Overall Goals

This one day CME accredited educational course will review significant recent advances in the diagnosis, staging, and management of non-small cell lung cancer. Didactic sections will focus on lung cancer screening, treatment options for early stages of disease, genetic profiling of tumors, and cutting edge systemic therapies, including targeted agents and immunotherapies. A session will be devoted to highlighting major updates from the 2015 ASCO meeting. Cases illustrating clinical challenges will be presented in a Tumor Board format, and attendee participation and interaction will be sought during case presentation and Q&A sessions.

Learning Objectives

- Identify patients at high risk for lung cancer and the components of a successful screening program
- Explain the roles of surgery, radiation therapy, and ablative therapy in the management of early stage non-small cell lung cancer
- Discuss the roles of preoperative chemotherapy and radiation therapy in the management of locally advanced non-small cell lung cancer
- Recognize the clinical relevance of genetic assessment of tumors
- Describe the mechanism of action of immune checkpoint blockade and identify lung cancer patients who might benefit from such therapy

Target Audience

This activity is designed for internists, medical and radiation oncologists, nurses, physician assistants, pulmonologists, radiologists, respiratory therapists, thoracic surgeons, and other medical professionals involved in the screening and evaluation of high-risk patients as well as the diagnosis, staging and/or management of patients with thoracic malignancies.

Accreditation

The College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

AMA Credit Designation Statement

The College of Physicians and Surgeons designates this live activity for a maximum of 7.0 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

Nurses and physician assistants are encouraged to check with their accrediting organization to ensure they accept AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™.

Support

We expect support for this program through grants from pharmaceutical and medical device companies.
