European Integration
Summer School 2020

ESTABLISHED 1990

UNIVERSITY OF AGDER

DEPARTMENT OF POLITICAL SCIENCE AND MANAGEMENT

CENTRE FOR EUROPEAN STUDIES

KRISTIANSAND, NORWAY

Kjære studenter,

Dear students!

Welcome to the European Integration Summer School 2020!

Established in 1990, we are going to celebrate 30 years of European Integration Summer School (in short: EISS) at our University. What started in the late 1980s – partly as an exercise to foster the partnerships between the German city of Münster, the French city of Orléans and Kristiansand –, has now evolved into one of the flagships of UiA.

Over time, it has also become a long summer school as the European Voice wrote in an article in 2014: During three or six weeks – depending on whether you are going to opt for just one or both courses taught during the summer – we are going to study one of the most fascinating and dynamic phenomena in contemporary political life: the European Union as well as its underpinning process of European integration. It seems, however, that the process of European integration has run out of steam – at least to some extent – and has now reached a critical juncture facing numerous internal and external challenges. What does this hold for the future political order of the European continent? Does the EU's architecture harness the Union just well enough to adjust to these challenges? Are we perhaps at the brink of an 'ever more differentiated' if not an 'ever looser' European Union after all? (Schimmelfennig and Winzen 2019) These are just some of the questions that we are going to address at the European Integration Summer School in Kristiansand this year (course 2) – after immersing ourselves in the more foundational aspects of European integration, such as the history, institutions and core policies of the EU (course 1). You will learn about historical and contemporary political processes of European integration that can explain some of the challenges both the EU and Europe are confronted with today.

As you can already see, EISS has been divided into two stand-alone courses during summer, complemented by a third course in the autumn term (August-December 2019). The first course paves the ground by dealing with particular aspects of the 'History, Institutions, and Politics of European Integration' in a broad and generic perspective. The second course – 'Current Issues in the European Union' – builds on the first one and focuses on a more particular topic: this year it explores 'The European Union in Crisis'. Finally, the last course, offered during the fall term this year, is a (primarily) skype- and web-based paper-writing course where you explore any of the topics of one of the two summer courses in more depth.

At the beginning of June, you will have access to the reading material, e.g. via our online teaching tool canvas. In order to prepare for the summer school, we would recommend that you have a look at any of the following books: John McCormick, Understanding the European Union. A Concise Introduction, Palgrave Macmillan, 2014 or Michelle Cini and Nieves Pérez-Solórzano Borragán, European Union Politics, Oxford University Press, 2019.

Although you are likely to be facing a tough summer in terms of learning and study, we can also promise you a most fruitful and fantastic time in Kristiansand. The 'Sørland' region has a reputation as the coolest Côte d'Azur. If the weather is good, we will make use of the beautiful campus at University of Agder, visit the beaches and seaside islands and explore Southern Norway's famous landmark signature 'Preikestolen' – when a hard day's work is over.

We are looking forward to working with you!
