President's Letter

Professional Commitment

This year as DLA president I have pondered the term professionalism. The DLA Board has worked to fill DLA's committees, considered where this organization might be headed, and will be taking another look at our structure. Who will take DLA forward into a world my grandchildren are just now imagining?

Someone recently thanked me for all I had done for librarianship. I was taken aback as I have not done anything more than I would expect from anyone in the profession as long as I have been. My mother's voice still rings in my head, "to whom much is given, much is required." I've had tremendous opportunities to learn from other professionals, and I considered giving back to the profession an obligation.

I began looking at the word professional in my little world:

- Dictionary Definition: a person who belongs to one of the professions, esp. one of the learned professions
- Quotations: "Professionalism is knowing how to do it, when to do it, and doing it." Frank Tyger
- ALA's Objective & Mission: "The object of the American Library Association shall be to promote library service and librarianship." The stated mission is, "To provide leadership for the development, promotion, and improvement of library and information services and the profession of librarianship in order to enhance learning and ensure access to information for all."
- DLA's Handbook: "The purpose of the Association shall be to promote library information and media service to the people of Delaware.”

- ALA/AASL Standards for Initial Programs for School Library Media Specialists: Standard 3.1: Candidates employ strategies to ensure connections between the school community and the larger library world of public, academic, special libraries, and information centers. Candidates participate in professional associations.

Delaware Library Association needs library professionals to step up to bat for the organization, ignite dormant energy, and make DLA the boundary-pusher as technology makes the field more exciting each day. How do you volunteer? (a) The membership form has committees which you may check. (b) Speak to your division officers; your division is only as active as you make it. (c) Any DLA officer will gladly take your name and contact information to pass on to the appropriate party. We have the potential but need to renew our professional commitment. We can make this happen but only if each one does his/her part. How are you serving the profession?

Conference 2010:

Keynote Speaker

Join us all in welcoming Dr. Bertice Berry, author, sociologist, entertainer, and educator.

Winner of the Comedian of the Year Award from 1991 through 1994, and named both Campus Entertainer of the Year and Campus Lecturer of the year, Dr

Berry grew up in Wilmington, Delaware. She graduated with honors from Jacksonville University in Florida, and also earned a Ph.D. at Kent State University. She left a teaching career behind to become a full time lecturer and comedienne, a path that has included appearances on “The Tonight Show,” ABC’s “20/20,” “The Oprah Winfrey Show,” and her own talk show, “The Bertice Berry Show”. She has also written several bestselling books, including her inspirational memoir, I’m on My Way, But Your Foot is on My Head .

Dr. Berry will be joining us on April 29th, 7:30 p.m., at DLA’s Annual Conference. For more information on her achievements, please visit her website at: <http://www.berticeberry.com/>

New Castle County Libraries Welcome Author Ann Patchett

By Kim Tull, Woodlawn Library

Please mark your calendars now for Monday, April 12 at 7 pm, as New Castle County Libraries welcome acclaimed author Ann Patchett at St Mark's School Auditorium. A booksigning will follow. Also, enjoy an aria from The Marriage of Figaro, performed by two local music students. This is a literary event you won't want to miss! It is free and open to everyone. For directions, go to www.nccdelib.org. Event is on Dart Bus Routes 6 and 36.

Ms. Patchett's book Bel Canto, is the featured title of the 2010 New Castle County Reads program. It is hoped that you will enjoy reading or re-reading this award-winning book, and hear more about it from the author herself.

Bel Canto is a "glorious novel about love and opera which takes place during a terrorist takeover at a party at a South American embassy." According to The New Yorker, "Patchett's tragicomic novel—a fantasia of guns and Puccini and Red Cross negotiations—invokes the glorious, unreliable promises of art, politics, and love."

This year the New Castle County Reads program is focusing on reaching out to the community to encourage everyone to read the same book. All independent book groups were invited to read Bel Canto, and by registering at their local libraries, they received copies of the book for their groups. The county libraries distributed over 800 copies of Bel Canto to groups and individual library patrons.

More about Ann Patchett:

Ms. Patchett was raised in Nashville. She attended Sarah Lawrence College and the University of Iowa Writers' Workshop. In 1990, she won a residential fellowship to the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown, Massachusetts, where she wrote her first novel, The Patron Saint of Liars. It was named a New York Times Notable Book for 1992. Her most recent book, Run, was a New York Times bestseller.

Reviews from other Ann Patchett Hosts

She was just wonderful – and the crowd loved her. So personable and relaxed and had great things to say about reading and books and libraries. We were very pleased top to bottom.

