Lee Ann Fujii Book Award 2020

Winner:

Milli Lake, Strong NGOs and Weak States: Pursuing Gender Justice in the Democratic Republic of Congo and South Africa (Cambridge University Press, 2018)

Honorable Mention:

Sa’ed Atshan, Queer Palestine and the Empire of Critique (Stanford University Press, 2020)

In 2016, Lee Ann Fujii gave the luncheon lecture at ISA-NE. In her lecture, she called for greater diversity and representation in the discipline of IR, and emphasized the need for mentorship, support, and recognition of scholarship in this vein. After her passing in 2018, this book award was established to recognize the best book published in the previous two calendar years that significantly advances issues of diversity in the discipline, whether through topical focus or authorship. In this vein, the award gives preference to scholars from underrepresented communities in IR: scholars from the Global South, LGBTQ scholars, and women. Award recipients should fulfill Lee Ann's call for diversity and representation in the discipline in meaningful ways.

A committee, made up of one representative each from ISA-Northeast, the LGBTQA Caucus, the Women's Caucus, the Committee on Diversity and Representation, the Global South Caucus, and the Committee on the Status of the Global South, considered a slate of excellent books that were nominated for the award this year.

In this inaugural year of the Lee Ann Fujii Book Award, the committee took particularly seriously the motivations for honoring Lee Ann's memory. Lee Ann was a tireless advocate for diversity and mentorship in the discipline, and her approach to research ethics was renowned in the field.

This year's winner, Milli Lake's book Strong NGOs and Weak States: Pursuing Gender Justice in the Democratic Republic of Congo and South Africa (Cambridge University Press, 2018), exemplifies Lee Ann's call for reflexivity and diversity in the discipline. Lake compares and contrasts judicial accountability for sexual violence in South Africa and Democratic Republic of Congo, arguing that because DRC is a weaker state, non-governmental groups have been able to have a greater impact in terms of gender justice. It draws on a robust set of field work, with a deep appreciation of the ethical dilemmas at play in interviewing survivors of sexual violence and the doctrine of do no harm. Her approach is grounded in reflexive, qualitative, and deeply interpretivist research methods, which the committee agreed reminded us of Lee Ann Fujii's own work and message. Lake's book gives us access to greater understandings about diversity in IR, and also models what this practice looks like in the context of research ethics.

We are also pleased to recognize as an honorable mention Sa'ed Atshan's book Queer Palestine and the Empire of Critique (Stanford University Press, 2020). Atshan's book, an autoethnography of queer Palestine, is methodologically impeccable, incorporating academic work and personal positioning. He advances a philosophy of critique centered on the everyday material lives of people, that is both complex and masterfully written. He makes a bold and thought-provoking argument—one that speaks to social justice activists as well as academics.
