What is the Tourism Export Council of New Zealand?

The Tourism Export Council of New Zealand is a trade association that has represented the interests of inbound tourism since 1971. Formerly known as ITOC (Inbound Tour Operators Council) the organisation rebranded in 2012 to assist mainstream New Zealand and government agencies to understand that tourism is a key export industry.

What do we do & who do we represent?

The Tourism Export Council's focus is to build long term business relationships with distribution networks in New Zealand and offshore. The relationship with product suppliers in New Zealand and offshore wholesalers is integral to the country's continued growth as a visitor destination.

Member categories include:

- Inbound member - inbound tour operators (ITO's)
- Allied member - attraction, activity, accommodation, transport and tourism service suppliers

Examples of the allied membership include:

- Attraction – Milford Sound, SkyTower, Te Papa Museum
- Activities – Jetboating, Whalewatch, Maori Culture show
- Accommodation – hotels, luxury lodges, backpackers
- Transport – airlines, bus & coaches, sea transport, shuttles
- Tourism services – Regional Tourism Organisations (RTO's) digital & marketing companies, education & tourism agencies eg. DOC, Service IQ, Qualmark, AA Tourism, BTM Marketing, ReserveGroup

Why is tourism considered an export industry?

Tourism, like agriculture is one of New Zealand's biggest income earners. Both are export industries because they bring in foreign dollars to New Zealand. With agriculture, you grow an apple, send it offshore and a foreigner eats it. A clear pathway of a New Zealand product consumed or purchased by someone overseas.

Tourism works slightly differently:

- The product is still developed in NZ (just like the apple)
- It is sold offshore (like the apple)
- It is purchased by a foreigner (again like the apple)
- BUT it is experienced in NZ and therein lies the difference.

IRD's definition of an export sector is a product or service that is purchased by a non-resident of New Zealand. It is important that people understand tourism's role in bringing in foreign earnings to New Zealand and its contribution to the economy as an export industry.

“PLANNING FOR INBOUND SUCCESS”

A GUIDE ON HOW TO WORK WITH NEW ZEALAND INBOUND TOUR OPERATORS

The Tourism Export Council of New Zealand has produced a guide on how to work with inbound tour operators. CEO Lesley Immink says that for too long ‘tourism and travel distribution’ has been misunderstood by the industry with the word “commission” unfairly being misrepresented.

Commission should be viewed as an investment to generate sales, not as a cost to the business and pricing of product with an understanding of distribution channels is crucial for those operators wishing to work with international visitors.

The “Planning for Inbound Success” manual is designed to provide operators with the basic tools, knowledge and key contacts needed to enter the export tourism market.

This manual contains advice on how to:

- Understand the travel distribution system
- Research international markets to establish who will use your products
- Recognise the different styles of inbound travellers
- Information on pricing your product and working with international trade
- Key contacts and links for better access to tourism data and research

The “Planning for Inbound Success” manual is available free in an ‘e’ pdf version to Tourism Export Council members, and a small fee for a printed hard copy version.

Contact info@tourismexportcouncil.org.nz or phone 04 495 0810 for more information.
