

Nova Law Review

Volume 21, Issue 1

1996

Article 3

Appellate Practice

Anthony C. Musto*

*

Copyright ©1996 by the authors. Nova Law Review is produced by The Berkeley Electronic Press (bepress). <http://nsuworks.nova.edu/nlr>

TABLE OF CONTENTS

I. INTRODUCTION	15
II. AMENDMENTS TO FLORIDA'S RULES OF PROCEDURE	15
A. Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure	15
B. Florida Rules of Judicial Administration	17
C. Florida Rules of Workers' Compensation Procedure	18
III. COURT DIVISIONS	19
IV. SUPREME COURT JURISDICTION	20
V. VENUE	21
A. When Changes of Venue Are Deemed Effective	21
B. Venue in Appeals from Orders of the Unemployment Appeals Commission	22
VI. ORDERS REVIEWABLE	24
A. Orders Denying Motions to Dismiss Based on Claims of Untimely Service	24
B. Declaratory Judgments	25
C. Orders Denying Motions for Summary Judgment Based on Claims of Sovereign Immunity	26
D. Nonappealable Orders	27
E. Orders Reviewable by Certiorari	27
F. Orders Not Reviewable by Certiorari	28
VII. RENDITION	28
A. Delay in Rendition Due to Pendency of Motion for Rehearing	28
B. Orders Denying Motions	31
C. Relinquishment of Jurisdiction	31
VIII. NOTICE OF APPEAL	32
IX. BOND	33
X. BRIEFS	33

* B.G.S., University of Miami, 1972; J.D., Catholic University of America, 1975. Mr. Musto is board certified in appellate practice and is the Chief Appellate Counsel for the County Attorney's Office of Broward County, Florida. He is the chair of The Florida Bar Criminal Law Section and the immediate past-chair of The Florida Bar Appellate Practice and Advocacy Section. He is also a past-chair of the Florida Rules of Judicial Administration Committee and the Florida Criminal Procedure Rules Committee.

A.	Form	33
B.	Supplemental Briefs	34
XI.	CERTIORARI.....	34
A.	Procedure	34
B.	Record	37
C.	Order to Show Cause	38
XII.	AMICUS CURIAE.....	39
XIII.	PROHIBITION	40
XIV.	THE EFFECT ON APPEALS OF PRIOR DENIALS OF PROHIBITION.....	40
XV.	MOOTNESS	42
XVI.	HARMLESS ERROR.....	43
XVII.	SANCTIONS	43
XVIII.	REHEARING	46
XIX.	APPELLATE ATTORNEYS' FEES.....	48
A.	Offer of Judgment on Appeal	48
B.	Violations of the Government in the Sunshine Law	49
XX.	MANDATE.....	49
XXI.	APPEALS IN CRIMINAL CASES.....	50
A.	Death of Defendant	50
B.	Belated Appeals	51
C.	Appeals by the State	52
1.	Appeals Taken After the Jury is Sworn	52
2.	Effect of Nolle Prose	53
3.	Pretrial Orders Declaring a Sentencing Statute Unconstitutional	53
D.	Motions for Post Conviction Relief	54
1.	Summary Denial	54
2.	Orders Granting in Part and Denying in Part	55
E.	Cross-Appeals	55
F.	Disqualification of Counsel	56
G.	Out-of-Time Rehearing	58
XXII.	APPEALS IN TERMINATION OF PARENTAL RIGHTS CASES	58
A.	Final Orders	58
B.	Lack of Issue of Arguable Merit	59
XXIII.	APPEALS IN WORKERS' COMPENSATION CASES	61
XXIV.	APPEALS IN JUVENILE CASES.....	63
A.	Final Orders	63
B.	Evidence Sufficient to Prove Only Lesser Included Offense	64
C.	Sentencing	65

D. Juvenile Restitution	67
XXV. APPEALS IN BOND VALIDATION CASES	67
XXVI. A LOOK TO THE FUTURE	67

I. INTRODUCTION

This article will discuss recent developments in the field of appellate practice in Florida. Although this article will focus primarily on cases decided between July 1, 1995, and June 30, 1996, it will also deal with certain cases decided shortly before and after that period which are either of particular interest to the appellate practitioner or which provide the background for, or the culmination of, issues that were addressed by cases decided during that period.

In a broad sense, every appellate decision falls within the scope of appellate practice. Decisions relating to substantive areas of the law, however, are more properly dealt with in articles relating to those substantive areas and therefore will not be discussed here. Rather, this article will focus on matters relating to practice in the appellate courts and will deal with substantive areas only with regard to appellate considerations unique to those areas. Additionally, this article will not discuss cases relating to the preservation of issues, nor the question of whether particular errors were harmless.

II. AMENDMENTS TO FLORIDA'S RULES OF PROCEDURE

The Supreme Court of Florida adopted several amendments to the various sets of Florida procedural rules that will impact the field of appellate practice.

A. Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure

Rule 9.130(a)(5) of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure was amended¹ to allow for appellate review of orders entered on motions filed under Rule 12.540 of the Florida Family Law Rules of Procedure requesting relief from judgment, decrees or orders. This amendment was necessitated by creation of the *Florida Family Law Rules of Procedure*² and is intended only to continue allowing appeals from orders in family law cases that were previously entered pursuant to Rule 1.540 of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure.

1. Amendment to Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.130, 663 So. 2d 1314 (Fla. 1995).

Responding to concerns expressed by the fourth district in *McFadden v. West Palm Beach Police Officer*³ regarding the need for an amendment to the rules that would allow determinations of indigency for appellate purposes to be made at the appellate level,⁴ the supreme court, in McFadden v. Fourth District Court of Appeal,⁵ adopted an amendment accomplishing that purpose for incarcerated parties. The amendment adds to the existing language of Rule 9.430 of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure, which deals with the process for obtaining an indigency determination in the lower tribunal, the following paragraph:

In lieu of the above procedure, an indigent incarcerated party may file in the appellate court a motion for an order of indigency, along with an affidavit showing the party's inability either to pay fees and costs or to give security therefor. The affidavit shall be sufficient without more for the court to rule on the appellant's indigency unless an objection is filed. If an objection is filed the appellate court may determine the issue or remand it to the lower tribunal for determination.⁶

Although the amended rule was made "effective immediately,"⁷ the court allowed any interested person to file comments regarding the matter.⁸ As a result of that process, seven days later, the court entered an order staying until further order of the court implementation of the amendment nunc pro tunc to the date of the court's decision. Subsequently, an alternative proposal was submitted by the Appellate Court Rules Committee and it is presently pending before the court.

The supreme court created an interesting situation when it amended both the criminal and appellate rules in an effort to ensure that criminal

2. In re Family Law Rules of Procedure, 663 So. 2d 1049 (Fla. 1995).

3. 658 So. 2d 1047 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

4. Id. at 1048.

5. 21 Fla. L. Weekly S183 (Apr. 25, 1996).

6. Id. at S184.

7. Id.

8. Id.

defendants will have the opportunity to raise sentencing errors on appeal. In Amendments to Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure 9.020(g) and Florida Rules of Criminal Procedure 3.800,⁹ the court created a new Rule 3.800(b) of the Florida Rules of Criminal Procedure, which provides: “(b) Motion to Correct Sentencing Error. A defendant may file a motion to correct the sentence or order of probation within ten days after rendition of the sentence.”¹⁰ At the same time, the court amended Rule 9.020(g) of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure to provide that a timely filed motion to correct a sentence or an order of probation delays rendition of the sentence or order until the motion is ruled upon.¹¹

Taken together, these two amendments appear to create an anomaly. The criminal rule indicates that a motion to correct a sentencing error is timely if filed within ten days after rendition, but the appellate rule states the timely filing of such a motion acts to delay rendition until its disposition. The net effect is that the time period within which the motion must be filed does not start to run until the motion has been disposed of.

At the time it adopted these amendments, the court also amended Rule 9.020(g)(3) of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure to state that “a pending motion to correct a sentence or order of probation shall not be affected by the filing of a notice of appeal from a judgment of guilt.”¹²

B. Florida Rules of Judicial Administration

Rule 2.050(h) of the Florida Rules of Judicial Administration was amended¹³ to provide that in any case in which a defendant has been sentenced to death, the circuit judge assigned to the case “shall take such action as may be necessary to assure that a complete record on appeal has been properly prepared”¹⁴ and that “the judge shall convene a status conference with all counsel of record as soon as possible after the record has been prepared . . . to ensure that the record is complete.”¹⁵

9. 675 So. 2d 1374 (Fla. 1996).

10. FLA. R. CRIM. P. 3.800(b). This rule is entitled “Motion to Correct Sentencing Error.”

11. Amendment to Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure 9.020(g) and Florida Rules of Criminal Procedure 3.800, 675 So. 2d at 1375.

12. Id. at 1375–76.

13. In re Amendments to Florida Rules of Judicial Administration Regarding Death Cases, 672 So. 2d 523 (Fla. 1996).

14. Id. at 524.

15. Id.

C. Florida Rules of Workers' Compensation Procedure

The supreme court adopted extensive revisions to the portion of the Florida Rules of Workers' Compensation Procedure that deals with appellate proceedings.¹⁶ In light of the large number of changes to the rules, no effort will be made here to detail every amendment that was approved. However, some of the more significant revisions will be discussed.

An effort was made to streamline the rules by deleting rules that were unnecessary or duplicative of the appellate rules and by creating a new rule, rule 4.156, which provides that “[a]ppellate review proceedings in workers’ compensation cases shall be governed by the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure (civil) except as otherwise provided by these rules.”¹⁷ The rules deleted in their entirety and their appellate rule counterparts [in brackets] are rules 4.180(e) [9.200(f)(2)]; 4.225 [9.210(g)]; 4.240 [9.320]; 4.250 [9.330]; 4.255 [9.331]; 4.260 [9.340].¹⁸

Rule 4.160 was amended in response to the first district’s invitation in *Hines Electric v. McClure*¹⁹ to the Workers’ Compensation Rules Committee to address certain problems that arose from the fact that the rule made review of certain non-final orders discretionary with the court.²⁰ The amended rule requires the court to consider appeals of some of the orders in question and divests it of the jurisdiction to consider appeals from certain other orders.²¹ A new provision was added indicating that nothing in the rule should be interpreted as precluding other original proceedings in the district court as provided in the appellate rules.²² Presumably, this provision was intended to clarify that when the appropriate requirements are met, orders that formerly fell within the court’s discretionary appellate jurisdiction can still be considered by certiorari.

Rule 4.161(b) was amended to reflect that the district court upon motion shall decide disputes as to whether challenges to certain benefits have been abandoned.²³

16. In re Amendments to the Florida Rules of Workers' Compensation Procedure, 664 So. 2d 945 (Fla. 1995).

17. Id. at 945.

18. 1995 Committee Note to Florida Rule of Workers' Compensation Procedure 4.156. In re Workers' Compensation Procedure, 664 So. 2d at 946.

19. 616 So. 2d 132 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1993).

20. For a discussion of the problems identified in Hines Electric, see Anthony C. Musto, Appellate Practice: 1993 Survey of Florida Law, 18 NOVA L. REV. 1, 28–30 (1993).

21. Workers' Compensation Procedure, 664 So. 2d at 946.

22. Id. at 947.

23. Id. at 948–49.

Rule 4.165 was amended to require that a conformed copy of the order or orders designated in a notice of appeal be attached to the notice²⁴ and to provide that notices of cross-appeal are no longer to be filed with the judge, but are to be filed directly with the district court.²⁵

Deleted from rule 4.180(a)(1) was a provision which allowed the district court to consider matters not introduced into evidence if necessary for the determination of the issues on appeal.²⁶

Rule 4.180 (g)(1) was renumbered as (f)(1) and was revised to make the procedures for relief from the filing fee and from the costs of the record on appeal consistent with changes to section 57.081(1) of the Florida Statutes, as amended by Chapter 94-318 section 18 of the Laws of Florida, and with the dictates of caselaw,²⁷ specifically *Schwab v. Brevard County School Board*²⁸ and Miller v. Hospitality Care Center.²⁹

III. COURT DIVISIONS

In an unpublished order captioned Local Rule Concerning Divisions in First District Court of Appeal, the supreme court approved as a local rule an administrative order³⁰ adopted by the First District Court of Appeal that created a criminal division of that court. The administrative order provides that the new division will consider “[a]ll criminal cases and all cases that originate from prisoners involving their conviction or sentence, juvenile delinquency cases, and criminal derivative actions such as gain time or parole decision challenges, original writ proceedings, including but not limited to habeas corpus.”³¹

The approval of this rule gives the first district, which had previously created a General and an Administrative Division,³² three subject matter divisions. It remains the only Florida appellate court to sit in divisions.

24. Id. at 950.

25. Id. at 951.

26. Workers' Compensation Procedure, 664 So. 2d at 951.

27. See 1995 Committee Note to Florida Rule of Workers' Compensation Procedure 4.180. Workers' Compensation Procedure, 664 So. 2d at 955-56.

28. 650 So. 2d 1099 (Fla. 5th Dist. Ct. App. 1995). For a discussion of the decision in Schwab, see Anthony C. Musto, Appellate Practice: 1995 Survey of Florida Law, 20 NOVA L. REV. 1, 23-25 (1995).

29. 431 So. 2d 254 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1983).

