Teaching Comprehension With Questioning Strategies That Motivate Middle School Readers

By Larry Lewin

Description

Literacy expert Larry Lewin shares 12 questioning strategies that boost students' critical thinking and comprehension during and after reading.

Easy to integrate into reading assignments in any content-area, these classroom-tested techniques help students engage in a dialogue with the text they're reading, improve their recall and understanding, and build a strong sense of purpose for reading.

Strategies are scaffolded to provide plenty of instructional support. Students first learn to phrase questions to serve specific reading purposes, such as gathering information, making predictions, and responding to author bias.

As they become more skilled at questioning their texts, students move on to more advanced techniques, such as QAR (Question-Answer Relationship) and QtA (Questioning the Author), which Lewin has specially adapted for middle-school students.

Other features include teacher-student exchanges that demonstrate the strategies in action, step-by-step lessons, student work samples, and assessment ideas.

Essential Strategies For Word Study

By Timothy Rasinski and Jerry Zutell

Description

Defining word study as the direct exploration and analysis of words - through phonics, vocabulary, and spelling instruction - the authors maintain that it is most effective when sound, spelling, and meaning are examined simultaneously.

To that end, they offer thirty engaging activities divided into three sections: exploring word structure, examining word meanings, and extending word learning. In this way, word study becomes a fascinating part of the overarching language arts curriculum.

Students learn all about words, inside and out, as they sort and spell, harvest and map, define and design, investigate and analyze, decode and use words—all toward the aim of becoming more effective and efficient readers and writers.

Guiding K–3 Writers To Independence

By Patricia L. Scharer and Gay Su Pinnell

Description

What's the best way to support our youngest writers in classrooms? In this breakthrough book, internationally respected literacy researchers Gay Pinnell and Pat Scharer introduce us to community writing, which centers on the relationship between group writing such as shared and interactive writing and children's own independent writing development.

At the heart of community writing is rich talk about all aspects of the writing process, as well as several other key essentials. The book shows you:

- How to help your young writers “own” their topics; children write best when their writing is based on authentic topics of their choice—ideas, stories and events that are real for them.
- How to use quality children's literature to support your teaching. The authors demonstrate the importance of reading quality books to children in ways that invite children's thoughts, questions and observations before, during and after the reading. Conversations about books help children learn about the writer's craft.
- How to teach writing all day long - beyond the writer's workshop that teaches children learn about writing in a range of instructional contexts each day.
