmaceuticals wants to use deuterium chemistry to conduct a symphony of drugs. The company's process lets it substitute deuterium (also called heavy hydrogen) for hydrogen in a chemical compound thereby making the compound more stable without changing its other properties. It believes this process will lead to shorter time from discovery to trial for certain drugs. Concert has a handful of clinical-stage candidates in various stages of the approval process including treatments for spasticity kidney disease and neurologic disorders. It collaborates with Avanir Celgene and Jazz Pharmaceuticals on development.

Like the story of Noah's Ark Conrad Industries starts anew by rescuing the things its likes. Conrad Industries builds converts and repairs small to mid-sized vessels for commercial and government customers. More than half of the company's work is in constructing barges liftboats towboats and tugboats. Its boat-conversion projects mainly involve lengthening vessel mid-bodies or modifying vessels to perform different functions. Conrad Industries operates shipyards along the Gulf Coast in Louisiana and Texas. Conrad also offers fabrication of modular components used on offshore drilling rigs as well as storage and offloading of vessels. Established in 1948 the company is led by the founding Conrad family.

Consumer Portfolio Services (CPS) buys sells and services auto loans made to consumers who probably don't have portfolios. The company finances vehicles for sub-prime borrowers who can't get traditional financing due to poor or limited credit; these loans typically carry a higher interest rate than prime loans. CPS purchases contracts from both new car and independent used car dealers in more than 45 states; the company then securitizes (bundles and sells) them on the secondary market. Its total managed portfolio comprises some $900 million in contracts. The bulk of the contracts CPS acquires finance used vehicles. The company has servicing operations in California Florida Illinois and Virginia.

If it's a continent chances are it's accessible via Continental Airlines. The carrier serves about 140 US destinations and another 135 abroad from hubs in Cleveland Houston Newark and Guam (hub of Continental Micronesia). Its network includes regional flights by subsidiary lines. Continental has about 350 jets and more than 250 regional aircraft. It extends its offerings through code-sharing with fellow members of the Star Alliance led by United Continental's United Air Lines Lufthansa and Air Canada. (Code-sharing allows airlines to sell tickets on one another's flights.) In fall 2010 Continental was acquired by United parent UAL Corp. in a $3 billion stock swap to create United Continental Holdings.

With its roots as a popular basketball shoe worn by professionals Converse has morphed under NIKE into a fashionable footwear maker for those off the court too. It has sold some 750 million pairs of its classic Chuck Taylor All Star canvas basketball shoes which appeal to consumers ranging from kids to clothing designers. It also licenses its name to sports apparel makers. Converse produces products under the One Star Star Chevron and Jack Purcell names. It sells them through about 60 of its own stores and through retailers the likes of Target and even DSW. Converse operates as a separate unit from NIKE's competing sports brands reining in the kitsch value of Converse's vintage Chuck Taylor brand.

Corinthian Colleges believes more in marketable skills than in ivory towers. It was one of the largest for-profit post-secondary education companies in North America focused on career-oriented students. It had more than 80000 students enrolled in about 110 schools in some 25 US states as well as in Canada. Corinthian's institutions operate under the Everest College WyoTech (for automotive training) and Heald College brand names. Under pressure from state and federal government investigations into its practices and finances the company is winding down operations by selling off campuses. It has identified buyers for most of its schools.

Cotton Incorporated battles both boll weevils and synthetic fibers. The organization bolsters the demand and profitability of the US cotton industry through its research and marketing efforts. To the public Cotton Incorporated is known for its white-on-brown "Seal of Cotton" logo and its advertising slogan "The fabric of our lives." Founded in 1970 Cotton Incorporated is funded by US growers of upland cotton cotton importers and cotton-product makers. Its board consists of representatives from each cotton-growing state — all of whom are cotton producers — and is overseen by the US Department of Agriculture.

The Council of Better Business Bureaus (BBB) helps North American consumers and businesses know who's on the up-and-up. The non-profit organization comprises independent BBBs and branches in about 125 locations throughout North America as well as some 240 national companies that have shown a commitment to business ethics. More than 300,000 companies that have demonstrated a similar commitment belong to local BBBs. The companies can promote their adherence to BBB standards; in return they are subject to "reliability reports" that consist of any complaints clients or partners have had about them. BBBs work to resolve disputes between consumers and businesses and review companies' advertising.

CPS Technologies makes thermal management components for electronics using aluminum silicon carbide (AlSiC) metal matrix composites. Products include substrates baseplates and heat spreaders that are used by customers in motor controller and wireless communications component applications. CPS is working with the US Army on using its composite technology in armor for military vehicles. The company also licenses its technology to other manufacturers; revenue from licenses and royalties however has dwindled away to virtually nothing. CPS Technologies makes more than two-thirds of its sales to locations outside the US although the majority of its customers are actually based in the US.

Competing with the big boys is more effective in an alliance. The Craft Brew Alliance brings together Redhook Ale Brewery (Seattle) Widmer Brothers Brewing (Portland) and Kona Brewing (Kona Hawaii) to brew market and sell their beers throughout the US and in international markets. The Alliance divides its business between beer comprising brewing and selling craft beers and pubs and other operations including five pubs four of which neighbor its breweries. Its lineup offers year-round and flagship brands (Pilsner Hefeweizen Longboard Lager). The Alliance competes against big beer makers and works with them. Its beers are distributed through an agreement with Anheuser-Busch which owns about 32% of the Alliance.

Crane Co. designs and manufactures a wide range of highly technical engineered products. Its two main businesses are Fluid Handling which makes a variety of valves and pumps and Payment & Merchandising Technologies which makes vending machines and other systems with currency validation at their core. Crane's two other units make fiberglass reinforced plastic as well as seats pumps and landing gear components for the aerospace industry. A toxic legacy of using asbestos in its seals continues to dog Crane Co: Successful lawsuits against Crane have cost it more than $600 million over the years and continue to this day. Crane operates in more than two dozen countries and traces its roots to 1855.

