Auto mall annexation issue continued to April

By Gina McKee gmckee@hometownnewsol.com

The City of Lake Helen agreed to temporarily table until April a voluntary annexation request by the owners of the proposed I-4 Automall property, by request of the property owners.

I-4 Automall LLC and property owner Brennan Hurley received unanimous approval Feb. 8 from Lake Helen commissioners in their request for a continuance, said Scott Simpson, Lake Helen city attorney.

"The applicant has submitted a request to continue the second reading. It's not a delay of the other items, such as the land use ordinance," he said. "Those items are still moving forward. Everything is moving forward. Continuing the annexation reading does not mean there's a delay in the overall approval process."

The continuance also does not mean the property owners are having second thoughts about the annexation process, said Mark Watts, an attorney with the Cobb Cole law firm, which represents the property owners.

"We're not changing our intent in any way," Mr. Watts told Lake Helen City Commissioners. "Our intent still remains bringing the project into Lake Helen and moving through the process as quickly as we can."

Instead, the continuance serves a dual purpose. First, it gives state and county governments time to review and return land use and planning and development changes to the city, allowing the commission to have second and final readings of all ordinances relating to the annexation at the same time; and second, it grants DeLand City Commissioners an opportunity to conduct public workshops and receive public input on the annexation and subsequent development, Mr. Watts said.

"We always approach projects with a spirit of cooperation," he said. "Because we can't get final See AUTO, page A2

Influenza on the rise; precaution is crucial

By Gina McKee gmckee@hometownnewsol.com

The mild winter weather in the Sunshine State does little to help protect from influenza, and instances in Volusia County are on the rise.

The main issue with influenza are potentially life-threatening complications from pneumonia and secondary infections, especially in the very young and in residents of advanced age. Volusia County sees about 23 deaths per year per 100,000 residents, bringing the total to around 40 flu-related deaths per year, according to the latest statistics available from the Florida Department of Health Volusia County.

Volusia County School administrators also are taking the threat seriously, although attendance numbers have remained at the yearly average, said Nancy Wait, director of community information services.

"We are not seeing any significant changes to our attendance numbers (during flu season)," Ms. Wait said. "We typically have between 91 and 93 percent of our students and it has not fallen below that."

The county school district's website posted information in early February urging parents to keep children home if they exhibited flu-like symptoms to help prevent a rampant spread.

"The Florida Department of Health reports that influenza, or flu, activity levels have increased sharply in Volusia County over the last several weeks," health depart-

Entire community can now review textbooks

By Gina McKee gmckee@hometownnewsol.com

Volusia County schools are rolling out new instructional materials for public perusal and review in accordance with state legislation, which took effect July 1, 2017.

The legislation, known as HB 989, or Instructional Materials, allows county residents, even those without children in the schools, to object to instructional materials. Although the school district previously had a policy in place for board review of new materials, the legislation expanded on that policy and gave any district resident the right to review and possibly object to new instructional materials.

Before the Volusia County School Board approves the new elementary, middle and high school science and social studies materials, parents and community members have the opportunity to review the materials at several times and locations across the county.

So far, reviews have been somewhat limited, but positive, according to school

Spiritualists offer healing session by candlelight

By Lori Carter For Hometown News

Candlelight Healing will start at 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 17, in the Colby Memorial Temple, 1250 Marion St., at Southern Cassadaga Spiritualist Camp Meeting Association.

The Rev. Louis Gates, pastor of Colby Memorial Temple, said there will be practitioners of various healing modalities, including Pranic Healing, Reiki, Arcing Light, Crystal Healing and Spiritualist hands on healing.

The opportunity "is important because it gives you a chance to allow yourself to be healed, to treat yourself to this connection of healing energy to heal body, mind and spirit," he said.

Rev. Gates said there should be about 10 healers that night. He said he will start out with a healing meditation and participants may get up and receive a healing from practitioners.

approval of the land use ordinance and PD until some point down the road, aligning this with that standard approach made since for this.”

The first of two required public readings of the ordinance to annex the property and the change to land use specifications within the City of Lake Helen’s comprehensive plan was at a special meeting of the City Commission Jan. 25. Prior to that meeting, when the City of DeLand discovered the property owner had applied for voluntary annexation, DeLand officials sent a letter to Lake Helen’s commission, asking them to delay the vote until joint discussions between the two cities could be conducted.

Lake Helen did not delay the vote, however, on an amended ordinance, which received approval on first reading and was sent on to state and county agencies per standard legal process, included recognition of DeLand’s “ability and right to provide utility services” to future developments on the property in question.

The comprehensive plan amendment concerning land use has been sent to the Florida Department of Economic Opportunity and the Volusia Growth Management Commission for review. As part of the VGMC process, other affected jurisdictions -- in this case, the City of DeLand -- are notified and have the opportunity to become part of the process and get their concerns and issues addressed. This is the normal process when land is annexed or a comprehensive plan is amended in Volusia County municipalities.

