COVID-19 FAQs

- If I test NEGATIVE, does that mean I am "cleared" and do not have to worry about being contagious? Although negative test results may be reassuring, there is a window of time (several days) after exposure to COVID-19 where you may be infected, but not yet producing enough virus to be detected by a nasal swab.
There is no such thing as being "cleared" for COVID-19 due to the high number of asymptomatic carriers. Therefore, it is safest to always assume you're contagious and social distance whenever possible, wear a mask when out in public, and wash your hands often.
- If I am wearing a mask, does it mean I no longer have to social distance or follow other recommended precautions? Evidence indicates that wearing a mask significantly reduces the transmission of COVID-19. However, masks are even more effective when they are combined with social distancing and frequent hand washing.