Like "Wild Bill" of Wild West lore Hickok is quite comfortable shooting it out with competitors on its own measured road to success. The company manufactures testing equipment used by automotive technicians to repair cars. Hickok also makes instruments indicators and gauges for manufacturers of aircraft and locomotives. While Ford and General Motors traditionally were the company's largest customers its biggest customer now is Environmental Systems Products (ESP) at 53% of sales. Hickok sells products primarily in the US. In 2019 Hickok bought Data Genomix which develops social media marketing applications for political legal and recruiting campaigns. The companies are based in Cleveland Ohio.

CryoLife preserves lives by conserving the tissues that sustain them. The company takes human heart valves and blood vessels from deceased volunteer donors processes them and stores them in liquid nitrogen freezers (a process called cryopreservation). It then ships them to US surgeons who implant them during surgical procedures. For some preserved tissue the company uses its proprietary SynerGraft technology which reduces the presence of donor cells and makes the tissue more compatible with the recipient. CryoLife also develops implantable biomaterials including BioGlue an adhesive used to seal internal surgical wounds.

The specialty pharmaceutical company focuses on acquiring developing and commercializing branded prescription drugs. Targeting the hospital acute care and gastroenterology segments Cumberland's FDA-approved drugs include Acetadote for the treatment of acetaminophen poisoning; Kristalose a prescription strength laxative; Vaprisol for low sodium levels; and Caldolor (ne © Amelior) the first injectable dosage form of ibuprofen. The company also has several projects in development. Acetadote and Kristalose are marketed through Cumberland's own hospital and gastroenterology sales forces. The company went public in a mid-2009 IPO.

A development-stage company Torvec hopes to bring its Torvec FTV (full-terrain vehicle) to the markets of developing nations. The FTV has the body of a truck but has tracks similar to those of a tank. The tracks enable the FTV to venture where a mere wheeled vehicle would fear to tread. Several technologies developed by the late Vernon Gleasman and members of his family including an infinitely variable transmission and a steering drive and suspension system for tracked vehicles are being incorporated into the FTV. The company is working with Ford Motor to develop a version of the FTV to be manufactured and distributed in the US initially and then marketed globally.

Curis's cancer patients and Sega's gamers might one day have an unlikely hero in common: Sonic the Hedgehog. Drug development firm Curis is studying hedgehog signaling pathways (including the sonic hedgehog pathway named after the Sega mascot) to find treatments for oncology ailments and other conditions. Such signaling pathways regulate tissue growth and repair and the company is looking for ways to either stimulate them or slow them down as a means of treating disease. Curis is collaborating with Genentech to develop cancer drugs using hedgehog pathways. The company also has internal development programs for cancer treatments using other signaling pathways.

Relatively unknown less than a decade ago Cutter & Buck has climbed onto the leader board of the nation's top makers of golf apparel. Cutter & Buck sells men's and women's golf apparel and other sportswear through golf pro shops resorts and specialty stores throughout North America as well as to corporate accounts. It sells its products in other countries through distributors. Most of its sales come from men's apparel. Cutter & Buck divides its apparel into two lines: the ephemeral fashion line with brighter colors and the seasonless and less-expensive classics line. Its corporate marketing division puts company logos on products for corporate golf events and programs. New Wave Group AB owns the company.

Farmers dreaming of fertile fields can turn to CVR Partners. The company makes nitrogen fertilizers. From its fertilizer manufacturing facility in Kansas CVR Partners produces ammonia and urea ammonia nitrate (UAN). The company sells ammonia to agricultural and industrial customers such as Brandt Consolidated Interchem and National Cooperative Refinery Association and provides UAN products to retailers and distributors. To lower production costs CVR Partners uses petroleum coke instead of the more expensive natural gas. It obtains the majority of its petroleum coke from parent company CVR Energy which founded CVR Partners in 2007. CVR Partners went public in April 2011 raising $307 million.

Oil refinery Coffeyville Resources may be located in Coffeyville Kansas but new parent CVR Refining is thinking "We're not just in Kansas anymore." CVR Refining was formed by CVR Energy in September 2012 as an indirect wholly owned subsidiary to take over its downstream operations. CVR Refining is taking ownership of the 115000 barrels-per-day Coffeyville refinery and a 70000 barrels-per-day refinery in Wynnewood Oklahoma both of which are not too far from a crude oil hub at Cushing Oklahoma. In addition CVR Refining will control 350 miles of pipeline 125 oil tanker trucks tank farms and 6 million barrels of storage capacity. CVR Refining went public in 2013 with an offering worth $600 million.

Cyanotech transforms the scum of the earth into health products. The majority of the company's sales come from Spirulina Pacifica a nutritional supplement made from tiny blue-green vegetable algae and sold as powder flakes and tablets. The firm also produces BioAstin an astaxanthin-based dietary supplement full of antioxidants. Cyanotech produces the microalgae used in its product lines at a 90-acre production facility on the Kona Coast of Hawaii. It sells them primarily to health food and dietary supplement makers. In order to focus on its nutritional supplement business the company has discontinued some other product lines including NatuRose an algae-based pigmentation used to color farm-raised fish.

It may sound futuristic but Cyberonics is all about treating an age-old neurological disorder. The company is the maker of the first medical device to gain clearance by the FDA for treating epilepsy. Its Vagus Nerve Stimulation Therapy system (VNS Therapy) is a pacemaker-like device that is implanted under the collarbone with a lead that connects it to the vagus nerve in the neck. The device delivers intermittent signals to the brain to control epileptic seizures. Physicians can program the signals by computer and patients can start or stop signals with hand-held magnets. VNS Therapy is also used for treating depression that has been treatment-resistant. Cyberonics sells its systems worldwide.

