Lawmakers Play Whack-A-Mole with Predatory Lenders

Senate panel takes action to limit one kind of high-interest loan while leaving a loophole for another.

BY MICHAEL LEE POPE
THE CONNECTION

By this time next year, high-interest lenders may be prohibited from making consumer finance loans — at least ones they find profitable at 200 percent interest. So that loophole may be closed by the end of the General Assembly session. But it seems likely lawmakers will leave Richmond this year creating no restrictions on open-end lines of credit, raising concern among some that lawmakers are playing a game of whack-a-mole. “All of a sudden, in the last five, six, seven, eight years we’ve got title lenders, payday lenders, revolving lenders and now internet lenders jumping the fence and coming over into the consumer finance act that had never contemplated this kind of lending,” said Jeff Smith, executive director of the Virginia Financial Services Association. “So not only do we support this legislation, we drafted it.”

That legislation would create a cap of 36 percent interest rates for all consumer finance loans, closing one loophole that has allowed loans for as much as 950 percent interest. Car-title lenders were using these kinds of loans in a bait-and-switch operation until 2016, after a series of investigative reports exposed the practice and lawmakers took action to rein in the industry. Since that time, internet lenders have moved to an unregulated product known as open-end lines of credit. Last week, lawmakers rejected a bill that would have prevented lenders from allowing lenders to have more than one loan at a time.

“The only way I would know that someone has an installment loan is if they were trying to get it from me,” said Robert Baratta, lobbyist for Check Into Cash, which contributed more than $8,000 to members of the committee last year. “I don’t know if they’ve gone down the street to somebody else and took one out unless there’s some kind of database we can access.”

CRITICS OF PREDATORY LENDING say payday lenders and car-title lenders already have to comply with that restriction, which prevents people down on their luck from taking out new loans to cover old loans. Of all the consumer protections considered in a series of bills this year, this is one of the most important to people who want to make sure these companies don’t take advantage of people who are already experiencing hefty medical bills or family emergencies.

“We’d like to close this loophole to ensure that some of the most vulnerable Virginians aren’t taken advantage of,” said Kevin Mauer, associate director of the Virginia Catholic Conference.

Opposition to high-interest loans isn’t coming just from consumer groups and religious organizations. It’s also coming from businesses in the consumer-finance industry, who believe unscrupulous businesses are using their section of the code to make predatory loans. That’s why they worked with state Sen. Scott Surovell (D-36) to craft the 36-percent cap. Although that bill got out of committee, his other bill that would have created similar restrictions on open-end lines of credit did not. “They’re using these open-end credit loans to evade the laws that we passed,” said Surovell. “We can’t keep playing whack-a-mole.”

The 2018 Native Seedling Sale Opens

Low-cost bare-root seedlings available.

BY MERCIA HOBSON
THE CONNECTION

The Northern Virginia Soil and Water Conservation District announced their annual seedling sale is on for 2018 as of Feb. 1. The non-regulatory, locally-led, conservation agency is making low-cost bare-root native shrub and tree seedlings available to Northern Virginia residents.

All seedlings are suited for planting in the greater Washington, D.C. area. This year's seedling sale features shrubs and trees that are tolerant of deer browse. The District advertises that their $11.95 Six Seedling Tree Package includes two Eastern Redbuds, two Pawpaw, and two Shortleaf Pine. Their $16.95 10 Seedlings Shrub and Small Tree Package contains two Witchhazel, two False Indigo Bush, two Serviceberry, two Silky Dogwood, and two Spicebush.

Because these are first- and second-year bare-root trees and shrubs, the District acknowledges they are small "...but when cared for properly, they can grow into lovely landscape specimens faster than you think."

The District reports they get most of their seedlings from the Virginia Department of Forestry and the seedlings come without soil. Their roots are wrapped in wet newspapers and placed in a plastic bag to keep them moist. Each package of six-10 seedlings bundled together is typically 1-3 feet long and 4-6 inches wide. To differentiate between the seedlings, which the district cites can lovingly be described as looking like "twigs," they wrap colored flagging tape around each species pair and provide a color code for identification.