30. Fla. First District Court of Appeal Admin. Order No. 95-2.

31. Id. at 1.

32. See In re Court Divisions, 648 So. 2d 761 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1994).

IV. SUPREME COURT JURISDICTION

In St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Co. v. Indemnity Insurance Co. of North America,³³ the supreme court dealt with a case in which the fourth district had upheld a judgment against two defendants.³⁴ One of the defendants timely filed a motion for rehearing, which was denied some three months later.³⁵ Within thirty days of the denial, but 114 days after the opinion, the other defendant filed a notice invoking the supreme court's discretionary jurisdiction.³⁶

The plaintiff moved to strike the notice as untimely and to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction, claiming that the notice was not filed within thirty days of rendition, as required by Rule 9.120(b) of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure.³⁷ The plaintiff relied on rule 9.120(g), which provides that rendition is delayed by the pendency of motions for rehearing, but which also states that when such a motion is pending, "the final order shall not be deemed rendered with respect to any claim between the movant and any party against whom relief is sought by the motion."³⁸

The court found this rule to be inapplicable, however, concluding that it applied only to orders entered by trial courts.³⁹ The court buttressed its finding by noting that when the rule was amended to include the relevant portion, both the court's opinion⁴⁰ and the Report of The Florida Bar Appellate Court Rules Committee explained that the amendment was to clarify that in a multi-party situation, a single order can be rendered at different times depending on when the trial court resolved authorized post-trial motions.⁴¹

"In contrast,"⁴² the court continued, "the motions permitted in an appellate proceeding follow the procedure set forth in" Rule 9.300 of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure.⁴³ That rule states that "service of a

33. 675 So. 2d 590 (Fla. 1996).

34. See Florida Medical Malpractice Underwriting Ass'n v. Indemnity Ins. Co. of North America, 652 So. 2d 1148 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

35. St. Paul Fire, 675 So. 2d at 591.

36. Id.

37. Id.

38. FLA. R. APP. P. 9.120(g)(1).

39. St. Paul Fire, 675 So. 2d at 591.

40. In re Amendments to the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure, 609 So. 2d 516, 517 (Fla. 1992).

41. St. Paul Fire, 675 So. 2d at 591-92.

42. Id. at 592.

43. Id.

motion shall toll the time schedule of any proceeding in the court until disposition of the motion.”⁴⁴ This provision, the court found, “is clear on its face that it suspends the time schedule of any and all proceedings irrespective of the movant.”⁴⁵ The court therefore denied the plaintiff’s motion, concluding “that appellate motions are governed by rule 9.300(b), and a district court’s order is not ‘rendered’ until there has been a disposition of all motions relative to that order.”⁴⁶

V. VENUE

A. When Changes of Venue Are Deemed Effective

In Cottingham v. State,⁴⁷ the supreme court clarified an aspect of its decision in Vasilinda v. Lozano,⁴⁸ which established the standards for determining in which court appellate jurisdiction lies when the trial court has granted a change of venue to a circuit court located within another district. In Vasilinda, the court found that if a change of venue has not yet become effective when appellate jurisdiction is invoked, the appellate proceeding goes to the district court to which appeals are taken from the transferor court.⁴⁹ Conversely, the court found, when the change of venue has become effective, the appellate proceeding goes to the district court to which appeals are taken from the transferee court.⁵⁰

The decision in Cottingham focused on the issue of when changes of venue are deemed effective in civil cases. The court in Vasilinda had discussed that question, concluding that changes of venue in civil cases become effective when the court file has been received in the transferee court and costs and service charges required by the applicable statutes and rules of procedure are paid.⁵¹

In the decision under review in Cottingham, the first district had certified as being of great public importance the question of whether the date

44. FLA. R. APP. P. 9.300(b).

45. St. Paul Fire, 675 So. 2d at 592.

46. Id.

47. 672 So. 2d 28 (Fla. 1996).

48. 631 So. 2d 1082 (Fla. 1994).

49. Id. at 1087.

50. Id.

51. Id.

of payment of the costs and charges is the date they are mailed by the party responsible for payment or the date of receipt by the transferee court.⁵²

The supreme court found that the date of receipt by the transferee court is deemed to be the date of payment, and thus the date on which the change of venue is effective.⁵³

B. Venue in Appeals from Orders of the Unemployment Appeals Commission

In Mendelman v. Dade County Public Schools,⁵⁴ the third district had for review a decision of the Unemployment Appeals Commission. The unemployment appeal hearing had been conducted by telephone, with the claimant participating from Key Largo, the employer from Miami, and the appeals referee from Tallahassee.⁵⁵

The Commission moved to transfer the case to the first district, relying on section 443.151(4)(e), of the Florida Statutes, which states that appeals of commission orders are to go to the district court "in the appellate district in which the issues involved were decided by an appeals referee . . ."⁵⁶ The Commission reasoned that since the written ruling was issued by its Tallahassee office, the appeal could only go the first district.⁵⁷

The third district disagreed, noting that the proceeding at which the referee reaches a decision is the final hearing and concluding that when the participants are located in two appellate districts, "the fairest interpretation of the statute is that the appeal will lie in either appellate district."⁵⁸

The court indicated that a factor demonstrating that its interpretation of the statute is workable is the "many years' experience under the Florida Administrative Procedure Act, which provides for judicial review either in 'the district court of appeal in the appellate district where the agency

52. Cottingham, 672 So. 2d at 28. For a recitation of the complicated factual circumstances that led to the certified question, as well as a more complete statement of the standards established by Vasilinda, see Musto, supra note 28, at 18–20.

53. Cottingham, 672 So. 2d at 29–30.

54. 674 So. 2d 195 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

55. Key Largo is located in Monroe County, which constitutes the sixteenth circuit, a part of the third district. Miami is located in Dade County, which constitutes the eleventh circuit, a part of the third district. Tallahassee is located in Leon County, which is one of the counties in the second circuit, a part of the first district.

56. FLA. STAT. § 443.151(4)(e) (1995).

57. Mendelman, 674 So. 2d at 196.

58. Id.

maintains its headquarters or where a party resides.”⁵⁹ The court also stated that in taking its view, it was “influenced by practical considerations,”⁶⁰ specifically the fact that it generally grants requests for oral argument in unemployment compensation appeals and the court’s belief that its interpretation would therefore “provide more convenient access to the appellate courts.”⁶¹

The decision in Mendelman raises a number of questions about the rule of law applicable to other factual situations. For instance, if a claimant and an employer participate from locations in two different districts, while the appeals referee is in a third, is a party taking an appeal able to select venue from among three district courts? Does the rule of law set forth in Mendelman apply if a party who lives in one district travels to another district and participates in a hearing for the sole purpose of being able to subsequently appeal to the court of appeal for that district? Can parties and their attorneys expand the number of possible venues by participating from different locations? If a party participates on a cellular phone while driving through several districts, can an appeal go to any of those districts? To the extent that the practical consideration of providing convenient access for oral argument underlies the rule of law adopted in Mendelman, would a different conclusion be reached when the oral argument in the more distant court would be heard by video teleconference?⁶²

These questions and others will likely have to be dealt with at some point. If they prove too troublesome, consideration of whether the third district’s approach should be abandoned in favor of the position advocated by the commission in Mendelman might also become a question that will need to be addressed.

59. Id. at 196 (footnote) (citing FLA. STAT. § 120.68(2) (1995)).

60. Id. at 196.

61. Id.

62. In In re Oral Argument By Video Teleconference Network, 648 So. 2d 763 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1994), the first district established remote facilities for arguments by video teleconference. That court is presently conducting such arguments only when all attorneys expected to present argument are located near a single remote facility. Since the attorney representing the commission in Mendelman was from Tallahassee, and since it appears that the appellant, who represented himself on appeal, was from south Florida, this factor apparently had no applicability in that case. It may well play a role in striking the proper balance in future cases, however. For instance, if the parties are both from Ft. Myers, one of the locations at which the first district has established a remote facility, it would clearly be more convenient for the parties to present oral argument to the first district by video teleconference than it would be to travel to either Tampa or Lakeland, the locations at which the second district, which includes Ft. Myers, generally hears oral arguments.

VI. ORDERS REVIEWABLE

The courts decided a large number of cases dealing with the issue of whether certain orders were reviewable, either by appeal or by certiorari. The sheer volume of such cases precludes discussion of the reasoning of each case. This article will therefore focus on some of the more significant cases in this regard and set forth a sampling of other decisions, noting the type of order involved, and the conclusion reached by the court as to whether it was reviewable.

A. Orders Denying Motions to Dismiss Based on Claims of Untimely Service

Concluding that an order denying a motion to dismiss based on the failure to effect service within 120 days, as required by Rule 1.070(i) of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure, is not appealable, the second district dismissed the appeal in Nowry v. Collyar.⁶³ The court recognized, however, that its decision was in conflict with decisions of other districts⁶⁴ and it certified the following question to the supreme court:

DOES AN ORDER DENYING A MOTION TO DISMISS A COMPLAINT CLAIMING UNTIMELY SERVICE PURSUANT TO FLORIDA RULE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE 1.070(i) FAIL TO CONSTITUTE AN ORDER DETERMINING THE JURISDICTION OVER THE PERSON,⁶⁵ THUS MAKING IT A NONAPPEALABLE, NON-FINAL ORDER?⁶⁶

The first district addressed the same issue in Novella Land, Inc. v. Panama City Beach Office Park, Ltd.,⁶⁷ noting the conflict recognized in Nowry and agreeing with the second district that such orders are not appeal-

63. 666 So. 2d 555 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

64. See Comisky v. Rosen Management Servs., Inc., 630 So. 2d 628 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1994) (en banc); Mid-Florida Assocs., Ltd. v. Taylor, 641 So. 2d 182 (Fla. 5th Dist. Ct. App. 1994).

65. Orders determining the jurisdiction of the person are appealable pursuant to Rule 9.130(a)(3)(C)(I) of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure.

66. Nowry, 666 So. 2d at 556.

67. 662 So. 2d 743 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

able.⁶⁸ The first district also pointed out that the third district in *RD & G Leasing, Inc. v. Stebnicki*⁶⁹ had reached a similar conclusion.⁷⁰

B. Declaratory Judgments

In Canal Insurance Co. v. Reed,⁷¹ the supreme court determined that when an insurance coverage issue has been decided in a third party declaratory judgment action between an insurer and its insured prior to a final determination of liability in the underlying action, and, as a result, the insurer must provide liability coverage for the insured in the underlying action, the order entered in the declaratory judgment action is a final order subject to appellate review.⁷² Pointing out that under section 86.011 of the Florida Statutes, “a declaratory judgment has ‘the force and effect of a final judgment,’”⁷³ the court found itself “compelled to find that a declaratory judgment is appealable as a final order regardless of whether the judgment is rendered in a separate declaratory judgment action or as part of a third-party action such as that at issue here.”⁷⁴

Although finding the declaratory judgment regarding a determination of insurance coverage to be reviewable as a final order, the court stated that it “must also stress that such a judgment will not automatically result in a stay in the independent underlying cause of action.”⁷⁵ The court explained that “[t]his is because the underlying personal injury action is separate and distinct from the insurance coverage dispute”⁷⁶ and that “[t]he trial judge has the discretion to stay the underlying action between the parties pending resolution of the appeal or to permit it to continue concurrently with the appeal process.”⁷⁷

The court acknowledged that “it would be in the best interests of all the parties for coverage issues to be resolved as soon as possible.”⁷⁸ The court therefore “suggest[ed] that the district courts expedite review of appeals

68. Id. at 794.

69. 626 So. 2d 1002 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1993).

70. Novella Land, 662 So. 2d at 743.

71. 666 So. 2d 888 (Fla. 1996).

72. Id. at 889–90.

73. Id. at 891 (quoting FLA. STAT. § 86.011 (1995)).

74. Canal Ins. Co., 666 So. 2d at 891.

75. Id. at 892.

76. Id.

77. Id.

78. Id.

involving the sole issue of coverage”⁷⁹ and “that the Appellate Court Rules Committee consider an appropriate method for providing expedited review of these cases to avoid unnecessary delays in the final resolution of the underlying actions.”⁸⁰

C. Orders Denying Motions for Summary Judgment Based on Claims of Sovereign Immunity

In Department of Education v. Roe,⁸¹ the supreme court rejected an effort to extend to claims of sovereign immunity the rationale of Tucker v. Resha,⁸² which held that with regard to federal civil rights claims brought in state courts, public officials are entitled to interlocutory review of orders denying motions for summary judgment based on the defense of qualified immunity.⁸³ The decision in Tucker was based on the fact “that qualified immunity of a public official best achieves its purpose as an immunity from suit rather than a mere defense to liability”⁸⁴ and the fact that such immunity “is effectively lost if a case is erroneously permitted to go to trial.”⁸⁵

The court relied on a number of factors in declining to extend the Tucker rationale beyond the facts of that case. These factors included: 1) the fact that permitting interlocutory appeals when claims of sovereign immunity are rejected would “add substantially to the caseloads of the district courts of appeal;”⁸⁶ 2) the fact that since “the applicability of the sovereign immunity waiver is [often] inextricably tied to the underlying facts, [thus] requiring a trial on the merits . . . , many interlocutory decisions would be inconclusive and . . . a waste of judicial resources;”⁸⁷ 3) the fact that “qualified immunity is rooted in the need to protect public officials from undue interference, whereas sovereign immunity is not;”⁸⁸ and 4) the fact that in Tucker, the court “had an interest in affording federal causes of action brought in state court the same treatment they would receive if brought in

79. Canal Ins. Co., 666 So. 2d at 892.

80. Id.

81. 21 Fla. L. Weekly S311 (July 18, 1996).

82. 648 So. 2d 1187 (Fla. 1994).