It's a dirty job but someone's got to do it. After oil and gas companies drill wells Cypress Energy Partners comes in and cleans up the mess. The company provides saltwater disposal and other water and environmental services to oil and natural gas companies that perform hydraulic fracturing a process that pumps sand water and chemicals into shale reservoirs to release oil and gas. It owns and operates nine fluid management disposal facilities in North Dakota and Texas. It also provides independent pipeline inspection and integrity services to producers and pipeline companies through subsidiary Tulsa Inspection Resources. Cypress Energy Partners went public in early 2014.

Cytokinetics studies the cytoskeleton to get to the heart of the problem. The biopharmaceutical firm's drug development technologies aim to treat disease by modulating muscle function through manipulation of the cytoskeleton (biological infrastructure of cells). Its pipeline includes lead candidate omecamtiv mecarbil which is designed for the treatment of heart failure based on a cytoskeletal protein in the heart muscle. It is being developed in collaboration with Amgen. Its other lead candidate tirasemtiv is in clinical studies for use by patients with ALS. In collaboration with Astellas Cytokinetics is also studying developing CK-2127107 for the treatment of spinal muscular atrophy (SMA).

Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) is one of the world's largest dairy cooperatives with nearly 15000 member farmers across the US. Millions of cows belonging to member farmers produce 64 billion pounds of milk a year (roughly 30% of milk production in the US) which DFA markets. Along with fresh and shelf-stable fluid milk the co-op produces cheese butter dried milk powder and other dairy products for industrial wholesale and retail customers. It also offers contract manufacturing services. The co-op owns more than 40 manufacturing plants nationwide. DFA whose profits are shared based on member contribution is a major supplier to dairy giant Dean Foods as well as joint venture partners such as Hiland Dairy.

Dais Corporation develops nano polymers it hopes can be used to solve tough global problems like cleaning air and water and reducing harmful emissions. Its only current product is ConSERV an energy recovery ventilator that uses nano technology to improve the efficiency of existing heating and cooling systems. Other Dais products in the development stage including NanoAir NanoClear and NanoCap use the same technology to cleaning air and water and storing energy more efficiently. Formed in 1993 as fuel cell developer Dais the company bought fellow fuel cell firm Analytic in 1999 and changed its name. In 2002 it shifted focus to nano polymers.

The Dakota Electric Association delivers electricity to residents of southeastern Minnesota the Gopher State so they don't have to burrow underground to outlast those long cold winters. The member-owned utility serves more than 103000 customers in portions of Dakota Goodhue Rice and Scott counties south of Minneapolis-St. Paul. The co-op gets its power wholesale from transmission cooperative Great River Energy and distributes it more than 4010 miles of power lines nearly two-thirds of which are buried. Dakota Electric is pushing energy efficiency programs and products to help save its customers money.

A miracle on the prairie? A subsidiary of Basin Electric Power Cooperative Dakota Gasification does not turn water into wine but it does something pretty neat anyway: It turns coal into natural gas. The Great Plains Synfuels Plant harnesses the abundant coal resources underlying the North Dakota prairie. The gasification process transforms more than 6 million tons of coal into more than 57 billion cu. ft. of natural gas annually which is then used to supply the eastern US. In addition to natural gas the company's Synfuels plant produces carbon dioxide fertilizers solvents phenol and other chemicals.

Gentlemen start your engines! Dale Jarrett Racing Adventure brings the thrills (but hopefully not the spills) of NASCAR racing to doctors lawyers Indian chiefs — and even average joes assuming they have enough "fuel" to foot the bill. The company gives racing fans the opportunity to race on a major track. Packages range from riding three laps in the passenger seat with a professional driver to 60 laps of actual driving at speeds of up to 165 mph (after instruction). Events are held at racetracks around the country (including Talladega Superspeedway and Atlanta Motor Speedway). The Dale Jarrett Racing Adventure was founded in 1998 when CEO Tim Shannon approached NASCAR driver Dale Jarrett with the concept.

Metabolism out of whack? DARA BioSciences is working on it. The drug development company is testing drugs for metabolic diseases such as diabetes. However it was not always thus for the company. Formerly called Point Therapeutics the firm failed in its previous efforts to advance lead cancer drug talabostat and was forced to regroup and consider its options. The company turned to its preclinical pipeline which included a potential diabetes drug and then in 2008 executed a reverse merger with privately held DARA BioSciences which brought along a complementary set of metabolic compounds as well as programs focused on neuropathic pain and psoriasis.

3-D technology has made Dawson Geophysical (formerly TGC Industries) one of the movers and shakers in the North American oil patch as it conducts seismic surveys for oil exploration companies. The company principally employs land surveys using Geospace Technologies and ARAM ARIES seismic systems which obtain 3-D seismic data related to subsurface geological features. Employing radio-frequency telemetry and multi-channel recorders the system enables the exploration of rivers swamps and inaccessible terrain. It also sells gravity information from its data bank to oil and gas exploration companies. In 2014 it was acquired by Dawson Operating then known as Dawson Geophysical.

The oil industry can be shaky at times but Dawson Geophysical always looks for good vibrations. The company provides data acquisition and data processing services including the analysis of 2-D and 3-D seismic data to assess potential underground oil and gas deposits. Dawson Geophysical's customers both major and independent oil and gas operators use the data in exploration and development activities. The company's 3-D seismic data acquisition crews work in the lower 48 states; data processing is performed by geophysicists at the firm's computer center in Midland Texas.

Old Sol otherwise known as the sun is the "day star" providing energy through the solar cells of this company. DayStar Technologies makes energy-generating and storing devices out of copper indium gallium and selenium dubbed CIGS solar cells. The company is developing manufacturing processes for its thin-film photovoltaic foil CIGS solar cells that will be cheaper to produce than conventional polycrystalline silicon solar cells which currently dominate the market. DayStar got out of the business of installing and maintaining solar panels for residences. Running out of cash in 2009 the company warned that it may have to seek Chapter 11 protection from creditors if it is unable to raise capital.