A full, nonrefundable payment must accompany each order received no later than Wednesday, April 11, or until supplies run out. Payment is accepted online with a credit card, debit card, or e-check. Funds cover the cost of the seedlings and associated program costs.

The pickup site will be at the Packard Center in Annandale. Orders may be picked up on Friday, April 20, 9 a.m.-4 p.m., or Saturday, April 21, 9 a.m.-noon.

NVSWCD reports proceeds from the sale support educational programs, including the high school Envirothon competition, biological stream monitoring, storm drain education, Youth Conservation Camp, Science Fair awards, and other outreach activities.

COUNTY BRIEFS

Inmates Training in Overdose Prevention

Through a partnership with the Fairfax County Sheriff's Office, jail-based clinicians from the Fairfax-Falls Church Community Services Board (CSB) are now offering inmates training on how to reverse the impacts of opioid overdose. So far, there have been three classes in which about a dozen inmates have learned how to save lives. Upon release from the Adult Detention Center, the newly trained individual is equipped with a single dose of naloxone (Narcan), along with a REVIVE information kit, just in case they need it for themselves, their family members or their friends. Naloxone is a fast-acting medication that can reverse opioid overdose. This new effort is part of an overall Fairfax County effort to train more people how to recognize signs of opiate overdose and increase access to naloxone. CSB's Director of Jail-Based Services, Marissa Farina-Morse, said that inmates with opioid or heroin addictions are most at risk during the first weeks after being released from jail. The CSB also offers free one-hour monthly REVIVE training at their Merrifield Center, as well as other community sites. In the U.S., overall, there were 60,000 overdose deaths in 2017 and more than 100 in Fairfax County.

To learn more about actions underway to educate and combat opioid use disorder in Fairfax County, read the Fairfax County Opioid Task Force Plan at

Career and Transition Services Event for Parents and Educators

On Saturday, Feb. 10, 2018, Career and Transition Services along with several Fairfax County adult service providers and the FCPS Parent Resource Center, will host "Super Transition Saturday" from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Lanier Middle School. This is a free event for parents and educators of students with IEPs of all ages, elementary through high school. Breakout sessions will cover postsecondary support services, student self-determination as an evidence based predictor of postsecondary success, and in-school career and transition support services that are available to FCPS students as they progress through the secondary years toward graduation and beyond. A highlight of the day is a parent and student panel representing a range of challenges and successes. Members of the panel will convey personal experiences and answer parent and student questions from their perspectives of having been through the transition process. Childcare is provided for ages 3 and up and requires advance registration. To register, visit www.fcps.edu and search Super Transition Saturday. The snow date will be Feb. 24.

Springfield Golf and Country Club to Attain Audubon Sanctuary Certification

Springfield Golf and Country Club practices sound environmental golf course management, and is about to receive certification in The Audubon Cooperative Sanctuary Program for golf courses. To attain this certification, the club must document management practices in the following areas: wildlife and habitat management; chemical use reduction and safety; water conservation; water quality management; and outreach and education. It is also required to perform an environmental case study. To meet the case study requirement, the golf course, under the management of Superintendent Lentz Wheeler, created a wildlife pollinator garden which is in view of all golfers who play the course.

“Our entire club is excited to achieve the Audubon Cooperative Sanctuary Certification,” said Wheeler. “It has taken plenty of work, but has been so worthwhile. The creation of the wildlife pollinating garden has been particularly rewarding as we have seen many different species of butterflies and birds already frequenting the area. As the plants mature, this will only increase in number and species.

“One other wildflower pollinator garden was established last year and is nearly half an acre,” added Wheeler.

“There are a number of perennial and annual flowers in this bed native to our region that provide habitat and food for all types of wildlife, as well as beautiful color to the landscape. Springfield Country Club even has beehives on location that are serviced by a local apiarist, and provide honey to be utilized by our chef and for purchase to our membership in the near future.”

“Golf courses have gotten some bad publicity over the years as excessive users of chemicals, fertilizers, and water. We hope to show the public that a properly managed golf course not only benefits the environment, but enhances it.”