83. Id. at 1190.

84. Roe, 21 Fla. L. Weekly at S311.

85. Tucker, 648 So. 2d at 1189 (quoting Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511, 526 (1985)).

86. Roe, 21 Fla. L. Weekly at S312.

87. Id.

88. Id.

federal court,”⁸⁹ while sovereign immunity cases deal “with a state law defense to an ordinary state law cause of action.”⁹⁰

D. Nonappealable Orders

Orders deemed to be nonappealable included: An order denying a motion to amend a complaint to add a punitive damage claim;⁹¹ a partial summary judgment on liability as to four counts of a six-count complaint, when those counts, although based on different legal theories, were interrelated with and interdependent on the two remaining counts;⁹² a non-final order striking a pleading as a discovery violation sanction;⁹³ a final order of the Board of Clinical Laboratory Personnel granting a petition for a clinical laboratory supervisor license;⁹⁴ an order setting aside a clerk’s default;⁹⁵ an order denying a motion to dissolve an agreement to engage in alternative dispute resolution when the parties had already entered into the resolution process;⁹⁶ and a non-final order striking a defendant’s compulsory counterclaim.⁹⁷

E. Orders Reviewable by Certiorari

Orders found to be reviewable by certiorari included: An order transferring a case from circuit court to county court;⁹⁸ an order granting a motion to conduct a postverdict jury interview;⁹⁹ and an order requiring production of records and documents asserted to be confidential as work product and by operation of the attorney-client privilege, or, in the alternative, the construction of a log which indicated the date of each document, its type, and its general contents.¹⁰⁰

89. Id.

90. Id.

91. King v. Odle, 665 So. 2d 378 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

92. El Segundo Original Rey De La Pizza Cubana, Inc. v. Rey Pizza Corp., 676 So. 2d 1031 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

93. Hi-Tech Mktg. Group, Inc. v. Thiem, 659 So. 2d 479 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

94. Agency For Health Care Admin. v. Board of Clinical Lab. Personnel, 673 So. 2d 531 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1966).

95. Collins v. Penske Truck Leasing, 668 So. 2d 343 (Fla. 5th Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

96. Department of Health and Rehabilitative Servs. v. Electronic Data Sys. Corp., 664 So. 2d 332 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

97. Cole v. Bayley Prods., Inc., 661 So. 2d 1299 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

98. David v. Prime Hospitality Corp., 676 So. 2d 1049 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

99. Pesci v. Maistrellis, 672 So.2d 583 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

100. Calzon v. Capital Bank, 20 Fla. L. Weekly D2603 (3d Dist. Ct. App. Nov. 29, 1995).

F. Orders Not Reviewable by Certiorari

Orders held not to be reviewable by certiorari included: An order denying a motion to consolidate two separate lawsuits when the case does did fall within the category of cases in which the possibility of repugnant and inconsistent verdicts would result in a manifest injustice and a material injury to the petitioners;¹⁰¹ an order denying a motion to strike a demand for a jury trial;¹⁰² an order denying a motion in limine to exclude expert scientific testimony;¹⁰³ an order determining that a prior judgment of dissolution of marriage was not res judicata on the issue of paternity;¹⁰⁴ an order on a motion in limine precluding the introduction of evidence regarding insurance coverage;¹⁰⁵ and an order prohibiting a plaintiff from engaging in ex parte communications with any of the defendant's employees.¹⁰⁶

VII. RENDITION

A. Delay in Rendition Due to Pendency of Motion for Rehearing

In Pennington v. Waldheim,¹⁰⁷ the trial court entered a series of final summary judgments in favor of the defendants.¹⁰⁸ Within the time period contemplated by the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure for service of motions for new trial or rehearing, the plaintiff filed, but did not serve, a motion for rehearing.¹⁰⁹ Several weeks later, the defendants learned of the motion and moved to strike it.¹¹⁰ The plaintiff asserted that the failure to serve the defendants was due to clerical error and contended that the defendants had 101. Friedman v. Desoto Park N. Condominium Ass'n, 678 So. 2d 391 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

102. Parkway Bank v. Fort Myers Armature Works, Inc., 658 So. 2d 646 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

103. Florida Power & Light Co. v. Glazer, 671 So. 2d 211 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

104. Elder v. Department of Revenue, 670 So. 2d 1032 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

105. Riano v. Heritage Corp. of S. Fla., 665 So. 2d 1142 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

106. Boyd v. Pheo, Inc., 664 So. 2d 294 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

107. 669 So. 2d 1158 (Fla. 5th Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

108. Id. at 1159.

109. Rule 1.530(b) of the Florida Rule of Civil Procedure provides that such motions shall be served not later than 10 days after the judgment. In Pennington, the 10th day was a Sunday, so the time period for seeking rehearing was extended by the dictates of rule 1.090(a) until the following day. The motion in the case was filed on that following day and was therefore timely.

110. Pennington, 669 So. 2d at 1159.

not been prejudiced.¹¹¹ The plaintiff also filed a pleading entitled ““Motion for Relief in Accordance with Florida Rules of Civil Procedure 1.540,””¹¹² requesting ““relief” from ‘damage resulting from clerical error in failing to properly serve defendants on a timely basis.’”¹¹³ The trial court granted the defendants’ motions and denied the motion filed by the plaintiff.¹¹⁴ On the thirtieth day after the trial court’s ruling, the plaintiff filed a notice of appeal from the orders granting final summary judgment.¹¹⁵

The defendants moved to dismiss, asserting that the appeal was untimely. The fifth district, “writ[ing] to warn counsel of the danger posed by the failure to comply with Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.530(b),”¹¹⁶ agreed. The court noted that under Rule 9.110(b) of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure, notices of appeal must be filed within thirty days of rendition of the order to be reviewed¹¹⁷ and that under rule 9.020(g), rendition is suspended by a motion for rehearing only when the motion is “authorized and timely.”¹¹⁸ The court concluded that rendition was not suspended in Pennington because, under the civil rules, the motion had to be served within ten days in order to be timely.¹¹⁹ Since the motion was untimely, so was the notice of appeal and dismissal was therefore mandated.¹²⁰ “Although it may be counter-intuitive for civil lawyers to view service as an event of jurisdictional dimension,”¹²¹ the court wrote, “in the case of this particular rule, timely filing is of no moment, timely service is everything.”¹²²

The question of whether a motion had to be served or filed within the appropriate time period was also at issue in Department of Revenue v. Loveday.¹²³ There, the appellee moved to dismiss as untimely an appeal from a child support judgment, asserting that the pendency of a motion to vacate under former Rule 1.491(f) of the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure,

111. Id.

112. Id.

113. Id.

114. Id.

115. Pennington, 669 So. 2d at 1159.

116. Id.

117. Id.

118. Id.

119. Id.

120. Pennington, 669 So. 2d at 1160.

121. Id.

122. Id.

123. 659 So. 2d 1239 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

served on the tenth day after the judgment was entered, did not delay rendition of the judgment.¹²⁴

The court pointed out that “[u]nlike most of the rules of civil procedure”¹²⁵ this rule, which allowed parties to “move to vacate the order within 10 days from the date of entry”¹²⁶ did not state whether the motion had to be served or whether it had to be filed within the ten days.¹²⁷ “Because this motion is similar to a motion for rehearing, which must be served within 10 days,”¹²⁸ the court stated, “and because most other time requirements in the rules are governed by service, we interpret the rule as requiring a party to serve a motion to vacate within ten days of the entry of the order.”¹²⁹

This determination did not end the court’s inquiry, however. The court noted that only “authorized and timely” motions under Rule 9.020(g) of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure delay rendition of an order and that the list of such motions in that rule does not include motions to vacate under former rule 1.491.¹³⁰ Drawing the same analogy it drew in deciding the issue of whether the motion had to be served or filed within ten days in order to be timely, the court found that the motion “functions as a motion to rehear, alter, or amend a judgment.”¹³¹ Since such motions are listed in rule 9.020(g) as being among those that suspend rendition, the court found that the motion to vacate had that effect as well.

Given these two conclusions,¹³² the court found that the thirty-day period within which a notice of appeal must be filed¹³³ did not start to run until the trial court’s disposition of the motion to vacate, and that the notice

124. Id. at 1240.

125. Id. at 1241.

126. Id.

127. Id.

128. Loveday, 659 So. 2d at 1241.

129. Id. It is not likely that the court’s conclusion in this regard will have a significant precedential impact. The rule that the court interpreted has been deleted from the civil rules and incorporated into the new family rules as Rule 12.491(f) of the Florida Family Law Rules of Procedure. The new family law rule states that a party “may move to vacate the order by filing a motion to vacate within ten days form the date of entry.” FLA. FAM. LAW R. P. 12.491(f).

130. Loveday, 659 So. 2d at 1241.

131. Id.

132. The court also rejected a claim that the motion did not delay rendition because it was not heard within 10 days. Id. at 1242.

133. FLA. R. APP. P. 9.110(b).

in Loveday, filed within that period, was therefore timely.¹³⁴ The motion to dismiss was therefore denied.¹³⁵

B. Orders Denying Motions

In Turner v. State,¹³⁶ the second district found no appealable order to exist when the record disclosed a handwritten margin note on the face of a motion for post-conviction relief that read “Denied 11/2/95”¹³⁷ and that was followed by some symbol that appeared to be initials.¹³⁸ Noting that in Gibson v. State,¹³⁹ it had disapproved of the use of a rubber stamped denial signed by a trial judge and entered on the face of a motion for postconviction relief, the court stated: “Here we have even less.”¹⁴⁰ The appeal was therefore dismissed with directions to the trial court to reconsider the motion and to “render an appropriate order susceptible of this court’s review.”¹⁴¹

C. Relinquishment of Jurisdiction

In State v. Siegel,¹⁴² the state attempted to appeal an order granting a motion to suppress evidence.¹⁴³ When it was learned that no signed, written order was ever entered,¹⁴⁴ the state moved to temporarily relinquish jurisdiction for the entry of an order.¹⁴⁵ The fifth district denied the motion and dismissed the appeal.¹⁴⁶ The court recognized that Rule 9.110(m) of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure “permits an appeal to proceed where an appealable order is rendered prior to dismissal of a premature appeal,”¹⁴⁷ but pointed out that this provision is applicable only to final orders.¹⁴⁸

134. Loveday, 659 So. 2d at 1242.

135. Id.

136. 667 So. 2d 882 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

137. Id. at 882.

138. Id.

139. 642 So. 2d 43 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1994).

140. Turner, 667 So. 2d at 882.

141. Id.

142. 662 So. 2d 1013 (Fla. 5th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

143. Id. at 1014.

144. Id.

145. Id.

146. Id.

147. Siegel, 662 So. 2d at 1014.

148. Id.

VIII. NOTICE OF APPEAL

In Westfield Insurance Co. v. Sloan,¹⁴⁹ the fifth district considered a motion to dismiss that was based on the fact that, after the time for filing a notice of appeal had run, an amended notice was filed adding an appellant to the single appellant that had been named on the original, timely-filed notice.¹⁵⁰

The court noted that Rule 9.110(d) of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure requires that the notice contain the name and designation of at least one party on each side¹⁵¹ and that the 1977 Committee Note to the rule states that the advisory committee did not intend for defects on a notice of appeal to be “jurisdictional or grounds for disposition unless the complaining party was substantially prejudiced.”¹⁵² The court also pointed to rule 9.040(d), which provides:

At any time in the interest of justice, the court may permit any part of the proceeding to be amended so that it may be disposed of on the merits. In the absence of amendment, the court may disregard any procedural error or defect that does not adversely affect the substantial rights of the parties.¹⁵³

Finding no substantial prejudice to have been alleged or to be apparent, the court denied the motion to dismiss.¹⁵⁴

The fifth district’s approach in this case appears to conflict with the conclusion reached by the third district in Ashraf v. Smith,¹⁵⁵ a case in which a motion to amend a notice of appeal to include the appellant’s insurer was denied.¹⁵⁶ Although the court found the amendment “entirely unnecessary”¹⁵⁷ under the facts of the case, the denial of the motion was based on the court’s determination that it “lack[ed] the jurisdiction to permit such an amendment.”¹⁵⁸

149. 671 So. 2d 881 (Fla. 5th Dist. Ct. App. 996).

150. Id. at 882.

151. Id.

152. Id.

153. FLA. R. APP. P. 9.040(d)

154. Westfield, 671 So. 2d at 883.

155. 647 So. 2d 892 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1994), review denied, 658 So. 2d 989 (Fla. 1995).

156. Id. at 893.

157. Id.

158. Id.

Despite the decision in Ashraf, the third district, in Eisman v. Ross,¹⁵⁹ applying an analysis virtually identical to that of the fifth district in Westfield, granted a motion to amend mandate to include as a party appellant the name of an individual who was not named on the notice of appeal but who was listed as a party litigant on the supersedes bond posted for the appeal.¹⁶⁰

IX. BOND

The appellee moved to dismiss the appeal in School Board of Hillsborough County v. Lara,¹⁶¹ because the appellant, a public body, failed to post the bond required by section 440.25(5)(c) of the Florida Statutes, for appeals from orders of judges of compensation claims.¹⁶² The first district concluded that the application of this statutory bond requirement to the appellant would conflict with the dictates of Rule 9.310(b)(2) of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure, which provides that the filing of a notice of appeal by a public body operates as an automatic stay pending review¹⁶³ and which, as is made clear by the Committee Note to the rule,¹⁶⁴ contemplates that the automatic stay is to be without bond.¹⁶⁵ The court stated that to the extent that the statute and the rule conflict, the rule must control.¹⁶⁶ In light of this determination, the court denied the motion to dismiss.¹⁶⁷

X. BRIEFS

A. Form

In Kennedy v. Guarantee Management Services, Inc.,¹⁶⁸ the third district found that the circuit court, acting in its appellate capacity, had erred in dismissing an appeal because the appellant submitted his brief in handwritten form, rather than having it typed.¹⁶⁹ The district court concluded that

159. 664 So. 2d 1128 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

160. Id. at 1129.

161. 667 So. 2d 368 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

162. Id. at 368.

163. Id.

164. 1977 Committee Note to Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.310.

