CREATING A BUDGET FOR 2021

Creating a budget may seem daunting but it doesn't have to be! A budget is simply an itemized list of income and expenses that guides you in seeing how you spend your money, and how to manage it going forward to achieve your financial goals. We've included a template here to make things simple.

By starting with your income (from all sources), and listing all of your expenses (including discretionary spending like entertainment), you get an accurate picture of your personal cash flow, so you can make more meaningful decisions about your finances. This can also help you budget for large purchases, retirement, and emergencies.

Using the Current Household Spending Worksheet

Start with this worksheet, filling it in as it pertains to you. This is the starting point of where you are now.

Gather all of your monthly statements for income and expenses, including the main account that you pay all of your day to day living expenses from. Use these statements to fill in the different categories for an average month. If a specific category doesn't apply, simply skip it. If you have something else not listed, add it on. You should find that this gives you an accurate idea of where your money is going currently.

Using the Financial Goals Worksheet

This worksheet gives you an opportunity to list your financial goals. This might be saving for a down payment for a house, or perhaps paying down debt, or maybe purchasing a new car. Whatever your goals are, list them here with a dollar amount and the desired timeline.

Then spend some time outlining what you can do to accomplish these goals and identifying any obstacles that could prevent you from success.

Using the Monthly Budget Worksheet

The last worksheet if for you to determine your monthly budget. This should take into account your spending history and your financial goals. The key to staying on budget is tracking and holding yourself accountable.

What to focus on next?

If you find you reach the end of your budget before the end of your month, it's time to review. See where you might be overspending and determine whether that expense was simply miscalculated on your original budget, perhaps there was an emergency, or if you simply overspent. Adjust your budget if necessary or adjust your spending for the next month and pay closer attention to each budget category to ensure you're staying on track to achieve your goals..

If you discover that you consistently have money left over each month, now comes the fun part, where to put those funds. Does the money go into a rainy-day fund, or some type of savings? Or, is it time to allocate those funds to getting out of debt. Keep in mind, if you are carrying balances it would be wise to chip away at those debt payments.

Budgeting takes a little time and patience, but it's the best way to manage your cashflow and reach the financial goals you and your family have set.

Here's to your success and a terrific 2021!
