NORC BIBLIOGRAPHY OF PUBLICATIONS, 1941-1991: A FIFTY YEAR CUMULATION

INTRODUCTION

Background and Scope

Included is writing, whether published or not, based on NORC intramural studies and research programs, written by NORC staff, from 1941 to about mid-1991. Also included is writing by NORC staff closely related to current research interests but not necessarily related to specific projects.

Not included is writing based on NORC extramural contract research, unless it is written by NORC staff or has to do with the conduct of the study (for example, comparisons of house effects; descriptions of field work and sampling, or of particular aspects of survey methodology).

This fifty year cumulation of the NORC bibliography supersedes all previous editions of the Bibliography of publications including the original edition by Charles E. Mack covering 1941 to 1960 and the various supplements, the last of which covered 1961 to 1982.

Project Information

This is a bibliography and as such does not provide a great deal of information about the projects that form the basis for much of the work included. However, information about projects through about mid-1964 can be found in the following:

Allswang, John M. and Bova, Patrick: NORC Social Research, 1941-1964: An inventory of studies and publications in social research. Chicago, National Opinion Research Center, 1964.

For the period 1981 to the end of 1986 project descriptions can be found in the following:

National Opinion Research Center: Report 1981-82; Report 1983-84; Report 1985-86. Chicago, 1982, 1985, 1987.

The INDEX BY PROJECT section of this bibliography provides descriptive titles of projects and also provides references to project descriptions in NORC Social Research, 1941-1964 and to Report 1983-84 and Report 1985-1986 (Report 1981-1982 describes projects but does not list them separately). The Introduction to the INDEX BY PROJECT provides further information.

Organization of the Bibliography

The bibliography is made up of a list of publications arranged alphabetically by author (AUTHOR SECTION), each assigned a record number, a list of publications that have appeared in a numbered series (PUBLICATIONS IN SERIES), and three sections that provide access to the AUTHOR SECTION by record number: the AUTHOR INDEX, the INDEX BY PROJECT and the GENERAL INDEX.

AUTHOR SECTION: Publications are arranged alphabetically by author(s) last name, then alphabetically by title. Each entry is assigned a record number. A bracketed note appears at the end of most entries and includes the study number, paging if not given in the entry, availability information and other notes about the item.

PUBLICATIONS IN SERIES: Lists of NORC publications that have appeared in a numbered series are arranged alphabetically by series title and then by series number within each series. For each series a brief introduction is provided, with indication of availability for more recent materials.

AUTHOR INDEX: All authors are listed here to provide access to other than first authors; to help users determine form of authors' names that have been standardized; and also to ascertain alphabetic position of authors (eg: O', Ma, Mac, Mc).

INDEX BY PROJECT: Provides a listing, by project number, of all projects that form the basis for the works included in the bibliography, and for each project, a listing of the record numbers of entries in the AUTHOR SECTION that are based on the project. This is not a complete list of NORC projects since most extramural contract research is excluded. Some intramural projects for which writing has not been identified are also not included. The GENERAL INDEX provides subject, sponsor and other access to this index. A more complete introduction appears at the beginning of the section.

GENERAL INDEX: This is an index designed to provide subject, keyword, sponsor and selected title access to the INDEX BY PROJECT and also generally to the AUTHOR SECTION for writing not based on a particular project. A more complete introduction is provided at the beginning of the section.

A Note on Access to the Author Section

Since the vast majority of writing at NORC is based on specific projects, a project approach to access is emphasized in this bibliography. We felt it important for the user to be able to survey all writing in the bibliography that is based on any particular project.

The INDEX BY PROJECT is the device that leads the user to all writing based on a particular project. If the number of the project of interest is known, one locates that project by its number and then consults the record numbers listed after the project title. The result is access to all entries related to the project.

If the project number is not known, the GENERAL INDEX is available to lead users to relevant projects by subject, keyword, sponsor and selected titles.

Some writing is not, however, based on a particular project. Access to such writing is also available through the GENERAL INDEX, which lists record numbers of entries in the AUTHOR SECTION that are not based on a particular project. In some cases, entries that are based on a project but that would not be immediately identifiable as such are also indexed in this fashion.

For the most complete coverage, then, the user should take both approaches. That is, the user should consult the GENERAL INDEX first, note the projects listed at the index terms of interest, and also note the record numbers listed. Then the user should consult the INDEX BY PROJECT in order to identify the record numbers of entries that are based on the projects.