Granting the continuance does not delay the overall process, as the land use changes will take time to get necessary state and county approval, he said.

“The vast majority of the time when we’re bringing property into the city, all those typically come before (council) at the same time,” Mr. Watts said.

The City of DeLand scheduled the first public workshop for 5:30 p.m. Feb. 20 at the commission chambers in DeLand City Hall, 120 S. Florida Ave.

DeLand City Manager Michael Pleus said the city received a letter Feb. 5 from Cobb Cole attorneys notifying them of the request for continuance.

“I got a copy of a letter from (attorneys for I-4 Automall LLC) to Jason Yarborough, Lake Helen’s city manager, requesting continuance as we had requested,” Mr. Pleus said. “They did characterize in the letter that this is in no way shape or form changing their decision annexing into Lake Helen, it’s really done in cooperation with DeLand as we work through the land use issues”

ment officials said in a letter to Volusia parents on their website. “It is especially important that parents keep sick children at home to prevent spreading the flu virus to others.”

Symptoms often include fever, cough, sore throat, runny nose, body aches, headaches and/or fatigue, said Patricia Boswell, county health department administrator.

“If your child becomes sick with flu-like illness, contact your health care provider as soon after symptoms begin as possible,” she said. “Antiviral medication for flu has been shown to reduce severity and length of disease, decrease the risk of complications from influenza and reduce the risk of death among hospitalized patients, particularly in those that start treatment early in their illness.”

Prevention is the best medicine, Ms. Boswell said.

“Vaccination is the best way to protect against the flu and severe complications from the flu,” she said. “Vaccination is most crucial for children with underlying health conditions, such as asthma, diabetes, heart disease and neurological and neurodevelopmental conditions.”

Vaccinations are available at pharmacies, schools, health department locations, physician offices and other locations, she said.

The department directory

floridahealth.gov/findaflushot will help you find a vaccination site.

In addition to vaccinations, the Centers For Disease Control offers the following tips to stay healthy during flu season and beyond: wash hands frequently; try not to touch your eyes, nose and mouth, as germs are often spread this way; and clean and disinfect frequently touched surfaces, especially when someone is ill.

administrators.

“We have had (some parents and community members) attend to review the materials,” said Robert Edgecomb, community information specialist for Volusia schools. “The feedback we have received has been positive, about both the materials and about having the opportunity to provide feedback.”

The legislation allowing for the review states the process must provide the parent or resident the opportunity to proffer evidence to the school board that: An instructional material does not meet the criteria specified in statute if it was selected for use in a course or otherwise made available to students in the school district but was not subject to the public notice, review, comment and hearing procedures provided in the statute; and that any materials used in a classroom, made available in a school library or included on a reading list contains content that is pornographic or prohibited under S. 847.012, is not suited to student needs and their ability to comprehend the materials presented, or is inappropriate for the grade level and age group for which the material is used.

“If the school board finds that an instructional material does not meet statutory criteria or any other material contains prohibited content, the district must discontinue use of the material for any grade level or age group for which such use is inappropriate or unsuitable,” said Dr. Amy Hall, coordinator of Student and Government Relations for the county schools, when the legislation passed. “In addition to the parent, a resident of the county (who does not have a child enrolled in school) may now contest the adoption of specific instructional material.”

Any objections, however, must be based on set criteria.

“The objection must be based on statutory criteria aligned with state standards, non-inflammatory, free of pornography, appropriate for the grade level, etc,” Dr. Hall said.

The school board and administrators already have policies to make sure the instructional materials are appropriate, and the new legislation simply expands on that, she added.

“Each district school board has the constitutional duty and responsibility to select and provide adequate instructional materials to each student for core courses in mathematics, language arts, science, social studies, reading, and literature for kindergarten through grade 12,” she said. “Each school board is responsible for the content of all materials, not just instructional materials, used in a classroom or otherwise made available to students. This new statutory language expands our current policy and practices that are already in effect.”

Materials still were under review at the time of publication. A date for the school board to vote on approval of the new materials has not been set. Dates, times and locations for the review sites were previously published in Hometown News and on Volusia County Schools’ website.

Barney Oldfield: The fastest man on earth

This past NASCAR cup season was all about the young guns, as it has been for a while now.

Legacies like Ryan Blaney and Chase Elliot ran strong, and Martin Truex Jr. won the championship. That's fine, for new blood is desirable in any sport.

One thing that is obviously missing is drivers who exhibit a bit of character. Oh sure, some fans love to hate the Busch brothers, and Brad Keselowski has shown some flair, but overall NASCAR is working without drivers who are able to elicit much strong emotion from the fans. The drop in NASCAR attendance may be a direct result.

only winning monkey in NASCAR. That caused new rules to be enacted.

Smokey Yunick was a team owner and engine builder who marched to a different drum. He also changed the rule book.

Perhaps the most outrageous personality to ever race in our area was the great Barney Oldfield. He was born in Wauseon, Ohio, in 1878 one-mile track in 60 seconds. Oldfield would go on to set too many records to list here.