Decision Diagnostics Corp. (DDC) hopes IT plus pharmaceuticals will equal success. Previously focused on wireless systems for the health care and lodging markets in 2005 the company added a pharmaceuticals distribution unit through its purchases of CareGeneration and the Pharmaceutical Solutions unit of Kelly Company. DDC drives customers to its pharmaceuticals business by providing wireless computing devices to doctors in clinics for the poor and uninsured; in return doctors direct their patients to the company's discount mail-order prescription service. The company continues to sell its wireless PDA devices for the health care and lodging industries. Clearing company Cede & Co. owns 40% of DDC.

There's no business like the specialty shoe business for Deckers Outdoor. It designs and markets the iconic UGG brand of luxury sheepskin footwear in addition to Teva sports sandals — a cross between a hiking boot and a flip-flop used for walking hiking and rafting among other pursuits. Other product lines include Sanuk Hoka One One and Koolaburra. While imitations flood the market the company distinguishes UGG and Teva from its competitors by avoiding distribution in off-price outlets. Deckers Outdoor's products are made by independent contractors primarily in Asia. The company sells its footwear through about 150 retail stores worldwide independent distributors catalogs and online.

Del Frisco's Restaurant Group operates two upscale steakhouse chains Del Frisco's Double Eagle Steak House and Sullivan's with about 30 locations in more than 15 states. The group also runs two more casual Del Frisco's Grille restaurants. Del Frisco's Double Eagle Steak House has about 10 locations and offer upscale dining in a contemporary surrounding. The somewhat less pricey version of the 20-unit Sullivan's chain features an atmosphere reminiscent of a Chicago-style steakhouse. Both concepts serve premium cuts of beef along with seafood lamb and pork dishes and both offer an extensive wine list. The company controlled by Dallas-based private equity firm Lone Star Funds went public in 2012.

How does Del Monte's garden grow? Quite well. The company is one of the largest makers of branded canned fruit vegetables and broths in the US. Del Monte Foods manufactures tomato-based items such as ketchup and tomato sauce under brands College Inn Del Monte and Contadina. It owns no farms but instead purchases fruits and vegetables from growers. The company helps pets grow too with a stable of popular brands: 9Lives Gravy Train Milk-Bone and Meow Mix. Del Monte Foods makes private-label products as well as ingredients for other food makers and supplies products to foodservice operators. A trio of private equity firms led by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts (KKR) took Del Monte Foods private in 2011.

The famous painting of George Washington crossing the Delaware would have lacked a good deal of its drama if the Delaware River Port Authority of Pennsylvania and New Jersey (DRPA) had been around in 1776. DRPA keeps commuters (and leaders of revolutionary armies) out of small boats by operating the Benjamin Franklin Betsy Ross Commodore Barry and Walt Whitman toll bridges over the Delaware River which divides Pennsylvania from New Jersey. Bridge operations account for 90% of the agency's revenue. Through its Port Authority Transit Corp. (PATCO) subsidiary DRPA operates PATCO a rail service that links Philadelphia with communities on the New Jersey side of the Delaware.

A cancer-stricken liver might be a lonely little organ thanks to Delcath Systems. The company's technology allows blood infused with chemotherapy drugs to be pumped directly to the liver and then filtered before being returned into the circulation system. By isolating the liver Delcath's proprietary Hepatic CHEMOSAT® Delivery System is designed to protect other parts of the body from side effects and allow stronger doses of drugs to be used to treat liver cancer and malignant melanoma that has spread to the liver. The system approved and available in Europe is undergoing clinical trials to gain FDA approval. Delcath is also developing the system for use in treating other cancers and viral hepatitis.

Money doesn't grow on trees? Deltic Timber might beg to differ. The company annually grows and harvests some 605000 tons of timber from the more than 450000 acres of timberland that it owns primarily in Arkansas and northern Louisiana. The company's two sawmills convert the timber (mainly Southern Pine) into softwood lumber products; this is then sold to wholesale distributors lumber treaters and truss manufacturers for use in residential construction to make roof trusses laminated beams and decking. In addition to its timber and lumber businesses Deltic Timber develops real estate in central Arkansas and manufactures medium density fiberboard (MDF) through Del-Tin Fiber.

Denbury Resources is the largest combined oil and natural gas producer in Mississippi and Montana. In 2015 it reported estimated proved reserves of 288.6 million barrels of oil equivalent of which 98% was oil. It owns the largest reserves of carbon dioxide (CO2) used in enhanced (also called tertiary) oil recovery east of the Mississippi River and it holds operating acreage in its two core regions Gulf Coast and Rocky Mountains. Using CO2 in enhanced oil recovery is one of the most efficient tertiary recovery methods for producing crude oil. Denbury Resources generates substantially all of its revenue from sales of oil natural gas and related products.

Dendreon wants to boost your immunity from the start. It is developing therapeutic vaccines that help the body's immune system fight cancer by targeting dendritic cells which initiate an immune response to disease-causing antigens. Its sole commercial product Provenge is a therapeutic vaccine that targets prostate cancer. In 2010 Provenge gained the status of being the first therapeutic cancer vaccine to receive FDA approval. Dendreon is working to expand use of Provenge; it is also working on therapeutic vaccines to treat other types of cancer and it has research programs investigating other cancer-fighting biotech and small molecule drugs. In late 2014 Dendreon filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

Its service area may be dry but it is not a power desert thanks to Deseret Generation and Transmission Cooperative (aka Deseret Power) which supplies wholesale electricity to its members (six retail distribution cooperatives) and other bulk energy customers in Arizona Colorado Nevada Utah and Wyoming. The member-owned utility operates 223 miles of transmission lines and it has interests in two power generation facilities in Utah that give it 550 MW of capacity. Deseret Power also operates its own coal mine which fuels its main power plant through subsidiary Blue Mountain Energy; other operations include the transportation of coal by railroad and the development of a limestone extraction facility.

