Dear Investor,

Imagine holding a secret to gold wealth that could easily turn $5,000 into $30,000 in 18 months or less.

That's just what I'm offering you right now.

A legendary mountain of gold known for centuries as a deposit of immense wealth was passed over by the big mining companies.

They walked away from a potential wealth of 16 million ounces of gold—an estimated $8.8 BILLION in value.

Why?

Big mining companies stayed away from this mountain because for years the region was unstable. The fear of having their operations disrupted by drug lords or Marxist rebels was not in their interest.

Furthermore, there was fear that the legendary mountain was just that, a legend. Perhaps the wealth would keep peasant miners happy, but not a huge mining operation with tremendous overheads and invested capital. In the end, they stayed away.

But one junior gold saw the potential. With vast experience in Latin America, knowledge of the local mining culture and even connections to the government—this one company saw a fortune waiting to be claimed.

In fact, they now have the talent, resources and land leases in place to make investors like you as much as

And I'm forecasting that early investors could see an investment grow from $5,000 to $30,000 once the gold starts coming out of this legendary mountain.

This stock cannot be ignored when you look closely at its leadership, its planning, its identified (and rapidly expanding) gold resources and its exquisite timing as the price of gold works its way skyward.

I've spotted many winning mining stocks in my time. But this junior gold mining company, which is still flying below the radar, could surpass them all.

BIG ANNOUNCEMENT FROM IBBOTSON

Prestigious investment firm announces: "Precious metals belong in every portfolio"

For decades the investment establishment has turned up its nose at gold and other precious metals investments, slamming gold at every opportunity and warning investors about the perils of owning it.

But last June, the prestigious investment research firm of Ibbotson Associates released a blockbuster study confirming what precious metals investors have always known:

Having gold, silver and platinum in your portfolio improves its risk-return characteristics

In Ibbotson's own words...

"Asset allocations that included precious metals have better risk-adjusted performance than asset allocations without precious metals."

For a company like Ibbotson, that's the equivalent of an all-out buy signal.

For their study, Ibbotson created their own Precious Metals Index to compare to the performance of other assets. Here's what they found:

- ❖ The index outperformed both cash and inflation over the 33 years studied—from February 1971 to December 2004. And the overall performance was closer to the fixed-income asset classes.
- ❖ Precious metals were the top-performing asset class from May 1973 to August 1984—the longest winning streak of any asset class.
- ❖ Not surprisingly, the study proved conclusively that, in Ibbotson's words, "precious metals provided a substantial hedge against inflation."

- ❖ Large cap U.S. stocks—the kind most Americans put most of their faith in—experienced negative returns for 9 of the 33 years studied. It was during those years that it was most important to have precious metals in your portfolio.

The conclusion of this study is crystal clear: If you don't already have gold and other precious metals in your portfolio, you need to get out and buy some.

How much? The study recommends a 7.1% allocation for conservative investors, 12.5% for moderate investors and 15.7% for aggressive investors.

To discover how you can prosper from precious metals and more when the time is right, read my Special Report Kenneth Coleman's Top Investment Strategies. It's a $29 value—yours FREE when you subscribe for 2 years to my Investment Tracker newsletter. See page 20 for details.

How high could Colombia Goldfields go?

Colombia Goldfields is a little-known stock that's still available at bargain-basement prices. But when its potential 16 million ounce gold discovery is confirmed and investors come pouring into the stock, the sky's the limit for how much money you could make. Every $5,000 you invest today could be worth $30,000 or even more within the next 2 years.

I've sent you, I'll walk you through the essentials as to why I believe this stock should be on the lips of every TV pundit next year. But by then it will be too late.

That's why I am recommending Colombia Goldfields (OTCBB: CGDF) as my #1 junior gold stock for 2006.

Colombia Goldfields is a junior gold company with political connections and influences that go all the way to the Colombian presidency.

In fact, the leadership of Colombia Goldfields is partly responsible for creating Colombia's mining policy and legislation. And, thanks to a strong central government, Colombia is no longer home to drug lords and guerrillas. More on this in a moment, but first, let's visit a legendary mountain of gold and its rich history.

An estimated 16 million ounces of gold

Why am I so positive about this one junior gold? What makes me so sure? Why am I enthusiastically recommending it to my subscribers...and you?

It comes down to a place called Marmato Mountain—Colombia's legendary Mountain of Gold—perhaps the most famous mountain in South America.

Believe it or not, Marmato Mountain has been producing gold for more than 500 years. The mountain and surrounding area have produced so much gold that the slopes of Mount Marmato were once dubbed "the gift of the gods."

In fact, the mountain's reputation for proven gold production was so good that the British government actually accepted the peak as a pledge against funding needed for Colombia's war of independence against Spain in 1810.

It was a good bet by the British, because, as you'll see in a moment, Marmato Mountain may hold more than 16 million ounces of gold—which would make it one of the largest undeveloped gold deposits in the world.

And when Colombia Goldfields taps into this wealth, you could see your investment of $5,000 turn into $30,000 in just 18 months. Here are more reasons why...