165. Lara, 667 So. 2d at 368–69.

166. Id. at 369.

167. Id.

168. 667 So. 2d 1013 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

169. Id. at 1014.

the circuit court's action had deprived the appellant of his right of access to the courts.¹⁷⁰

B. Supplemental Briefs

In Dagostino v. State,¹⁷¹ a case in which the appellant was represented by the Public Defender's office, the fourth district dealt with a request by the appellant's attorney to accept the appellant's pro se brief as a supplemental brief.

The court denied the motion,¹⁷² pointing out that when defendants are represented by counsel on appeal, they do not have an absolute right to participate and represent themselves.¹⁷³

The court "caution[ed] that the filing of pro se briefs after the public defender has briefed the case does not aid in"¹⁷⁴ resolving appeals "in some orderly process."¹⁷⁵

Noting the high regard it has for the Public Defender's office, the court indicated that its action in denying the motion was "to reinforce that confidence, not to undermine it"¹⁷⁶ and that accepting supplemental briefs in such situations "would weaken the constitutional right to counsel afforded to all indigent criminal appellants."¹⁷⁷

XI. CERTIORARI

A. Procedure

Two opinions provided insight into the manner in which district courts analyze petitions for certiorari. Reviewing a petition that sought review of the denial of a motion to strike a demand for jury trial in Parkway Bank v. Fort Myers Armature Works, Inc.,¹⁷⁸ the second district discussed the "confusing distinction between a dismissal of a certiorari petition for lack of

170. Id.

171. 675 So. 2d 194 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

172. Id. at 195.

173. Id.

174. Id. at 196.

175. Id.

176. Dagostino, 675 So. 2d at 196.

177. Id.

178. 658 So. 2d 646 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

jurisdiction and a denial of a petition after a review of the nonfinal order on its merits.”¹⁷⁹

The court noted that “case law usually explains that a certiorari petition must pass a three-prong test before an appellate court can grant relief from an erroneous interlocutory order.”¹⁸⁰ Under this test, the court explained, “[a] petitioner must establish (1) a departure from the essential requirements of the law, (2) resulting in material injury for the remainder of the trial (3) that cannot be corrected on postjudgment appeal.”¹⁸¹ The court stated that “[w]hile this traditional test is correct, the grammar of the test places the description of the appellate court’s standard of review on the merits before the two threshold tests used to determine jurisdiction.”¹⁸²

This characterization of the test was based on the court’s determination that the second and third prongs deal with the court’s jurisdiction to consider a petition for certiorari and that the first prong establishes the standard to be applied on the merits if jurisdiction is found to exist. As stated by the court, “a petitioner must establish that an interlocutory order creates material harm irreparable by postjudgment appeal before this court has power to determine whether the order departs from the essential requirements of the law.”¹⁸³ After drawing the distinction between the jurisdictional prongs of the test and the one relating to the merits of the case, the court proceeded to address the proper manner for disposing of petitions. “If the jurisdictional prongs of the standard three-part test are not fulfilled,”¹⁸⁴ the court said, “then the petition should be dismissed rather than denied.”¹⁸⁵

In Bared & Co., Inc. v. McGuire,¹⁸⁶ the fourth district, with the exception of one “small quibble,”¹⁸⁷ expressed its “complete agreement” with Parkway Bank.¹⁸⁸ Concluding that “harm is not irreparable if it can be corrected on final appeal,”¹⁸⁹ the court decided to “merge the second and third prongs into a single one.”¹⁹⁰

179. Id. at 648.

180. Id.

181. Id. (citations omitted).

182. Id.

183. Parkway Bank, 658 So. 2d at 649.

184. Id.

185. Id.

186. 670 So. 2d 153 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1996) (en banc).

187. Id. at 156 n.3.

188. Id.

189. Id. (emphasis omitted).

190. Id.

Noting, in the same manner as did the second district in Parkway Bank,¹⁹¹ that “in the past we have not been careful to make our jurisdictional decisions in these cases manifest,”¹⁹² and that “[m]ore often than not, we have denied such petitions when we were really deciding that we lacked jurisdiction,”¹⁹³ the court “seized on the present occasion to clarify our dispositions and manner of proceeding.”¹⁹⁴

The court stated that when it receives a certiorari petition that seeks review of a nonfinal order, it will “initially study it only to determine if petitioner has made a prima facie showing of the element of irreparable harm.”¹⁹⁵

If the petitioner has failed to make such a showing, the court will dismiss the petition.¹⁹⁶ On the other hand, if the petitioner meets this burden, the court will then “study the petition to determine whether it makes a prima facie showing that the order to be reviewed departs from the essential requirements of law.”¹⁹⁷

If the petition fails to make a prima facie demonstration of a departure, the petition will be denied.¹⁹⁸ If it does make such a showing, an order to show cause why the petition should not be granted will be entered.¹⁹⁹ After considering the response, if the court determines that there has been an insufficient showing of irreparable harm or injury, it will dismiss the petition.²⁰⁰ If it determines that the order under review does not depart from the essential requirements of law, or if it decides that it will not exercise its discretion to grant the writ, the court will deny the petition.²⁰¹

The court went on to discuss the effects of the two manners of rejecting petitions for certiorari. “[A] dismissal of a petition seeking common law certiorari represents only a determination that we lack jurisdiction and nothing more,”²⁰² the court said. “[A] bare denial by simple order of a petition for common law certiorari review of a pretrial order will not

191. Parkway Bank, 658 So. 2d at 649 n.1.

192. Bared, 670 So. 2d at 157.

193. Id.

194. Id.

195. Id.

196. Id.

197. Bared, 670 So. 2d at 157.

198. Id.

199. Id.

200. Id.

201. Id.

202. Bared, 670 So. 2d at 157.

represent a determination on the merits of the order to be reviewed,”²⁰³ the court continued, “unless an opinion denying the petition indicates that preclusive effect is intended.”²⁰⁴

The court noted its agreement with the second district’s decision in Don Mott Agency, Inc. v. Harrison,²⁰⁵ which found that a denial without opinion of a petition for a writ of certiorari is not an affirmance, does not establish the law of the case, cannot be construed as passing upon any of the issues in the litigation, and would not be res judicata as to the issues raised in the petition.²⁰⁶

B. Record

In DSA Marine Sales & Service, Inc. v. County of Manatee,²⁰⁷ the petitioners sought certiorari review in the circuit court of the disapproval by a board of county commissioners of a construction proposal.²⁰⁸ The petition was accompanied with a motion to supplement the record as more documents became available.²⁰⁹ Shortly thereafter, the petitioner filed an amended petition with a more thorough, but not yet completed, appendix.²¹⁰ The circuit court never ruled on the motion to supplement and denied the amended petition without ordering a response on the merits, finding that the petitioners failed to make a prima facie showing for relief.²¹¹ The petitioners moved for rehearing, seeking, among other things, guidance detailing the insufficiency of the petition and an opportunity to amend once again.²¹²

Reviewing the order of denial, the second district recognized that “[b]ecause certiorari petitions must be filed within thirty days from the date of rendition of the subject order, it is sometimes impossible to compile and contemporaneously file the entire record as an appendix to the petition.”²¹³ The court also stated that although “[s]everal elements are embraced in the notion of procedural due process, none [are] more important than the right to

203. Id. at 158 (footnote omitted).

204. Id.

205. 362 So. 2d 56 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1978).

206. Bared, 670 So. 2d at 158.

207. 661 So. 2d 907 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

208. Id. at 908.

209. Id.

210. Id.

211. Id.

212. DSA, 661 So. 2d at 908.

213. Id. at 909.

be heard.”²¹⁴ Under the circumstances of this case, the court found that the summary denial of the petition deprived the petitioner of procedural due process.²¹⁵

C. Order to Show Cause

In City of Kissimmee v. Grice,²¹⁶ a police officer whose employment was terminated filed a petition for certiorari in the circuit court, which ordered the City to show cause why relief should not be granted.²¹⁷ The City moved to dismiss, asserting that the circuit court lacked subject matter jurisdiction.²¹⁸ Although the motion was denied,²¹⁹ the City failed to file a response to the order to show cause.²²⁰ The circuit court granted the writ,²²¹ but “merely stated conclusions of law without indicating how the city departed from the essential requirements of law”²²² in terminating the officer.

On appeal, the fifth district found that the lack of response to an order to show cause “is not tantamount to a default which automatically entitles the petitioner to his requested relief.”²²³ The court indicated that although the failure to respond “does limit the court’s consideration to the information contained in the record and the allegations contained in the petition[,] . . . [s]till the court must determine if the petition is meritorious and whether the requested relief should be granted.”²²⁴

The district court quashed the circuit court’s order, characterizing it as “in essence, a ‘Per Curiam Reversal,’”²²⁵ and stated, “[a]lthough a decision under review may be affirmed without opinion, indicating that the presumption of correctness accorded the lower tribunal had not been rebutted, an appellate court has the responsibility to write opinions in all reversals.”²²⁶

214. Id.

215. Id.

216. 669 So. 2d 307 (Fla. 5th Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

217. Id. at 308.

218. Id. at 309.

219. Id.

220. Id. at 308.

221. Grice, 669 So. 2d at 309.

222. Id. at 309 n.1.

223. Id. at 308.

224. Id. (citation omitted).

225. Id. at 309 (footnote omitted).

226. Grice, 669 So. 2d at 309.

XII. AMICUS CURIAE

In Ciba-Geigy Ltd. v. Fish Peddler, Inc.,²²⁷ the fourth district offered guidance as to the role an amicus curiae should play in an appeal. The court noted that a brief from an amicus curiae is “generally for the purpose of assisting the court in cases which are of general public interest, or aiding in the presentation of difficult issues.”²²⁸ The court also stated that “[a]lthough ‘by the nature of things an amicus is not normally impartial,’ amicus briefs should not argue the facts in issue.”²²⁹

Applying these principles, the court denied one of two requests for leave to file an amicus brief, because the brief appeared “to be nothing more than an attempt to present a fact specific argument”²³⁰ of the same type as was contained in the appellants’ fifty page brief, a brief of the maximum allowable length under the appellate rules.²³¹ The court pointed out that “[s]ince the parties are limited as to the number and length of briefs, amicus briefs should not be used to simply give one side more exposure than the rules contemplate.”²³²

The court expressed some further thoughts on the subject, indicating that “it would be helpful to the court if [multiple] amicus would attempt to join together in one brief and cooperate with the parties so as not to be repetitious of the parties’ briefs.”²³³ Further, the court said that “[i]n the interest of brevity, amicus briefs should not contain a statement of the case or facts, but rather should get right to the additional information which the amicus believes will assist the court.”²³⁴ The court concluded its discussion by noting that “although Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.370 does not require a motion for leave to file an amicus brief to state whether the parties have consented, it would be appropriate for the motion to contain that information.”²³⁵

227. 21 Fla. L. Weekly D1562 (4th Dist. Ct. App. July 3, 1996).

228. Id. at D1562 (citing Alexander v. Hall, 64 F.R.D. 152 (D.C.S.C. 1974)).

229. Id. (citing Strasser v. Doorley, 432 F.2d 567 (1st Cir. 1970)).

230. Id.

231. FLA. R. APP. P. 9.210(a)(5).

232. Ciba-Geigy, 21 Fla. L. Weekly at D1562.

233. Id.

234. Id.

235. Id. (citation omitted).

XIII. PROHIBITION

In Brooks v. Lockett,²³⁶ plaintiffs and prospective plaintiffs in a putative class action suit in Orange County sought a writ of prohibition against a circuit judge in Lake County, where a similar class action against the same defendant was pending, who had entered an order abating the Orange County proceeding,²³⁷ as well as other cases against the defendant.²³⁸ The fifth district found that the Lake County judge “was not empowered to issue an order staying a pending action in another jurisdiction.”²³⁹ It recognized that “prohibition generally is not available to revoke an order already entered,”²⁴⁰ but granted the writ nonetheless,²⁴¹ because “the order in the instant case attempts to exert an ongoing effect on pending class-action litigation involving [the defendant] throughout the State of Florida.”²⁴²

XIV. THE EFFECT ON APPEALS OF PRIOR DENIALS OF PROHIBITION

In Barwick v. State,²⁴³ the defendant raised on appeal to the supreme court from his convictions and sentences a claim that the trial court erred in denying his motion for disqualification. This same issue had been the basis for a pretrial petition for a writ of prohibition that the supreme court had denied²⁴⁴ in an order which did not indicate the grounds for denial.²⁴⁵

The State argued that the denial of prohibition should be deemed a ruling on the merits of the issue.²⁴⁶ In support of this position, the State relied on the third district’s opinion in Obanion v. State,²⁴⁷ which was advocated by (then Judge and present Supreme Court of Florida) Justice Anstead’s specially concurring opinion in the fourth district’s decision in

236. 658 So. 2d 1205 (Fla. 5th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

237. Lake County is located in the fifth circuit, while Orange County is located in the ninth circuit. Id. at 1207.

238. Brooks, 658 So. 2d at 1206.

239. Id. at 1207.

240. Id.

241. Id. at 1208.

242. Id. at 1207–08.

243. 660 So. 2d 685 (Fla. 1995).