These Tigers prowl in the jungle of Major League Baseball. The Detroit Tigers franchise was a charter member of the American League in 1901 and has won 10 league pennants and four World Series championships (the last in 1984). For all its past success however the team struggled to finish with a winning record for more than a decade until the 2006 season when the club won its first AL pennant since 1984. (Detroit lost the World Series though to the St. Louis Cardinals.) The baseball franchise is part of Ilitch Holdings owned by Mike and Marian Ilitch. The Ilitches who bought the Tigers in 1992 also own the Detroit Red Wings hockey team part of MotorCity Casino and Little Caesar Enterprises.

DexCom makes and distributes devices for the management of diabetes. It develops and manufactures continuous glucose monitoring systems such as its G5 Mobile device which measures and wirelessly transmits blood sugar levels from a sensor on the patient to their mobile device. Real-time data is processed and displayed so patients can assess blood glucose trends. Patients are also alerted when levels are too high or too low. Another product the G6 features a one-touch applicator which inserts a small sensor just under the skin (thereby reducing the need for finger-pricks). DexCom's products are marketed to physicians endocrinologists and diabetes educators in the US and select international markets.

Dextera Surgical (formerly Cardica) wants to help surgeons treat patients with coronary heart disease. The company makes products including the C-Port and PAS-Port systems that are used in coronary artery bypass surgery. The automated systems connect blood vessels that restore blood flow beyond the closed sections of coronary arteries. Its products offer a less time-consuming and simpler alternative to hand-sewn suturing. Dextera markets its C-Port and PAS-Port systems in the US via direct sales and in the EU through distributors. Century Medical is the exclusive distributor of PAS-Port systems in Japan. The company has a co-development agreement with Cook for a vascular access closure device. Dextera Surgical filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in December 2017.

Dicerna Pharmaceuticals is trying to discern a viable treatment for rare diseases. The company is developing four drug candidates that aim to treat rare inherited liver diseases and cancer. Its treatments are based on RNA interference (RNAi) a biological process where ribonucleic acid (RNA) molecules inhibit gene expression. Two of the drug candidates are being developed with Japanese pharmaceutical firm Kyowa Hakko Kirin (KHK). Formerly funded by Oxford Biosciences the company went public in early 2014 and raised $90 million in its IPO. It plans to use the proceeds to fund preclinical and clinical trials of its drug candidates.

DIRECTV takes television straight to the masses. The company operates the largest direct-to-home (DTH) digital TV service in the US ahead of #3 DISH Network and in direct competition with cable providers Comcast (#1 overall in the pay-TV market) and Time Warner. In addition to its roughly 20 million US customers the company counts about another 18 million subscribers in Latin America under the DIRECTV and SKY brands. Services include HD 3D and video-on-demand (VOD) programming. Phone companies such as Verizon and AT&T bundle the company's video services with their own traditional voice digital telephone and Internet packages. In 2014 DIRECTV and AT&T agreed to take their relationship a big step further. A deal for AT&T to buy DIRECTV is awaiting regulatory approval.

Disabled American Veterans (DAV) helps ex-military men and women fight personal battles. The nonprofit group strives to improve the quality of life for some 200,000 wounded veterans and their families by helping them navigate the US Department of Veterans Affairs system to obtain benefits. DAV also represents the political interests of veterans and provides various outreach and volunteer programs. The group which generates most of its revenue from tax-exempt contributions has about 1.2 million members and boasts some 110 offices in the US and Puerto Rico. DAV was formed in 1920 and chartered by Congress in 1932. The organization has partnered with large corporations to help veterans get assistance.

Dynamic Materials Corporation (DMC) has an explosive personality when it comes to working with metal. Formerly Explosive Fabricators the company uses explosives to metallurgically bond or "clad" metal plates; the process usually joins a corrosion-resistant alloy with carbon steel — metals that do not bond easily. Its clad metal plates are central to making heavy-duty pressure vessels and heat exchangers used in such industries as alternative energy and shipbuilding. Its Oilfield Products segment (operating as DYNAenergetics) makes explosive devices used to knock open oil and gas wells. Its AMK Welding unit machines and welds parts for commercial and military aircraft engines and power-generation turbines.

Dominion Resources Black Warrior Trust knows that when the wells get old financial warriors (aka shareholders) don't give up on the economic possibilities. The trust holds royalty interests in 532 natural gas producing wells and is set to terminate when these wells no longer produce enough gas to be profitable. The trust receives then distributes to shareholders 65% of the gross proceeds that Dominion Resources (via its subsidiary Dominion Black Warrior Basin) earns by selling the natural gas from its wells in the Black Warrior Basin of Alabama. In 2008 the trust had proved reserves of 22.6 billion cu. ft. of natural gas equivalent.

In this story the ugly duckling changes into DriveTime Automotive Group. Formerly known as Ugly Duckling the company is a used-car dealership chain that primarily targets low-income customers and those with less-than-stellar credit. To cater to subprime clients it's a "buy here-pay here" dealer meaning it finances and services car loans rather than using outside lenders. DriveTime operates more than 125 dealerships in 50 US metropolitan areas in 24 mostly southern and western states. The company provides customers with a comprehensive end-to-end solution for their automotive needs including the sale financing and maintenance of their vehicle.

Duncan Energy Partners (DEP) went deep and wide to make its money. The mid-stream operator a former spinoff from Enterprise Products Partners found stored and transported natural gas and other petrochemicals. Its operations included Mont Belvieu Caverns (with a 100-million-barrel capacity) the 1000-mile-long Acadian Gas pipeline in Louisiana propylene pipelines between Texas and Louisiana and a 297-mile-long intrastate natural gas liquids (NGLs) pipeline. It owned stakes in 9430 miles of natural gas pipelines and more than 1480 miles of NGL pipelines. Reconsolidating to boost its market share in 2011 Enterprise Products Partners bought the 40% of DEP it did not own for $2.4 billion.

