A City with Global Goals Part I

In September 2015 world leaders gathered at the United Nations to commit to end extreme poverty, fight inequality and injustice and mitigate climate change over the next 15 years. These global goals are universal and apply to all countries, including the United States. As attention turns to the question of how countries will achieve these ambitious targets, New York City's innovative long-term planning offers one example of how cities can contribute.

The following pages are designed to illustrate the connections between the global Sustainable Development Goals and the visions, goals, initiatives and targets that form One New York: The Plan for a Just and Strong City. We hope this helps to begin a conversation.

Launched on April 22, 2015, One New York: The Plan for a Just and Strong City (OneNYC) is an innovative blueprint for the City's future that focuses on four interdependent visions: growth, equity, sustainability and resiliency.

GLOBAL VISION | URBAN ACTION

A City with Global Goals Part II

In September 2015 world leaders gathered at the United Nations to commit to a set of goals to end extreme poverty, fight inequality and injustice and mitigate climate change over the next 15 years. These global goals are universal and apply to all countries, including the United States. In March 2016, the United Nations unveiled the targets and roadmap to achieve these global goals. As attention turns to the question of how countries will achieve these ambitious targets, New York City's innovative long-term planning offers one example of how cities can contribute.

A City with Global Goals, produced by the Mayor's Office for International Affairs, illustrates the connections between the global Sustainable Development Goals and the visions, goals, initiatives and targets that form Mayor Bill de Blasio's One New York: The Plan for a Just and Strong City.

The first part, published in December 2015, uses NYC's local development strategy as a point of departure. The second part, published in April 2016, switches the focus and begins the comparison with the Sustainable Development Goals. We chose to provide perspectives from both angles so that no matter the reader's engagement, the synergies between the two groundbreaking plans are clear.

We hope these examples of the relationships between global and local planning, models and goals help to begin a conversation on local implementation of the global goals.

Note: Goal 17 and the global partnership is a critical component of the success of the Sustainable Development Goals. While cross-sectoral partnerships are the core of implementation, A City with Global Goals does not explicitly incorporate this analysis. Equally, A City with Global Goals includes only targets related to substantive goals, and does not include targets related to the "means of implementation".

REVITALIZE THE GLOBAL PARTNERSHIP FOR SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

Objective: A successful sustainable development agenda requires partnerships between governments, the private sector and civil society. These inclusive partnerships built upon principles and values, a shared vision, and shared goals that place people and the planet at the center, are needed at the global, regional, national and local level.

Urgent action is needed to mobilize, redirect and unlock the transformative power of trillions of dollars of private resources to deliver on sustainable development objectives. Long-term investments, including foreign direct investment, are needed in critical sectors, especially in developing countries. These include sustainable energy, infrastructure and transport, as well as information and communications technologies. The public sector will need to set a clear direction. Review and monitoring frameworks, regulations and incentive structures that enable such investments must be retooled to attract investments and reinforce sustainable development. National oversight mechanisms such as supreme audit institutions and oversight functions by legislatures should be strengthened.

Note: While Goal 17 and the global partnership is a critical component of the success of the Sustainable Development Goals, A City with Global Goals does not incorporate an analysis of the connections between Goal 17 and OneNYC given the absence of a comparable vision contained within OneNYC. Equally, A City with Global Goals includes only targets related to substantive goals, and does not include targets related to the “means of implementation”.
