Entering the next stage of his career — one that meant taking on more strategic roles — Bryan knew that he needed to broaden his understanding of business functions. At Tepper, he’s found an unsurpassed focus on quantitative decision-making in a program that’s as rewarding as it is challenging. “I formed great friendships with classmates, but also valuable relationships with the leadership coaches and professors that will be extremely important in the future. I was able to clearly see advancement in my leadership skills at work.”

In his engineering manager position, Anand felt something was missing. Though he was learning from his experiences and the people around him, he realized that without fresh perspectives, his company would be fixing problems the same way over and over. At Tepper, he not only found those perspectives from courses on distributed teams, negotiations, statistics, and optimization, but he began to apply them in his current role, tackling issues and creating new solutions.

AT THE

OF A DYNAMIC CAMPUS.

CMU IS AN ENVIRONMENT UNLIKE ANY OTHER.

The home of world-renowned business, arts, robotics, computing, theater, and engineering programs. Where an array of events, shows, and programs constantly excite, amaze, and inspire. And in the center of it all is the Tepper Quad — the university's new hub of activity with collaborative learning spaces, classrooms, dining facilities, a modern fitness center, 600-seat auditorium, and all Tepper faculty, advising, and program offices.

It's truly a facility unlike any other.

“Tepper gives me what I need to lead teams with a holistic view on business and creative thought. The part-time program, in particular, is great for students who travel, like me. If you’re on the road a lot, this is really the only way to get the full MBA experience.”

Allison began her career as a graphic designer, but became disillusioned by the chasm between marketing strategists and creative teams. She earned her master’s degree in branding, which gave her a more integrated perspective, but found that she needed a deeper understanding of business and leadership to help companies find creative solutions. Tepper’s focus on business, technology, leadership, and analytics — along with a supportive faculty and tight-knit student and alumni community — have helped her broaden her abilities, expand her collaborative skills, and discover new ways to close the gap between strategy and creative.