Barney would drive anything with wheels. Twice, he finished fifth at Indianapolis, but his greatest moment would happen in March 1910 on Ormond's beach. On that day, Oldfield broke the Stanley Steamer land speed record of 127 mph that had stood for four years. He drove the Blitzen Benz to an unthinkable speed of 131 mph. That mark would be hailed around the world, and The German Kaiser sent Barney a wire that read: "congratulations to a brave Yank driving a great German car."

When he set that record, he was already known as the best driver in motorsports, but Barney wore the speed record as a crown. Wherever he went, he was known as The World's Fastest Man. After that run, he could demand as much as $4,000 for personal appearances and would show up at tracks and fairgrounds all around the country to claim that fee.

As the years went by, Barney would continue to barnstorm, acting in several movies along the way. He loved to have his photo taken with the pretty movie starlets of the day as he reveled in his fame. For many years, he made our area his base of operations. On the beach, he would drive racecars against airplanes or horses. Anything for a buck or a bit of fun.

There would come a time when the local baseball team would hire Barney to make an appearance. The plan was for him to be flown over the field at City Island on opening day to help bring in a crowd. The idea was for Barney to drop a baseball from the plane to the catcher who was waiting at the pitcher's mound. On the appointed day, everything was going well until Oldfield found out the team manager insisted on catching the dropped ball.

Now, Barney didn't care much for the manager, and when the airplane circled over the baseball field he decided to substitute a big, ripe grapefruit for the baseball. Sure enough, when the citron hit the manager, it exploded and knocked him to the ground.

Barney probably enjoyed a good laugh as the airplane returned to the beach to land. The baseball manager was more than a little mad and rushed to the beach to confront Oldfield, but he was too late. Barney and his big Packard were zooming back up the beach to the Hotel Ormond where he stayed.

Later, the press asked if he was afraid the manager would catch him, but Barney just hunched his shoulders and said, "Hey, I'm the fastest man on earth."

Dan Smith is on the board of directors for the Ormond Beach Historical Society and The Motor Racing Heritage Association and is the author of two books, "The World's Greatest Beach" and "I Swear the Snook Drowned." Email questions and comments to fishwdan@att.net or call (386) 441-7793.

Suspected vehicle

The Volusia County Sheriff's Office is seeking the driver in a Deltona hit-and-run that seriously injured a teenager.

The Deltona teenager was walking home from school. The driver of the vehicle fled the scene. We need the public's help to find the driver and vehicle in this hit-and-run crash.

The victim, a 15-year-old student at Pine Ridge High School, was trying to cross Fort Smith Boulevard near the intersection of Rookery Avenue at 3:10 p.m.

Amber Gonzalez told rescuers that she looked both ways before trying to cross Fort Smith. When she had crossed a quarter of the way, the car appeared and she tried to avoid being hit but was struck by the vehicle.

She was airlifted by the Sheriff's Office's Air 1 helicopter to Central Florida Regional hospital with injuries considered non-life-threatening. Later she was transferred to Arnold Palmer Hospital to have reconstructive surgery due to facial injuries.

The suspect vehicle is described as a light-colored early '80s two-door Chevy Monte Carlo or Oldsmobile Cutlass with a dark roof.

Anyone with information about this crash or the driver is asked to contact the Sheriff's Office at (386) 248-1777. Or, to remain anonymous, call Crime Stoppers of Northeast Florida at 1-888-277-8477 (TIPS). You could be eligible for a reward of up to $5,000.

Light needed

We need a traffic light in front of the Edgewater Alliance Church and in front of the Habitat area.

It is very, very unsafe. Hopefully someone can help us out.

Improve pay for first responders at the track

I am happy for this time of year. There are motorcycle and auto races.

Everything going on in Daytona Beach is really fun. I have enjoyed it for more than 50 years. I have been a loyal supporter of the track.

But I just recently was told some disturbing news about what the firefighters and paramedics and people who work at the track make. These people are up there and go in and rescue millionaires and do what they can. I just learned they are paid a paltry salary.

Also, they used to get a few infield tickets and maybe a hat, too, but they have stopped that, too. I am very disturbed by this. After this year's races, I don't know if I will be supporting the speedway.

Firemen and food

I am just curious of why a 16-foot fire truck, which takes up four parking spots, with four fireman go into the store to buy groceries.

I am curious.

Safety reflectors needed on road

If anyone is driving east at night on State Road 44, looking for the left turn to Pioneer Trail in New Smyrna Beach, good luck.

There is a small sign on the right side of State Road 44 that is barely visible announcing the turn. Ideally, larger and reflective signage for this turn would be best, but if nothing else, adding road reflectors to the inside left lane at the turn on State Road 44 and also all around the Pioneer curve where your car is turning onto would at least help to see where you're going.

I hope those in charge of Volusia County roads can do something about this.