A mountain virtually untouched by modern technology

The only people who have ever mined Marmato are local peasants, who—using the most primitive methods imaginable—have scratched out a subsistence living by simply following visible veins of gold as deep into the mountain as possible.

In the past, big mining companies were resistant to mining

Latin America's new center of peace and prosperity

Many Americans tend to think of South America as one big backward continent, where farming predominates and almost every country is overrun by drug lords and terrorists.

But the reality is different—especially when it comes to Colombia. The country has an undeserved reputation as being lawless and immersed in chaos.

Tradition of democracy

Colombia has a long tradition of democracy going back more than 100 years. Better still for your investment...

- ❖ Property rights are soundly protected.
- ❖ The government fully supports foreign investment.
- ❖ Notorious drug lords and guerrillas have been run out of the country.

And when President Alvaro Uribe is seeking ideas, he doesn't turn to Karl Marx but instead to South America's leading free-market think tank, the Institute for Liberty and Democracy.

Colombia is a safe and progressive nation

You may also be surprised to discover that...

- ❖ Colombia's literacy rate is an astonishing 93% in urban areas and 67% in rural areas.
- ❖ The country's Gross Domestic Product (GDP) is $83 billion, and the economy is growing at more than 4% a year.
- ❖ Despite the stereotypes, agriculture actually makes up just 13% of Colombia's GDP, with manufacturing making up 14.3% and financial services, 17.6%

In other words, Colombia is actually a better, safer place to invest than you ever thought possible.

Finding hidden opportunities, even in Colombia, is what I am good at. around Marmato Mountain—driven off by civil unrest because the government had abandoned the region to Marxist guerrillas.

But one company did manage to complete a drilling program that concluded that the mountain held between 1.07 and 5.65 grams of gold per ton of dirt and rock. It may not sound like much, but it works out to a potential discovery of 16 million ounces of gold.

At today's prices, that's skyward of $8.8 BILLION in gold—146 times Colombia Goldfields' current market value.

Now you see why I believe you have the potential to make at least 6 times your investment or more when you make the move to buy stock in Colombia Goldfields.

Peace and prosperity around Marmato Mountain mean wealth for you Perception without investigation leaves many investors overlooking a valuable opportunity. Colombia Goldfields is no exception.

The company's primary property is located in Colombia. And believe me, when I first heard about the Colombia connection, I was tempted to pass on the stock right then and there—without checking it out any further.

My perception was that Colombia is a country under siege from drug lords and Marxist guerillas...a country on the verge of anarchy, where neither person nor property is safe...a country you'd have to be insane to visit or invest in.

I was TOTALLY WRONG. My

This rich vein of gold is evidence of Marmato's proven reserves that run deep and abundant through this legendary mountain.

perception was based on TV, movies and Colombia's historical past. The reality is that Colombia is in a period of extended peace and prosperity—thanks in part to the efforts of one man.

BREAKING NEWS: AUGUST 4, 2005

Colombia's vote of confidence in business and investment from President George W. Bush

In his speech to propose a $463 million support package for Colombia, President George W. Bush had these words to say:

"President Uribe's leadership and the courage of the Colombian people are creating a bright future for Colombia. The Colombian government implemented a comprehensive strategy, known as Plan Colombia, to reduce the illegal drug trade, revitalize Colombia's economy, strengthen its democratic institutions and improve the security of its people. The United States provided critical assistance for Plan Colombia, and the plan is producing results.

"Violent crime in Colombia is at its lowest level in 16 years. Since 2002, murders, kidnappings and terrorist acts in Colombia have all declined significantly. Colombia is also making great progress in reforming its justice system. These gains in security and the rule of law are helping the Colombian economy grow by more than 4% last year. And as Colombia has improved its security and economy, it has also emerged as a leader in our hemisphere.

"Colombia shares our commitment to advancing economic growth, trade and democracy in the Americas."

The leadership of Colombia Goldfields saw the early signs of peace and prosperity in Colombia as an opportunity. It's even harder to find profit potential in the midst of crisis.

The drug lords have been driven from the country or hunted down and the Marxists have lost their bite, choosing to surrender or open peaceful negotiations.

Law and order have been restored...the free market has made a huge comeback...property rights are fiercely protected...and the economy is booming at a rapid clip.

Colombia Goldfields found an opportunity when many companies stuck to their perceptions. The result is a mountain of gold waiting to be claimed. And if you invest now you could also reap the rewards.

Here's the one man you might be thanking for your next successful gold investment...

FORECAST #1

The biggest profits over the next 24 months will be made in gold stocks

Why am I so bullish on gold? Gold is the classic investment people turn to in times of trouble, grave uncertainty, geopolitical crisis, a troubled economy and war. The kind of times we're living in right now.

First, take a look at the news. No matter what your position is on the war, public confidence in the War on Terrorism is down and fear of al-Qaeda is up.

Iraq is at a crossroads that may lead to full-blown civil war, leaving U.S. troops in the middle of a sectarian feud that goes back generations.

To top it all off, there is the growing danger of a nuclear Iran and a leadership that is not afraid to speak in apocalyptic terms.

Gold is already reacting to these forces and is rising steadily. Should any of these situations turn for the worse, you'll see a stampede into gold the likes of which we've never seen before.