Dynavax Technologies is trying to reprogram the way the body reacts to disease. The firm focuses on immuno-oncology research developing treatments for such diseases as metastatic melanoma and lung cancer. In early 2017 the company suspended manufacturing of former lead candidate HEPLISAV a hepatitis B vaccine. Other candidates in the company's pipeline include a universal flu vaccine that would cover a wider span of flu viruses than traditional flu vaccines as well as potential treatments for asthma hepatitis C and other autoimmune and inflammatory diseases. To share the expense and risk of development Dynavax has partnered with drugmakers including AstraZeneca and GlaxoSmithKline.

Power company Dynegy (a mashup of “dynamic energy”) has lost some of its dynamism in recent years but is looking to get some of that energy back as a reorganized company. Dynegy provides wholesale power capacity and other services to a broad range of customers (utilities cooperatives municipalities and other energy operations) in about a dozen states in the Midwest the Northeast Texas and on the West Coast. The company's power generation portfolio consists of about 50 power plants totaling about 27000 MW of generating capacity. More than 60% of its power generation is from natural gas. In 2017 Dynegy agreed to be bought by Vistra Energy for $1.74 billion in an all-stock deal.

Dynex Capital is a real estate investment trust (REIT) that invests in loans and fixed-income securities backed by single-family residential and commercial mortgage loans. The company isn't too picky investing in both investment-grade and subprime loans and adjustable-rate and fixed-rate loans. However citing competition and a “lack of compelling opportunities” in a volatile marketplace the company makes few new investments and has been slimming down its balance sheet by selling off assets including all of its manufactured home lending and delinquent property-tax receivable portfolios.

Some eagles soar through the skies but Eagle Bulk Shipping rides the waves. The company owns a fleet of 45 Handymax dry bulk carriers that it charters to customers typically on one- to three-year contracts. Most of its vessels are classified as Supramaxes and range in capacity from 50,000 to 60,000 deadweight tons (DWT). Overall the company's fleet has a carrying capacity of more than 1.1 million DWT. Cargo carried by charterers of Eagle Bulk Shipping's vessels includes cement coal fertilizer grain and iron ore. In mid-2014 Eagle Bulk Shipping filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection and emerged in October of the same year.

A year round effort that has nothing to do with Easter seals or flowers the National Easter Seal Society annually helps more than one million children and adults with disabilities through over 550 service centers in the US Puerto Rico Canada and Australia. The organization offers medical rehabilitation job training child care and adult day services. It began in 1907 as the National Society for Crippled Children and launched its first "seal" campaign around Easter in 1934. Supporters placed stickers or seals depicting the lily a symbol of renewal on letters and envelopes. The campaign was so successful and the symbol so associated with the organization that it changed its name in 1967.

Shareholders of Eastern American Natural Gas Trust know all about the clean-burning royalty-producing attributes of natural gas. The trust receives royalty interests from 650 producing natural gas wells in West Virginia and Pennsylvania and operated by Eastern American Energy. The trust distributes the royalties to its shareholders quarterly. As a grantor trust Eastern American Natural Gas Trust does not pay federal income taxes and the production on some of its wells qualifies for tax credits because the wells are located on hard-to-drill formations. The trust which in 2008 reported proved reserves of 12.9 billion cu. ft. of natural gas equivalent on its properties will be liquidated no later than 2013.

Reading is fundamental but funding is crucial to higher education. That's where Educational Funding of the South comes in. Known as Edsouth the not-for-profit public benefit corporation provides student loan funding by purchasing loans from originators. Nearly 500 lending institutions participate in one or more of Edsouth's educational loan programs. Edsouth is one of the nation's largest holders of student loans. The organization was founded in 1988. Formerly known as Volunteer State Student Funding Corporation it changed its name to Educational Funding of the South in 1996.

The fire in EGPI Firecreek's belly is for oil and gas exploration and production and traffic systems. Once dependent on the sale of private leisure and commercial vessels EGPI Firecreek has refocused on US oil and gas activities. The company produces and sells oil and natural gas from wells in Sweetwater County Wyoming and Knox County Texas. In 2009 in a diversification move EGPI Firecreek subsidiary Asian Ventures Corp. acquired M3 Lighting as the company expanded into light and traffic fixture manufacturing. It picked up communications technology firm Terra Telecom in 2010. That year it moved to expand its assets by agreeing to acquire Caddo International and by buying Arctic Solar Engineering in 2011

If Cortez had sought a wealth of water instead of streets of gold he might have headed for Eldorado Artesian Springs. The company bottles water from springs it owns in the foothills of the Rocky Mountains. About 70% of its sales come from home and office delivery of three and five gallon bottles of its natural spring water (and water cooler rentals); it also supplies smaller bottles to wholesalers and distributors for retail sale. Eldorado's water is distributed primarily in Colorado but also in regions of bordering states. In addition to its bottled water business the company owns and operates a resort on its property.

Pardon me .... is that the Electric Power Board (EPB) of Chattanooga? EPB keeps on choo-chooin' along by providing electricity to more than 167,410 residents and businesses. The utility (a non-profit agency of the City of Chattanooga) distributes energy in a 600 sq.-mi. area that includes greater Chattanooga as well as parts of surrounding counties in Georgia and Tennessee. It gets its wholesale power supply from the Tennessee Valley Authority. EPB also provides telecommunications (telephone and Internet) services to area homes and businesses through its EPB Fiber Optics unit.

The Electric Power Board of the Metropolitan Government of Nashville and Davidson County is a mouthful. Its operating name Nashville Electric Service (NES) sounds much better. And talking of sound the legendary "Nashville Sound" would be hard to hear without the resources of this power distributor which serves more than 360,000 customers in central Tennessee. NES is one of the largest government-owned utilities in the US. The company is required to purchase all its power from another government-owned operator the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA).

The Electric Power Research Institute (EPRI) knows there's more to electricity than putting a plug in a socket. From its headquarters in Palo Alto California the institute works to bring together investor-owned and government-owned utility companies as well as other industry representatives. EPRI operates as a not-for-profit research consortium that organizes and funds collaborative research. The organization identifies and works on issues related to electricity generation delivery and use including questions related to environmental protection. More than 10% of the organization's members are located outside the US. EPRI was founded in 1973.