Speed it up

Would someone please tell the snowbirds who drive 30 mph on South Atlantic Avenue that the speed limit is 40 mph from Third Avenue to 29th Street in New Smyrna Beach where it becomes 45 mph.

Not everybody is on vacation. We have jobs, appointments and family we need to get to.

Goodbye to a superior civil servant

Thank you Donna Nichols for your 22 years of service with the City of Edgewater.

Sorry to see you go. You were the most knowledgeable person working there. You will be missed. God bless you in your new endeavor. It's the city's loss.

Goodwill, I think not

The Goodwill in DeLand showed anything but goodwill to a little 5-year-old boy who was in there Saturday.

DEADLINES

The deadline for submissions to Hometown News in Volusia County is 5 p.m. Thursday for the next week's issue, except for Rants & Raves, which is 5 p.m. Friday. Deadlines are adjusted for holidays. For more information, call (386) 322-5924.

For the grandchildren

Bruce D. Henderson/staff photographer

Suzanne Stone of DeLand picks out clothes for her grandchildren on Friday, Feb. 2, at the First Christian Church's Trash and Treasure Sale in DeLand.

He was watching a toy and started to pick it up. He was playing with it a little bit loud, when one of the employees went up to the child and yelled at him and took the toy away from him. He told him to leave the area.

How sad. How horrendously sad. That little child will remember that for the rest of his life — how he was treated at Goodwill. We were there. We saw it. This employee is still working there. I apologize to this child.

Anonymous thanks

Thank you to the young couple who paid for our lunch at the Little Drugstore on Canal Street in New Smyrna Beach.

My husband is a Korean Veteran, and I think they realized that. We didn't have a chance to thank them, because they paid for it and left. The waitress told us after they left, which is very nice. I hope they get to see this.

Clear addresses needed

Wouldn't it be nice if all city, county and state officials/law makers, would implement an ordinance/law requiring all businesses or business complexes to display their addresses prominently on their signs at the roadway.

I would like to see large number addresses as a requirement on all business signs to make it easier to find the address you are looking for. It would make it easier on drivers of every age and also those who are making deliveries, as well as possibly prevent vehicle accidents.

SunRail and casinos

They may expect to soar, and if Volusia County does, why can they not bring SunRail to Daytona Beach?

This would be a good thing for tourists who like to see things and not drive their car around. Why they even soar higher with bringing entertainment to Daytona (not only malls and eateries), but real entertainment for grown people?

Would be another soaring in their budget so many people (couples, singles, etc) would like to get a casino in here and stop with the torture of greyhounds. Why do we have poker rooms and can't get a nice casino? A lot of folks don't want to see greyhounds get run to the ground and they don't play poker, either.

This is not fair to the rest who have to spend their money in other counties and Volusia is not getting anything and don't tell me the crime rate goes up. It does not in Tampa or Fort Lauderdale.

Lawmakers and daylight

Just heard on the news the legislators in Tallahassee want to do away with Daylight Savings Time and have one time setting for this state.

It does not matter how many problems this will cause but this is just another waste of time. Why do they not do anything important like helping seniors and low-income families from being ripped off by the state and federal government on every level every day.

Those of us forced to live in HUD housing have had no COLA increase for three years and yet rent went up twice a year. HUD raises rent by using life insurance policies and any money you might have in the bank. Social Security checks are below poverty level. Mold is an issue in HUD buildings and people are always sick.

Cable with Spectrum is enough to bankrupt a person, car insurance goes up $50 every 6 months with a clean driving record. Food is too expensive here as is everything else so how are those less fortunate supposed to survive? I and many others can't afford the medical tests or prescriptions we need.

The legislators need to pay more attention to the less fortunate. All they seem to care about is the fat cats that elected them so they can share in the benefits. I bet not one of them has to worry about doing without.

Keep the time the way it is before you all have to face another example of poor judgment.

Keep Tropical Blossom Honey open

In reference to Jan. 26, "Please, honey, don't" article about the Tropical Blossom Honey Store in Edgewater closing, I am so sorry to hear this.

I couldn't believe it as so much work had been done in their new place, painting, etc. Why, after all that renovating, their lease would not be renewed. Why were they not told beforehand?

How can that be right to a family who is trying to run a decent business? "The powers that be" can certainly be cruel. No wonder, decent struggling businesses move out of Edgewater.

(Editor's Note: Dallas-based Nature Nate's Natural bought Tropical Blossom Honey in 2015 and said at the time the Edgewater store would close. However, the new owner said a new store would be opened in the New Smyrna Beach area.

The numbers go even higher for 7-Eleven

Iconically American, but Japanese-owned 7-Eleven gets to take the next shot in the battle for control of the crowd that commutes to work, seeks riches in the lottery or gets the late-night munchies, and others just looking for the convenience of the corner store.