Inflation is overdue

Second, it's been a while since the Fed began cutting interest rates in January 2001. In other words, price inflation is long overdue and it's going to strike with a vengeance. Gas prices at the pump are one indicator we've been seeing.

With the Fed still pumping money into the system we will see prices going up everywhere. And when inflation hits, savvy investors will protect themselves with gold.

Big deficits, too

Finally, big spending and big deficits mean big things for gold. Foreign investors are worried about our soaring budget deficits. Since his presidency began, President Bush has increased spending, driving the deficit to record levels.

And, whether you think deficits matter or not, international investors are spooked. In fact, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) has warned that U.S. budget deficits are a threat to the global economy.

Don't get me wrong. I'm not predicting economic collapse, hyperinflation or anything close to it. My point is that the dollar is getting weaker, the deficit is getting bigger—and now is the time to protect yourself with gold.

Also, keep in mind that gold bullion will do very well but junior mining stocks will be the big winner with the potential of pulling down profits up to 10 times better than what you'd earn investing in bullion.

To learn more about sound investment strategies at the right time, read my Special Report Kenneth Coleman's Top Investment Strategies. It's a $29 value—yours FREE when you subscribe for 2 years to my Investment Tracker newsletter. For details, see page 20.

BEFORE work could ever begin, Colombia Goldfields had to ensure the care of families who have been mining Marmato for generations. These are the tin-roof shanties they used to live in.

peace, prosperity, and stability.

Nobody thought he could do it, and most figured he'd wind up dead if he tried. But President Uribe proved the naysayers wrong, and Colombia has been transformed in ways no one ever thought possible.

And, look at this. Unlike Latin America's long line of tinhorn dictators and thugs, President Uribe recognizes and appreciates the value and importance of foreign investment in Colombia's future prosperity.

This is not just diplomatic talk. The Colombian government is actively promoting foreign investment and has passed laws protecting those investments—including a new set of mining laws modeled on those of the United States and Canada.

Better still, acclaimed attorney Dr. Hernando Molina Velez, who was instrumental in drafting these new Colombian mining laws, now sits on Colombia Goldfields' board of directors—and is a close personal friend of President Uribe.

The bottom line: Colombia is at last open for business. Companies from all over the world are rushing in to capitalize on the opportunity. Already more than 400 foreign companies have investments in Colombia—and more will come as word spreads that things have

Newsworthy Notes

SERIOUS INFLATION ON THE HORIZON

The Fed, gold and you

Contrary to popular belief, the Federal Reserve doesn't smooth out the economy's ups and downs, it causes them!

When the government wants a boom, the money supply is amped up and interest rates fall. The new money and the lowered interest rates stimulate the economy and create the "boom" part of the cycle.

But there's the problem. This stimulus is artificial—and much of the resulting business expansion cannot be sustained. At some point the Fed must cut back or risk serious price inflation. As the money supply tightens, economic activity slows, businesses cut back and the bust sets in.

The terrible truth about the Federal Reserve

This might not be so bad if the Fed actually did a decent job of managing the economy. But its track record is terrible. Nothing the Fed did could stave off the frightening recession and stock market collapse of the early '70s.

By the late '70s, Federal Reserve Policy led us to double-digit inflation—inflation that was wrung out of the economy by the deep recession of the early '80s.

But remember what happened to the price of gold at that time? The price shot to over $800 an ounce. Seeing monetary policy as an indicator for gold investment is just being smart. But look what's on the horizon.

The Fed single-handedly killed the stock market boom of the '90s by boosting interest rates because it thought the economy was becoming overheated. And now, over the last few years, it has increased the money supply at an alarming rate—something that caused the dollar to collapse and will ultimately lead to price inflation here in the United States and record prices for gold.

A weak dollar and soaring inflation mean good times are ahead for gold. To discover how you can take advantage of sound strategies for buying and selling at just the right time, read my Special Report Kenneth Coleman's Top Investment Strategies. changed for good.

But for mining companies that didn't see the opportunity in Colombia, it's too late. Marmato Mountain is taken. And because of Colombia Goldfields' foresight, you could turn your $5,000 investment into $30,000 in 18 months or less.

What's more...the government of Colombia is actually eager to help Colombia Goldfields succeed. Here's why...

Partnership with the government of Colombia spells profits for you

One of the great things about Colombia Goldfields is that the Colombian government is actually working to see this junior gold company succeed.

That's because the government wants Marmato Mountain cleaned up. You see, the primitive methods used by the peasant miners of the mountain are causing a great deal of damage to the environment.

The miners use a cyanide solution to leech gold from the rock they take from the mountain. And much of this cyanide flows straight into the Cauca River, the second-largest water resource in the country.

Over two-thirds of Colombia's 47 million people live around the

You'll maximize your profits with my #1 junior gold pick for 2006—Colombia Goldfields

Over the years, I've analyzed and recommended dozens of junior mining stocks with great success. In fact, my subscribers have earned profits of over 1,000% and more on my confident recommendations using my Money Flow Analysis system.

As great as those returns have been, I am expecting even better days ahead with subscribers who take advantage of my Colombia Goldfields recommendation...