-Transylvania County (NC) Library

Ann Patchett was the most engaging speaker we've ever had in our 7 year history of Literary Voices. What a sweetheart! Without question, the most compliments we've received from any of our speakers. They are already telling me this is going to be a tough act to follow.

-Metropolitan Library of Oklahoma City

Library Support Staff Certification (LSSC) Program Welcomes Candidate Applications

By Karen Strege, LSSC

The American Library Association's Allied Professional Association (ALA-APA) is accepting applications from potential Candidates interested in achieving the Library Support Staff Certification (LSSC). The LSSC Program is the first national, voluntary certification program for library support staff. Over forty Candidates have applied since the program opened January 25, 2010.

Why are library support staff across the country applying for LSSC candidacy?

Eva Fiffie is excited that the LSSC program "will give me the opportunity to strengthen my supervisory skills, become familiar with new aspects in the library field and allow me to provide better services to library patrons and my staff."

Candidate Kathleen Laurente agrees: she is confident that the LSSC "will give credence to the knowledge that I [already] possess, and will also advance me to the forefront at my current position."

“At this time, I wish to focus on having a family but also improve my career prospects and so, the LSSC Program is an excellent fit for me,” shares candidate Shirley McCoy. “I believe it will give me the opportunity to demonstrate that I am eminently qualified to be a member of any library support staff.”

Molly Moore is excited to begin LSSC course work on Collection Management. “A better understanding of this department in our library would allow us to be better informed . . . and to provide better information when decisions are required.”

The LSSC Program is open to any library support staff person with a high-school diploma or its equivalent and at least one year of full-time experience in a library with the last five years. Applicants do not have to be a member of ALA. The application fee is $325 for ALA members and $350 for non-ALA members. Candidates who choose to take an approved course may have to pay a fee set by the course provider. There is no cost for submitting portfolios. Candidates have four years to complete the program.

The LSSC Program website, www.ala-apa.org/lssc, has complete information about the competency sets, approved courses, and how to develop a portfolio. The Program has adopted ten competencies sets; Candidates are required to show achievement of three sets -- Foundations of Library Service, Communication and Teamwork, and Technology – and must choose three additional sets from Access Services, Adult Readers' Advisory Services, Cataloging and Classification, Collection Management, Reference and Information Services, Supervision and Management, and Youth Services.

The LSSC offers Candidates two ways to demonstrate achievement. The first is through completing approved courses from library education providers across the county. These providers set the course's fee, schedule, and requirements. Recently, the LSSC Program approved a Supervision and Management course from the State Library of Louisiana. Michael Golrick, one of the course's instructors, was pleased by the “level of enthusiasm and interest” demonstrated by the seventeen students who completed course. The LSSC Program encourages interested education providers to contact the program to find out more about course approval.

Candidates can also develop portfolios that demonstrate their knowledge, skills, and experience in a competency set. The LSSC Program offers help to Candidates who wish to develop and submit portfolios. Librarians with expertise in the competency set will evaluate portfolios and the Program is seeking more librarians who wish to do so. The application to become a Portfolio Evaluator is available on the LSSC website.

Candidates may wish to complete courses in some competency sets and submit portfolios in others.

The LSSC Program was inspired by many years of discussion and by needs assessments with library support staff. In 2007, the American Library Association received a grant from the Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS) Laura Bush 21st Century Librarian Program to fund the development of such a national certification program.

More information about the LSSC Program is available online at <http://www.ala-apa.org/lssc>. Direct questions to lssc@ala.org or call 312-280-2424. The LSSC Program is being managed by the American Library Association-Allied Professional Association (ALA-APA).

LDS Church Microfilm Collection being Digitized

By Rebecca Knight, UD Library

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter day Saints (LDS) began microfilming government and church records around the world in the 1950s. The collection today is enormous (more than 2.5 million reels). This collection is useful for genealogical and historical research.

Additionally, it preserves records that might otherwise have been lost.

LDS is now digitizing all the records and are making them available free on the Web. The project includes enhancing the quality of the images and creating indexing. To create the indexing, thousands of volunteers are transcribing information from the original records which will be loaded into the database. If you are interested in helping, they are looking for more volunteers. The pilot "Record Search" database is available from the FamilySearch Web page. Select the tab "Search Records," then "Record Search Pilot."

Additionally, when you search the Family History Library Catalog, there will be a message (in red) if the records being described have been digitized. Example: Library catalog, do a place search for Delaware. Select Vital records, then select Birth records (certificates and returns) 1861-1913.