An Opportunity To Improve TJ

To the Editor:

The following open letter was addressed to state Sen. Steve Newman, chair of the Education and Health Committee.

As graduates of Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology (TJHSST), we were deeply troubled to read that the Education and Health Committee of the Virginia State Senate struck down Senate Bill 787, the proposal by state Sen. Scott Surovell to make the admissions policies at Governor's Schools such as TJHSST more equitable. While debates will continue about whether Senator Surovell's legislation is the right instrument, its intent to significantly alter Jefferson's admissions procedure to account for class is sound. No serious action has been taken on this issue at the state or local level since the school was designated as a magnet school and that has to change. Outreach efforts have had modest success in the past, but they are not enough to make Jefferson equitable. For this reason, we strongly support the intent of the senator's bill and ask the committee to work with Senator Surovell to draft legislation to make progress on this urgent issue.

All of us attended Fairfax County Public Schools. There's one among us who still has her yearbooks and class pictures from kindergarten through 12th grade. And in those images from schools like Saratoga Elementary School and Mark Twain Middle School are the smiling faces of friends and classmates of all races, as well as friends and classmates who lived in a nearby HUD housing development. None of the kids from that housing development made it into TJ, not one. And virtually none of the Black and Hispanic students in those other photos were admitted either.

The racial and economic composition of Jefferson has been an annual news story just about every year since it became a magnet school, and it's never good news. Last year, only 17 Black and Hispanic students were admitted — 3.4 percent out of 490 students. And only eight students (1.6 percent) eligible for free or reduced-price lunches (an indicator of students living in low-income or poor families). This despite the fact that Fairfax County Public School students overall are 25.4 percent Hispanic, 10.1 percent Black, and 29 percent are eligible for free or reduced-price lunches.

This disparity between Jefferson's enrollment and the racial and socioeconomic composition of Fairfax County is unacceptable and easily remedied. Countless elite institutions — especially elite colleges — have modified their admissions procedures and requirements in recent years because they have realized that their old criteria have long been leaving talent on the table. They have softened their standardized testing requirements, engaged in admissions outreach, and sought out partners in high schools and middle schools to create a pipeline of under-represented and low-income students to draw from. These students (who would never have been admitted under the old admissions protocols) have thrived at these elite institutions — often overperforming their standardized test scores. Yet Jefferson's admissions policies proceed ignorant of these developments.

We live in a time when headlines and Twitter feeds constantly observe the pernicious effects of systemic inequality and racism in the daily lives of the poor and people of color. And the state of Virginia has a long legacy of racism that the world was reminded of last year during and after the events that took place in Charlottesville. White supremacy is not just Nazis marching in the streets; it also lies in maintaining a high school that excludes the poor, African-Americans, and Latinos, and then calls itself the greatest, most meritocratic high school in the country. You and the other 12 members of the committee who struck down this modest change to Jefferson's admissions policies have voted to maintain a blatantly racist and classist flagship school.

This is a shameful display when it would have been so easy for you to answer the impassioned requests of so many parents and alumni, as well as Senator Surovell. We understand that the committee has framed its objections to this bill in terms of local rights. While in many cases local school boards are best situated to make local educational decisions, when a board ignores a pressing issue affecting its most vulnerable and disempowered constituents over decades, the state has an obligation to step in and remedy the injustice.

The one way that Jefferson, with the help of the Fairfax County School Board and the Virginia legislature, could truly differentiate itself is by showing that it is working deliberately and intentionally to combat the structural and systematic racism and class privilege that feeds students into the school. Thousands of schools and nonprofits around the country have already made meaningful change in this area, it's time for Jefferson and those in charge to take responsibility for this problem and do the same.

Turmeric, powdered ginger, honey and almond or coconut milk can create a soothing and healing drink for those who are battling the flu, says nutritionist Sara Ducey.

WELLBEING

Feeding the Flu What to eat when fighting the flu.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

Flu season is in full swing and, according to the latest statistics from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, it's packing a powerful punch. According to the most recent CDC report, the flu is widespread in most states, and healthcare providers report an uptick in influenza-related hospitalizations and deaths.

"One of the best sources for protein when you have the flu is real, bone-based soup."