My #1 junior gold pick for 2006

What makes me so sure Colombia Goldfields could be such a winner? Several things, really. For starters, I'm extremely excited about what the company is likely to find inside Marmato Mountain—Colombia's legendary Mountain of Gold.

Over the years, local miners have eked out an existence with the gold taken from the mountain by primitive means. Now, modern drilling studies are revealing that these indigenous miners have only scratched the surface.

$8.8 billion at Marmato and maybe more at Caramanta

Twenty-first century mining technology will ensure that Colombia Goldfields will be able to access almost all of it—up to an estimated 16 million ounces. That's $8.8 BILLION worth of gold at today's prices—more than 146 times Colombia Goldfields' current value!

Still, those numbers don't take into account the millions of ounces of gold that may lie undiscovered in the company's nearby Caramanta Exploration Projects—yet another property from which locals have been mining gold for decades.

It truly is a unique opportunity to turn $5,000 into $30,000—but only if you get in before everyone else.

The good news is that the window is still open. But once word gets out that Marmato's trickle of gold has turned into an avalanche, it will be too late. And with the bull market for gold taking a short breather, the time has never been better for looking at a winning junior gold like my #1 pick.

Colombia Goldfields' top leadership team: A track record of success in Latin America

The leadership of Colombia Goldfields begins with several top players from Greenstone Resources. This is the same team that took a junior gold with properties in Nicaragua and Panama and turned it into a $1 BILLION powerhouse.

Now they are setting their sites on Colombia's famed Mountain of Gold, which could make their resounding success with Greenstone Resources look like peanuts. Let's meet them:

Harry Hopmeyer, Chairman

Harry Hopmeyer served as a director of mega-successful Greenstone Resources, where he was instrumental in expanding the company's operations into Latin America. Mr. Hopmeyer helped add major shareholders such as the Seagram's Bronfman family and build Greenstone from a startup into a $1 billion mining giant. But his experience doesn't stop there. Mr. Hopmeyer is also a director of Faircourt Asset Management Inc., which currently manages more than $850 million. He's also a senior Canadian advisor to BLC-Edmond de Rothschild Bank in Paris, France.

J. Randall Martin, President and CEO

J. Randall Martin offers a proven track record for developing large-scale gold mining operations in Latin America. Most recently, Mr. Martin served as chairman and CEO of RNC Gold. Prior to RNC, Mr. Martin was president of Greenstone Resources, where he helped develop mining strategies that ultimately resulted in a $1 billion market cap. Mr. Martin led his team in acquiring artisan mining properties and relocating miners. Without the move, the large San Andreas open-pit gold mine could not have been built.

Daniel Hunter, Director and COO

Daniel Hunter has spent 20 years of his professional career as a securities broker specializing in structured financings for junior mining companies. Mr. Hunter was a founding partner and securities broker with Canaccord Capital, Canada's largest independent brokerage firm. Since 1998, Mr. Hunter has served as the CEO and director of Encore Clean Energy, Inc. as well as Ignite Communications.

Robert van Tassel, Director

Robert van Tassel served as vice president of exploration for Goldcorp Inc. Exploration teams led by him are credited with at least three significant discoveries: the Husky Mine, the Minto copper deposit and Goldcorp's High Grade Zone, which is currently producing in excess of 500,000 ounces of gold per year. He also served for 11 years as a director of the Yukon Chamber of mines, 2 of them as president.

Hernando Molina Velez, PhD, Director

Dr. Hernando Molina Velez serves as legal counsel and as a financial trade advisor for several Colombia National companies. Dr. Velez is a director for many esteemed Colombian-based companies. For the past 10 years, Dr. Velez has held the position of national executive director of the Association of Leaders of Marketing of Colombia. In 2001, he was instrumental in creating new Colombian legislation to support the modernization of Colombia's mining sector.

Thomas McGrail, Director

Thomas McGrail was a key player in the Greenstone Resources success story, where he helped build the company from a junior mining stock into a $1 billion powerhouse. Mr. McGrail has many years in the mining industry—most of it in Latin America. He has overseen the shift from exploration to production of several large open-pit gold mines in Central America and South America. Since January 2002, he's worked with Minera Cerro Quema, which is now constructing the Cerro Quema Mine in Panama.

Stewart D. Redwood, PhD, Consulting Geologist

Dr. Redwood is an independent geological consultant specializing in minerals exploration and project evaluation. He offers 25 years of experience in minerals exploration, including over 20 years in Latin America. He served as senior geologist in South America and Central America for Inmet Mining Corporation. Dr. Redwood also served with AngloGold Ltd.—the mining giant now staked next door to Colombia Goldfields' properties. And, he is the author and publisher of more than 40 technical papers and maps used in the mining industry.

river and use it for agriculture, hydropower, fishing and drinking.

And many villages have been wiped out by mudslides on the mountain—many of these catastrophes caused by some of the 1,600 tunnels that miners have dug into the mountain.

To fix the problem, the government is working with Colombia Goldfields to buy out the local miners—even though most of these miners don't have legal title to the claims they're working. It's a win-win deal that actually brings greater prosperity to these local miners and their families.