244. Id. at 690.

245. Id. at 691.

246. Id. at 690–91.

247. 496 So. 2d 977 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1986), review denied, 504 So. 2d 768 (Fla. 1987).

DeGennaro v. Janie Dean Chevrolet, Inc.,²⁴⁸ cases that the supreme court categorized as “recogniz[ing] that a denial of a petition for writ of prohibition in those districts should henceforth constitute a ruling on the merits unless otherwise indicated.”²⁴⁹

The supreme court “approve[d] of the procedure adopted by the Third District in Obanion and advocated by Justice Anstead’s concurring opinion in DeGennaro as to the effect of the denial of a petition for writ of prohibition in those district courts,”²⁵⁰ but did not agree that its denial of the petition in Barwick was a decision on the merits.²⁵¹ Noting that its order did not indicate the grounds for the denial²⁵² and the fact that the court had not “clearly expressed an intention to have a denial of a petition for writ of prohibition, without more, serve as a ruling on the merits,”²⁵³ the court “recognize[d] a need to clarify the effect of this Court’s denial of a prohibition petition.”²⁵⁴

Satisfying the need that it had identified, the court stated:

248. 600 So. 2d 44 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1992) (Anstead, J., concurring specially).

249. Barwick, 660 So. 2d at 691. While Obanion certainly established this principle in the third district, the impact of DeGennaro in the fourth district is less clear. Justice Anstead’s sentiments in that decision cannot be reconciled with those expressed by Judge Farmer in his dissenting opinion in Thomason v. State, 594 So. 2d 310 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1992) (Farmer, J., dissenting), quashed on other grounds, 620 So. 2d 1234 (Fla. 1993). In Thomason, the defendant, who was appealing from an order withholding adjudication and placing him on probation, raised a double jeopardy claim that he had previously asserted in a petition for prohibition that had been denied without opinion. The court affirmed without opinion, but Judge Farmer, who wrote primarily to dissent on the merits, discussed the question of whether consideration of the double jeopardy claim was proper in light of the prior petition. He noted that such consideration was appropriate because “prohibition is an extraordinarily prerogative writ . . . that is sometimes denied for good reasons having nothing to do with the underlying merits of a petitioner’s position.” Id. at 312 n.2. He recognized that his view was contrary to Obanion, but stated that the fourth district had never adopted the Obanion approach and that he hoped it never would, “at least as long as prohibition is deemed a matter of mere grace.” Id. Although disagreeing with Judge Farmer on the merits of the case, it appears that the other members of the panel agreed with him on the jurisdictional issue because the case was affirmed, rather than dismissed, because Judge Stone wrote a specially concurring opinion that set forth the reasons why he felt the case should be affirmed on the merits, and because the court, on rehearing, certified a question that dealt only with the merits of the case. Id. at 318.

250. Barwick, 660 So. 2d at 691.

251. Id.

252. Id.

253. Id.

254. Id.

We hold that from this time forward, if an order from this Court denying a petition for a writ of prohibition based upon an unsuccessful motion for disqualification is to constitute a decision on the merits and, thereby, foreclose further review of the disqualification issue on direct appeal, the order will state that it is “with prejudice.”²⁵⁵

The court’s decision to use qualifying language that refers only to a petition “based upon an unsuccessful motion for disqualification”²⁵⁶ leaves open the question of whether the court means to apply this same rationale when a petition is based on some other ground, such as the double jeopardy issue in Thomason or the speedy trial claim in Obanion.

The court’s specific approval of the Obanion procedure for the third district and the procedure advocated by Justice Anstead in DeGennaro for the fourth district,²⁵⁷ while it adopted a different procedure for itself, at least with regard to petitions raising disqualification issues, seems to indicate that each district court will be allowed to adopt the approach it deems best.

XV. MOOTNESS

In J. M. v. State,²⁵⁸ the third district reversed an adjudication of delinquency based on its conclusion that the trial court’s stated reasons for its departure from the recommendation made by the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (“HRS”) as to the appropriate level of restrictiveness were not supported by the record.²⁵⁹ The district court remanded for a new disposition hearing, finding that the issue was not moot even though the juvenile had served his residential sentence and had been released by HRS.²⁶⁰ The court stated:

Depending upon the evidence, if any, presented at the new disposition hearing on remand, the trial court, in its finding of delinquency, may conceivably decide to withhold adjudication, impose a less restrictive sentence and give the juvenile credit for the origi-

255. Barwick, 660 So. 2d at 691.

256. Id.

257. See supra note 249. This footnote addresses the reasons why the court’s approval of this procedure for the fourth district may not mean a great deal, since the fourth district itself may prefer a different approach.

258. 677 So. 2d 890 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

259. Id. at 892.

260. Id. at 893.

nal sentence served or suspend entry of sentence altogether. As stated by this court in R.A.B. v. State, 399 So.2d 16, (Fla 3d DCA 1981): "The very fact of adjudication, apart from disposition, has potential collateral effects which are not harmless." Id. at 18. Indeed, a withhold of adjudication as opposed to an adjudication for this offense would certainly be relevant to future dispositions if this juvenile is ever rearrested or if he decided to enter a profession which required him to disclose any juvenile record. See § 39.045, Fla. Stat. (1993).²⁶¹

XVI. HARMLESS ERROR

In Heuss v. State,²⁶² the fourth district found that the trial court erred by failing to make findings sufficient to support the admission of certain statements.²⁶³ The court concluded that the error was harmless,²⁶⁴ however, and affirmed the convictions and sentences under review.²⁶⁵ In a motion for rehearing, the defendant pointed out that the state had not made a harmless error argument and contended that the court lacked authority to sua sponte apply the harmless error doctrine.²⁶⁶

Noting that section 59.041 of the Florida Statutes requires the court to consider whether any error is harmless,²⁶⁷ the court rejected the defendant's contention. The court stated that it could "discern no public policy supporting a conclusion that a review court must reverse an otherwise valid conviction for an error that is deemed harmless simply because harmless error was not argued in the state's brief."²⁶⁸

XVII. SANCTIONS

In several cases, orders were entered imposing sanctions on pro se litigants. One particularly active litigant received sanctions from three

261. Id. (footnote omitted). See also FLA. STAT. § 39.045 (1993).

262. 660 So. 2d 1052 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

263. Id. at 1057.

264. Id.

265. Id. at 1058.

266. Id.

267. A similar requirement is set forth in section 924.33 of the Florida Statutes.

268. Heuss, 660 So. 2d at 1059.

district courts. In Attwood v. Eighth Circuit Court,²⁶⁹ Attwood v. Singletary,²⁷⁰ and Attwood v. State ex rel. Florida Department of Corrections,²⁷¹ the first, second, and fourth districts, respectively, decided to take action against an individual who had instituted an extraordinary number of cases, virtually all of which challenged prison conditions.²⁷²

Attwood had filed seventeen appeals or petitions in the first district in the period of just over ten months preceding the court's order,²⁷³ seventeen cases in the second district in the six-month period ending June 1, 1995,²⁷⁴ and thirty-one appeals or petitions in the fourth district in the first half of 1995.²⁷⁵ The fourth district also noted that Attwood had eighteen cases, one of which had 200 defendants, pending in the circuit court for Martin County,²⁷⁶ and that as of the date of a hearing held in October, 1993, in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Florida, Attwood had filed more than forty cases in that court.²⁷⁷ The fourth district additionally pointed out that at the federal hearing, Attwood admitted that he had also filed "several thousand"²⁷⁸ internal grievances in the Florida system.²⁷⁹

The first district indicated that its clerk's office received mail from Attwood "on almost a daily basis."²⁸⁰ The fourth district noted that at the federal hearing, Attwood "admitted mailing 'pounds of mail a week' to the courts."²⁸¹

In addition to commenting on the quantity of Attwood's efforts, the district courts made it clear that they were unimpressed with the quality of those efforts. The fourth district referred to Attwood's "frivolous claims,"²⁸² the second district to his "baseless appeals, petitions, and related unauthorized motions,"²⁸³ and the first district to his "simply incomprehensible"²⁸⁴

269. 667 So. 2d 356 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

270. 659 So. 2d 1127 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

271. 660 So. 2d 358 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

272. See Attwood, 667 So. 2d at 357 n.4; Singletary, 659 So. 2d at 1128; Department of Corrections, 660 So. 2d at 358.

273. Attwood, 667 So. 2d at 356.

274. Singletary, 659 So. 2d at 1128.

275. Department of Corrections, 660 So. 2d at 358.

276. Id.

277. Id.

278. Id. at 359.

279. Id.

280. Attwood, 667 So. 2d at 357.

281. Department of Corrections, 660 So. 2d at 359.

282. Id. at 360.

283. Singletary, 659 So. 2d at 1128.

pleadings. Attwood's pleadings were also apparently quite repetitive. The first district indicated that he filed "numerous copies of the same pleading in different cases."²⁸⁵ The fourth added that he often "makes copies of what he has already filed, signs the copied version, and handwrites an additional allegation, which must be treated as a new petition or appeal."²⁸⁶

The fourth district also expressed concern over the fact that Attwood, claiming indigency, had paid no filing fees in any of his cases²⁸⁷ despite evidence adduced at the federal hearing to the effect that he was the sole owner of a rental income-generating apartment building with an estimated value of $57,000 to $69,000²⁸⁸ and that he had a bank account about which he refused to testify.²⁸⁹

The first district prohibited Attwood from filing any document on his own behalf in the case under review or in any other case, as either appellant or petitioner,²⁹⁰ directed its clerk to "refuse any document filed by Attwood unless signed by a member of The Florida Bar"²⁹¹ and, in Attwood's pending cases that were not yet mature, afforded Attwood thirty days within which to file and serve a notice of appearance of counsel,²⁹² noting that it would dismiss any case in which such a notice is not timely filed.²⁹³

The second district directed its clerk to reject the filing of all future notices of appeal and petitions for extraordinary relief in civil matters sent by or on behalf of Attwood unless submitted and signed by a member of The Florida Bar.²⁹⁴ The court stated that any papers filed in violation of its order would be "automatically placed in an inactive file,"²⁹⁵ and that any notices of appeal received from circuit courts would be "summarily stricken."²⁹⁶ The court noted that its order would not apply to any criminal appeal filed by Attwood which directly concerns a judgment and sentence.²⁹⁷

284. Attwood, 667 So. 2d at 356.

285. Id. at 357.

286. Department of Corrections, 660 So. 2d at 360.

287. Id. at 358.

288. Id. at 359.

289. Id.

290. Attwood, 667 So. 2d at 357.

291. Id.

292. Id.

293. Id.

294. Singletary, 659 So. 2d at 1128.

295. Id.

296. Id.

297. Id.

The fourth district ordered that Attwood “be denied indigent status for the filing of appeals or petitions for extraordinary relief”²⁹⁸ and directed its clerk “to refuse any such notice of appeal or petition for filing unless accompanied by the proper filing fee or submitted and assigned by a member of the Florida Bar.”²⁹⁹ Like the second district, the court indicated that its order would not apply to “any criminal appeal filed by Robert Attwood which directly concerns a judgment and sentence.”³⁰⁰

The fifth district, apparently unaffected by Attwood’s output, determined that sanctions were appropriate for another litigant. In Holmes v. State,³⁰¹ the court entertained a defendant’s fifth petition for writ of habeas corpus and his eleventh post-conviction proceeding,³⁰² all unsuccessful challenges to a 1989 conviction and sentence.³⁰³

Finding the defendant “has disrupted the fair allocation of judicial resources of this court,”³⁰⁴ and “this activity now rises to the level of being an abuse of process,”³⁰⁵ the court prohibited the defendant from filing “any further pro se pleadings regarding his 1989 conviction and sentence.”³⁰⁶

XVIII. REHEARING

In Thompson v. Singletary,³⁰⁷ the fourth district entered an initial opinion ordering a new trial for a criminal defendant.³⁰⁸ No motion for rehearing was filed within the fifteen days allowed by Rule 9.330(a) of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure,³⁰⁹ and mandate therefore issued.³¹⁰

The state subsequently filed an untimely motion for rehearing, a motion to accept the motion for rehearing as timely filed and a motion to recall the mandate.³¹¹ Attached to the motion for rehearing were portions of the trial transcript not previously furnished to the court that demonstrated that the 298. Department of Corrections, 660 So. 2d at 360.

299. Id.

300. Id.

301. 669 So. 2d 360 (Fla. 5th Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

302. Id. at 360.

303. Id. at 360 n.1.

304. Id. at 361.

305. Id.

306. Holmes, 669 So. 2d at 361.

307. 659 So. 2d 435 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

308. Id. at 435–36.

309. Id. at 436.

310. Id.

311. Id.

defendant was not in fact entitled to a new trial.³¹² Eleven days after the state's motions were filed, and before the court ruled on them, the term of court ended.³¹³

The court found that the untimeliness of the motion for rehearing presented no impediment to its consideration, because the fifteen-day time limit of the rule is not jurisdictional³¹⁴ and the motion was filed in the same term of court.³¹⁵ The fact that the term of court ended after the issuance of the mandate, however, was a matter of greater concern.

The court began its analysis by focusing on the Supreme Court of Florida's decision in State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Judges of District Court of Appeal, Fifth District.³¹⁶ There, the district court affirmed a case without opinion.³¹⁷ When the appellant filed a motion for rehearing four months later during the next term of court, the district court denied the motion as untimely, but sua sponte decided to reconsider the case en banc because it conflicted with an opinion in another case that was written in the interim.³¹⁸ The party opposing the rehearing then obtained a writ of mandamus from the supreme court, which held that an appellate court is without jurisdiction to recall its mandate beyond the term of court during which the mandate was issued.³¹⁹

After its discussion of State Farm, the fourth district pointed out that if the state had called its attention to the impending expiration of the court's term of court by designating its motion to recall mandate as an emergency motion, the court would have recalled mandate before the end of the term.³²⁰ The court noted that in the absence of such a designation, it had followed its normal procedure with motions for rehearing, which is to hold them in the clerk's office until a response is filed or the time for a response expires.³²¹ By the time that process was completed, so was the term of the court.³²²

312. Thompson, 659 So. 2d at 436.

313. Id.

314. Id.

315. Id. at 437.

316. 405 So. 2d 980 (Fla. 1981).

