WHEN "SILENTS" WAS GOLDEN

Jill and Michael Gallina

GR 4-9 7

After the recent critical successes of two movies, The Artist and Hugo, both of which bring us back to the golden days of early cinema, we would be remiss to not share this gem with you. When "Silents" Was Golden is a musical tribute to the early years of the twentieth century when silent movies mesmerized and enthralled avid theatre audiences. During its 30-year reign, this compelling art form captured the hearts and minds of many devoted fans and, as we've learned from

The Artist and Hugo, it is neither a lost art form nor an inapplicable one today.

As a building owner and realtor discuss plans to convert an old building formerly used as a silent movie studio into commercial space, ghostly visages of the stars of silent screen who've been living there reveal themselves to the audience. As prospective renters inspect the building, they are frightened away by the stars as they resume the filming of scenes of silent movies from the past. Watch as these ghosts of movies past fight to keep their home intact and attempt to bring about the creation of a memorial to the silent movie era.

Songs include: When "Silents" Was Golden; You've Got a Western; The Sheik; The Phantom; Damsel in Distress; Along Comes Zorro; Those Silent Movies.