Availability of Publications

The Sheatsley library attempts to make all publications available, whether by purchase, by lending, or by copying.

If an item is available from the Sheatsley Library by purchase, such is indicated in the bracketed note to the entry.

Much of what is readily available appears in recent numbered series such as the ERC/NORC Discussion Papers, the PRC/NORC Discussion Papers, and the like. Information on availability is provided in the introductions to these series in the PUBLICATIONS IN SERIES section.

Many items are available in local libraries, but failing that (especially for unpublished works), are available on loan from the Sheatsley Library.

If in doubt as to availability, please inquire of the Sheatsley Library.

Many NORC publications are available from other agencies, and that is indicated in the bracketed notes, as follows:

NTIS: Materials are available from the National Technical Information Service, a quasi-governmental agency that abstracts and distributes reports (in paper or microfiche) based on federal government-sponsored research. Some libraries stock microfiche collections of NTIS documents. Orders must be pre-paid.

National Technical Information Service
5285 Port Royal Road
Springfield, VA 22161
(703) 487-4650

ERIC: Materials are available from Educational Resources Information Center, a part of the U.S. Department of Education, which abstracts and distributes reports (in paper and microfiche) in education sponsored by the federal government. Many libraries maintain collections of ERIC reports in microfiche. Orders must be pre-paid.

Educational Resources Information Center
555 New Jersey Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20208
(800) 873-3742

GPO: Materials are available from the U.S. Government Printing Office, the printer and distributor of many government documents. Many libraries maintain collections of documents from GPO. Pre-payment is required.

Superintendent of Documents
U.S. Government Printing Office
Washington, DC 20402-9325
(202) 783-3238

Ph. D. Dissertations: University of Chicago dissertations are available from the following:

University of Chicago Libraries
Preservation Department
1100 East 57th Street
Chicago, IL 60637
(312) 702-9313

Dissertations from most other schools are available from the following:

University Microfilms International
300 North Zeeb Road
Ann Arbor, MI 48106-1346
(800) 521-0600

As mentioned, NTIS, ERIC and GPO maintain depository arrangements with many libraries--local library reference services can help locate these.

A Note on Production

The software used for the production of this bibliography is Pro-Cite (TM), produced by Personal Bibliographic Software, Inc., of Ann Arbor, Michigan. Any shortcomings that appear to be software-related are due to the particular application by the authors.

The bibliographic format chosen in Pro-cite is The manual of style, 13th edition (Chicago, University of Chicago Press, 1982) and specifically CHICAGOA for works in the humanities and the social sciences.

Pro-cite allows manipulation of bibliographies in many ways, including free text searching and sorting and indexing by virtually any field. The file that produced this bibliography will be kept intact and used for custom searches at NORC. Users are invited to inquire about custom searches--for example, it is possible to produce bibliographies for specific projects and to download them as a generic word processing file.

Acknowledgements

The compilers thank the authors for being helpful when we asked them to review their materials and for answering other questions as they arose.

We also want to thank people at NORC who worked on the bibliography. John Baldrige examined project files for almost a year and extracted information about project-related writing that would not have been easily found otherwise. We also want to thank Cassandra Britton and Jeffrey Cothran of the Communications Services Department, who showed great patience and skill in transforming our amateur word processing files into the finished copy we are now reading. And our thanks also go to Laurie Hendrickson of the Communications Services Department, who designed the cover and otherwise gave guidance to the production of the document.

Appreciation is also due to Julie Less and Frank Norfleet of the Economics Research Center, to Margarete Wafer of the Methodology Research Center, to Isabel Garcia and Adelle Hinojosa of the Ogburn-Stouffer Center, and to Susan Campbell and Anthony Markward of the Chapin Hall Center for Children for help in gathering information about writing emanating from their centers.

A special thanks is also due to Susan Campbell, formerly Communications Director of NORC and now Communications Director of the Chapin Hall Center for Children, for her help and support over the many years that we talked, dreamed and thought about such a bibliography.

The Staff Committee on the 50th Anniversary of NORC also should be acknowledged for its support and understanding, and especially its chair Pearl Zinner.

Errors are inevitable, and we would appreciate being advised of any that users find. An errata sheet will be issued and later incorporated as corrections in reprintings and supplements.