ERCOT works to ensure that Texas power grid errors are caught before triggering a massive blackout. The Electric Reliability Council of Texas (ERCOT) is responsible for the reliable operation of 550 generation units (74,000 MW capacity) and a 40,500-mile power transmission system carrying about 85% of the state's electric load and serving 23 million customers. A member of the North American Electric Reliability Council ERCOT functions as the independent system operator for the region. It also administers financial settlement for the competitive wholesale bulk-power market and oversees customer switching for 6.7 million Texans who live in areas where they have a competitive choice of power supplier.

If cars can run on vegetable oil why can't palm oil clean clothes? Elevance Renewable Sciences figured it out. The chemical company is developing new applications to use plant-based oils as an eco-friendly alternative to petrochemicals. It plans to make chemicals from palm soy and rapeseed oil to use in household and personal care products as well as lubricants coatings and plastics. The company is building a biorefinery with Wilmar International in Indonesia to manufacture specialty chemicals oleochemicals and olefins. Currently it only makes vegetable wax candles sold under the NatureWax brand through a partnership with Cargill. In mid-2012 Elevance withdrew an initial public offering that was originally filed in 2011.

Ellie Mae might sound like Fannie Mae's cousin but they're just in related industries not bloodlines. The company provides automation software and operates the Ellie Mae Network that facilitates the residential mortgage origination and funding process. Its Encompass software suite combines loan origination with CRM (customer relationship management) to gather review and verify data from a single database. Other programs handle regulatory compliance appraisal and title services underwriting tax transcripts and document preparation and management. More than 136000 mortgage professionals use its software and network to process more than 3 million new mortgages an estimated 20% of its addressable market.

Mortgage-related assets are music to Ellington Financial's ears. The specialty finance company manages a portfolio of primarily non-agency residential mortgage-backed securities valued at more than $366 million. It also seeks to acquire other target assets such as residential whole mortgage loans commercial mortgage-backed securities commercial real estate debt and asset-backed securities. Riskier residential whole mortgage loans which are generally not guaranteed by the US government include subprime non-performing and sub-performing mortgage loans. Founded in 2007 Ellington Financial went public in 2010 in hopes of taking advantage of the current credit environment.

Ellington Financial LLC is ready to double its money. The investment firm formed Ellington Residential Mortgage REIT a real estate residential trust (REIT) to invest in agency residential mortgage-backed securities (Agency RMBS) or those guaranteed by federally sponsored entities Fannie Mae Freddie Mac and Ginnie Mae. (Agency RMBS carry less risk than privately issued mortgage securities.) The trust's portfolio is balanced out with about 10% non-Agency RMBS such as residential whole mortgage loans mortgage servicing rights (MSRs) and residential real properties. (Non-Agency RMBS carry more risk but might offer better returns.) The trust went public in 2013.

Elvis may have permanently left the building but his legacy is still taking care of business. Elvis Presley Enterprises (EPE) manages the late singer's estate and licenses his name likeness and songs for a variety of commercial purposes. Revenue mostly comes from operating Presley's Graceland mansion in Memphis. The company runs tours at Graceland and also operates the associated museum visitor's center and the Heartbreak Hotel. EPE was created in 1981 (four years after Presley's death) and was owned by The Elvis Presley Trust. EPE and The Elvis Presley Trust were wholly owned by Elvis' daughter Lisa Marie Presley until 2005 when she sold an 85% stake to entertainment investor Robert Sillerman's CKX.

Mobile medical equipment for rent? Emergent Group's got it. Through wholly-owned operating subsidiary PRI Medical Technologies the company rents mobile medical laser and surgical equipment in more than 15 states on a per-procedure basis to hospitals surgical care centers and doctors' offices. The equipment comes with operation and maintenance services from technical support personnel. The company serves both small health care providers that cannot afford to purchase expensive medical equipment for their facilities and larger hospitals that cannot justify buying certain equipment due to infrequent usage. Universal Hospital Services (UHS) acquired Emergent Group in 2011 in a transaction worth about $70 million.

If King Kong were around he'd be an executive at Empire State Realty Trust. The self-administered and self-managed real estate investment trust (REIT) formed in mid-2011 to take over a portfolio of high-profile Manhattan properties from its previous owners the Malkin family. Its flagship property is of course the 102-story Empire State Building but the trust also owns more than a dozen other buildings in the greater New York area totaling almost 7.7 million sq. ft. of office and retail space. In addition it plans to build a 340000-sq.-ft. building at the train station in Stamford Connecticut. Empire State Realty Trust went public in 2013 raising $929 million.

Endocyte develops receptor-targeted therapeutics (or "smart drugs") that aim to take out bad cells without causing collateral damage. Receptor-targeted therapeutics are a precision alternative to non-targeted cancer drugs that can destroy healthy cells. Founded in 1996 Endocyte uses its drug guidance system to deliver drugs including small molecule cancer drugs and RNA-based therapies directly to cancerous cells while leaving other cells unaffected. The firm has a pipeline of small molecule drug conjugates (SMDCs) in various stages of development. Its lead candidate Vynfinit (vintafolide) is designed to treat ovarian cancer.

You can't spell renewable without Enel. The North American arm of Italy's Enel Green Power S.p.A. owns and operates more than 70 renewable energy plants in 20 states and two Canadian provinces. Enel Green Power North America's plants have a capacity to generate 800 MW of power through wind hydropower biomass and geothermal energy. Its wind farms use Vestas and GE Energy turbines; its largest project the Smoky Hills Wind Farm in Kansas has 155 wind turbines that alone generate 250 MW of power (enough to power 85,000 homes for a year). Enel North America's only biomass plant is located in Quebec where it offsets 1 million tons of carbon dioxide by burning wood waste each year.