317. Thompson, 659 So. 2d at 436.

318. Id.

319. Id.

320. Id.

321. Id.

322. Thompson, 659 So. 2d at 436.

The court next turned its attention to Washington v. State,³²³ a case in which the supreme court stated that “[t]he prevailing rule is that an appellate court is without power to recall a mandate regularly issued without inadvertence and resume jurisdiction of the cause after the expiration of the term at which its judgment was rendered and the mandate issued.”³²⁴ The supreme court in Washington also recognized “the power . . . to recall a mandate sent down by inadvertence.”³²⁵

Seizing on the references in Washington to “inadvertence,” the fourth district concluded that its failure to grant the State’s motion to recall the mandate during the eleven day period between its filing and the expiration of the term of court was “inadvertent under Washington.”³²⁶ Repeating its previous pronouncement that it would have recalled mandate prior to the end of the term had the State called its attention to the need to do so,³²⁷ the court concluded that “[u]nder these facts, which we believe make this case distinguishable from State Farm, . . . we have not lost jurisdiction.”³²⁸ The court therefore granted the State’s motions, withdrew its original opinion,³²⁹ and denied relief on the merits.³³⁰

XIX. APPELLATE ATTORNEYS’ FEES

A. Offer of Judgment on Appeal

In Deleuw, Cather & Co. v. Grogis,³³¹ when the fourth district upheld a trial court’s judgment taxing costs, the appellee moved for appellate attorney’s fees and costs on the basis of an offer of judgment served during the pendency of the appeal.³³² The court struck the motion and the offer of judgment based on its conclusion that section 768.79 of the Florida Statutes under which the offer was made, “does not contain any language which would indicate that the legislature contemplated its use during appeals.”³³³

323. 110 So. 259 (Fla. 1926).

324. Id. at 260–61 (citations omitted).

325. Id. at 261.

326. Thompson, 659 So. 2d at 437.

327. Id.

328. Id.

329. The original opinion was published in the advance sheets at 655 So. 2d 1282. It was not included in the bound volume, however, in light of the fact that it was withdrawn.

330. Thompson, 659 So. 2d at 437.

331. 664 So. 2d 989 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

332. Id. at 989.

333. Id.

Additionally, the court found the statute inapplicable to the case under review because the statute applies only to damages³³⁴ and the proceeding dealt only with the correctness of the amount of costs,³³⁵ which are not considered a part of a claim which forms the basis of a suit.³³⁶

B. Violations of the Government in the Sunshine Law

In School Board of Alachua County v. Rhea,³³⁷ the first district rejected a claim that because section 286.011(4) of the Florida Statutes provides that “the court shall assess a reasonable attorney’s fee” against agencies determined to have violated the Government in the Sunshine Law, there is no requirement for a party seeking appellate attorney’s fees in such a case to file a motion in the appellate court.³³⁸ The court found that the statute’s mandatory language “does not supersede the requirements of Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.400(b),”³³⁹ which dictates that such motions must be filed in the appellate court, “nor does it authorize the trial court to make an initial award of appellate attorney’s fees.”³⁴⁰

XX. MANDATE

The supreme court, in State v. Roberts,³⁴¹ clarified the procedure for obtaining a stay or recall of a district court’s mandate when discretionary review is sought. The issue came before the court after the first district’s denial of a motion to recall mandate.³⁴² The motion had been filed four days after the party seeking the recall had filed a notice invoking the supreme court’s discretionary jurisdiction. In its denial, the district court relied on the supreme court’s opinion in *State v. McKinnon*³⁴³ for the proposition that a party desiring a stay of mandate during the pendency of a petition for review must apply to the supreme court for the stay.³⁴⁴

334. Id.

335. Id.

336. Deleuw, 664 So. 2d at 989.

337. 661 So. 2d 331 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

338. Id. at 332.

339. Id.

340. Id.

341. 661 So. 2d 821 (Fla. 1995).

342. Id. at 821.

343. 540 So. 2d 111 (Fla. 1989).

344. Roberts, 661 So. 2d at 821.

The supreme court recognized that McKinnon “contained language”³⁴⁵ supporting such a conclusion, but pointed out that “the issue in that case was not where the motion for stay should be filed.”³⁴⁶ Rather, the court stated, the holding of McKinnon was that the pendency of a petition for review “did not deprive the trial court of jurisdiction to resentence a defendant pursuant to the district court’s mandate which had reversed and remanded the case for resentencing.”³⁴⁷ Ending any confusion as to the effect of McKinnon, the court stated that “[w]hile a motion for stay and to recall a mandate may be filed in this Court, it may also be filed in the district court of appeal.”³⁴⁸ Relying on Rule 9.130(a) of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure, which indicates that lower tribunals “have continuing jurisdiction”³⁴⁹ to consider motions for stay pending review, the court said, “[t]he fact that a notice to invoke the discretionary jurisdiction of this court has already been filed does not deprive the district court of appeal of jurisdiction to rule upon the motion.”³⁵⁰ In fact, the court went on to indicate that “[g]enerally speaking, the Court prefers that motion for stay be filed in the district court of appeal because at that stage of the case the district court ordinarily will be better informed concerning the case and thereby better able to predict the likelihood of this Court’s accepting jurisdiction.”³⁵¹ The court therefore receded from McKinnon “to the extent that it suggests that the filing of a notice to invoke discretionary jurisdiction precludes the district court of appeal from entertaining a motion to stay or withdraw its mandate.”³⁵²

XXI. APPEALS IN CRIMINAL CASES

A. Death of Defendant

In State v. Clements,³⁵³ the supreme court dealt with the effect of defendants’ deaths during the pendency of direct appeals from judgments and sentences. Despite the fact that each of the district courts of appeal had

345. Id.

346. Id.

347. Id. at 821–22.

348. Id. at 822.

349. Roberts, 661 So. 2d at 822.

350. Id.

351. Id.

352. Id.

353. 668 So. 2d 980 (Fla. 1996).

found abatement ab initio to be proper under such circumstances,³⁵⁴ the supreme court concluded that “the appeal of a conviction may be dismissed but is not to be abated ab initio.”³⁵⁵ The court pointed out that the theory upon which abatement ab initio had been applied was the fact that it left in effect upon a defendant’s death the legal presumption of innocence.³⁵⁶ The court found such reasoning inapplicable in light of the fact that “the presumption of innocence ceases ‘upon the adjudication of guilt and the entry of sentence,’³⁵⁷ and the fact that “a judgment of conviction comes for review with a presumption in favor of its regularity or correctness.”³⁵⁸

The court went on to indicate, however, that even dismissal is not mandated. Finding that “monetary fines or penalties continue to be enforceable against assets which comprise a defendant’s estate,”³⁵⁹ the court stated that in such situations, “the estate maintains the same right to appeal that the defendant would have had if living”³⁶⁰ and that the state may also “have an interest in seeing the appeal completed.”³⁶¹ Thus, the court concluded that “when a defendant dies after judgment but during an appeal, the appellate court may, upon a showing of good cause by the State or a representative of the defendant, determine that the appeal should proceed.”³⁶²

B. Belated Appeals

The fourth district grudgingly reversed a defendant’s sentence in *Gilbert v. State*³⁶³ by applying, to a belated appeal, the general rule that appellate courts decide cases in accordance with the law in effect at the time of the appellate decision.³⁶⁴ The court felt that it was bound by supreme court precedent³⁶⁵ to apply this general rule despite “question[ing] its 354. See, e.g., Williams v. State, 648 So. 2d 313 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1995); Carstens v. State, 638 So. 2d 630 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1994); Jackson v. State, 559 So. 2d 320 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1990); Kearns v. State, 536 So. 2d 1187 (Fla. 5th Dist. Ct. App. 1989); Cruz v. State, 137 So. 2d 254 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1962).

355. Clements, 668 So. 2d at 981.

356. Id.

357. Id. (quoting Vaccaro v. State, 11 So. 2d 186, 187 (Fla. 1942)).

358. Clements, 668 So. 2d at 981 (citing Vaccaro, 11 So. 2d at 188; Hitchcock v. State, 413 So. 2d 741 (Fla. 1982)), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 960 (1982).

359. Clements, 668 So. 2d at 982.

360. Id.

361. Id.

362. Id.

363. 667 So. 2d 969 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

364. Id. at 971.

365. Florida Patient’s Compensation Fund v. Von Stetina, 474 So. 2d 783 (Fla. 1985).

propriety in cases of a belated appeal, especially one [such as the case under review] which is not brought until after the favorable case law change has been announced.”³⁶⁶

The court expressed its belief that “a defendant should not be allowed to sit back and await a favorable change in the law before claiming a right to appeal, as the appellant did here.”³⁶⁷ Indicating that it did not believe it should “take two years to discover and bring to the court’s attention”³⁶⁸ a trial counsel’s dereliction of the duty to file a notice of appeal when requested to do so, the court suggested “that the time for bringing a claim for ineffectiveness based on trial counsel’s failure to appeal should be even more limited than a routine motion for ineffectiveness pursuant to Florida Rule of Criminal Procedure 3.850,”³⁶⁹ a rule which presently requires such motions to be filed within two years of conviction,³⁷⁰ one year in capital cases.³⁷¹

Judge Glickstein wrote a specially concurring opinion in which he agreed with the majority on the merits of the case, but “abstain[ed] from their expressed concerns as to the policy matters beyond the issues.”³⁷²

C. Appeals by the State

1. Appeals Taken After the Jury is Sworn

In State v. Livingston,³⁷³ a motion to suppress, filed prior to jury selection, was heard after the jury was sworn but before opening statements.³⁷⁴ The trial court granted the motion and subsequently granted a mistrial.³⁷⁵

The State appealed from the order granting the motion to suppress and the defendant contended that the order was not appealable because the jury had been sworn prior to the suppression hearing.³⁷⁶ The second district

366. Gilbert, 667 So. 2d at 971.

367. Id.

368. Id.

369. Id.

370. FLA. R. CRIM. P. 3.850(b).

371. Id.

372. Gilbert, 667 So. 2d at 971 (Glickstein, J., concurring specially).

373. 21 Fla. L. Weekly D1237 (2d Dist. Ct. App. May 22, 1996).

374. Id. at D1237–38.

375. Id. It is not clear from the opinion which party requested the mistrial, whether the mistrial had any relation to the motion to suppress or whether the mistrial was granted before opening statements or at some point thereafter.

376. Livingston, 21 Fla. L. Weekly at D1238.

disagreed, concluding that “the granting of a motion to suppress followed by a mistrial results in an order appealable under Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.140(c)(1)(B).”³⁷⁷

2. Effect of Nolle Prose

The State sought certiorari review of two pretrial evidentiary rulings in State v. Spence.³⁷⁸ After the trial court entered the orders in question, the State nolle prossed the case.³⁷⁹ Some three weeks later, the State refiled an information alleging the same crime.³⁸⁰ The State then filed its timely petitions for certiorari.³⁸¹

Relying on the supreme court’s decision in State v. Vazquez,³⁸² the court found that the evidentiary rulings had “no carryover effect upon the new information.”³⁸³ Given this fact, the court called the attempt to obtain review of the rulings a “request for a futile act”³⁸⁴ and denied the State’s petitions.³⁸⁵ “Even though the new case may constitute an identical allegation,”³⁸⁶ the court stated, “it nonetheless constitutes a separate case and we cannot reach back and rule and determine the validity of orders entered in a previous case that is no longer in existence.”³⁸⁷

The court warned that the filing of a nolle prose “may have awesome consequences which should be contemplated before such action is taken,”³⁸⁸ and indicated that it “prepared this opinion to point out the pitfall in the course of action taken by the state in the instant case.”³⁸⁹

3. Pretrial Orders Declaring a Sentencing Statute Unconstitutional

In State v. Peloquin,³⁹⁰ the second district dealt with consolidated appeals by the State from orders declaring the DUI vehicle impoundment

377. Id.

378. 658 So. 2d 660 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

379. Id. at 661.

380. Id.

381. Id.

382. 450 So. 2d 203 (Fla. 1984).