DECISION-MAKING IN CHILD WELFARE

◆ Child abuse and neglect decision-making in Cook County

JOHN R. SCHUERMAN, MATTHEW W. STAGNER,
PENNY JOHNSON, AND EDWARD MULLEN

This report summarizes the findings of a year-long study aimed at providing an empirically based description of decision-making by workers and supervisors of the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS) in Cook County in cases of child abuse and neglect. The report presents an overview of the process of handling cases of child abuse and neglect, examines in detail several key decisions that affect the outcomes of cases, and presents some overall observations about the decision-making process. The report includes a full description of the methodology employed and is illustrated abundantly with flow charts. 1989. 86pp. (DP#027) $4.50

Expert consulting systems in social welfare

JOHN R. SCHUERMAN

Expert consulting systems, developed out of work in the field of artificial intelligence, are computer programs that can be asked to give advice on the solution of problems. This paper describes the origins and characteristics of expert systems, the circumstances under which they might be useful in social welfare, and issues and problems relating to their implementation. Also published in Social Work Research and Abstracts (Fall 1987). 1987. 21pp. (DP#022) $2.75

SUBSTITUTE CARE

◆ Foster care placement: The child's perspective

PENNY JOHNSON AND CAROL YOKEN

This study illuminates the experience of foster care placement from the perspective of the child. Intensive interviews with a random sample of 60 Cook County foster children between the ages 11 and 14 explore the children's experiences of adjusting to new families, their perceptions about family problems and how placement came about, their participation in major decisions affecting them, their assessment of the costs and benefits of placement, and their thoughts about the future and returning home. 1990. 32pp. (DP#036) $3.00

The Chapin Hall

◆ Substitute care in Illinois: 1977-1988

ROBERT M. GOERGE AND SUSAN SMITH

This report continues and expands the analysis of the Illinois substitute care population begun in 1985 with Chapin Hall's State of the Child (see p. 5). The 1985 report found significant differences in the foster care experiences of minority and white children and found that patterns of placement duration and reentry were significantly different in Cook County and the balance of the state. The present study confirms existence of these patterns. It also finds that a growth in the number of black children entering substitute care is a factor in the increase of the substitute care caseload as a whole. The report examines changes in the composition of the substitute care population in terms of age, race/ethnicity, and length of time in care, and provides an extensive comparison of substitute care caseloads in Cook County and the balance of the state. Illustrated with tables and figures. 1990. 30pp.

(DP#041) $3.00

◆ The reunification process in substitute care

ROBERT M. GOERGE

This analysis focuses on the movement of foster children through foster care placements and back to the homes of their parents, specifically exploring how the probability of reunification changes with duration in substitute care. Using a statistical method known as event-history analysis, the author shows that the probability of reunification greatly decreases after the first few weeks in placement, that the greatest decrease in the probability of reunification occurs for abused and neglected children, and that the home of a relative provides the most stable placement. Reprint from the Social Service Review (Fall 1990). 35pp.

◆ Placement duration and foster care reentry in New York and Illinois

ROBERT M. GOERGE AND FRED WULCZYN

The Adoption Assistance and Child Welfare Act of 1980 (P.L. 96-272) established procedural requirements intended to alleviate abuses in the foster care system. Now, a decade later, how well are foster care systems serving children, their families, and families who adopt? Using administrative data on the foster care populations in New York from 1982-1989 and in Illinois from 1976-1988, this study analyzes lengths of stay and reentry of children into foster care. Volume One contains the text of the report with selected tables. Volume Two presents supplementary tables. May be purchased separately or together. 1990.

◆ Judicial review of children in substitute care

MARY ANN HARTNETT

Juvenile courts must work to strike a balance between promoting the safety and well-being of children while respecting the rights of families and due process of law. This study examines two juvenile courts in Illinois that serve demographically similar children and families yet whose counties (Cook and St. Clair) have significantly different records when it comes to duration of children in foster care. 1991. 82pp.

◆ Papers prepared for the Illinois Facilities Fund

This series examines issues relating to planning residential-care facilities for children who are in substitute care. The four papers discuss the historical and contemporary ideas that have influenced the planning of residential care facilities, the state-of-the-art in residential care, existing residential care capacity and use in Illinois, and factors that may affect future need. 1989.