— Sara Ducey, Professor of Nutrition and Food, Montgomery College

While the thought of eating might be unappealing to someone who is battling the flu, nutritionists and health care providers say certain nutrients are essential for keeping up one's strength. Soothing and healing ingredients are key allies when fighting this season's virus.

"The thing you need most is water," said Sara Ducey, professor of Nutrition and Food at Montgomery College. "You need sufficient water to bring nutrients to your cells and take away the waste. As you hydrate it gives your immune system more of a boost."

Protein, says Ducey, will help one's body build and maintain strength. "It's important for supporting the immune system and for helping your body breakdown medicines like Tylenol," she said. "One of the best sources for protein when you have the flu is real, bone-based soup, not ramen noodles that have chicken flavoring."

Bone broths, like those made from chicken or beef, offer hydration, protein and amino acids, added Ducey. Broth can be sipped or used as the base for a soup. "It's a natural healing and restorative food," she said. "At this point, everyone can assume that they're going to get the flu and prepare some bone-based broth ahead of time and keep it on hand in the freezer. You can also buy boxes of it."

Fresh ginger can work as an anti-inflammatory, soothe an upset stomach and boost one's immune system, says nutritionist Debbie Hynes of Practical Ayurveda. "Warm water with grated ginger and honey can soothe a sore throat or upset stomach," she said.

Foods that are high in Vitamin C like orange juice, particularly a variety that contains pulp, can boost your immune system, says Ducey. "It's a powerful antioxidant which is important for keeping your muscles strong especially when you're sick."

Garlic is another ingredient that Hynes likes to include in flu-fighting recipes. "It has antibacterial properties, especially when it's raw," she said. "I add it to chicken broth along with chili flakes to sip when someone in my family has a stuffy head. The combination can clear the sinuses. And if you can stand to eat it, raw garlic has the strongest antibacterial properties."

Turmeric works as an anti-inflammatory and antioxidant, says Hynes. "It's been known for those properties in Chinese medicine for centuries," she said.

Ducey uses the spice in a creamy drink she creates called Golden Milk. "I take a cup of milk, a teaspoon or two of honey and a little black pepper and put it in the microwave to warm it," she said. "You can use almond or coconut milk if you can't tolerate dairy. Turmeric is very poorly absorbed by the body, so adding a little black pepper helps absorb it. It sounds bizarre, but it's strangely comforting."

Fresh ginger can be a soothing ingredient for those who have the flu.

Garlic is credited with having anti-bacterial properties.

Fairfax Brewer Holds A Special Fundraiser

BY NATALIA MEGAS
THE CONNECTION

For local resident and brewer Antonio Maradiaga and his wife Maha Majdoub, hosting a fundraiser on Feb. 11 benefiting orphaned chimpanzees in Liberia at their family-owned nano-brewery was a no-brainer.

“My immediate response to it was, that’s great, I would love to do it,” Maradiaga said.

Named after their twins, now 10 years old, Twinpanzee Brewing Company was a perfect fit for a good cause raising funds for Liberia Chimpanzee Rescue and Protection whose mission is to establish the first and only chimpanzee sanctuary in Liberia. When Loudoun resident and photographer Kristi Odom approached the brewery about the fundraiser idea, there was no hesitation.

“We’ve always called our twins chimps or monkeys. We’ve always loved nature,” said Maradiaga who was born and raised in Fairfax. As a Boy Scout, Maradiaga said a love and appreciation for nature and conservation was instilled in him at a young age.

Maradiaga’s strong roots in Fairfax County, where his parents still live, have kept him grounded.

Although they tried for three years to bring their brewery to Fairfax County, it ultimately ended up in Loudoun County.

“I’m one of those people that stick around Fairfax,” he said, adding that they’re active with local community groups such as the Cub Scouts of America and at their boys’ Fairfax County school.

After graduating from Mclean High School, he pursued a double major in psychology and English from George Mason University and a Masters in child psychology from the same university. He eventually landed a job as a software developer in 2000 after gaining experience in software packages helping at the faculty computer lab.