383. Spence, 658 So. 2d at 661.

384. Id.

385. Id.

386. Id.

387. Id.

388. Spence, 658 So. 2d at 661.

389. Id.

390. 20 Fla. L. Weekly D2744 (2d Dist. Ct. App. Dec. 15, 1995).

law³⁹¹ unconstitutional.³⁹² The court noted that the defendants in the cases under review had not yet gone to trial or pleaded to the charges³⁹³ and that the issue of vehicle impoundment does not arise until after conviction.³⁹⁴ Under these circumstances, the court dismissed the appeals,³⁹⁵ stating that “[a] pretrial order declaring a statute or ordinance unconstitutional, and doing nothing more regarding the underlying case, is not appealable,”³⁹⁶ and that since “these orders relate to sentencing, and do not impact the trial of the cases, they do not meet the standard for review by certiorari.”³⁹⁷

D. Motions for Post Conviction Relief

1. Summary Denial

In Davis v. State,³⁹⁸ the fourth district discussed the procedure it follows in reviewing summary denials of motions for postconviction relief.³⁹⁹ The court noted that appeals in such cases are governed by Rule 9.140(g) of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure,⁴⁰⁰ which requires the court to review “the arguments made therein together with the order of denial and the attachments thereto,”⁴⁰¹ and which states, “[u]nless the record shows conclusively that the appellant is entitled to no relief, the order shall be reversed and the cause remanded for an evidentiary hearing.”⁴⁰² The court went on to note that if its review “shows a preliminary basis for reversing the trial court’s order,”⁴⁰³ the court will order a response from the state and will then “allow the appellant to reply.”⁴⁰⁴ If the record does not show such a basis, the court continued, “neither the appellant nor the state are required to file briefs.”⁴⁰⁵

391. FLA. STAT. § 316.193(6)(d) (1993).

392. Peloquin, 20 Fla. L. Weekly at D2744.

393. Id.

394. Id.

395. Id.

396. Id. (citation omitted).

397. Peloquin, 20 Fla. L. Weekly at D2744.

398. 660 So. 2d 1161 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

399. Id. at 1162.

400. Id.

401. Id.

402. FLA. R. APP. P. 9.140(g).

403. Davis, 660 So. 2d at 1162.

404. Id.

405. Id.

The court took the opportunity to explain its process because “we have noted of late many pro se appellants filing briefs on orders denying postconviction relief without a hearing.”⁴⁰⁶ Stating that it “would have already disposed of this case as an affirmance but for the fact”⁴⁰⁷ that the appellant filed a brief,⁴⁰⁸ the court opined that such briefs “may in fact slow the process of our review”⁴⁰⁹ and “[g]enerally . . . are not considered, because either the arguments were made in the postconviction relief motion, or they improperly raise additional issues not contained in”⁴¹⁰ the motion.

2. Orders Granting in Part and Denying in Part

In Cooper v. State,⁴¹¹ the second district found to be appealable an order granting in part and denying in part a motion for postconviction relief filed under Rule 3.850 of the Florida Rules of Criminal Procedure.⁴¹² Such an order, the court concluded, “marks the end of the judicial labor which is to be expended on the motion, and the order is final for appellate purposes.”⁴¹³ The court drew a distinction between such an order and one that denies a claim in a postconviction motion but grants an evidentiary hearing on a different claim in the same motion.⁴¹⁴ In such circumstances, the court stated, the order is “not appealable until all issues raised have been ruled upon by the court,”⁴¹⁵ because “[j]udicial economy . . . forbids piecemeal appeals until all pending matters raised in a single motion have been resolved and . . . can then be efficiently reviewed in one appellate proceeding.”⁴¹⁶

E. Cross-Appeals

In Page v. State,⁴¹⁷ a criminal defendant appealed from a conviction and the state cross-appealed, asserting that the trial court erroneously suppressed

406. Id.

407. Id.

408. Davis, 660 So. 2d at 1162.

409. Id.

410. Id.

411. 667 So. 2d 932 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

412. Id. at 933.

413. Id.

414. Id.

415. Id.

416. Cooper, 667 So. 2d at 933.

417. 677 So. 2d 55 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

a statement.⁴¹⁸ The first district affirmed the conviction and, in light of that resolution, declined to address the issue raised on cross-appeal.⁴¹⁹

The court recognized section 924.07(1)(d) of the Florida Statutes, which states, in pertinent part: "Once the state's cross-appeal is instituted, the appellate court shall review and rule upon the question raised by the state regardless of the disposition of the defendant's appeal."⁴²⁰ Concluding, however, that compliance with that provision in a case such as the one under review would "be rendering what amounted to nothing more than an advisory opinion,"⁴²¹ the court found that "to the extent the statute purports to dictate to the courts what issues must be addressed, regardless of necessity, it constitutes a violation of the separation of powers."⁴²² The court certified the following question to the supreme court as one of great public importance:

IS SECTION 924.07(1)(d), FLORIDA STATUTES (1995), AN UNCONSTITUTIONAL VIOLATION OF THE PRINCIPAL [SIC] OF SEPARATION OF POWERS TO THE EXTENT THAT IT PURPORTS TO MANDATE THAT AN APPELLATE COURT MUST RULE UPON ISSUES RAISED BY THE STATE IN A CROSS-APPEAL, REGARDLESS OF THE DISPOSITION OF THE DEFENDANT'S APPEAL?⁴²³

F. Disqualification of Counsel

In Colton v. State,⁴²⁴ a criminal defendant appealing his conviction, who was represented by the Public Defender's Office, moved to disqualify counsel for the State.⁴²⁵ The motion was based on the fact that at the time of the filing of the notice of appeal, counsel for the state had been employed as a trial attorney by the Public Defender's Office representing the defendant.⁴²⁶

418. Id. at 55.

419. Id. at 56.

420. FLA. STAT. 924.07(1)(d) (1995).

421. Id.

422. Page, 677 So. 2d at 56.

423. Id.

424. 667 So. 2d 341 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

425. Id. at 342.

426. Id.

Resolving all factual disputes in favor of the defendant,⁴²⁷ the first district denied the motion. The court found a number of facts to be of significance, including the fact that: 1) the attorney did not represent the defendant at trial or on any previous matter;⁴²⁸ 2) the defendant did not assert that the attorney had received any confidential information, but only that it was possible that he could have been exposed to such information;⁴²⁹ and 3) the attorney filed an affidavit in which he stated that he was not privy or exposed to any information regarding appellate cases, including the defendant's appeal.⁴³⁰

The court noted that there is no rule of Professional Conduct that specifically addresses successive government to government employment when those interests are adverse⁴³¹ and rejected the defendant's effort to extend to the facts of the case the dictates of Rule 2.060(c) of the Florida Rules of Judicial Administration, which "prohibits former judicial research aides from participating in any manner in any proceeding that was docketed in the court during the term of service or prior thereto."⁴³²

The court therefore addressed the issue in terms of whether the representation resulted in an appearance of impropriety, noting first that such an evaluation must be done on a case-by-case basis.⁴³³ In finding no appearance of impropriety to exist, the court pointed out that "arguments made at trial and on appeal are distinct and involve differing strategies,"⁴³⁴ that appellate courts are "bound by the record and arguments made at the trial court level,"⁴³⁵ matters with which the attorney in the case under review was not involved,⁴³⁶ and that any "anonymous information"⁴³⁷ the attorney might have overheard while with the Public Defender's Office would be viewed by the court as "of little value in the appellate process."⁴³⁸

427. The court noted that if the case had turned on the factual disputes, it would have appointed a special master to make factual findings. Id.

428. Id. at 343.

429. Colton, 667 So. 2d at 343.

430. Id. at 342.

431. Id. at 342-43.

432. Id. at 343.

433. Id.

434. Colton, 667 So. 2d at 343.

435. Id.

436. Id.

437. Id.

438. Id.

G. Out-of-Time Rehearing

In Spaziano v. State,⁴³⁹ a criminal defendant with a pending death warrant filed two out-of-time motions for rehearing. One motion was directed to the affirmance, thirteen years earlier on direct appeal, of the judgment and sentence of death and the other was directed to the affirmance, nine years earlier, of the denial of a motion for post-conviction relief.⁴⁴⁰

The court noted that the motions were “clearly not authorized.”⁴⁴¹ It went on, however, consistent with its “constitutional responsibility to refrain from dismissing a cause solely because an improper remedy has been sought,”⁴⁴² to consider the contents of the motions and a supporting affidavit “to determine whether they have any basis for relief under our jurisdiction.”⁴⁴³ Such consideration led to the conclusion that one issue raised by the defendant, relating to newly discovered evidence of the recantation of the testimony of a significant witness, was a proper subject for a successive motion for post-conviction relief under Rules 3.850 and 3.851 of the Florida Rules of Criminal Procedure.⁴⁴⁴ The supreme court therefore remanded the matter to the trial court for consideration of that issue.⁴⁴⁵

XXII. APPEALS IN TERMINATION OF PARENTAL RIGHTS CASES

A. Final Orders

The question of what constitutes a final order for purposes of appeal, when parental rights are terminated was dealt with by the fifth district in Moore v. Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.⁴⁴⁶ Uncertainty existed on this point because the statutory scheme applicable to such cases contemplates the entry of two written orders.⁴⁴⁷ The first order, pursuant to section 39.467 of the Florida Statutes, is to be entered after the adjudicatory hearing and is to set forth “the findings of fact and conclusions of law.”⁴⁴⁸ The second, pursuant to section 39.469(3), is a subsequent order of disposi-

439. 660 So. 2d 1363 (Fla. 1995).

440. Id. at 1364.

441. Id. at 1365.

442. Id.

443. Id.

444. Spaziano, 660 So. 2d at 1365–66.

445. Id. at 1366.

446. 664 So. 2d 1137 (Fla. 5th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

447. Id. at 1139.

448. FLA. STAT. § 39.467(5) (1995).

tion “briefly stating the facts upon which [the court’s] decision to terminate the parental rights is made.”⁴⁴⁹

The district court held that “it is the second or dispositional order which is the final order for purposes of appeal.”⁴⁵⁰ Although the notice of appeal in the case under review was directed to the initial adjudicatory order, the court reached the merits of the appellant’s claims, concluding that “a notice of appeal directed to an adjudicatory order should simply be treated as a premature notice which is held in abeyance until entry of the dispositional order.”⁴⁵¹

B. Lack of Issue of Arguable Merit

In Ostrum v. Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services,⁴⁵² an appeal was taken from a final order terminating parental rights. The appellant’s court-appointed counsel moved to withdraw and filed a brief pursuant to the dictates of Anders v. California.⁴⁵³

In Anders, the United States Supreme Court established the procedure to be employed by court-appointed counsel in criminal appeals when they find no issues of arguable merit. As capsulized in Ostrum, such attorneys are to file a brief “detailing the proceedings below with a discussion of where error might be suggested and why none actually appears.”⁴⁵⁴

The fourth district granted the motion to withdraw, but also took the opportunity to establish the proper procedure to be employed when court-appointed counsel finds no issues of arguable merit in appeals from orders terminating parental rights.⁴⁵⁵

The court concluded that “the full panoply of Anders procedures”⁴⁵⁶ do not apply in such situations. The court relied in part on the fact that the Sixth Amendment right to counsel does not apply to termination of parental rights cases because they are purely civil in nature,⁴⁵⁷ and the conclusion that

449. Id. § 39.469(3) (1995).

450. Moore, 664 So. 2d at 1139.

451. Id.

452. 663 So. 2d 1359 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

453. 386 U.S. 738 (1967).

454. Ostrum, 663 So. 2d at 1361.

455. Id.

456. Id.

457. The court recognized that the right to counsel in termination of parental rights cases is compelled by both the Florida Constitution and the United States Constitution, albeit on a due process theory. See In re D.B., 385 So. 2d 83, 90–91 (Fla. 1980).

“the interest of the children in quitting the uncertainties surrounding their future should be put to rest as soon as it can fairly be done.”⁴⁵⁸

“More importantly, however,”⁴⁵⁹ the court stated, “Anders represents a radical departure from the traditional role of appellate judges as neutral decision makers without bias or prejudice for or against any party,”⁴⁶⁰ turning the judges instead “into advocates for the party whose counsel seeks to withdraw.”⁴⁶¹

“Whatever may be the rationale for requiring that departure from neutrality in criminal cases,”⁴⁶² the court continued, “we are quite unwilling to allow it in purely civil matters. To do so is to favor one class of litigants over the other. That circumstance will understandably be seen by other parties as a classic denial of equal protection of the law.”⁴⁶³

Accordingly, the court concluded that in cases of this nature, counsel should simply move to withdraw.⁴⁶⁴ The court then set forth the procedure that it will follow with such motions. As in other civil appeals, the court will give the party a period of time within which to argue the case without an attorney.⁴⁶⁵ If the party fails to file a brief, the court will dismiss the appeal for failure to prosecute.⁴⁶⁶ If the party does file a brief and it fails to present a preliminary basis for reversal, the court will summarily affirm under Rule 9.315 of the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure.⁴⁶⁷ If the brief does present a preliminary basis for reversal, the case will proceed as an ordinary appeal.⁴⁶⁸

In Jiminez v. Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services,⁴⁶⁹ the third district applied the Ostrum reasoning to similar facts, noting additionally one point not specifically addressed by, but presumably implicit in, Ostrum. The Jiminez court stated that in cases in which a party’s brief does show a preliminary basis for reversal, the “court will retain discretion to 458. Ostrum, 663 So. 2d at 1361.

459. Id.

460. Id.

461. Id.

462. Id.

463. Ostrum, 663 So. 2d at 1361.

464. Id.

465. Id.

466. Id.

467. Id.

468. Ostrum, 663 So. 2d at 1361.

469. 669 So. 2d 340 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

deny the motion to withdraw and direct that appointed counsel proceed with the appeal."⁴⁷⁰

XXIII. APPEALS IN WORKERS' COMPENSATION CASES

In Millinger v. Broward County Mental Health Division,⁴⁷¹ the appellant's notice of appeal from an order denying a claim for compensation was mailed to the district court two days before the expiration of the thirty-day period for filing such notices,⁴⁷² but was not received until after that period had expired.⁴⁷³

The appellant filed a "Motion for Extension or in the Alternative Motion for Remand,"⁴⁷⁴ requesting that the appeal be accepted as timely or that the case be remanded to the judge of compensation claims ("JJC") to determine whether excusable neglect existed so as to allow the JJC to vacate and reenter the already final order.⁴⁷⁵ The motion was accompanied by an affidavit of appellant's counsel's secretary stating that she had called the clerk's office of the district court and was given erroneous information that the notice of appeal would be timely if it was postmarked within the thirty-day period.⁴⁷⁶ The district court denied the motion and dismissed the appeal.⁴⁷⁷

The appellant then filed with the JJC a motion for rehearing and motion to vacate based on the same grounds as the motion in the district court.⁴⁷⁸ At the hearing on the motion, appellant's counsel testified that he was aware of the fact that the notice had to actually be filed within thirty days,⁴⁷⁹ that he had instructed his staff on the point,⁴⁸⁰ and that his secretary had acted on her own in contacting the clerk's office.⁴⁸¹ The JJC vacated the original order and reentered an identical order to allow the appellant an opportunity to appeal.⁴⁸²

470. Id. at 342 (footnote omitted).

471. 672 So. 2d 24 (Fla. 1996).