Seven & I Holdings is finalizing a deal to buy a huge chunk of Sunoco's convenience stores, including seven stores in the Daytona Beach area. For about $8.95 million, 7-Eleven gets to change the signs and interior décor at Daytona and Mason avenues in Holly Hill; 780 S. Nova Road, 1798 and 2501 W. International Speedway Blvd. in Daytona Beach; and 1546 W. Granada Blvd., 460 S. Atlantic Ave. and 3 N. Yonge St., all in Ormond Beach.

Nationally Seven & I is buying about 1,000 stores for $3.3 billion, but the Federal Trade Commission put a hitch in the plan, determining the Japanese company would be too dominant in some markets, including the Daytona Beach area where it already has about 20 stores and two more in development. The company also has six stores in West Volusia County.

So, it doesn't get one store on the beachside in Daytona, two in Daytona Beach Shores, one in South Daytona, one on Nova Road in Holly Hill, one at Mason and Ridgewood Avenues in Daytona Beach and one in New Smyrna Beach. It makes you wonder where the FTC was when Circle K bought the Kangaroo Express chain. However, Circle K only had a handful of stores at that time.

Sunoco signs won't be going away for a while. In the sale

VOLUSIA BUSINESS

agreement it got a contract to provide gasoline to the stores for 15 years.

Also, the new acquisitions provide the opportunity for more people to get into the game and buy a franchise from 7-Eleven or existing operators may get a chance to acquire more.

As Wawa, RaceTrac and Cumberland Farms expand in the area, and with all the independent stores, it's not like we're suddenly going to be limited in choices. But, for now, 7-Eleven will be the top player in the convenience store trade.

Volusia County continued to see growth in the hospitality industry in December. Bed tax collections were up 5.42 percent in December as the Volusia hospitality industry closed out a highly successful 2017. With so many new hotels opening recently and more on the way, the entire county should see plenty more visitors in 2018

North American Development Group has begun building its 400,000 square-foot retail power center at Tomoka Town Center off Williamson Boulevard. Tenants include Ross, Hobby Lobby, Dave & Busters, TJ Maxx, Academy Sports, Designer Shoe Warehouse, Ulta Beauty and Burlington Coat Factory, according to Consolidated-Tomoka Land Co.

The signs are going up on the Waffle House on Seabreeze Boulevard in Daytona Beach. No word yet on when it, or one under construction in Daytona Beach Shores, will open.

In some big, recent commercial real estate deals, an Ann Arbor, Mich., investor has bought the Walmart Neighborhood Market-anchored Shoppes at Pine Meadow in DeBary for $7 million and the Yari Film Group of Los Angeles has bought the warehouse at 440 Fentress Blvd. in Daytona Beach for $3.77million. Yes, we know, that's one worth checking into further.

On a final note, two small projects went up on the drawing board. Candy's Coaches of Gainesville is expanding its Daytona Beach depot near Bellevue Avenue and Nova Road with more parking for its buses. An office/retail building is planned for Sails Up at 903 N. Dixie Freeway in New Smyrna Beach.

Volusia County Schools will host its seventh annual Dance Performance Assessment at 6 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 17, at Mainland High School, 1255 W. International Speedway Blvd., Daytona Beach.

The dance is free and open to the public.

ERAU and airline team up on training

The Asia Pacific region faces an estimated need of 253,000 new pilots over the next 20 years, so Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University has teamed with Singapore Airlines to provide a one-of-a-kind, joint-campus, two-continent degree program to provide flight training to its ERAU Asia campus students and secure job opportunities upon completion.

Stetson features Russian lecture

As the Russian presidential elections approach and the debate on Russian meddling in U.S. elections continues, Stetson's Program in Russian, East European and Eurasian Studies will host David Filipov, a former Washington Post Moscow Bureau chief.

The event will be at 5:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 22, in duPont-Ball Library, Room 25L, at 134 E. Minnesota Ave., DeLand.

As the Moscow Bureau chief, Mr. Filipov covered the aftermath of the election of President Donald Trump and the continued descent of U.S.-Russian relations into something resembling a new Cold War.

The lecture is part of a 60th anniversary celebration of studying Russia at Stetson University.

The "60 Years of Russia at Stetson" celebration also will include an exhibit on the program's history co-curated by Dr. Mayhill Fowler and Dr. Katya Kudryavtseva.

Family: The ties that (don't always) bind

Family can provide a sense of belonging, as well as joy, comfort, and support ... but not always.

Let's take the case of two brothers, "Paul" and "Tony." As kids, Tony was given "new" clothes, while Paul was forced to wear hand-me-downs. As young adults, Tony accepted "loans" from his parents on a regular basis.

He launched a business and purchased a large home in an exclusive neighborhood. Tony was constantly praised by his parents for his entrepreneurship, picture-perfect family and community service while Paul worked several jobs, simultaneously, "just to scrape by."

Years passed. When the men's mother was moved to a nursing home, their father went to live with Paul. But before relocating, the father entrusted Tony with money and valuables that were to be kept in a safe. When the parents died, and the safe was opened, many of the items had mysteriously "disappeared," causing a feud between the two brothers that would span their lifetimes.