A Colombia Goldfields team mapped every claim in order to fairly compensate the locals—often with more money than they've seen in their entire lifetimes.

Besides the payments, many of them will be able to get jobs with Colombia Goldfields once gold production begins—mining operations that will be much safer for them and for the environment.

This is just a sample of the smart leadership I have found in Colombia Goldfields and why I think their operations could net early investors as much as 607.55% returns or more in the next 18 months.

Of course, having a mountain with a reputation as a proven gold producer also makes me very

FORECAST #3

The dollar will be saved—but only temporarily

The Fed is choking the economy with dollars. Why? For two reasons: (1) to provide liquidity for the economy to keep the recovery going and (2) to save U.S. jobs by making our goods more affordable overseas in order to reduce our record $725.8 billion trade deficit.

But no thanks to the Fed, the dollar has made recent gains in its value and has shown surprising strength against other currencies. How did this happen?

3 reasons the dollar will surge...temporarily

First, a bill passed in 2004 let corporations repatriate dollars into the United States during 2005 at a tax rate of just 5.25% compared to rates as high as 33%.

Corporations jumped on the deal, bringing home billions of dollars during the course of the year. Most of those dollars came from Europe. That dramatically reduced the liquidity of the dollar abroad, stopping its downward spiral and actually causing it to rise against other currencies.

Second, the dollar got another helping hand when the European Union failed to pass a new constitutional referendum—something that left the union in a state of uncertainty. As you know, the markets hate uncertainty, and investors quickly moved more than $47 billion from the euro into the dollar.

The dollar rallied 8.5% almost immediately and has been stronger ever since.

Third, Japan and China increased their purchases of U.S. government debt. The Asians wanted to keep their currencies weaker against the dollar to maintain U.S. markets for their products.

This is a window for stock market profits

These factors work together to strengthen the dollar, steal the thunder of inflation hedges and get the stock market moving again.

But, the simple fact is, the Fed can't keep inflating the money supply without facing inflation. So although the Fed may have delayed the inevitable, it's only a matter of time before the dollar again resumes its free fall.

Another factor working against the dollar is the cost of energy. confident in their success.

500 years of proven gold production

As part of their lease agreement, Colombia Goldfields has agreed to invest $20.2 million in the project over the next 2 years. This investment will give the company a 100% interest in the Zona Alta section of Marmato Mountain that it's targeting.

The really nice thing in all this is that unlike most of the supposed gold "discoveries" that cross my desk, Marmato Mountain is already a proven gold producer. In fact, it's been producing gold for more than 500 years.

Colombia Goldfields knows the gold is there. All it has to do is go in and get it.

Pretty sweet right? Well, what if I told you that Marmato Mountain is not Colombia Goldfields' only holding? (Yes, there's more.)

Nearby properties that could host Marmato-size deposits

Believe it or not, Marmato Mountain is not the only great thing Colombia Goldfields has going for it.

The company recently obtained an option to buy up to a 100% share in eight advanced gold projects known as the Caramanta Exploration Projects. They lie along a 3- to 5-mile zone at the base of Marmato Mountain.

Like Marmato, local miners regularly find gold in the area—and have been for generations. But recent exploration shows that the area may contain as much as 1 ounce of gold per ton of dirt and rock.

Fernando takes the Colombia Goldfields' team to just one of the many exposed gold veins that run throughout the mountain.

Colombia Goldfields has already identified two large gold zones and one silver zone in the area with geological signatures similar to those found on Marmato Mountain.

And it has already begun detailed

FRIENDLY TAKEOVER FOR BIG PROFITS

Acquisition: Windfall profit before mining even begins

Right now, Colombia Goldfields is on target to claim the wealth of the Marmato and Caramanto gold districts using advanced 21st century mining techniques. But, it is possible that Colombia Goldfields could reap a huge windfall before a single drill bit bores its way into the earth.

How is this possible?

It goes back to the people of the mountain. Their primitive techniques are poisoning the water supply and creating landslide dangers. That's why the government of Colombia forged a deal with Colombia Goldfields to protect these people and the environment in return for choice land claims on the mountain. This included creating an entire new town in a safe location with modern facilities, schools and roads.

The leadership of Colombia Goldfields has used this strategy before in other parts of Latin America to make a site more attractive to the big mining giants. You see, the mining giants aren't interested in doing social work. They want to get in and start mining.

By creating an inviting turnkey opportunity on Latin America's legendary mountain of gold, Colombia Goldfields has primed itself for takeover. Here are a few recent takeovers that have garnered big wins for investors.

- Placer Dome acquired Getchell Gold and turned an $11.68 stock into a $27.88 stock overnight.
- Barrick Gold acquired Arequipa Resources and turned the $2 stock into a $30 stock.
- AngloGold acquired Ashanti Goldfields and turned a $0.26 stock into an $8.36 stock.

Before serious mining even begins, mining giants could be circling like vultures waiting for the social work to finish before they can swoop in with a remarkable acquisition offer that will make early investors very rich.

mapping, geochemical rock sampling and trenching on the eight projects with an emphasis on the two large gold discoveries recently found.

The results of these studies—combined with extensive analysis of a previous company's drill program—will help Colombia Goldfields execute a strategic diamond drill program over the next few months.

