Guide to Stained Glass for Lutheran Churches

Finding, selecting and buying the right stained glass for your Lutheran church

While stained glass is used in almost all Christian denominations, this brief guide will discuss stained glass for the Lutheran Church.

A Silent Sermon

Imagine your church with new stained glass windows. As the light filters through the stained glass images the brilliantly colored and textured windows express symbolically the essence of the message. Since the earliest days of the Church, stained glass has been used in Lutheran churches. Martin Luther appreciated art and valued its use as an aid to religious devotion. In keeping with those teachings, the Lutheran Church has a long history of beautiful religious art and imagery.

These stained glass windows serve to illustrate the doctrines, characters, and events found in the scriptures and in the history of the Church.

▶ The Luther Rose in Stained Glass

Luther's seal (sometimes called Luther's rose) is the most widely known symbol of Lutheranism.

It dates to 1520, when the printers asked Luther to tell them what symbol they could put on publications to indicate they were authorized publications of Luther's works. Luther described the seal and created a personal symbol to summarize his faith. The seal features a cross on a red heart set in a white rose. More images of symbolic stained glass.