Policy and resource factors in the achievement of permanency for foster children in Illinois

MARK F. TESTA AND ROBERT M. GOERGE

This paper presents the findings of an analysis of longitudinal child-tracking and financial data for a 1-in-40 sample of children in Illinois foster care between 1976 and 1986. The purpose of the analysis was to begin to assess the consequences of The Adoption Assistance and Child Welfare Act of 1980 by looking at lengths of placement and rates of reunification and reentry in a single large state. The analysis offers insights into the ways P.L. 96-272 may be affecting children's chances of permanency. 1988. 80pp.

(DP#028) $4.50

Foster care reform

ROLAND KULLA

This paper examines some key elements of an improved foster care system. Adopting the premise that promoting family reunification should be the primary function of foster care, the author focuses on family-focused and treatment foster care as two types of foster care with special potential for aiding troubled children and families. The paper reviews several existing programs and discusses the challenges of foster care reform. 1988. 53pp.

(DP#023) $3.75

The use of computerized data in child welfare case management

MARY ANN HARTNETT AND MARK F. TESTA

This paper describes a two-year project designed to create a computerized case assessment and planning system in collaboration with the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services. The project's goals were to create a longitudinal database on children in substitute care, conduct research on trends in the placement careers of children, and explore potential uses of computerized data at all levels of the child welfare agency. The paper identifies problems associated with caseworkers' lack of access to basic information on children and their placements and discusses how computerized data might aid them in their work. 1988. 40pp.

Data necessary to support national policy functions in foster care and adoption

MARK F. TESTA

Prepared for the Senate Advisory Committee on Adoption and Foster Care Information, this essay describes the data collection required to provide a basis for national policy functions in foster care and adoption. The author suggests a model of a limited set of quantitative indicators that would enable federal policy-makers to make informed decisions about the impact of existing policies and programs. Methodological aspects of collecting and maintaining data on a national scale are also discussed. 1987. 51pp.

PARENTING AND THE HOME ENVIRONMENT

◆ The home environment: A mechanism through which maternal employment affects child development

SONALDE DESAI, ROBERT T. MICHAEL, AND P. LINDSAY CHASE-LANSDALE

This paper is one of several being produced by the authors on the subject of maternal employment and its effect on child development. Data collected on children of female participants in the National Longitudinal Survey of Youth (NLSY) form the basis of the research. One finding of the research is that maternal employment has a negative effect on the intellectual development of boys in middle- and higher-income, but not lower-income, families. The present report looks more closely at how maternal employment affects the home environment. The authors found that among the low-income families studied, the additional income of working mothers can enhance the quality of the home environment, resulting in a more positive developmental atmosphere for children. This gain appears to offset the loss to the child of the mother's presence. In higher-income families, the loss of the mother was not substantially offset by improvements in the child's home environment. 1990. 40pp.

◆ From and to poverty: The impact of teenage motherhood on children

P. LINDSAY CHASE-LANSDALE AND JEANNE BROOKS-GUNN

While teenage childbearing is closely associated with poverty and other socioeconomic conditions that can diminish the prospects of teenage mothers and their children, long-term outcomes for these mothers and children vary considerably. This paper summarizes the state of research relating to the long-range outcomes of teen mothers and their children. It identifies areas in which further research is needed and highlights new ideas for interventions with adolescent mothers and their families. 1990. 34pp.

◆ Employment and marriage among inner-city fathers

MARK F. TESTA, NAN MARIE ASTONE, MARILYN KROGH, AND KATHRYN M. NECKERMAN

Using data from the Urban Poverty and Family Structure Survey of inner-city residents in Chicago, this article examines the effects of employment on the likelihood that single fathers will marry. Results of the analysis show that employed fathers are twice as likely as non-employed fathers to marry the mother of their first child. The study also found that couples are more likely to marry if the woman is a high-school graduate. The social support of adolescent mothers: Pregnancy, school completion, and remaining in the parental home

MARK F. TESTA AND LINDA K. BOWEN

This paper presents the results of a longitudinal study that sought to identify factors associated with adolescent welfare mothers' ability to achieve self-sufficiency. Through analysis of a probability sample of 575 AFDC recipients living in Cook County in 1981, the study explored the degree to which informal and formal social supports mediate the disruptive effects of adolescent childbirth on the process of educational

Demographic perspectives on single parenting

DENNIS P. HOGAN AND LAWRENCE C. BASEM

This paper documents demographic trends related to single parenting. It provides baseline data on the marriage, separation, divorce, and remarriage experiences of American women. It reviews patterns of marital and non-marital fertility and offers data on the changing number and proportion of children growing up in single-parent families. The socio-economic characteristics of children in single-parent and two-parent households are also considered. 1987. 50pp.