The really exciting thing about this site is that geologists believe Caramanta might be part of the same geological system that brought gold to Marmato Mountain. If this proves true, it would confirm that the area is a massive gold-bearing district—the largest ever found in South America and perhaps even the richest strike in the world.

Any evidence at all that this is true could create a spark under Colombia Goldfields' stock price that could send it soaring by 6 times or more its current price virtually overnight. If you've already invested when that happens, you could make a killing.

In fact, you can count on it because the leadership of Colombia Goldfields already has experience making mountains of cash in South America. Read on...

FORECAST #4

An anomaly in the business cycle has created a 12- to 18-month window of opportunity to rake in the big profits in the stock market

The business cycle is remarkably consistent. It goes like this: The Fed lowers interest rates and increases the money supply to stimulate the economy and the stock market. Then, at the right time, it raises interest rates and pulls back the money supply when the economy gets too hot and before inflation rears its ugly head.

But now, for the next 12 to 18, months you can take advantage of a very unusual hiccup in the business cycle. Why this anomaly?

The Fed broke its own rule

Remember Y2K? It scared a lot of people, and it scared the Fed. It was worried about massive bank runs. So in August 1999, it pumped a whopping $100 billion of new money into banks to make sure the system had enough liquidity if something went wrong.

Normally, this kind of infusion would only come during a time of deep recession when it was needed to get the economy moving again—not during an economic boom.

When the Y2K crisis fizzled and bank runs failed to materialize, the Fed quickly yanked that $100 billion out of the system to prevent soaring price inflation. Suddenly, businesses couldn't get the capital that banks had been easily lending, and the air began to go out of the bubble.

The economy muddled through over the next couple of years, but the stock market never really recovered.

Inflation fears fuel fix

Trying to fix the system, the Fed lowered interest rates at every opportunity, trying to get things moving in the right direction again. But it didn't work. That's because instead of putting money in the stock market, investors—fearing inflation—were pouring it into inflation hedges, such as real estate and precious metals.

Today, real estate is doing well. Gold is doing well. And the dollar—for now—has reversed its slide. To have these inverse factors all going up is unusual.

I believe with the dollar temporarily stabilized, money will start flowing out of the inflation hedges and back into the stock market—something that'll trigger the market's long-awaited resurgence. But it will be a small window of 12 to 18 months to make serious profits.

Proven experience in Latin American gold mining: The Greenstone Resources story

Junior gold companies are great investments right now if you find the right ones. The trick is knowing important details that truly position a stock for success—like a record of previous success.

Colombia Goldfields has a top geological and management team that has already proven itself in the jungles of Central America and South America.

You see, several of the top players at Colombia Goldfields were also behind one of Latin America's all-time great gold mining success stories...Greenstone Resources.

Beginning in the late '80s and through the mid-'90s, Greenstone

Resources acquired several historic mining sites in Nicaragua, Honduras, Panama and Colombia that, like Marmato Mountain, had long been mined by local peasants.

Working in conjunction with each country's government, they explored and developed each site—sites that include the San Andreas concession in Honduras, which also included moving the miners in order to build a successful mining operation—which is still producing today.

The company had such phenomenal success that it swiftly grew from a tiny exploration company into a substantial gold producer with the backing of large institutional investors and a market cap of more than $1 BILLION.

Early investors in Greenstone made a killing—as they watched their stock value soar.

As great as that is, I believe the veterans of the Greenstone success story will do even better with Colombia Goldfields. They've got:

- ◆ A better site with even more gold potential
- ◆ A more cooperative government
- ◆ Mining laws that protect them every step of the way
- ◆ Over 25 years of successful experience working in Latin America

And now they've made claim to what could be the biggest discovery of their careers—and the biggest ever in South America—on a legendary mountain that's finally ready to give up its gold.

Giant mining companies are rushing in—eager to grab their share of the gold

Not surprisingly, Colombia Goldfields isn't the only company to recognize the massive opportunity that now exists in Colombia.

Numerous international mining companies have gotten wind of what's happening and are moving in—hoping to cash in like Colombia Goldfields.

For example, AngloGold, the mining giant, has staked more than 1.2 million hectares of land near Colombia Goldfields' properties, and recently moved its South American exploration office to Bogotá. The company plans to spend $50 million exploring and developing the properties.

And AngloGold isn't alone. Rio Tinto, Greystar, AngloAmerican, Drummond Coal, Glencore and BHP Billiton are all in the process of developing gold projects in Colombia. It's one of the last great unexplored gold frontiers in the world—and these companies are determined to make the most of it.

You can bet several of these companies have their eyes on Colombia Goldfields as a potential acquisition target. And when one of those companies

FORECAST #5

The new war on gold will temporarily stall the bull market in gold—but that won't stop its run to $800 or even $1,000 an ounce

Gold, even with a temporary stall, could climb to as high as $1,000 an ounce. And there is only one reason why.

The world's central bankers, politicians and bureaucrats will do or say almost anything to put a damper on soaring gold prices. Why? Because it's a strong indicator of a poorly managed economy and political instability.