But it was his hobby for brewing, which began in 2006 that became the catalyst for the brewery, which opened this past August. This month is their six-month anniversary.

“The brewery is an extension of my hobby,” he said, a hobby he does at night and on the weekends.

“It started with one of those Mr. Beer kits,” he said, teaching him important basics like sanitizing and cleaning. After receiving an all-grain brewing kit from his wife,

Mystery and Magical Dreams at Mason Stage

Virginia Opera presents “A Midsummer Night’s Dream.”

BY DAVID SIEGEL
THE CONNECTION

A fanciful world where love propelled by music can sometimes be quite mad is arriving at the Center for the Arts courtesy of Virginia Opera. An operatic tale sung in English, “A Midsummer Night’s Dream” by Benjamin Britten is a vivid retelling of William Shakespeare’s play about magic potions, mix-ups, sprites and spirits, along with a very special donkey called Bottom, a trickster named Puck and a group of humorous folk named “Rude Mechanicals.”

As an opera, “A Midsummer Night’s Dream” is a production that through music and singing blurs the lines between fantasy and reality. Britten’s inventive, enchanting score was composed in 1960. It is one of the most produced operas in the past decades. Britten’s musical composition can be romantic for its entangled love stores, ethereal for its vivid night-time forest fantasy, and comic whenever the Rude Mechanicals appear in their spotlight.

In an interview, “Midsummer’s” stage director Michael Shell suggested audiences will know the opera from its Shakespearean roots. “This opera uses recognizable text and lines from the original Shakespeare play, though in slightly different order.”

The Virginia Opera production of “Midsummer” will use the theater world as its setting. It is a place where reality and fantasy collide. “The journey these characters take in ‘Midsummer’ explores one of the things that sets humans apart Virginia Opera presents “A Midsummer Night’s Dream” at George Mason University Center for the Arts, 440 University Drive, Fairfax. from all other animals; our capacity to love,” added Shell. “Love is blind. Love is irrational and can frustrate. Yet the ‘Midsummer’ characters seek it, desire it, and go after it with reckless abandon in scenes that can be silly and ridiculous about love as a driving force.”

The opera has many physical movement qualities. The performers do more than stand and deliver. The cast includes several returning Virginia Opera veterans. Soprano Heather Buck sings the role of Tytania, the Queen of the Fairies. Bass-baritone Matthew Burns has the comic role of Bottom and former Virginia Opera Herndon Foundation Emerging Artists, David Blalock and Kristen Choi return to sing the roles of Lysander and Hermia, respectively.

Joining this production will be 16 students from the Governor’s School for the Arts Vocal Music Department, under the direction of Alan Fischer and Stephen Z. Cook.

Virginia Opera’s “A Midsummer Night’s Dream” will be anything but pastoral. It will be “exhilarating and lively, far from staid. Come see for yourself and perhaps recognize your own younger self in love,” added Shell. Consider yourself invited.

Community Foundation Launches Opportunity Index for Northern Virginia

The Community Foundation for Northern Virginia announced the launch of The Opportunity Index for Northern Virginia, an interactive dashboard to serve as a data resource for community knowledge and strategic philanthropic giving, and to help grow philanthropy for the most economically disadvantaged populations. The data and accompanying report were prepared by The Commonwealth Institute for Fiscal Analysis, a nonprofit think-tank that provides credible, independent, and accessible information and analyses of fiscal and economic issues with particular attention to the impacts on low- and moderate-income persons. The Opportunity Index is available to the public for free at www.cfnova.org/opportunityindex.

"The Community Foundation developed and launched the Opportunity Index to help our entire region better define, and then act on, the biggest challenges we face and the greatest opportunities we have," said Eileen Ellsworth, Community Foundation President and CEO. "The data provides a common understanding of the dynamics at work in our region, providing insights and trends to guide our future work," said Ellsworth.

Comprising several key indicators reflecting the region's economy, community health, civic life, and educational outcomes, the Opportunity Index includes data from 2000-2015 and will be updated annually to track changes and produce trend lines over time, advancing stakeholders' understanding of the true needs of the region. The data is demographically, jurisdictionally, ethnically and racially disaggregated to shine a light on the reasons why some areas in Northern Virginia have more opportunity than others.