Adolescent Parent Outreach Follow-up Survey: A longitudinal study of young mothers on AFDC in Cook County

PAT W. MOSENA

This paper presents data from a study of 899 teenage mothers on AFDC in Cook County, interviewed in 1981-2 and again in 1983-4. The report discusses the life circumstances of the mothers and identifies personal and family characteristics associated with subsequent child-bearing and high-school completion. 1985. 118pp.

Evaluation of the Illinois Department of Public Aid Young Parent Program

JOHN SCHUERMAN, FRED WULCZYN, NAOMI FARBER

The long-term objectives of the Young Parent Program were to reduce dependency and promote effective family planning among teenage parents on public aid. The program's services included assistance in returning to school, vocational training and job placement, training in English as a second language, birth control education and referral, and parent education. The evaluation consisted of a randomized experiment with an implementation component designed to assess the program's evolution over time. 1984. 67pp.

COMMUNITY RESOURCES FOR CHILDREN

♦ The role of after-school programs in the lives of inner-city children

ROBERT HALPERN

Through an analysis of a major Chicago youth agency, this report explores the purposes and content of after-school programs and their impact on the lives of inner-city youth. 1991. 60pp.

♦ The availability and use of community resources for young adolescents in an inner-city and a suburban community

JULIA LITTELL AND JOAN WYNN

This study examines the resources available to youth in two different socioeconomic communities. The authors explore what resources are typically made available to youth by public and private organizations and how resources differ across communities. The report identifies many differences in the range and types of community resources for youth and begins to explore the implications of these disparities. The benefits that may accrue to youth from the use of community resources are also explored. 1989. 136pp.

(DP#026) $6.00

Communities and adolescents: An exploration of reciprocal supports

JOAN WYNN, HAROLD A. RICHMAN, ROBERT A. RUBENSTEIN, AND JULIA LITTELL

This paper examines the role of communities in promoting the development of youth and preparing them for adult roles at home and in society. The report identifies policy issues involved in developing community supports and research needed to support future policy in this area. Also published by the William T. Grant Foundation Commission on Work, Family, and Citizenship. 1987. 71pp.

THE SAFETY NET

◆ The family, welfare, and homelessness

PETER H. ROSSI

This essay by one of America's leading sociologists describes homelessness as a symptom and result of other problems in American life. The essay places the current rise in homelessness in a historical context and compares the homeless population with the population of extremely poor people who are housed. The author finds that today's homeless population is characterized not only by relative youth and a high proportion of minorities, but also by high rates of alcoholism, drug abuse, and mental disability and by the absence of sustaining family ties. The essay analyzes the adequacy of existing policies and recommends others that might alleviate homelessness in the United States. Published with permission of the Notre Dame Journal of Law, Ethics, and Public Policy, where the essay first appeared. 1990. 27pp. (DP#037) $3.25

Help-seeking and the use of social service providers by welfare families in Chicago

HAROLD A. RICHMAN AND MATTHEW W. STAGNER

The objective of this study was to document the extent to which welfare families use social service providers, their experiences with social service providers, and reasons families do not seek help from them. Based on interviews with 737 Chicagoans who headed welfare households with children, the study found that nearly half of the respondents had not turned to social services providers for assistance during the preceding year and that 73 percent of the help-seeking experiences of all families studied did not involve social service providers. Families relied more heavily on informal helping networks for assistance with their problems. 1986. 64pp.

THE NEEDS AND CONDITION OF CHILDREN IN ILLINOIS

◆ The Integrated database for children's services in Illinois

ROBERT M. GOERGE

Administrative databases maintained by public agencies dealing with children are a key resource for improving the services children receive. Linking or integrating the databases of two or more categorical agencies can open the way for understanding how children with multiple problems receive care and how children interact with the social service system over time. Using the example of an integrated database now being created in Illinois, this essay describes the collaborative conditions and technical procedures required to make such a database a reality. Issues such as the reliability and confidentiality of data are discussed. The report also discusses how such data can be used to manage and plan services for children. Available November 1991. 30pp.

