OUR TOUR TO AUSTRALIA

Océan Pacifique Sud

AUSTRALIA

An aerial photograph of a tropical coastline. The water is a vibrant turquoise color, transitioning to a pale yellowish-green near the shore. A wide, white sandy beach curves along the coast. In the foreground, a dense forest of dark green trees covers a hillside. A winding river or stream flows through the landscape, creating intricate patterns in the sand and water. In the background, there are more hills and a clear blue sky with a few wispy clouds.

Typical food of New Zealand

La Nuova Zelanda è un paese per gran parte incontaminato, con paesaggi incredibili alla vista. Malgrado il territorio ancora per vaste zone selvaggio, in cucina la Nuova Zelanda raggiunge vertici di insospettabile raffinatezza, con una scelta più ampia ad Auckland e lungo tutta la costa rispetto all'entroterra che, non disponendo di pesce e crostacei, offre una gamma di specialità più ristretta.

I neozelandesi amano moltissimo la carne. L'agnello è di qualità superiore e si trova dappertutto, mentre la carne di cervo viene proposta nei migliori ristoranti. La Nuova Zelanda è famosa anche per i suoi prodotti caseari: latte, formaggio e gelati sono infatti eccellenti.

Il pesce è ottimo in questo paese: tra i pesci d'acqua salata che ricorrono spesso nella cucina neozelandese citiamo l' 'hoki', l' 'hapuka', il 'groper', lo 'snapper' e il 'kingfish'. Le cozze verdi si trovano ovunque e sono le migliori e le più economiche del mondo.

Particolarmente esotico è il toheroa, un crostaceo raro e carissimo, come pure il tuatua, leggermente più economico. Nei fiumi e nei torrenti abbondano le anguille, un'altra delizia della cucina neozelandese: ottime quelle affumicate.