Northern Virginia is a diverse, growing region with a well-educated population and strong economy. However, there are a growing number of families who lack access to affordable housing and educational opportunities for their children. The data in this Index highlights trends that shine a light on these areas of opportunity and inequality. The region is becoming more diverse – in 2015, 47 percent of children in Northern Virginia lived in immigrant households and people of color made up 48 percent of residents of the region's five highest-population localities, up from 35 percent in 2000. At the same time, there are growing numbers of poor school-aged children, increased income inequality, and a widening income gap between individuals of different racial or ethnic backgrounds.

"I am thrilled that the Community Foundation for Northern Virginia is taking this strong leadership position to monitor the health of the region and to quantify our most critical needs. The Opportunity Index will be an invaluable resource for leaders from business, government, community and nonprofit organizations to determine how to invest in the region's future. The dashboard serves as a 'report card' for our region and provides some indispensable data that will direct the future work of the Community Foundation, and help the region as a whole become ever more vibrant, inclusive and equitable," said Paul Leslie, CEO of Dovel Technologies and Community Foundation board member.

"Chronic Ken"

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Nearly nine years into a "13 month to two-year" prognosis, I can hardly believe my good fortune. And though I rarely look a gift-oncologist in the stethoscope, I am happy nonetheless to count my blessings as I continue to look ahead rather than stress behind, and try not think about what was said and when.

At the initial "Team Lourie" meeting with my oncologist, I was told that there was no cure for lung cancer. I could be treated though. As to whether I might live beyond two years, I remember my oncologist responding to our desperate query by saying: "Could you be the one? Sure." Reassuring it wasn't, but hopeful? It sort of was.

As the years have passed and research into lung cancer has grown, an interim step to a cure has evolved: treating lung cancer as a chronic (has opposed to acute/dire) disease, similar to diabetes, as an example. Not as yet curable, but manageable over a longer period of time. A disease with which, I'm fond of saying, one can live. Live beyond the applicable word because, I have to tell you, at the beginning of my treatment, based on what my oncologist had described, living was a long way from what he was anticipating my outcome would be. Nevertheless, I began treatment the following week and the rest is history you regular readers have been privy to since June of '09 when I first published a "cancer" column (as I call them).

Feb. 20, 2018 will be nine years since my internal medicine office called me at work with the results of my previous week's biopsy. He said the tumor was malignant. I remember asking him what that meant. (Duh!). He said he'd rather let the oncologist answer any questions and referred me to the doctor, the same doctor with whom I've been a patient all these years. Sure enough, a week later we heard the news: non-small cell lung cancer, stage IV. And I've been up to my whistles in real or imagined anxiety ever since.

And I'm still present and accounted for as are more and more of us previously-characterized-as-terminal, non-small cell lung cancer "diagnosees." We are not just patients any more. We are survivors, surviving longer than ever before. We are not cured but neither are we dying. Our treatments are modified when the results warrant it and life continues to go on. As much as a cure would be, and continues to be, the goal, life continues, relatively normally, for many of us. It's unlikely however, that we'll ever get out from underneath the weight of our cancer diagnosis. Rather than dying from it though, we're now able to live with it months/years longer than many patients previously diagnosed within the disease.

So what's the next step? Maybe a bigger, bouncier, longer step than before, but more than likely, more of the same, moving forward, one step at a time. To one whose present was hardly a given nine years ago and whose future seemed like a taken-away, being able now to actually live in the present without fearing/forfeiting the future is the opposite scenario many of us lung cancer patients, especially those of us staged as IV, ever imagined. Day by day was the best we could muster.

Now we're mustering months and years and living longer more fulfilling lives. We're not victims anymore nor are we victimized by our circumstances. We're advocating and being advocated for. We don't exactly have lung cancer on the run, but we may have it on the trot. I don't know if I'll live to see a cure but I have lived long enough to have given myself a nickname, one which I'm most proud to have earned.

Kenny Lourie is an Advertising Representative for The Potomac Almanac & The Connection Newspapers.