472. FLA. R. WORK. COMP. P. 4.165(a).

473. Millinger, 672 So. 2d at 25.

474. Id.

475. Id.

476. Id.

477. Id.

478. Millinger, 672 So. 2d at 25.

479. Id.

480. Id.

481. Id.

482. Id.

The appellant instituted a timely appeal from the second order and the appellee cross-appealed, challenging the vacation of the original order.⁴⁸³ The district court agreed with the appellee, holding that the JJC was without jurisdiction to vacate and reenter the judgment.⁴⁸⁴

The supreme court approved the district court's decision⁴⁸⁵ and found it to be inapplicable to the case relied upon by the appellant, New Washington Heights Community Development Conference v. Department of Community Affairs.⁴⁸⁶

In New Washington Heights, the appellant's counsel's secretary telephoned the clerk of an administrative agency and was erroneously told that the agency would consider an appeal from one of its orders to be filed as of the postmark date, if sent by certified mail.⁴⁸⁷ The third district dismissed the appeal, but did so "without prejudice to the appellant to apply to the Department to vacate and re-enter the operative order."⁴⁸⁸ The court stated that "[i]f the Department acts favorably upon such application, the appellant may timely appeal the re-entered order and thereby challenge the merits of the original adverse agency action."⁴⁸⁹ The court's decision was based on the principle that "where state action deprives a party of the ability to file a timely notice of appeal, the appellate court, although deprived of jurisdiction over the appeal, will provide the thus-rejected appellant with an alternative avenue of review."⁴⁹⁰

The supreme court found that the reasoning of New Washington Heights was "not dispositive"⁴⁹¹ in Millinger "for at least two reasons."⁴⁹² First, the court stated, the untimely notice in Millinger "was not the direct result of misrepresentations of a state official."⁴⁹³ Second, the court continued, not only was it "both inappropriate and unnecessary for counsel's secretary to call the court clerk for legal advice"⁴⁹⁴ in Millinger because "[i]t is a settled rule of law that mailing, as opposed to filing, a notice within the thirty-day

483. Millinger, 672 So. 2d at 25.

484. Millinger v. Broward County Mental Health Div., 655 So. 2d 104 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1994).

485. Millinger, 672 So. 2d at 25.

486. 515 So. 2d 328 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1987).

487. Id. at 329.

488. Id. at 330.

489. Id.

490. Id. at 329-30.

491. Millinger, 672 So. 2d at 26.

492. Id.

493. Id.

494. Id.

filing period is insufficient to preserve appellate rights,”⁴⁹⁵ but the appellant’s “counsel admitted that he knew the notice had to be filed in the district court within the thirty-day filing period.”⁴⁹⁶ Under these facts, the court found that “[i]t was counsel’s responsibility to adequately supervise and instruct his staff to ensure”⁴⁹⁷ that the notice was timely filed. The court also “disapprove[d] New Washington Heights to the extent that it is inconsistent with our holding here.”⁴⁹⁸

The supreme court additionally rejected a claim that because a JJC “may . . . do all things conformable to law which may be necessary to enable him effectively to discharge the duties of his office,”⁴⁹⁹ the JJC had the “inherent authority to vacate and reenter his final order.”⁵⁰⁰ The appellant’s argument in this regard was based on the decision in Morgan Yacht Corp. v. Edwards,⁵⁰¹ which interpreted section 440.331(1) “as giving a JJC the authority to rescind his approval of a settlement upon discovering that the settlement was based on the claimant’s ‘flagrant fraud and misrepresentations.’”⁵⁰²

The supreme court distinguished Morgan Yacht on the basis that counsel in Millinger did not miss the deadline “due to fraud or deliberate deception,”⁵⁰³ but because he “failed to manage his office professionally.”⁵⁰⁴

XXIV. APPEALS IN JUVENILE CASES

A. Final Orders

In A.N. v. State,⁵⁰⁵ an appeal was taken by a juvenile from an adjudication of delinquency.⁵⁰⁶ The State moved to dismiss, asserting that the order of adjudication was a nonappealable, nonfinal order.⁵⁰⁷

495. Id. (citations omitted).

496. Millinger, 672 So. 2d at 26.

497. Id.

498. Id. at 27.

499. FLA. STAT. § 440.33(1) (1993).

500. Millinger, 672 So. 2d at 27.

501. 386 So. 2d 883 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1980).

502. Millinger, 672 So. 2d at 27 (quoting Morgan Yacht, 386 So. 2d at 884).

503. Id.

504. Id. (footnote omitted).

505. 666 So. 2d 928 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

506. Id. at 929.

507. Id.

The third district pointed out that under the Florida Constitution, the right to appeal interlocutory orders exists only “to the extent provided by rules adopted by the supreme court”⁵⁰⁸ and that the supreme court has not adopted a rule that permits interlocutory appeals in juvenile delinquency cases.⁵⁰⁹ The court recognized the fact that the legislature “created the right to appeal a final order in a delinquency case by enacting paragraph 39.069(1)(a), Florida Statutes (1993).”⁵¹⁰ The court noted, however, that the statute “does not itself define what is a final order in a juvenile delinquency proceeding.”⁵¹¹

Agreeing with the first district’s decisions in *C.L.S. v. State*⁵¹² and T.L.W. v. Soud,⁵¹³ which found that the final order in a delinquency case is the order of disposition because that order marks the end of the judicial labor in the case,⁵¹⁴ the third district concluded that since no disposition order had been entered,⁵¹⁵ there existed no appealable order⁵¹⁶ and dismissal was appropriate.⁵¹⁷

B. Evidence Sufficient to Prove Only Lesser Included Offense

In I.T. v. State,⁵¹⁸ the second district found the evidence insufficient to support adjudications of delinquency based on the offense of grand theft auto.⁵¹⁹ The court concluded, however, that the evidence did support a finding of trespass in a conveyance.⁵²⁰

Citing to the supreme court’s decision in Gould v. State,⁵²¹ the second district recognized that when an appellate court finds the evidence insufficient in a criminal case to support the offense for which a defendant was convicted, but sufficient to prove a lesser included offense, the appellate

508. FLA. CONST., art. V, § 4(b)(1).

509. A.N., 666 So. 2d at 930.

510. Id.

511. Id.

512. 586 So. 2d 1173 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1991).

513. 645 So. 2d 1101 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1994), review dismissed, 650 So. 2d 992 (Fla. 1995).

514. A.N., 666 So. 2d at 930.

515. Id.

516. Id.

517. Id.

518. 657 So. 2d 1241 (Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

519. FLA. STAT. § 812.014(2)(c) (1993).

520. Id. § 810.08(1) (1993).

521. 577 So. 2d 1302 (Fla. 1991).

court can order the trial court to enter a conviction for the lesser crime only when that crime is a necessarily lesser included offense.⁵²²

The court pointed out, however, that in G.C. v. State,⁵²³ the third district concluded that “an appellate court may affirm a juvenile adjudication on an alternative ground that is not a necessary lesser included offense,”⁵²⁴ and that the supreme court, in its review of the third district’s decision,⁵²⁵ “approved this procedure.”⁵²⁶

The court acknowledged that in N.C. v. State,⁵²⁷ the fourth district followed a different procedure, reversing an adjudication for grand theft auto and discharging the juvenile defendant based on Gould.⁵²⁸ Concluding, however, that Gould is limited to adult criminal cases,⁵²⁹ and that the supreme court did not intend in Gould to overrule G.C.,⁵³⁰ the court affirmed the adjudications in I.T. with directions to modify them to reflect trespass in a conveyance as their basis.⁵³¹ The court also certified conflict with *N.C.*⁵³²

C. Sentencing

In J.M. v. State,⁵³³ the third district concluded that a trial court’s departure from the recommendations set forth by HRS in a delinquency disposition proceeding is appealable.⁵³⁴ The court relied on section 39.052(3)(e)3 of the Florida Statutes, which states: “The court shall commit the child to the department at the restrictiveness level identified [by HRS] or may order placement at a different restrictiveness level. . . . Any party may appeal the court’s findings resulting in a modified level of restrictiveness pursuant to this subparagraph.”⁵³⁵

522. I.T., 657 So. 2d at 1242.

523. 560 So. 2d 1186 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1990).

524. I.T., 657 So. 2d at 1242.

525. State v. G.C., 572 So. 2d 1380 (Fla. 1991).

526. I.T., 657 So. 2d at 1242.

527. 581 So. 2d 647 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1991).

528. I.T., 657 So. 2d at 1242.

529. Id.

530. Id.

531. Id.

532. Id.

533. 677 So. 2d 890 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

534. Id. at 891.

535. FLA. STAT. § 39.052(3)(e)3 (1993).

Judge Cope dissented, believing that the court is not permitted to review a trial court's discretionary sentencing decision⁵³⁶ because of section 39.052(3)(k) of the Florida Statutes.⁵³⁷ That provision states:

It is the intent of the Legislature that the criteria set forth in paragraph (d) are general guidelines to be followed at the discretion of the court and not mandatory requirements of procedure. It is not the intent of the Legislature to provide for the appeal of the disposition made pursuant to this subsection.⁵³⁸

The majority, however, interpreted the second sentence of section 39.052(3)(k) to refer to the first sentence of the provision.⁵³⁹ "That is to say,"⁵⁴⁰ the court indicated, "we believe the legislature did not intend to create an appealable issue out of the fact that the trial court considered only certain of the criteria listed in paragraph (d) and not other listed criteria."⁵⁴¹

The majority also found what it considered to be "a second, more fundamental reason for why this statutory provision cannot be construed to preclude appellate review."⁵⁴² Noting that "[t]he commitment of a child to HRS is a deprivation of liberty which triggers significant due process protection,"⁵⁴³ the court stated that it "simply cannot agree with an interpretation of any statutory language which permits such a fundamental liberty interest to rest solely on the unbridled discretion of the trial judge."⁵⁴⁴

The court went on to note that in A.S. v. State,⁵⁴⁵ it had found that the trial court violated a juvenile's constitutional rights by imposing a harsher sentence than that recommended by HRS because the juvenile had exercised his constitutional right to assert his innocence, even after adjudication as a delinquent.⁵⁴⁶ The court stated that if there was no right for juveniles to appeal their dispositions, the juvenile in A.S. would have had to "serve a

536. Judge Cope indicated that the question was not whether there existed an appealable order, but whether the trial court's departure from the recommendation made by HRS was an appealable issue. Id. at 894-95 (Cope J., dissenting).

537. Id. at 896 (Cope, J., dissenting).

538. FLA. STAT. § 39.052(3)(k) (1993).

539. J. M., 677 So. 2d at 891-92.

540. Id. at 892.

541. Id.

542. Id.

543. Id.

544. J.M., 677 So. 2d at 892.

545. 667 So. 2d 994 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1996).

546. J. M., 677 So. 2d at 892.

significantly enhanced sentence as a result of his exercise of a fundamental constitutional right.”⁵⁴⁷ The court indicated that in its view, such a result was “unfathomable.”⁵⁴⁸

D. Juvenile Restitution

In State v. C.W.,⁵⁴⁹ the fourth district dismissed an appeal by the state from a final order denying restitution in a juvenile proceeding.⁵⁵⁰ The court recognized that such orders can be appealed in criminal cases under section 924.07(1)(k) of the Florida Statutes,⁵⁵¹ but pointed out that there is no comparable provision in sections 39.069(1)(b) and 39.0711,⁵⁵² which list the types of orders from which the state may appeal in juvenile proceedings.

XXV. APPEALS IN BOND VALIDATION CASES

In Rowe v. St. Johns County,⁵⁵³ an appeal from a decision declaring a proposed bond issue valid,⁵⁵⁴ the named appellant filed a notice of appeal, but did not submit the initial brief.⁵⁵⁵ Rather, the appellants were “three citizens who did not intervene in the bond validation proceeding below.”⁵⁵⁶ The supreme court found that “as citizens and taxpayers”⁵⁵⁷ of the county that authorized the issuance of the bonds, the three appellants “were proper parties to that proceeding and thus may properly appear for the first time on appeal.”⁵⁵⁸

XXVI. A LOOK TO THE FUTURE

In the upcoming year, the supreme court, pursuant to Rule 2.130 of the Florida Rules of Judicial Administration, will adopt its four-year cycle amendments to the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure. It is likely that

547. Id.

548. Id.

549. 662 So. 2d 768 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1995).

550. Id. at 769.

551. Id.

552. Id.

553. 668 So. 2d 196 (Fla. 1996).

554. Id. at 197.

555. Id.

556. Id.

557. Id. at 197–98.

558. Rowe, 668 So. 2d at 198.

these amendments will significantly impact the appellate process in Florida. Of course, the supreme court and the courts of appeal will also provide answers to many of the questions raised by the cases discussed in this article. The answers, as they usually do, will likely generate new questions. Those questions, and others, will continue to provide the large number of court decisions that shape the field of appellate practice.