Programme Overview

Banking and capital market organisations play an integral part in helping customers as well as businesses pull through the current crisis while emerging more resilient once the outbreak eventually recedes. Banks and capital markets must remain hyper-vigilant and have better coordination between different stakeholders or partners. This is to ensure that the cost curve is bent in their favour and ultimately generate better profit as well as long-term impact to the society.

Learning Objectives

- To analyse the global economic growth outlook, concerns and potentials.
- To explain the coordination between different stakeholders and how best to capitalise on similarities as well as strengths, while adhering to the new norm.
- To discuss the new normal activities in managing business sustainability and best ways to address challenges as well as opportunities posed by unprecedented changes in global market developments, post COVID-19.
- To generate ideas in repositioning businesses, through practical and diversified short-term turnaround strategies and best ways to collaborate with competitors via shared services or resources while managing the corporate value chain to prevent monetary loss and business halt.