Desalination makes seawater potable; Energy Recovery (ERI) makes desalination practical. The company designs develops and manufactures energy recovery devices used in sea water reverse osmosis (SWRO) desalination plants. The SWRO process is energy intensive using high pressure to drive salt water through membranes to produce fresh water. The company's main product the PX Pressure Exchanger helps recapture and recycle up to 98% of the energy available in the high-pressure reject stream a by-product of the SWRO process. The PX can reduce the energy consumption of a desalination plant by up to 60% compared with a plant lacking an energy recovery device. Subsidiary Pump Engineering also makes high pressure pumps.

EnerNOC knocks on the door of large energy customers and kindly asks them to dim the lights. Not literally of course but the company has added its technology to utility companies' traditional demand response model. Rather than manually calling up their largest end users EnerNOC's Network Operations Center (NOC) through its DemandSMART program remotely monitors their customers' energy assets and has the capability to adjust their electrical use. It caters to commercial industrial and technological educational and other institutional organizations as well as electric power grid operators and utilities. EnerNOC has operations around the world.

Enphase Energy is ready to usher in a new phase of solar power. The company makes all-in-one solar panel systems for residential and commercial use in the US and Canada. Unlike typical small-scale photovoltaic systems Enphase's solar modules are connected on a microinverter system where each panel has its own inverter that converts the sun's rays into electricity. The company claims its microinverter technology is more energy efficient than having all the panels hooked up to one big inverter. Enphase Energy sells its solar power systems to a network of thousands of distributors.

Aspen Exploration (which does business as ENSERVCO) is a leading provider of fluid-related services to the oil and gas production industry in the US. In 2008 Aspen Exploration announced that because of high expenses and rising debt it was pursuing strategic alternatives and subsequently sold its exploration and production oil and gas assets. In 2010 the shell company merged with oilfield services provider Dillco Fluid Service and reorganized under the ENSERVCO brand name. Its two operating subsidiaries (Dillco Fluid Services and Heat Wave Hot Oil) operate a fleet of 200 vehicles. Services include acidizing water hauling and disposal and well-site construction.

ZBB Energy makes and sells energy storage systems designed to store surplus energy for use at times when energy demand is higher than the utility company (or other generator) can provide. Its products — based on the company's zinc-bromine battery technology — also provide a source of power protection from voltage current or frequency deviations that can cause brownouts or power outages. While ZBB Energy markets its products primarily to utility companies and renewable energy generators in Australia China Europe and North America it has had only one customer to date the California Energy Commission. ZBB Energy operates one manufacturing facility in Menomonee Falls Wisconsin.

Entergy is into energy. The integrated utility holding company's subsidiaries distribute electricity to some 2.9 million customers in four southern states (Arkansas Louisiana Mississippi and Texas) and provide natural gas to about 200000 customers in Louisiana. The company has interests in regulated and non-regulated power plants in North America that have a combined generating capacity of about 30000 MW. Entergy is also one of the largest nuclear power generators in the US (nearly 9000 MW). The company's regulated utilities have little retail competition as they are deemed by state regulators as the sole providers of electricity in their service areas.

Enzon Pharmaceuticals has PEGged its future on researching ways to fight cancer. The company has developed compounds using its PEGylation and Locked Nucleic Acid (LNA) technology platforms to improve the performance and deliverability of existing cancer drugs. PEGylation involves attaching polyethylene glycol (PEG) to a drug compound to make it more effective and less toxic for patients. However in 2012 Enzon suspended clinical efforts and began reviewing strategic options; in 2013 it refocused on minimizing expenses and maximizing royalty revenue returns.

Epizyme is taking on the epic task of writing the epitaph for genetically derived cancer. A clinical-stage biopharmaceutical company Epizyme targets cancer-causing genes by designing the therapeutics to inhibit them. It uses a highly personalized approach to choose the cancers the company contends with and the patients it selects. Epizyme has made the most progress with treatments for a leukemia and for a non-Hodgkin lymphoma. It is also working with an affiliate of GlaxoSmithKline on the development of three other enzyme inhibitors. Founded in 2007 the company went public in 2013.

It pays for EPL Oil & Gas (formerly Energy Partners) to have friends in the oil and gas business. The independent explorer and producer focuses on the waters of the Gulf of Mexico off the Gulf Coast. It partners with big oil companies to explore for reserves on properties the majors have left behind; EPL Oil & Gas earns an interest in the new reserves and production. The company has grown through a combination of exploration exploitation and development drilling as well as strategic acquisitions of oil and natural gas fields. It changed its corporate name in 2012 to reflect its oil and gas focus.

Erie Indemnity may be near a lake but it prefers pools. Founded in 1925 as an auto insurer it now provides management services that relate to the sales underwriting and issuance of policies of one customer: Erie Insurance Exchange. The Exchange is a reciprocal insurance exchange that pools the underwriting of several property/casualty insurance firms. It offers coverage ranging from homeowners to boat policies through independent representatives with a reach that extends to a dozen states east of the Mississippi River. Erie Indemnity charges a management fee of 25% of all premiums written or assumed by the Exchange.

eScreen tests for a full range of drugs and e-delivers the results. The company provides drug testing products and services to occupational health facilities throughout the US. eScreen's products are primarily used for pre-employment drug testing. Sample collection takes place at its nationwide network of about 2600 contracted clinics that are equipped with eScreen's products and technology. Samples are collected in an eCup screening device optically scanned on site by the eReader and negative results are electronically reported directly to employers within minutes. Positive results are sent on for further testing before being reported. eScreen was acquired by diagnostics firm Alere in 2012.

You couldn't build an entire jet just from Esterline Technologies products but it would hard to fly one without them. The aerospace company's offerings extend from the cockpit to electrical subsystems to materials inside and outside aircraft. It makes avionics that control and communicate sensors and power switching devices that monitor conditions and materials necessary for commercial and military aircraft. Esterline sells mostly to the US government particularly the Department of Defense and aircraft manufacturers. About a fifth of sales come from high-end non-aerospace products. There can be as much as $1 million worth of Esterline products in jet fighters and airliners.