(DP#042) $3.00

◆ Mental-health planning for emotionally handicapped children in Illinois

JOAN COSTELLO, ROBERT M. GOERGE, REBECCA KRANTZ

Commissioned by the Office of the Governor, this report assesses the need for child mental-health services in Illinois and describes how that need might be addressed by government and other responsible parties. It examines the state's progress toward a community-based system of mental health services and discusses what further action is needed. The appendix, "Data Requirements for Planning Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services in Illinois," describes the administrative data available to construct a picture of the mental health needs of children in Illinois. 1989. 166pp. (DP#025) $6.75

A study of chronic illness among children in Illinois

ELIZABETH A. KUTZA, ARTHUR F. KOHRMAN, HAROLD A. RICHMAN

This study, conducted in conjunction with researchers at LaRabida Children's Hospital and Research Center, analyzes the extent and nature of chronic illness among Illinois children and identifies difficulties that children and families face in dealing with chronic illness. Ways to improve social services to chronically ill children and their families are discussed. 1988. 158pp.

(DP#021) $1.50

Child day-care resources in Illinois

JOAN COSTELLO

This study was undertaken to aid the development of day-care policies in Illinois. The report assesses changes in demography and labor-force participation that have fueled the growing demand for day care and surveys the day-care resources in existence at the time the report was written. Legislation relating to the provision of day-care is also discussed. 1986. 110pp.

The state of the child: 1985

MARK F. TESTA AND EDWARD LAWLOR

The state of the child: 1980

MARK F. TESTA AND FRED WULCZYN

The State of the Child reports document and analyze trends in the condition of children in the state of Illinois. The reports discuss the demographic characteristics of the total child population, its distribution through the state, the composition and characteristics of the families in which children live, and children's economic status, health, and other characteristics. The reports present and analyze data on topics such as infant mortality, child abuse and neglect, children living in poverty, children in substitute care, teen pregnancy and parenthood, and youth alienation. The data presented are drawn from a wide variety of published and unpublished sources, including the 1980 United States census and administrative data from state agencies. The later report compares the condition of children in 1985 with their condition five years earlier and identifies key policy changes that occurred during the period.

FORTHCOMING

The 1990 Comparative State of the Child Report

This report, an extension of Chapin Hall's earlier State of the Child studies, will report on and compare child well-being in five major states--New York, Illinois, California, Texas, and Florida. The child population of these states makes up nearly a third of the nation's total. Within a comparative framework, the report will present statistical information on the condition of children in each state and examine the relation of state and local policy to child well-being.

Expected publication: Summer 1992.

PUBLIC RESPONSIBILITY TOWARD CHILDREN

Children in an aging society: Treasured resource or forgotten minority?

HAROLD A. RICHMAN AND MATTHEW W. STAGNER

In the next 20 years, children are likely to make up an ever-smaller proportion of the nation's population. The authors explore the implications of this trend for children and children's policy. As other segments of the population grow, will the needs of children be neglected? Or will children, as an increasingly precious element of society, become the focus of more intense concern and care? ISSUES IN SERVICE DELIVERY

◆ The Advocate Home Network demonstration in Illinois

JOAN COSTELLO

This report explores the effects of implementing in Illinois an innovative program for homeless youth that had been developed in another state. In addition to addressing issues related to the "transfer of technology" from one site to another, the study examines whether the model of therapeutic foster care used was effective in preparing homeless youth for independence. 1989. 39pp.

JOAN COSTELLO

Marillac House is a long-established private agency providing services in one of the poorest neighborhoods on Chicago's west side. Growing out of a study that assessed the agency's capital development needs, this paper captures the issues agencies face as they work to provide services in poor and changing communities. The report discusses demographic trends in the service population, the possibility of economic change in the area, the agency's current and projected programs, and strategies for the future. 1989. 35pp.

The Impact of liability insurance problems on the delivery of services to children: An Intersection of uncertainties

JOAN WYNN

Conducted in 1986 at the height of a liability insurance crisis, this study explores how services to children are affected by changes in the liability insurance industry. The report defines issues raised by fluctuations in the price and availability of insurance and discusses steps that children's service agencies might take to minimize the adverse effects of fluctuations on service delivery. 1988 (revised edition). 100pp. (DP#006) $5.00

Social services for children: Recent trends and implications

HAROLD A. RICHMAN AND MATTHEW W. STAGNER
Deinstitutionalization has had a significant impact on the way that children with special needs are cared for in this country. This paper explores factors impeding the provision of social services to children outside institutional settings and puts forward a concept of "social care" that the authors believe would help social service agencies respond more effectively to the needs of the young. 1986. 23pp. (DP#008) $2.75

GENERAL SOCIAL SURVEY (GSS) PUBLICATIONS IN SERIES

The GSS project has reorganized its research reports into five series. These series incorporate the old GSS Technical Reports as well as miscellaneous other GSS publications. In the following lists original GSS Technical Report numbers are given when applicable.