The war with gold

World leaders will do anything except what they need to do to stop gold prices from rising—namely, stop inflating the money supply. They are at war with gold.

And, although they may be able to temporarily manipulate the gold market and keep prices in check, in the long run there's really nothing they can do.

As governments continue to devalue their currencies, people will turn to gold, just as they always have and always will—and no amount of manipulation or propaganda will stop them.

A new gold bull market

The fact is, it's only a matter of time before a new bull market in gold gets underway—a bull market that will send gold soaring as high as $1,000 an ounce.

In the meantime, watch for any pullback in the price of gold as an opportunity to load up on bullion or mining stocks—especially Colombia Goldfields.

Understanding the relationship between gold and the money supply is just one way my Money Flow Analysis system helps my subscribers profit in these times.

decides to pounce, the sky could be the limit for Colombia Goldfields' stock price.

It's only a matter of time if exploration determines that the 5 million ounces of gold deposits turns into the 16 million ounces geologists estimate...OR a new find at Caramanta turns into a Marmato-size discovery...OR BOTH!

Keep in mind, though, that it actually won't take much gold to send the stock higher. Even a small discovery would be enough to bring both investors and acquisition-minded mining giants to the table, hungry for a piece of the action.

Investors who get in early could make out like bandits. And that's not just idle speculation. I've seen it happen again and again...

- 1. A junior gold makes an exciting discovery...
- 2. A huge mining concern swoops in and buys junior lock, stock and barrel...

Geopolitical and economic forces are converging to drive the price of gold higher. But, the big money is in junior gold stocks like Colombia Goldfields.

3. Early investors cash out for phenomenal windfall profits!

For example, take Arequipa Resources—the company that first explored and began developing Peru's Arequipa deposit. Before Arequipa even began bringing gold out of the ground, American Barrick came in and bought the company out for a whopping $1.2 billion.

Early investors who got in for just $2 a share sold their stock to American Barrick for $31. That's a profit of 1,550% in under 2 years—enough to turn $5,000 into $77,500.

That's the kind of potential I see with Colombia Goldfields over the next 6 months. And for the long-term you could make much, much more.

Get in now and create your own personal gold boom

When I look at Colombia Goldfields, I see a company with remarkable potential:

- A property that's been producing gold for more than 500 years
- Land lease rights on a legendary mountain of gold—Marmato Mountain
- An estimated gold deposit containing 16 million ounces on Marmato Mountain
- A remarkable management team with a record of

- The Caramanta Exploration Projects that may hold as much gold as Marmato, maybe more...
- A solid partnership with the Colombian government...
- Key legal counsel with ties and friendships that go all the way up to the Colombian presidency...
- Prime positioning for a profitable acquisition by a mining giant!

I also like the fact that Colombia Goldfields may only have to spend an estimated $150 to $200 an ounce mining the gold of Marmato Mountain—which guarantees the company a healthy profit even in the highly unlikely event that the price of gold were to drop back to $400.

Plus, there's still time to get in.

Wall Street analysts and institutions are forced to wait far longer than individual investors before they can get in. But once the find has been confirmed, you can bet they'll come pouring in—just as they did when they drove Greenstone Resources to a billion-dollar-plus valuation.

But, if you wait too long, YOU WILL MISS OUT.

I believe it's only a matter of time before the share price starts moving—perhaps slowly at first, but then as word spreads, and the gold comes out, the stock price could soar. Investors who get in early will reap maximum profits.

However, let me be clear that this is far from a slam dunk. There is some risk involved.

But if you have $5,000 to $10,000 in capital you'd like to invest for potentially astronomical returns, then I highly recommend you grab a chunk of Colombia Goldfields now while it's still cheap.

Consider this: Small cap mining phenomenon Greystar is now worth $400 million at about $10 per share. They only have an estimated

FORECAST #6

The dollar will resume its free fall within 6 to 12 months—and that's good news for gold

The Federal Reserve can't keep inflating the money supply without debasing the value of the dollar. It's only a matter of time—probably no more than 12 months—before the dollar resumes its long downward decline.

That can only mean good news for gold investors. Here's why:

For starters, a collapsing dollar makes foreign investors and central banks very nervous. After all, they've lost a significant fortune on their dollar investments so far—despite the dollar's recent rally.

Dollars will be dumped

Many of these foreign investors—who once counted on the dollar for safety and stability—will ultimately head for greener pastures, dumping their dollars for stronger currencies and even gold.

Even worse, foreign investors might also refuse to buy any more of our government debt. As a result, the U.S. government will have to slash spending (fat chance!) or the Fed will have to fire up the printing presses to pay the bills—debasement of the dollar even further.

Meanwhile, the President is counting on a supply-side tax stimulus to bring the economy back to full speed and increase tax revenues to control the deficit. He's on the right track, but it's simply not enough.

Spending cuts not likely

Unless Congress enacts some major spending cuts, and the Fed puts some brakes on the money supply, the dollar will continue to decline. Ultimately, the combination of a collapsing currency and soaring deficits will send billions pouring into gold—bringing windfall profits to investors who get in now.

A weak dollar and soaring budget deficits mean good times are ahead for gold. 10 million ounces in gold deposits. On the other hand, Colombia Goldfields is at $2 a share with over 16 million estimated ounces at Marmato alone.

