Welcome to the Carrick Water Music Festival 2014

Our Festival celebrating its 10th Anniversary is all about musical and artistic discovery and above all, enjoyment in Ireland's loveliest riverside town.

The Carrick Water Music Festival promises a wonderful six days of music from many diverse genres; from opera to contemporary, classical to jazz, country, folk and ragtime.

This is complemented by many other specially curated events and activities including art workshops, drama, exhibitions, film and more, something for every taste while savouring the culinary, architectural and river amenities of Carrick-on-Shannon.

With huge interest in this year's events, be sure to book your tickets in good time with our Festival partner The Dock. Tickets can be booked in person, by phoning +353 71 9650828 or online at www.thedock.ie.

An entirely voluntary run festival, we are most grateful for the support provided by the various Festival partners, funders and donors, without whose generous assistance in every way this Festival could not have happened.

The Festival Committee wish you an enjoyable experience during this year's Festival.

4-7 year olds: 10.30am - 1.30pm daily
€60 for the week
(family rates available)

8-10 year olds: 2.30pm - 5.30pm daily
€60 for the week
(family rates available)

Pre-booking essential!

This is an exciting opportunity for kids to work with the Dock resident artists, musician and composer Cathal Roche and performance and visual artist Kate Wilson, on a week long cross-arts event. Wilson and Roche have collaborated on a number of residencies and performances involving physical theatre, dance and improvised music in their professional work. The Dock is delighted they are now also bringing this work to the Dock's summer workshop programme for children. Over the week participants will learn the exciting skills of improvisation in music (Instrumental and voice) and in dance theatre, how to work solo, duet and group work, creating their own compositions, as well as developing confidence as performers. On the final day the participants will share a performance combining the work from the week in their own devised compositions and improvised structures in a performance for family and friends. No previous experience is required for these workshops, just a willingness to play, explore and create.

Voce di Donna Trio

'Disarming Divas and Spicy Roles'

An evening of beautiful operatic works combined with witty, entertaining explanations of all the songs is guaranteed!

St George's Church €15

Voce di Donna (Voice of a Woman) is a Cork-based operatic trio comprising Fiona O'Reilly (Soprano), Christina O'Flynn (Mezzo) and Bethan Lee (piano). This unique group came together out of their shared passion for opera. Voce di Donna transforms the elitist image of opera into an exciting, accessible and affordable theatrical event. Their productions are an arrangement of opera arias, presented in a highly-entertaining theatrical form.

Audiences will be amazed at how much is packed into the new show and how the full gamut of emotions is unleashed with the sometimes hilarious, often tear-jerking and always entertaining performance of the three women.

If Opera is 'your thing', treat yourself to a performance of pure delight.

If Opera is 'not your thing', allow yourself to be delightfully surprised.

Thursday 17th July 8.30pm

Koyaanisqatsi: Life out of Balance

This will be followed by a film - 'Koyaanisqatsi' - originally premiered in Radio City Music Hall in October 1982, but was out of print for most of the 1990's due to copyright issues. The title is a Hopi Indian word meaning "life out of balance." Created between 1975 and 1982, the film is an apocalyptic vision of the collision of two different worlds -- urban life and technology versus the environment.

Directed by Godfrey Reggio, with cinematography by Ron Fricke and a musical score by Philip Glass.

MADAME BUTTERFLY

Puccini's much loved opera, performed by the distinguished Opera A La Carte.

The Landmark Hotel €35

Set in the early 20th Century, Madame Butterfly is a heart wrenching and exotic tale where Pinkerton, an American naval officer, arranges through a marriage broker to take a bride (Butterfly) while stationed in Japan. The themes of honour, duty and shame are brought together in Puccini's rich score which combines Eastern and Western melodies to portray the jarring collision of the two cultures. Will it be life with dishonour or death and dignity?

Opera
A LA CARTE

Act I

Early 1900's Nagasaki

On a terrace outside a house overlooking the harbor B. F. Pinkerton, a US Naval Lieutenant, is inspecting the house he has leased from a Japanese marriage broker, Gore, who has also obtained a young geisha wife, Cio-Cio-San, and servants for the Lieutenant. Sharpless, the American Consul, arrives and Pinkerton begins to boast about how great the sailor's life is collecting women around the world from port to port and, though she does not know it yet, Cio-Cio-San is no exception. She believes that the 999-year marriage contract Pinkerton has signed is proof of his devotion, even though the contract includes a chance for annulment at the end of every month. Sharpless warns the young Lieutenant that Cio-Cio-San may not be taking the marriage so lightly, but Pinkerton brushes him off saying that one day he will marry a real American wife.

Cio-Cio-San is heard singing about her new life. When she reaches the terrace she tells Pinkerton she was once wealthy but then became a geisha and how happy she is now. Her relatives gossip about the couple. Quietly she shows Pinkerton her dearest possessions but hides the sword used by her father to commit suicide. Cio-Cio-San explains her plan to convert to his Christian faith. The Imperial Commissioner performs the wedding and all toast to the happy couple until The Bonze, a Buddhist priest and Cio-Cio-San's uncle, scolds the young bride for renouncing her ancestors' religion. Angered by this outburst, Pinkerton sends his guests away and the couple are left alone to sing of their love for each other.

Act II

Over a year later

Inside the house Cio-Cio-San awaits her husband's return from America as Suzuki, Cio-Cio-San's servant, prays to the gods. Suzuki then shows Cio-Cio-San what little money they have left in the hope that she will realise Pinkerton is not returning and that she needs to move on. Cio-Cio-San tells her servant to have faith and that Pinkerton will return. Sharpless enters with a letter sent by the Lieutenant, but before he has the chance to read it, Goro enters with a rich suitor Prince Yamadori. He has been married and divorced many times and Cio-Cio-San rejects the idea of a new husband. She explains that she is already married. After Goro and the Prince exit, Sharpless is left to read the letter to Cio-Cio-San, which suggests that her husband may not return to her. Suzuki brings out her baby son, Trouble, insisting that once Pinkerton knows he has a son he will return and, if not, she would rather die than go back to the life of a geisha. Seeing her devotion, Sharpless decides not to reveal the full contents of the letter. A signal is heard in the distance announcing Pinkerton's ship's arrival. Cio-Cio-San is full of joy and excitement and has Suzuki pick flowers. They then begin a waiting vigil.

In the morning Suzuki insists that Cio-Cio-San rest. She departs humming a lullaby to the baby. Sharpless enters the house with Pinkerton while his new American wife lingers in the garden. Suzuki agrees to gently break the news to Cio-Cio-San. Pinkerton finding the situation unbearable rushes out of the house. Cio-Cio-San comes in excited to see Pinkerton but seeing Kate Pinkerton, she realises the truth and agrees to give up her baby if the Lieutenant returns for him. After sending everyone away, she takes the Tanti sword that her father used to commit suicide. Choosing to die with honor rather than live in disgrace, she gets ready to take her own life. Right then Suzuki places Trouble into the room to persuade Cio-Cio-San not to take her life.

Drawing Competition

On the occasion of the 10th Carrick Water Music Festival we invited local schools to enter a drawing competition on the theme: WATER and MUSIC. The children could draw or paint a picture in an A 4 size format. There were 2 categories: 5 – 8 and 9 – 12 years of age. We were delighted to receive 128 entries from several local schools.

We want to thank all the children who participated. The judges, Karla Lawless, Kathleen Coleman and Derval Symes did not have an easy task to choose the winners, all the pictures were lovely, colourful and witty. We thank ALL the children who took part, congratulate the winners and commend all the other budding artists on their wonderful efforts. Well done!