In addition the Cumulative codebooks have been issued, since 1977, in a series titled National Data Program in the Social Sciences Series. For earlier GSS codebooks consult the GENERAL INDEX.

The series are as follows:

GSS Social Change Reports include studies of trends

GSS Methodological Reports cover research on survey methods and other technical matters

GSS Crossnational Reports encompass international comparisons

GSS Topical Reports contain substantive research that does not deal primarily with either trends or crossnational comparisons

GSS Project Reports deal with descriptions of project activities and uses of GSS data

National Data Program for the Social Sciences includes cumulative codebooks issued since 1977

Availability:

Reports published in periodicals are available free, in reprint form, upon request to the author or to the Paul B. Sheatsley Library at NORC, depending on supply. Those reprints available from the library are followed by an asterisk. Other papers are available for the cost of copying, ten cents per page or five cents per page when two pages are reduced to one, from the Sheatsley Library. Those GSS papers published in the NORC Numbered Report series are available at the price listed following the reference. Papers over 40 pages long will be lent by the library upon request.

AUTHOR INDEX

Use this index to locate records for authors whatever their position in the order of authorship, whether first, second, third and so on.

The list may also be scanned to determine the form used for authors in this bibliography, since names have been standardized here.

Use it also to ascertain position in the alphabetic order (eg: O', MaC, Mac, Mc).

INDEX BY PROJECT

INDEX BY PROJECT

This list of projects provides access to the main body of the bibliography (the Author Section) by project number and brief descriptive title after which the record numbers for the entries that pertain to that project are listed.

Subject and other access to this list of projects (by project number) is provided by the GENERAL INDEX.

General Social Surveys (GSS), 1972 to 1990, are not included in the project listing because it was felt that access to records that use specific GSS project years would not be particularly useful without knowing the subject of the work.

The GENERAL INDEX provides subject and methodological access to items that use GSS data and that are written by NORC staff. The Annotated bibliography of papers using the General Social Surveys, 8th edition, by Tom W. Smith and Bradley J. Arnold (NORC, May, 1990) provides access to uses of GSS data by anyone whether affiliated with NORC or not.

NORC projects are numbered, and the manner in which numbers have been assigned has varied over the years. As a result, it's not possible to provide a strictly numeric or chronological list of projects by project number.

To aid the user in locating a particular project number in this list, refer to the following summary of project numbers. The numbers in the summary are in the order in which projects are arranged in the list.

Note that some project numbers assigned through about 1964 contain a letter and number notation after the title (eg: A1). This notation refers to an entry for that project in NORC Social Research, 1941-1964: An inventory of studies and publications in social research, by Allswang and Bova (NORC, 1964). These entries provide descriptive information about the project.

Note also that projects starting around number 4118 contain a year/year, page number notation in parenthesis (eg: 83/84:90) following the title. The notations provide page numbers for pages which contain project entries (by title) in National Opinion Research Center: Report, 1983-1984 and Report 1985-1986. These entries provide descriptive information about projects.

Copies of NORC Social Research, 1941-1964, Report 1983-1984 and Report, 1985-1986 are available from the Sheatsley Library.

Also given in a parenthesis after the descriptive title is the name of the sponsor of the project (eg: OWI); for abbreviations see the Introduction.

GENERAL INDEX

GENERAL INDEX

Use this index to access the INDEX BY PROJECT and the AUTHOR SECTION by name of sponsor, selected titles, key words, subjects, and by name when person is subject.

Given in the entries are PROJECT NUMBER(S) of projects that deal primarily with the entry and RECORD NUMBER(S) for items that are not related to a particular project or are not on the apparent subject of the project.

The PROJECT NUMBER(S) refer to the projects listed in the INDEX BY PROJECT where records numbers of entries relating to that project will be found.

The RECORD NUMBER(S) refer to entries in the AUTHOR SECTION.

Users are urged to consult both the project number and the record number references in order to assure complete coverage of the index entry.