So, is Colombia Goldfields undervalued? ABSOLUTELY!

For more detailed insight like this I encourage you to subscribe to Investment Tracker so you don't miss any of my buy, hold and sell signals on Colombia Goldfields or any of my other winning investment recommendations.

As one of my subscribers, you'll be on track to add to your wealth with detailed analysis like the one I have offered you here in this Investor's News Flash.

Here's what else I can offer you...

My Money Flow Analysis system continues to make my subscribers very rich

In April 2001, my Money Flow Analysis system indicated a "buy" signal for gold—and I told my subscribers it was time to get back into precious metals.

Since that time, those who followed my advice made an absolute killing as gold soared from $252 to $600 an ounce as of April 6, 2006.

And those who bought the mining stocks I recommended have done even better:

- Barrick Gold up 48.17%
- Agnico-Eagle up 89.73%
- Placer Dome up 93.59%
- Newmont Mining up 183.49%
- Coeur d'Alene up 439.83%
- Hecla Mining up an astonishing 1,108%

But as great as those returns have been, they're just small potatoes compared to the potential profits you'll find in Colombia Goldfields.

That's because despite the impressive gains gold has made over the last few years, the new boom in gold is just getting started. In fact, after a brief stall, you can expect to see gold reach as high as $1,000 an ounce.

The good news is that you could do 6 times that with the select junior mining stocks I recommend in the pages of my Investment Tracker newsletter—beginning with Colombia Goldfields.

Here are two simple reasons why I am so enthusiastic about junior gold stocks.

Reason #1

Junior gold stocks are so much more profitable than bullion

As profitable as gold is going to be over the next 2 years, carefully selected mining shares could bring even greater returns. That's because they have the ability to offer tremendous leverage you just can't get from bullion.

The reason is simple. Assume for a moment that gold is selling for $500 an ounce. If it rises to $625, you've just made 25% on your money. Not bad.

But now assume you've invested in a junior gold stock—say one that pays around $200 to mine an ounce of gold. If gold is selling for $400 an ounce, the company is making $200 an ounce.

So, if the price of gold rises to $500, the company's profits rise by 50%—more than double the increase in the price of bullion.

And that increase in profits will quickly be reflected in the company's stock price.

But your returns could see even bigger profits with my #1 junior gold stock for 2006—Colombia Goldfields.

Reason #2

Junior gold stocks easily out-profit the mining giants

What is it that enables junior golds to rake in profits of 300% to 1,000% while the giants of the industry produce just mediocre profits for investors?

For starters, junior gold companies operate on much smaller capital so even a mediocre gold discovery—the kind that wouldn't even raise an eyebrow at one of the giants—is a true profit bonanza.

Just last year, mining giant Newmont Mining Company had revenues of more than $4.4 billion. A million-ounce gold find would add just $591 million in revenues to its bottom line—a lot of money, to be sure, but still just a mere 13% increase.

But for a small $60 million company like Colombia Goldfields, a million-ounce find would produce revenues many times the company's entire market value—something that would drive the stock price to the moon virtually overnight.

And in case you've forgotten, this is the same team who made small cap Greenstone Resources into a $1 BILLION powerhouse.

Better yet, the profit margin at a junior gold like Colombia Goldfields is usually much greater. Most major companies need a gold price of $300 or more to produce a profit. But 9 out of 10 junior golds start making money at just $150 an ounce.

In other words, some of them are making an extra $150 an ounce, at least. And they'll keep making money even if the price of gold plummets over the next year.

Nobody knows for sure exactly what Colombia Goldfields will wind up paying per ounce, but it's unlikely to ever exceed $200 to $250, which leaves it a healthy profit margin to work with.

You owe it to yourself to learn more about this incredible opportunity. That's why I urge you to subscribe to Investment Tracker for timely investment advice every month.

FORECAST #7

Price inflation like we haven't seen since the Carter years—and a huge gold boom

There's no getting around it. Eventually, all this monetary inflation MUST lead to price inflation. It's inevitable.

Of course it takes a while—usually several years—for all that newly created money to work its way into the economy and begin driving up prices.

But it's now been 5 years since the Fed began cutting interest rates back in January 2001. And price inflation is finally beginning to creep into the economy.

Gold is your only protection

Make no mistake. WHEN it hits, it will come with a vengeance. Only savvy investors will protect themselves with gold.

Many investors remember the soaring inflation of the late 1970s. And, many of those same investors missed out completely as gold soared to $875. They won't make that mistake again.

Even fixed-income investors will get in on the act. After all, one of their chief complaints about gold has always been that it doesn't pay interest. But when their money market funds are returning dirt and their bonds are losing money after inflation and taxes—gold starts to sound pretty good.

Inflation will be back

In fact, when inflation comes roaring back, gold will suddenly seem like a safe haven for millions of investors on fixed incomes.

And it won't take much to start the stampede. Fear alone will drive the price up—even if inflation itself never exceeds 5%.

Even if you don't take my strong recommendation to buy Colombia Goldfields, it's important that you find for yourself a sound gold investment to protect yourself.