In another instance, "Janice" (a beloved daughter, sister, aunt and cousin), chose to cut ties with her entire family after her mother died. Without explanation, she simply ended all communication. Would not attend family gatherings and stopped answering the telephone. Though many family members tried to reconnect with Janice, she refused all interaction.

Does either story sound familiar? Has something similar happened in your family?

Of course, there are dozens of reasons for estrangement among family members. A child might make a choice between a parent and a partner. There can be incompatibilities because of differences in religion, lifestyle or moral values. Shattered relationships can be the result of physical or mental abuse, or dependence on drugs or alcohol. Issues between the children of first and second marriages can cause tension and discord.

With such a prevalence of torn and segmented families, shouldn't you decide the fate of your money and belongings? I can't emphasize enough the importance of an estate plan. The death of a loved one is emotional enough, without the added stress of managing assets and liabilities, and dealing with attorneys, accountants and Realtors. Believe me, I've seen utter chaos when there has been no planning. In fact, it's one of the reasons I started providing personal trustee services to my clients.

When you employ a professional to serve as your trustee and/or executor, you alleviate the burden of financial decision-making for your loved ones. Adult children have their own busy lives, and many times can't handle the added responsibility of estate and trust administration. As we've illustrated, there can be conflict, or potential for conflict, within the family; so, putting certain individuals in charge may be a bad idea.

With the proper legal documents, and careful selection of an independent trustee, you can reduce the risk of family in-fighting and help ensure your assets go to whom you choose, when you choose. Your advanced planning can make your wishes clear and help hold your family together during their time of grief. Let that be your legacy - not strife, fracturing and isolation.

Watercolorist honored as artist of the month

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

Doris Threlkeld is February's artist of the month for the West Volusia Artists Inc., a DeLand-based organization founded in 1964.

Ms. Threlkeld's watercolor painting, "Rooster with an Attitude" is on display in the lobby of the Wayne Sanborn Activity Center in DeLand through February. She was inspired to do the impressionistic painting after viewing a Chinese watercolor demonstration.

Ms. Threlkeld said she has always been interested in art, but didn't begin painting as a hobby until later in her adult life. When she first began to paint, she started working with oils. However, when night classes were being offered in watercolor at the Memphis Academy of Art where she lived, she quickly enrolled and watercolor became her favorite medium.

She remembers being drawn to the impressionistic look of Vincent Van Gogh and thought she could achieve this same impressionistic look in watercolor. Therefore, she continued taking watercolor classes, going on group plein air outings and attending workshops throughout the United States in which she was able to practice this technique.

Ms. Threlkeld recalled many of the workshops she attended were given by some outstanding professional artists who contributed to her success in achieving this impressionistic style.

What do the presidents eat?

Presidents Day is Monday and, as a chef, my curiosity is not only about their history or politics.

What I want to know is what did the presidents like to eat? Did you know the president pays for his own groceries aside from the state functions? The dinners served at the White House are not a reflection of what the presidents like to eat, it is the foods served for formal dinners directed by protocol and visiting dignitaries.

The president's personal meals, like breakfast, lunch, and dinner eaten in private, are a collection of foods that represents the times, heritage, background and personal tastes of his family. Most were common down-to-earth cooking, except for Thomas Jefferson. He was not only the author of the Declaration of Independence, but an avid food gourmet, introducing many new foods to America.

George Washington, often associated with the cherry tree, really did like cherries and other fruits, nuts and seafood. Many presidents had lavish dinner parties, but the most elaborate occurred during Honest Abe's administration. Historical records show President Lincoln was a hearty eater, but indifferent to food. Raised on a farm, he would eat whatever was put in front of him, never complaining. Obviously, Ms. Lincoln, coming from a wealthy family, influenced the state meals and opulent banquets.

Ulysses S. Grant was a man of simple tastes, so he brought with him a quarter master corps cook to the White House. This didn't last long because, being an army cook, the quarter master would prepare meals like those for an army barracks. A chef from one of the major hotels was hired to replace him and a period of gourmet meals returned to the White House.

CHEF COSTA'S COOKING CORNER

Teddy Roosevelt had definite opinions on food. The food must be simple and healthy. He was very fond of chicken, eating a whole chicken with four glasses of milk. He also had a sweet tooth and stirred seven lumps of sugar into a cup of coffee.

The foods Franklin Delano Roosevelt liked were a little harder to find, because Eleanor Roosevelt would decide the foods to be eaten. They would be simple and unpredictable at times, even serving the royal family from England hot dogs!

Dwight D. Eisenhower was an accomplished cook and he would often cook for the family. Soups were one of his favorite dishes. He wrote two cookbooks and kept a hot plate in his office to cook when he felt like it.

John F. Kennedy's White House returned to the times of Jefferson with all French cuisine, because of Ms. Kennedy.

There are so many stories to share, but here are a few facts I found interesting: Richard Nixon loved meatloaf, Lyndon B. Johnson brought Texas style BBQ to the White House, Ronald Reagan loved jelly beans, George W. Bush is a pretzel lover, Bill Clinton's favorite was chicken enchiladas, Barack Obama liked salted almonds and President Trump eats Lay's potato chips.

I love food history and the story of what presidents liked to eat can be fascinating. I suggest reading the following book if you want to learn more, "The President's Kitchen Cabinet" by Adrian Miller. Now it's time for a presidential recipe from The National Archives. President John F. Kennedy's recipe for New England Clam Chowder. Now you can make it and eat like a president!

Clam Chowder

Ingredients
2 pounds haddock
2 ounces salt pork, diced
2 onions, sliced
4 large potatoes, diced
1 cup celery, chopped
1 bay leaf, crumbled
1 teaspoon salt
Freshly ground black pepper

1 quart milk
2 tablespoons butter

Directions

Put the haddock in a soup pot with 2 cups water and simmer for 15 minutes. Drain, reserving the broth. Remove any bones from the fish and set fish aside.

Saute the salt pork in the soup pot until crisp. With a slotted spoon, remove the pork and set aside. Saute the onions in the pork fat until golden brown. Add the fish, potatoes, celery, bay leaf, salt, and pepper to taste.

Pour in the reserved fish broth plus enough boiling water to make 3 cups liquid. Simmer for 30 minutes. Add the milk and butter and simmer for 5 minutes. Serve the chowder sprinkled with the diced pork.

Shoestring Theatre will present Mary Chase's Pulitzer Prize-winning play "Harvey" from Feb. 22 to March 4, at 380 S. Goodwin St., Lake Helen. Here, Elwood asks Dr. Sanderson and Nurse Kelly to have a drink with him after work. From left to right: Gabriel Hardison as Dr. Sanderson, Ava Kelley as Nurse Kelly, and David Finkle as Elwood P. It is better to be pleasant than smart. That is the bit of advice Elwood P. Dowd took from his mother, and he is certainly one happy man. Shoestring Theatre will present Mary Chase's Pulitzer Prize-winning play "Harvey" from Feb. 22 to March 4, at 380 S. Goodwin St., Lake Helen. In the classic 1951 film, Jimmy Stewart played Elwood Dowd, and that role remained his favorite throughout his career for good reason: Dowd saw the light. In our current era of discord and contention, the play "Harvey" reveals the importance of relationships and realizing time is our most precious commodity. David Finkle, renowned cartoonist, actor, and Volusia

County English teacher, is taking the lead as Mr. Dowd, the quintessential eccentric whose best friend is Harvey, the invisible six-and-a-half-foot rabbit who has the capacity to stop clocks. Abby Wallace, fresh from the recent "Cemetery Club" production at the Shoestring, plays Veta Louise, Elwood's long-suffering sister, who is intent on rubbing elbows with the country club set and helping her daughter, Myrtle Mae, find an eligible suitor. Myrtle Mae is played by Avalon Marut. Veta Louise decides her daughter's chances may be improved if her "screwball" brother is removed from the home and admitted to Chumley's Rest, an upscale treatment facility for those plagued with mental derangement. Dr. Chumley is the internationally acclaimed psychiatrist, played by Robert Sollien, who is called upon to treat Elwood. The cast includes Ava Kelley as Nurse Kelly, Gabriel Hardison as Dr. Sanderson, Rachael Harrell as Miss Johnson, Chris Patterson as Judge Gaffney, Phoenix Winterrose as Duane Wilson, Shannon Krueger as Mrs. Chauvenet, Deborah McShane as Mrs. Chumley, and Rubi Rodriguez as E.J. Lofgren. The play is directed by Deborah McShane. Tickets are $18 for adults, $15 for seniors and $10 for students. Evening performances begin at 7:30 p.m., and Sunday matinees are at 2:30 p.m. Both Thursdays are BOGO nights, buy one get one free. Tickets are available online at shoestringtheatre.net, at the theatre box office from 1 to 4 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays or by calling (386) 228-3777.

Autocomplete can make your life a little easier

One of the nice features you may have noticed about your computer is its uncanny ability to remember where you've been and what you've typed before.

COMPUTE THIS SEAN MCCARTHY

Log into the internet and type a web address in the address line of Internet Explorer, Microsoft Edge or whatever web browser you use and hit enter. Then, after visiting other web sites, go back and start typing that web address again, and you may notice it remembers and the address appears in the address pull-down menu as you type. Click on it, and off you go. How about any time you've filled out an online form? With most web browsers (Explorer, Edge, Google Chrome, etc.), you may get a message the first time you enter information online asking, "Would you like to turn on auto complete?" Click "yes," and now the computer will remember everything you type into online forms and present them, when appropriate, in a clickable pull-down menu form. For instance, let's say you are on the internet and you want to order something online. You get to the order form page and start entering your name shipping address, e-mail address, etc., into the form and (since this your first time ordering anything online) you have to fill out each field manually. You finish filling out the form, place your order and everything's fine. Now, as you surf the internet, you come to another online form. Perhaps you are ordering flowers online or booking travel arrangements to Hawaii (Wouldn't that be nice?). Notice this order form is asking most, if not all, the same questions as before. As you begin to fill this form out and enter your first name in the first name box, you notice your name appears as soon as you start typing. Same thing happens when you fill in your last name. You'll notice all of the fields you filled in before (as long as the fields are named the same as on the web page where you first typed) automatically appear for you so you can just click and press tab to tab to the next field. It makes entering the same information a snap as long as it's turned on and you're aware that it's happening. What about if you want to clear the history list (where your previously visited web addresses are stored) or what if you've made a mistake on a form and now every time you go to type that same field the incorrect information comes up before the correct data? What do you do then? Well, the controls for this remarkable form remembering feature can be found in the internet options section of Internet Explorer. (Similar settings can be found in other browsers). Let's take a look, shall we? Launch Internet Explorer and then go to the "tools" menu. Then click "internet options." The internet options page opens with the "general" tab in front. It's on this page where you can set your start or "home" page, or even clear your cookies or temporary files. Be cautious here though. Deleting your cookies can cause some sites (such as banking or portal sites) to forget who you are and make you sign in all over again. Next, let's click the "content" tab. Here you will find a section called personal information. It is in this section where we can turn on or off the auto complete feature (in case you want to disable it or maybe you told it "no" when it asked and you now want to turn it on). Click the auto complete button and you are presented with a number of options: You can use auto complete with web addresses, forms, user names and passwords. You can even tell it to ask you if you want to save passwords instead of automatically saving them for you, useful if other people use your computer. Made a mistake on a form field or two and want to clear them out so you can have it come up correctly? Click the "clear forms" button and all of the form fields that it has remembered for you will be forgotten. Now, go back to that pesky field that was always coming up misspelled and enter it right. Of course, you'll have to enter all of your other form data, but that's easy enough, just enter it as you encounter it and the computer will remember. Take a look around at some of the controls. You may be surprised at just how much control over your browser you actually have.

Fishing is great, but nature may be better!

Out in the Green Peanut on a chilly morning, with spotted sea trout in mind, I launched at the damaged boat ramp at High Bridge and paddled southwest.

I was a bit surprised to see the water on the outgoing tide was not quite as green as when I had been in that area just a couple weeks prior. I had hoped the change was a permanent one, but now the water was once more dark brown.

I began by paddling deep into the swamp to let the kayak drift out towards the Halifax River. The tide was nearing the end of the cycle and the slow drift was just about perfect.

I passed an island that was heavily populated by large white pelicans. Forget Punxsutawney Phil, those migratory white pelicans are a sure sign winter is not yet over. Big beautiful birds that dwarfed the few brown pelicans that shared the sand bar. They come here from as far away as the Pacific Northwest.

As I moved down a narrow stream, I began to get a few hits but no takers. At one point I had a fair keeper trout on, but it made an easy escape. That scene would repeat three times and I began to get the feeling this just may not be my day. Over and over I would retrieve the char-trause jig only to find it had been pulled down to the curve of the hook. A sure sign a fish had been tugging on it. Finally one stuck and I landed a nice 16-inch sea trout.

As I drifted out, I saw some splashing under a downed tree. Snook immediately came to mind and I made a good cast up under the boughs. As I waited for the hit, a furry face appeared. It was a large otter. Obviously the splashing about I had seen was the otter and not a snook. The otter and I made eye contact and I smiled at the sight of its dripping Jerry Colonna-style mustache.

The critter was not pleased I had entered its space and began to bark a warning. I knew that meant there was probably young in the area so I beat a hasty retreat. From about 30 yards away I sat to watch the antics of the playful otter. It was very fat and I imagined it had reaped the bonanza of the frozen fish that had been all over the place on my last trip.

Soon I was able to get a 15-inch trout to the boat and, after that, I decided to go back deeper into the mud flats. Rounding a mangrove island, I could see lots of pink in the distance. I knew that had to be a flock of roseate spoonbill wading birds, but it would be an unusual sighting in the winter. For the time being, I chose to stop fishing to get a better look. Quietly I approached. These birds are our version of pink flamingos and are a rare sight. These spoonbills were so very vivid pink their coloration seemed unreal.

As I drifted up within 50 feet, the birds seemed oblivious to my presence. I thought about the scientific theory their pink color comes from the shrimp they eat. I have never bought that. To begin with, shrimp are not pink until cooked.

Oh well, a natural mystery and a beautiful one. They were not feeding, just standing there to catch the warmth of the morning sun. Quite a sight. I resisted the urge to spook them even though seeing a flight of 12 to 15 big pink birds would be awesome.

When the morning was over, I had my four sea-trout limit and could look forward to a nice blackened trout dinner. Nice, but the fish were only second to the pelicans, otter and spoonbills.
